Lack of legal capacity to sue. It must affirmatively appear that the plaintiff has no legal capacity to sue, to be a ground of demurrer. Swamp etc. Land District v. Feck, 60 Cal. 403; Miller v. Luco, 80 Cal. 257; 22 Pac. 195; Wilhoit v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 453; 25 Pac. 675; Locke v. Klunker, 123 Cal. 231; 55 Pac. 993; Redding Gold etc. Mining Co. v. National Surety Co., 18 Cal. App. 488; 123 Pac. 544. The want of capacity to sue can be raised by demurrer, only it appears upon the face of the complaint. Redding Gold Min. Co. v. National Surety Co., 18 Cal. App. 488; 123 Pac. 544. The objection that the plaintiff has not legal capacity to sue must be taken by demurrer or answer, or it is waived. Bollinger v. Bollinger, 154 Cal. 695; 99 Pac. 196. The authority of the attorney-general to institute an action in behalf of the people, to determine adverse claims to real property, does not come within an objection, raised by demurrer, of want of capacity in the plaintiff to sue, and it is doubtful if it comes within any of the grounds of demurrer mentioned in this section; the proper practice is to move to dismiss the information. People v. Oakland Water Front Co., 118 Cal. 234; 50 Pac. 305.

Plea in abatement. The general rule as to pleas in abatement is, that, before one suit can be pleaded in abatement of another, it must appear that the plaintiffs are the same in both suits. Helfrich v. Romer, 16 Cal. App. 433; 118 Pac. 458. The pendency of a prior action, between the same parties, for the same cause, is a good plea in abatement. Goytino v. McAleer, 4 Cal. App. 655; 88 Pac. 991. The general rule is, that articles of incorporation must be of record in the clerk's office at the time that a plea in abatement is interposed; otherwise the plea is good. Riverdale Mining Co. v. Wicks, 14 Cal. App. 526; 112 Pac. 896.

Defect or misjoinder of parties. The word "defect," as used in the fourth subdivision, means a defect in the complaint, by reason of having either too many or too few parties. Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 167. Misjoinder of parties may be taken advantage of by demurrer (Warner v. Wilson, 4 Cal. 310; Peralta v. Simon, 5 Cal. 313; Jacks v. Cooke, 6 Cal. 164); but a demurrer does not lie, where a defect of parties does not appear on the face of the complaint. Cook v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 237; Frost v. Harford, 40 Cal. 165. Misjoinder of parties, not appearing on the face of the complaint, is not a ground of demurrer (Frost v. Harford, 40 Cal. 165); and where there is but one party defendant, a demurrer for misjoinder of parties defendant is properly overruled. Lorenzana v. Camarillo, 45 Cal. 125. Where a complaint is filed against several defendants, for several and distinct causes, having no relation to or dependence upon one another, a demurrer for misjoinder of parties and of causes of action will be sustained; but where several persons have been jointly concerned in a series of fraudulent transactions, they may be united as defendants in an action to annul the fraudulent acts. Andrews v. Pratt, 44 Cal. 309. The non-joinder of necessary parties, plaintiff or defendant, should be taken advantage of by demurrer (Andrews v. Mokelumne Hill Co., 7 Cal. 330; Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 514; 68 Am. Dec. 360; MacLeod v. Moran, 11 Cal. App. 622; 105 Pac. 932; Redfield v. Oakland Consol. Street Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063); and if not taken by demurrer or answer, it is waived. Baker & Hamilton v. Lambert, 5 Cal. App. 708; 91 Pac. 340; Farmer v. Behmer, 9 Cal. App. 773; 100 Pac. 901. The failure of a partner to join his copartners as parties plaintiff should be taken advantage of by demurrer (Williams v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 110 Cal. 457; 42 Pac. 974); as should also the point that a person is a necessary party defendant. MacLeod v. Moran, 11 Cal. App. 622; 105 Pac. 932. In an action of foreclosure, a general allegation that the defendant had or claimed some interest in the mortgaged premises is sufficient as against a demurrer on the ground of defect of parties. Poett v. Stearns, 28 Cal. 226. A defendant against whom a sufficient cause of action is alleged cannot demur for misjoinder of defendants, unless his interests would be affected thereby. Gardner v. Samuels, 116 Cal. 84; 58 Am. St. Rep. 135; 47 Pac. 935. A defect in parties plaintiff, apparent upon the face of the complaint, or it appearing therefrom that the plaintiff has not the legal capacity to sue, must be taken advantage of by demurrer, on either ground, or it is waived. Tingley v. Times Mirror, 151 Cal. 1; 89 Pac. 1097. An objection for non-joinder of the husband, as a necessary party plaintiff, in an action by the wife, must be specially urged by demurrer if the matter appears on the face of the complaint, or by answer if it does not so appear. Work v. Campbell, 164 Cal. 343; 128 Pac. 943. Where new parties, plaintiff and defendant, were joined, in an amended complaint, without leave of court, it must be presumed, upon appeal, that such complaint was filed by leave of court; and, as it supersedes the original, an objection thereto cannot be raised upon special demurrer to the complaint, but only on motion to strike out. Harvey v. Meigs, 17 Cal. App. 353; 119 Pac. 941.

Several causes of action improperly united, or not separately stated. This section applies to causes of action which cannot be embraced in the same action, though separately stated, and not to causes of action which may properly be joined in the same action, but which are not separately stated; the remedy for the latter is by motion to make the pleadings more definite and certain. City Carpet Beating etc. Works v. Jones, 102 Cal. 506; 36 Pac. 841; Bernero v. South British etc. Ins. Co., 65 Cal. 386; 4 Pac. 382; Fraser v. Oakdale Lumber etc. Co., 73 Cal. 187; 14 Pac. 829; Jacob v. Lorenz, 98 Cal. 332; 33 Pac. 119; Sutter County v. McGriff, 130 Cal. 124; 62 Pac. 412; San Francisco Paving Co. v. Fairfield, 134 Cal. 220; 66 Pac. 255; Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820; but see contra, McFarland v. Holcomb, 123 Cal. 84; 55 Pac. 761. The fact that several causes of action were not separately stated was not ground of demurrer prior to the amendment of 1907 to this section. Huene v. Cribb, 9 Cal. App. 141; 98 Pac. 78. A joinder of causes of action, not all belonging to any one of the classes mentioned in § 427, ante, renders the complaint obnoxious to a demurrer on the ground that several causes of action are improperly united. Cosgrove v. Fisk, 90 Cal. 75; 27 Pac. 56; Watson v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 41 Cal. 17; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Crist, 21 Cal. App. 1; 130 Pac. 435. Thus, a joinder of a cause of action for injuries to a wife, with one in favor of the husband for loss of the services of and expenses incurred for the wife, renders the complaint subject to demurrer for an improper joinder of causes of action (McKune v. Santa Clara Valley Mill etc. Co., 110 Cal. 480; 42 Pac. 980); but a demurrer for misjoinder of causes of action will not lie because several species of remedy may be had in the enforcement of a single right. Beronio v. Ventura County Lumber Co., 129 Cal. 232; 79 Am. St. Rep. 118; 61 Pac. 958. To entitle the plaintiff to punitive damages in an action for trespass to real property, circumstances of aggravation must be pleaded in such a manner as that there shall be no ambiguity or uncertainty in determining that they are set forth solely for the purpose of establishing such claim; and if they are pleaded in such a manner as would be proper in an action brought to recover damages other than those for the trespass, the complaint will, for that reason, be subject to a demurrer for misjoinder of causes of action. Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680; 39 Pac. 56. While a demurrer lies where different causes of action are not separately stated, yet the fact that two independent contracts are included in one count is not prejudicial error, where they are treated as one. Fairchild etc. Co. v. Southern Refining Co., 158 Cal. 264; 110 Pac. 951. A complaint in an action to foreclose a street assessment, which otherwise states a good cause of action, is not demurrable because containing a prayer for attorney's fees. Millsap v. Balfour, 154 Cal. 303; 97 Pac. 668. The seeking of different kinds of relief does not establish different causes of action: a demand for alternative monetary relief is not subject to the objection that the complaint states two causes of action. Messer v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 149 Cal. 122; 84 Pac. 835.

Insufficiency of facts to constitute a cause of action. This section applies to those cases in which no cause of action whatever arises from the complaint, and does not include cases in which misjoinder of parties appears upon the face of the pleading. Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347; Tatum v. Rosenthal, 95 Cal. 129; 29 Am. St. Rep. 97; 30 Pac. 136. A general demurrer cannot reach objections going only to a part of the cause of action. McCann v. Pennie, 100 Cal. 547; 35 Pac. 158. Insufficiency of the facts alleged may be tested by general demurrer. Callahan v. Broderick, 124 Cal. 80; 56 Pac. 782. Inferential statements, or statements by way of recital, cannot be attacked by general demurrer: it is available only where there is a total absence of some material fact. Bliss v. Sneath, 103 Cal. 43; 36 Pac. 1029; Santa Barbara v. Eldred, 108 Cal. 294; 41 Pac. 410; Fuller Desk Co. v. McDade, 113 Cal. 360; 45 Pac. 694; McKay v. New York Life Ins. Co., 124 Cal. 270; 56 Pac. 1112. A complaint entitling the plaintiff to relief, either legal or equitable, is not demurrable on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (White v. Lyons, 42 Cal. 279; Mora v. Le Roy, 58 Cal. 8; McPherson v. Weston, 64 Cal. 275; 30 Pac. 842; Hulsman v. Todd, 96 Cal. 228; 31 Pac. 39; Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67; 58 Pac. 376; Jones v. Iverson, 131 Cal. 101; 63 Pac. 135; Poett v. Stearns, 28 Cal. 226); and where a complaint states a cause of action addressed either to the legal or equitable side of the court, it is good as against a general demurrer (Swan v. Talbot, 152 Cal. 142; 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1066; 94 Pac. 238); but the complaint must allow a cause of action in the plaintiff, or the general demurrer will lie: it is not sufficient that it show a cause of action in somebody. Dixon v. Cardozo, 106 Cal. 506; 39 Pac. 857. A complaint sufficient to sustain judgment is good as against general demurrer. Lawrence Nat. Bank v. Kowalsky, 105 Cal. 41; 38 Pac. 517. A failure to state all the facts essential to recovery may be attacked by general demurrer. Tehama County v. Bryan, 68 Cal. 57; 8 Pac. 673; Harnish v. Bramer, 71 Cal. 155; 11 Pac. 888. The pleader, in counting upon a contract according to its legal effect, is not required to allege that the conditions stated are all of the conditions of the contract. Smith v. Jaccard, 20 Cal. App. 280; 128 Pac. 1023. A failure to allege the presentation of a claim to the administrator and a rejection by him, before the commencement of the action, is a ground of general demurrer; without it the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Heutsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555; Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 386; Burke v. Maguire, 154 Cal. 456; 98 Pac. 21. A failure to allege non-payment of money sought to be recovered may be reached by general demurrer, on the ground that the complaint states no cause of action. Grant v. Sheerin, 84 Cal. 197; 23 Pac. 1094; Richards v. Travelers Ins. Co., 80 Cal. 505; 22 Pac. 939; Bliss v. Sneath, 103 Cal. 43; 36 Pac. 1029. An insufficient cause of action in intervention is properly met by demurrer, and not by motion to strike out. Cameron v. Ah Quong, 8 Cal. App. 310; 96 Pac. 1025. Where the facts necessary to sustain a cause of action are shown to exist, although inaccurately or ambiguously stated, or appear by necessary implication, a general demurrer to the complaint will be overruled (Amestoy v. Electric Rapid Transit Co., 95 Cal. 311; 30 Pac. 550); such defects can be reached only by special demurrer (Semi-Tropic Spiritualists' Ass'n v. Johnson, 163 Cal. 639; 126 Pac. 488); as the complaint will be held good, where the necessary allegations appear by way of legal conclusions, in the absence of a special demurrer. Wells Fargo & Co. v. McCarthy, 5 Cal. App. 301; 90 Pac. 203. If there is not an entire failure in a complaint to state non-payment, the averment is simply defective, and can be reached only by special demurrer directed to that point. Burke v. Dittus, 8 Cal. App. 175; 96 Pac. 330. The failure of the plaintiff, in an action on an assigned claim, to aver that he was the owner thereof at the time of the commencement of the action, is ground for special demurrer, but is good as against a general demurrer. Krieger v. Feeny, 14 Cal. App. 538; 112 Pac. 901. By anticipating a defense, in addition to stating a cause of action, the complaint is not rendered bad as against a general demurrer. Munson v. Bowen, 80 Cal. 572; 22 Pac. 253. The bar of the statute of limitations cannot be raised under a general demurrer that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82; Farwell v. Jackson, 28 Cal. 105; California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 729; 112 Pac. 274. The failure of a plaintiff corporation to aver that it is a corporation is not available, either upon general demurrer for want of a cause of action, or upon special demurrer for want of capacity to sue. Los Angeles Ry. Co. v. Davis, 146 Cal. 179; 106 Am. St. Rep. 20; 79 Pac. 865. The defense of laches may be raised by demurrer: it is, in substance, a defense that the bill does not show equity, or in the language of this section, that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Kleinclaus v. Dubard, 147 Cal. 245; 81 Pac. 516; Wadleigh v. Phelps, 149 Cal. 627; 87 Pac. 93. A clerical error in a complaint cannot be taken advantage of by general demurrer. Blasingame v. Home Ins. Co., 75 Cal. 633; 17 Pac. 925. An objection that the averments of a complaint are contradictory cannot be raised upon a general demurrer: it must be presented by a special demurrer for uncertainty (Heeser v. Miller, 77 Cal. 192; 19 Pac. 375; Churchill v. Lauer, 84 Cal. 233; 24 Pac. 107); nor can an objection to a variance between an exhibit and the allegations of a complaint be raised by general demurrer (Blasingame v. Home Ins. Co., 75 Cal. 633; 17 Pac. 925; San Francisco Sulphur Co. v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 11 Cal. App. 695; 106 Pac. 111); nor can objection be taken for defectiveness in the complaint, because the facts are inartificially stated. Nevin v. Thompson, 4 Cal. Unrep. 390; 35 Pac. 160. A cause of action stated in only one of several counts of a complaint is sufficient as against a demurrer on the ground "that said complaint does not allege facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action." Jensen v. Dorr, 159 Cal. 742; 116 Pac. 553. Where the complaint in a suit brought for breach of a contract payable in installments fails to show that an installment, the payment of which was required under the contract, had been due and unpaid for the prescribed period, it shows no cause of action upon the contract. Southern California Music Co. v. Skinner, 17 Cal. App. 205; 119 Pac. 106. Where there is no attempt to aver non-payment of money due upon a contract, either by an allegation amounting only to a conclusion of law, or otherwise, the complaint does not state a cause of action; and this can be urged at any time, even without a demurrer. Burke v. Dittus, 8 Cal. App. 175; 96 Pac. 330. The failure of a corporation to allege that it has filed its articles is not a failure to allege a cause of action, and is therefore not a ground of demurrer. Bernheim Distilling Co. v. Elmore, 12 Cal. App. 85; 106 Pac. 720; Riverdale Mining Co. v. Wicks, 14 Cal. App. 526; 112 Pac. 896. A demurrer to a complaint for a money judgment on a promissory note and for breach of contract, should be sustained, on the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, where the note is not due, and no breach of the contract is shown. Southern California Music Co., 17 Cal. App. 205; 119 Pac. 106.

Ambiguity, uncertainty, and unintelligibility. That the complaint is ambiguous, unintelligible, or uncertain is made a ground of demurrer: a motion to make it more definite and certain is not proper practice. McFarland v. Holcomb, 123 Cal. 84; 55 Pac. 761. Ambiguity and uncertainty are made separate grounds of demurrer by this section. Wilhoit v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 453; 25 Pac. 675. Unintelligibility is a ground of demurrer (Tibbets v. Riverside Land etc. Co., 61 Cal. 160); as is also uncertainty (Kraner v. Halsey, 82 Cal. 209; 22 Pac. 1137; Mallory v. Thomas, 98 Cal. 644; 33 Pac. 757; Southern California Music Co. v. Skinner, 17 Cal. App. 205; 119 Pac. 106; Du Bois v. Padgham, 18 Cal. App. 298; 123 Pac. 207); but uncertainty does not include ambiguity. Kraner v. Halsey, 82 Cal. 209; 22 Pac. 1137. The objection of uncertainty goes rather to the doubt as to what the pleader means by the facts alleged, not to the failure to allege sufficient facts. Callahan v. Broderick, 124 Cal. 80; 56 Pac. 782. A complaint is neither ambiguous nor uncertain, where the precise purpose of the action and the relief sought clearly appear. Doudell v. Shoo, 20 Cal. App. 424; 129 Pac. 478. Where the complaint is easy of comprehension and free from reasonable doubt, it is not subject to demurrer on the ground of ambiguity. Salmon v. Wilson, 41 Cal. 595; Applegarth v. Dean, 68 Cal. 491; 13 Pac. 587; Kraner v. Halsey, 82 Cal. 209; 22 Pac. 1137; Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67; 58 Pac. 376; Jones v. Iverson, 131 Cal. 101; 63 Pac. 135. A mere clerical error in the complaint is not objectionable to a demurrer for ambiguity, unintelligibility, and uncertainty. Fay v. McKeever, 59 Cal. 307; Hawley Bros. Hardware Co. v. Brownstone, 123 Cal. 643; 56 Pac. 468. A complaint which in one part avers a covenant for a lease, and in another states matter which constitutes a contract for a present lease, is ambiguous. Crow v. Hildreth, 39 Cal. 618. A complaint for trespass, which fails to state separately the items of damages to the premises, and the damages sustained by injuries to the plaintiff's business, is subject to a demurrer for uncertainty. Mallory v. Thomas, 98 Cal. 644; 33 Pac. 757; Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680; 39 Pac. 56. A failure to set forth the items of an account in a complaint is not a ground for a demurrer for ambiguity or uncertainty. Burns v. Cushing, 96 Cal. 669; 31 Pac. 1124; Rogers v. Duff, 97 Cal. 66; 31 Pac. 836; Farwell v. Murray, 104 Cal. 464; 38 Pac. 199; Pleasant v. Samuels, 114 Cal. 34; 45 Pac. 998; Long Beach City School Dist. v. Dodge, 135 Cal. 401; 67 Pac. 499. A failure to state the times at which services were rendered, or when the claim for the items thereof accrued, does not authorize a demurrer for ambiguity or uncertainty. McFarland v. Holcomb, 123 Cal. 84; 55 Pac. 761. A failure to state, in an action to foreclose a lien, the date when such lien was filed and recorded, renders it subject to a demurrer for uncertainty. Williamson v. Joyce, 137 Cal. 151; 69 Pac. 980. The objection that two causes of action are not separately stated cannot be taken by demurrer. Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820. A complaint to annul a corporate assessment on the ground of illegality in the proceedings, which fails to allege the matters constituting such illegality, is demurrable for uncertainty. Hennessey v. Alleghany Mining Co., 159 Cal. 398; 113 Pac. 1071. Where the property of an estate, such as notes and mortgages, is alleged to have been concealed, but uncertainty appears in the description thereof, and no reasonable excuse is given why they are not particularly described, a special demurrer on such grounds is properly sustained. Burke v. Maguire, 154 Cal. 456; 98 Pac. 21. Uncertainty, in pleading, is not material, unless it works a substantial injury. Krieger v. Feeny, 14 Cal. App. 538; 112 Pac. 901. Less certainty is required in the allegations of the complaint, where the facts are such as that plaintiff cannot, from their nature, have as full information as the defendant. Harvey v. Meigs, 17 Cal. App. 353; 119 Pac. 941.

Speaking demurrers. See note 14 Ann. Cas. 348.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Court has no jurisdiction of the person of defendant, or the subject of the action. See Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 491; Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 386. In courts of general jurisdiction the want of jurisdiction must appear affirmatively on face of complaint, but such is not the case with courts of special or limited jurisdiction, and in the last-named court every fact necessary to give jurisdiction must appear in the complaint. Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432.

2. Plaintiff has not legal capacity to sue. When plaintiff has not legal capacity to sue because he is not a real party in interest. White v. Steam-tug Mary Ann, 6 Cal. 462; 65 Am. Dec. 523; Oliver v. Walsh, 6 Cal. 456.

3. Another action pending between same parties for same cause. Cunningham v. Harris, 5 Cal. 81; Nickerson v. California Stage Co., 10 Cal. 520; Barnett v. Kilbourne, 3 Cal. 327; Ayres v. Bensley, 32 Cal. 620. The defense of a prior lis pendens is available, only where the plaintiff, at least, in both actions, is the same person. Certain Logs of Mahogany, 2 Sumn. 593; Fed. Cas. No. 2559; Wadleigh v. Veazie, 3 Sumn. 165; Fed. Cas. No. 17031; O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 314.

4. Defect or misjoinder of parties. See § 434, post. Where a defect of parties is apparent upon the face of the complaint, the objection must be taken by demurrer, or the same will be waived. Dunn v. Tozer, 10 Cal. 170; Warner v. Wilson, 4 Cal. 310; Andrews v. Mokelumne Hill Co., 7 Cal. 330; Alvarez v. Brannan, 7 Cal. 503; 68 Am. Dec. 274; Rowe v. Bacigalluppi, 21 Cal. 635; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 557; Sampson v. Schaeffer, 3 Cal. 202; Beard v. Knox, 5 Cal. 257; 63 Am. Dec. 125; Tissot v. Throckmorton, 6 Cal. 473; McKune v. McGarvey, 6 Cal. 498; Burroughs v. Lott, 19 Cal. 125; Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 497. In Summers v. Farish, the court seem to infer that a demurrer on the ground "that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action," and which then specifies that the complaint shows no joint cause of action in the plaintiff, and that it prays for a judgment in favor of three plaintiffs for an injury done to one, was a good demurrer for misjoinder of parties; but this point was not expressly decided. See Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 350; but see also Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 521; 99 Am. Dec. 423; Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 427–431. Although the defendant does not demur for want of parties, it does not affect the power of the court under the code (§ 389, ante) from ordering other parties to be brought in, when such parties are necessary to a complete determination of the case. Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423. Complaint is not demurrable because the Christian names of parties are not stated. Nelson v. Highland, 13 Cal. 74. The court having overruled a demurrer made by defendants on the ground of a misjoinder of parties plaintiff, the plaintiffs then moved to amend the complaint by striking out the names of the plaintiffs thus averred to be improperly joined, and the defendants resisted successfully such motion. Such action on the part of defendants was held to be a waiver of the objection of misjoinder raised by their demurrer. Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347; see §§ 367–389, ante, and notes.

5. Several causes of action improperly united. If not demurred to, or the objection is not made by answer, it is deemed waived. Macondray v. Simmons, 1 Cal. 393; Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 224; Gates v. Kieff, 7 Cal. 124; Jacks v. Cooke, 6 Cal. 164. A declaration which improperly joins an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, ejectment, and prayer for relief in chancery, is demurrable. Bigelow v. Gove, 7 Cal. 134. A demurrer lies to a complaint which asks for equitable relief, if the law and equity are inseparably mixed together; but a demurrer cannot be sustained on the ground, merely, that the complaint seeks a remedy at law, and an equitable relief also. See Gates v. Kieff, 7 Cal. 125; Weaver v. Conger, 10 Cal. 237; Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 300; Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 224; but see Bigelow v. Gove, 7 Cal. 133, above cited. And as to uniting improperly several causes of action, see Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 300; Gale v. Tuolumne Water Co., 14 Cal. 28; People v. Skidmore, 17 Cal. 260; Garr v. Redman, 6 Cal. 574; see notes to § 427, ante.

6. When complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute cause of action. See notes to § 426, ante. But this ground is confined to cases in which no cause of action at all is shown by the complaint. Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347. And if complaint contain several causes of action, and defendant demur to whole complaint, yet if one cause of action is good, although all others are bad, still the demurrer cannot be sustained. Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 294. It is provided that, unless the demurrer shall distinctly specify the grounds upon which any of the objections to the complaint are taken, it shall be disregarded, excepting, only, the objection to the jurisdiction of the court; and the objection that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. See §§ 431, 434, post. Sections 431 and 434, post, are to be read in conjunction. To give effect to the former, without regard to the excepted objections specified in the latter, would be to abrogate an important provision of the statute. This we have no right to do, and hence (say the court): "We hold the objection taken by demurrer to the complaint, that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, to be well and sufficiently assigned in the language of the statute." Kent v. Snyder, 30 Cal. 672; see also Williamson v. Blattan, 9 Cal. 501. A defect sufficient to defeat the present right of plaintiff, in whole or in part, may be shown as a ground of demurrer. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555. If the complaint states a condition precedent, does not show performance, the defect must be taken advantage of by demurrer in the court below. It is too late to take advantage of such defect after verdict. Happe v. Stout, 2 Cal. 460. So, also, a similar rule prevails as to an omission to aver delivery in suit on a bond. Garcia v. Satrustegui, 4 Cal. 244. A complaint disclosing the fact that the subject had been litigated in a former suit between the same parties, and that in such action the plaintiff in this action had set up the same equity which he claims by this complaint, the complaint was held bad on demurrer, and was ordered to be dismissed. Barnett v. Kilbourne, 3 Cal. 327. Action brought prematurely, before any injury had occurred, demurrable on ground that complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute cause of action. (See facts.) Harvey v. Chilton, 11 Cal. 114. An action upon an undertaking to release property from an attachment. The complaint did not aver that the property attached was released upon the delivery of the undertaking, and it was held that in this respect it was defective, and could be taken advantage of by demurrer, on the ground that complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action without further specification. Williamson v. Blattan, 9 Cal. 501; referring to Palmer v. Melvin, 6 Cal. 651; Haire v. Baker, 5 N. Y. 357; Johnson v. Wetmore, 12 Barb. 433; Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 386. Objections to the demand for relief in complaint cannot be made by demurrer. Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299.

7. When the complaint is ambiguous, unintelligible, or uncertain. The demurrer should specify in what the uncertainty or ambiguity consists. Blanc v. Klumpke, 29 Cal. 156; see also Powell v. Ross, 4 Cal. 197. For general matters, see Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 88; Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145; People v. Love, 25 Cal. 526. If complaint unites two causes of action improperly, or is unintelligible, ambiguous, or uncertain, these objections must be taken by demurrer, or they are waived. Lawrence v. Montgomery, 37 Cal. 183.

8. Demurrers to whole complaint not good, where some of the causes of action are sufficient. If, where several causes of action are alleged, there are facts stated sufficient to sustain any one of the causes, a demurrer to the whole complaint cannot be sustained. Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 294; Barber v. Cazalis, 30 Cal. 92; Whiting v. Heslep, 4 Cal. 327; Weaver v. Conger, 10 Cal. 233; Young v. Pearson, 1 Cal. 448. Even if demurrer is good as to part of a complaint (though not to all of it), but is made to the whole, then it cannot be sustained. People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 360.

9. Demurrer when demand appears to be barred by statute of limitations. Statute should be distinctly stated in demurrer. Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 89; Farwell v. Jackson, 28 Cal. 106. It was formerly doubted whether a defendant in equity could, by demurrer, make the objection that the remedy was barred by lapse of time, or whether he must not resort to his plea (answer); but it now seems to be settled that if it appears upon the face of the complaint that the suit is barred by lapse of time, the defendant may demur. Humbert v. Rector of Trinity Church, 7 Paige Ch. 197; Sublette v. Tinney, 9 Cal. 423; Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476. But the bar must clearly appear, in order to sustain demurrer. Ord v. De la Guerra, 18 Cal. 67; Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476; Barringer v. Warden, 12 Cal. 311; Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16.

10. What is admitted by demurrer. A demurrer admits the truth of such facts as are issuable and well pleaded; but it does not admit the conclusions which counsel may choose to draw therefrom, although they may be stated in the complaint. It is to the soundness of those conclusions, whether stated in the complaint or not, that a demurrer is directed, and to which it applies the proper test. Branham v. Mayor and Common Council, 24 Cal. 602; Tuolumne County Water Co. v. Chapman, 8 Cal. 392.

11. General matters. The office of a demurrer is to raise issues of law, and, therefore, it should not state facts. Cook v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 239. Courts take no notice of mere defects in form, where the demurrer is general. Phelps v. Owens, 11 Cal. 22; Otero v. Bullard, 3 Cal. 188. Demurrer to unessential parts of complaint. Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411; 76 Am. Dec. 492. Demurrer must come within one of the seven grounds allowed by the code. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555. Objections to prayer of complaint cannot be made by demurrer. Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299. If demurrer is overruled, and defendant answers, such answer is a waiver of the demurrer. De Boom v. Priestly, 1 Cal. 206.

§ 431. Demurrer must specify grounds. May be taken to part. May answer and demur at same time. The demurrer must distinctly specify the grounds upon which any of the objections to the complaint are taken. Unless it does so, it may be disregarded. It may be taken to the whole complaint, or to any of the causes of action stated therein, and the defendant may demur and answer at the same time.

Legislation § 431. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, §§ 41, 42. These sections read: "§ 41 [New York Code, § 145]. The demurrer shall distinctly specify the grounds upon which any of the objections to the complaint are taken. Unless it do so, it may be disregarded." "§ 42 [New York Code, § 151]. The defendant may demur to the whole complaint, or to one or more of several causes of action stated therein, and answer the residue; or may demur and answer at the same time."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 133; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 706, changing the word "or" to "and," after "therein."

Demurrer must specify grounds. Unless the demurrer distinctly specifies the grounds upon which any of the objections to the complaint are taken, it should be disregarded, excepting only the objection to the jurisdiction of the court, and the objection that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Kent v. Snyder, 30 Cal. 666. A general demurrer need not specify the grounds on which the objections to the complaint are taken: it is sufficient if it alleges that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 386. No particular specification is required in a demurrer for want of facts. California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 729; 112 Pac. 274. A merely defective averment of an essential allegation can be reached only by special demurrer, directed to the vulnerable point. Burke v. Dittus, 8 Cal. App. 175; 96 Pac. 330. A complaint having more than one count will stand, as against a general demurrer, if any one count states a cause of action. Smith v. Jaccard, 20 Cal. App. 280; 128 Pac. 1023; Harvey v. Meigs, 17 Cal. App. 353; 119 Pac. 941; Krieger v. Feeny, 14 Cal. App. 538; 112 Pac. 901. A special demurrer to the whole complaint, on the ground of ambiguity and uncertainty, is bad, if a good cause of action is elsewhere stated, but is good as to the particular part to which the demurrer is directed. Jones v. Iverson, 131 Cal. 101; 63 Pac. 135. A demurrer for ambiguity, unintelligibility, and uncertainty must specify the particulars on which it is based. Blanc v. Klumpke, 29 Cal. 156; Yolo County v. Sacramento, 36 Cal. 193; Lorenzana v. Camarillo, 45 Cal. 125; Demartin v. Albert, 68 Cal. 277; 9 Pac. 157; Moyle v. Landers, 83 Cal. 579; 23 Pac. 798; Daggett v. Gray, 110 Cal. 169; 42 Pac. 568; A. F. Sharpleigh Hardware Co. v. Knippenberg, 133 Cal. 308; 65 Pac. 621. A complaint stating improperly and defectively all the essential facts can be reached only by special demurrer, particularly designating the specific point at which it is aimed. Himmelmann v. Spanagel, 39 Cal. 401; Tehama County v. Bryan, 68 Cal. 57; 8 Pac. 673; Harnish v. Bramer, 71 Cal. 155; 11 Pac. 888; Grant v. Sheerin, 84 Cal. 197; 23 Pac. 1094; Eachus v. Los Angeles, 130 Cal. 492; 80 Am. St. Rep. 147; 62 Pac. 829; Merritt v. Glidden, 39 Cal. 559; 2 Am. Rep. 479; Jones v. Iverson, 131 Cal. 101; 63 Pac. 135; Burke v. Dittus, 8 Cal. App. 175; 96 Pac. 330. Particular defects to which objection is made for insufficiency of the complaint, which are not specified in the demurrer, cannot be considered on appeal. Olcovich v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 20 Cal. App. 349; 129 Pac. 290. Where the complaint is ambiguous and uncertain, a demurrer specifically stating these as causes of demurrer, and giving the reasons therefor, should be sustained. Palmer v. Lavigne, 104 Cal. 30; 37 Pac. 775. A demurrer on the ground that the complaint is ambiguous, uncertain, and unintelligible, is properly overruled, where the complaint is not defective in all three points (Kraner v. Halsey, 82 Cal. 209; 22 Pac. 1137; White v. Allatt, 87 Cal. 245; 25 Pac. 420; Wilhoit v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 453; 25 Pac. 675; Spargur v. Heard, 90 Cal. 221; 27 Pac. 198; Greenebaum v. Taylor, 102 Cal. 624; 36 Pac. 957); but where the specification is on the ground of uncertainty only, the demurrer will not be overruled, merely because it contains a conjunctive assignment of ambiguity, unintelligibility, and uncertainty (Field v. Andrada, 106 Cal. 107; 39 Pac. 323); and a demurrer on the ground that it cannot be ascertained from the complaint what the contract sued on is, is insufficient (Sharpleigh Hardware Co. v. Knippenberg, 133 Cal. 308; 65 Pac. 621); as is also a demurrer for misjoinder of causes of action (O'Callaghan v. Bode, 84 Cal. 489; 24 Pac. 269; Healy v. Visalia etc. R. R. Co., 101 Cal. 585; 36 Pac. 125); and also one for misjoinder of parties, which does not specify wherein the misjoinder exists. O'Callaghan v. Bode, 84 Cal. 489; 24 Pac. 269; Gardner v. Samuels, 116 Cal. 84; 58 Am. St. Rep. 135; 47 Pac. 935. It must specify the particular misjoinder (People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 336); and who else should have been joined, or in what manner the misjoinder consists. Kreling v. Kreling, 118 Cal. 413; 50 Pac. 546; Tatum v. Rosenthal, 93 Cal. 129; 29 Am. St. Rep. 97; 30 Pac. 136. But a demurrer which specifies as one of its grounds the bar of the statute of limitations is sufficient (Williams v. Bergin, 116 Cal. 56; 47 Pac. 877); and a statement that the cause of action is barred by the statute of limitations is sufficient in form (Brennan v. Ford, 46 Cal. 7); but the bar of the statute must be specifically stated in the demurrer as the ground relied on. McFarland v. Holcomb, 123 Cal. 84; 55 Pac. 761; Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82; Farwell v. Jackson, 28 Cal. 105. Except where the benefit of the statute of limitations is claimed, a general demurrer need not specify the particulars wherein the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action: it is enough to state that the complaint does not state such facts. Burke v. Maguire, 154 Cal. 456; 98 Pac. 21. A demurrer for want of legal capacity to sue must point out specifically such want of capacity (Los Angeles R. Co. v. Davis, 146 Cal. 179; 106 Am. St. Rep. 20; 79 Pac. 865); and the want of legal capacity of the plaintiff to enter into the contract sued on, in order to entitle him to recover therein, must be distinctly presented in the demurrer. McDaniel v. Yuba County, 14 Cal. 444. A demurrer on the ground that the plaintiffs have no legal capacity to sue is too broad, where one of the plaintiffs has the right. O'Callaghan v. Bode, 84 Cal. 489; 24 Pac. 269. The improper uniting of two causes of action in one count will not be considered upon appeal, where it was not made a ground of demurrer. Bernero v. South British etc. Ins. Co., 65 Cal. 386; 4 Pac. 382. Inconsistency between allegations in the declaration and in the contract on which it is based cannot be considered, when not made one of the grounds of demurrer. Montifiori v. Engels, 3 Cal. 431. Where the complaint states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action and to entitle the plaintiff to the relief asked, a general demurrer thereto should be overruled. Sisk v. Caswell, 14 Cal. App. 377; 112 Pac. 185.

Demurrer to whole or part of complaint. Where the complaint states two separate and distinct causes of action, a general demurrer is properly sustained, if neither count states a cause of action: it is not necessary that the demurrer should refer to either of the counts separately. Churchill v. Pacific Improvement Co., 96 Cal. 490; 31 Pac. 560. A demurrer stating only one or more of the grounds enumerated in § 430, ante, contains nothing irrelevant and nothing redundant. Davis v. Honey Lake Water Co., 98 Cal. 415; 33 Pac. 270. A demurrer to the whole complaint will be overruled, if any sufficient cause of action is set forth in the complaint. Young v. Pearson, 1 Cal. 448; Knowles v. Baldwin, 125 Cal. 224; 57 Pac. 988. A demurrer, on the ground of the bar of the statute of limitations to the whole cause, will not be sustained, where recovery can be had for any part of the claim sued for. Moyle v. Landers, 3 Cal. Unrep. 113; 21 Pac. 1133; Nelson v. Merced County, 122 Cal. 644; 55 Pac. 421; Sechrist v. Rialto Irrigation Dist., 129 Cal. 640; 62 Pac. 261.

Demur and answer at the same time. This section authorizes the filing of a demurrer and an answer at the same time. People v. McClellan, 31 Cal. 101. If the defendant wishes to obtain a decision upon a question of law arising on the face of the complaint, in advance of the trial, upon an issue of fact joined, the proper practice is to do so by demurrer, in terms, as a distinct pleading: the practice of mixing matters of law and fact in the same pleading should be discountenanced. Brooks v. Douglass, 32 Cal. 208. An answer alleging that a debt, if due, was due to two parties as partners, does not amount to a demurrer to a complaint in the name of one of such parties: a pleading which is half demurrer and half answer cannot be sustained. Andrews v. Mokelumne Hill Co., 7 Cal. 330. Where there is an answer to the merits after the filing of a demurrer, it will be presumed that the demurrer was waived. Moran v. Abbey, 58 Cal. 163; Bliss v. Sneath, 103 Cal. 43; 36 Pac. 1029.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Demurrer must distinctly specify grounds of objection. See note 6 to § 430, ante; also Kent v. Snyder, 30 Cal. 666.

2. Waiver of demurrer. An answer put in subsequently to a demurrer, is a waiver of the demurrer. De Boom v. Priestly, 1 Cal. 206; Pierce v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 470; Brooks v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 481.

3. May demur and answer at the same time. People v. McClellan, 31 Cal. 103.

4. Demurrer should be filed as a separate pleading. See Brooks v. Douglas, 32 Cal. 208.

§ 432. What proceedings are to be had when complaint is amended. If the complaint is amended, a copy of the amendments must be filed, or the court may, in its discretion, require the complaint as amended to be filed, and a copy of the amendments or amended complaint must be served upon the defendants affected thereby. The defendant must answer the amendments, or the complaint as amended, within ten days after service thereof, or such other time as the court may direct, and judgment by default may be entered upon failure to answer, as in other cases.

Amendment, generally. Post, §§ 472, 473.

Legislation § 432. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 43, as amended by Stats. 1855, p. 196, which read: "If the complaint be amended, a copy of the amendments shall be filed, or the court may in its discretion require the complaint as amended to be filed, and a copy of the amendments shall be served upon every defendant to be affected thereby, or upon his attorney, if he has appeared by attorney; the defendant shall answer in such time as may be ordered by the court, and judgment by default may be entered upon failure to answer, as in other cases." When enacted in 1872, § 432 read: "If the complaint is amended, a copy of the amendments must be filed, or the court may, in its discretion, require the complaint, as amended, to be filed, and a copy of the amendments to be served upon the defendants affected thereby. The defendant must answer the complaint, as amended, within such time as the court may direct, and judgment by default may be entered upon failure to answer, as in other cases."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 2.

Proceedings when complaint is amended. This section applies to amendments made after answer, or after the trial of an issue of law arising on demurrer. McGary v. De Pedroreña, 58 Cal. 91. It also applies to amendments made after the parties have been brought into court, and does not require a mode of service differing from that in other cases. Dowling v. Comerford, 99 Cal. 204; 33 Pac. 853. Where the plaintiff wishes to amend after a demurrer to the complaint is sustained, he must request leave at that time. Varni v. Devoto, 10 Cal. App. 304; 101 Pac. 934. An amendment to the complaint, whether it consists of a mere additional averment or effects a change in the original, may be filed by itself, without being incorporated in the original by the engrossment of the complaint as amended. Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40. Where a judgment by default against a defendant has been entered, service of an amended complaint thereafter filed need not be made against such defendant; but a complaint amended after default, and before judgment, must be served. Cole v. Roebling Construction Co., 156 Cal. 443; 105 Pac. 255. A new demurrer is not required, where brief additions made to a complaint, by way of immaterial interlineations, do not make the pleading an amended complaint. Flood v. Templeton, 148 Cal. 374; 83 Pac. 148. The service of an amended complaint implies its filing. Billings v. Palmer, 2 Cal. App. 432; 83 Pac. 1077.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. It is the universal practice in this state to answer amended complaints within the same time after service of a copy as in the case of a service of a summons with a copy of the original complaint, and the court seldom fixes any specific time for answering in such cases. The court has, undoubtedly, the power to fix the time, but where no time is fixed the answer must be made within the same time as is allowed in case of service of copy of original complaint with summons. People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 130. If the complaint is amended, and defendant asks an order permitting his answer on file to stand as the answer to the amended complaint, the answer is to be treated as if filed when the order was made. Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131. If the time allowed to answer is until the plaintiff shall select on which count of the complaint he will go to trial, the plaintiff is required to serve a copy of complaint with notice of his election. Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192. As to amended complaint, see also Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 28 Cal. 673.

§ 433. Objection not appearing on complaint, may be taken by answer. When any of the matters enumerated in section four hundred and thirty do not appear upon the face of the complaint, the objection may be taken by answer.

Legislation § 433. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 44 (New York Code, § 147), which had "section forty" instead of the present "section four hundred and thirty."

Defects not appearing on face of complaint. A defect not appearing on the face of the complaint may be objected to by the answer (Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 167; Tatum v. Rosenthal, 95 Cal. 129; 29 Am. St. Rep. 97; 30 Pac. 136); and where it does not clearly appear on the face of the complaint, it must be objected to by answer (Wise v. Williams, 72 Cal. 544; 14 Pac. 204; and see Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 490; Harmon v. Page, 62 Cal. 448; German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Hutchinson, 68 Cal. 52; 8 Pac. 627; Williams v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 110 Cal. 457; 42 Pac. 974), or it is deemed to be waived. Tingley v. Times Mirror Co., 151 Cal. 1; 89 Pac. 1097. Equitable considerations not appearing on the face of the complaint should be presented by answer, where they merit the attention of the court, and are sufficient to warrant the withholding of the decree from the plaintiff. Lange v. Geiser, 138 Cal. 682; 72 Pac. 343. A failure to serve a copy of the complaint on the defendants with the summons must be objected to by answer (Ghiradelli v. Greene, 56 Cal. 629); as must also an objection to misjoinder of causes of action (Jacks v. Cooke, 6 Cal. 164), and also an objection to misjoinder of parties, where the misjoinder does not appear on the face of the complaint. Warner v. Wilson, 4 Cal. 310; Jacks v. Cooke, 6 Cal. 164; Hastings v. Stark, 36 Cal. 122; Rutenberg v. Main, 47 Cal. 213; Tingley v. Times Mirror Co., 151 Cal. 1; 89 Pac. 1097. The omission of an affidavit, essential to the validity of an assignment, must be objected to by answer, where it does not appear on the face of the complaint. Wilhoit v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 453; 25 Pac. 675. Want of legal capacity in the plaintiff to sue, which does not appear in the complaint, can be raised only by answer (Swamp etc. Land District v. Feck, 60 Cal. 403); the general issue is not sufficient. California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 8 Cal. 585. A failure to allege that the plaintiff is a corporation, and hence entitled to sue, must be objected to by answer: it is not available upon general demurrer. Los Angeles Ry. Co. v. Davis, 146 Cal. 179; 106 Am. St. Rep. 20; 79 Pac. 865. The pendency of another action is a good plea in abatement, when pleaded in bar. Goytino v. McAleer, 4 Cal. App. 655; 88 Pac. 891. The defendant may set up the bar of the statute of limitations either by demurrer or by answer, if the complaint shows on its face that the statute has run; otherwise he must plead his right by answer. California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 729; 112 Pac. 274.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the defect does not appear upon the face of the complaint, the objection may be taken by answer, and where the defendant did not know that too many parties were joined as plaintiffs until the same was made apparent in evidence, he should be allowed leave to amend his answer during the trial. Gillam v. Sigman, 29 Cal. 637.

§ 434. Objections, when deemed waived. If no objection be taken, either by demurrer or answer, the defendant must be deemed to have waived the same, excepting only the objection to the jurisdiction of the court, and the objection that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.

Legislation § 434. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 45 (New York Code, § 148), which had (1) the word "such" after "If no," and (2) the word "shall" instead of "must."

Defects waived by failure to object. All merely technical objections to the complaint are waived by failure to demur. Dennison v. Chapman, 105 Cal. 447; 39 Pac. 61. An informality in the pleading is waived by failure to demur (Cronise v. Carghill, 4 Cal. 120); as is also an objection to allegations, by way of recital. Fuller Desk Co. v. McDade, 113 Cal. 360; 45 Pac. 694. Although defects in the mode of alleging a cause of action do not impair the validity of a judgment, yet they should be presented by special demurrer. Schmidt v. Market Street etc. R. R. Co., 90 Cal. 37; 27 Pac. 61; Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111; Bringham v. Knox, 127 Cal. 40; 59 Pac. 198; Larkin v. Mullen, 128 Cal. 449; 60 Pac. 1091; Eachus v. Los Angeles, 130 Cal. 492; 80 Am. St. Rep. 147; 62 Pac. 829. An objection going to the sufficiency of the statement of facts in the complaint, but not to the sufficiency of the facts themselves, is waived, unless presented by special demurrer (Conde v. Dreisam Gold Mining Co., 3 Cal. App. 583; 86 Pac. 825); a complaint lacking the essential and necessary allegations is not cured by verdict or judgment. Arnold v. American Ins. Co., 148 Cal. 660; 84 Pac. 182. An objection to matter not appearing upon the face of the complaint, except that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, must be taken by answer, or it is deemed to be waived. Baker & Hamilton v. Lambert, 5 Cal. App. 708; 91 Pac. 340; Pryal v. Pryal, 7 Cal. Unrep. 134; 71 Pac. 802; Mitau v. Roddan, 149 Cal. 1; 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 275; 84 Pac. 145; Tingley v. Times Mirror Co., 151 Cal. 1; 89 Pac. 1097; Los Angeles Ry. Co. v. Davis, 146 Cal. 179; 106 Am. St. Rep. 20; 79 Pac. 865. Any uncertainty of statement in the complaint is waived, where objection thereto was not made in the lower court (Parke & Lacy Co. v. Inter Nos Oil etc. Co., 147 Cal. 490; 82 Pac. 51); as is also an objection that the complaint fails to contain certain allegations, which would make it more certain. Wyman v. Hooker, 2 Cal. App. 36; 83 Pac. 79. An objection for want of verification is waived, if not made before answer. Greenfield v. Steamer Gunnell, 6 Cal. 67. An objection for failure to allege the delivery of a bond sued on is waived by failure to take advantage of it by demurrer (Garcia v. Satrustegui, 4 Cal. 244); as is also an objection for failure to allege the performance of a condition precedent, in an action on a contract, setting up the condition (Happe v. Stout, 2 Cal. 460); and also an objection for failure to state separately a distinct cause of action (Valencia v. Couch, 32 Cal. 339; 91 Am. Dec. 589; Bernero v. South British etc. Ins. Co., 65 Cal. 386; 4 Pac. 382), and an objection for failure to join the husband as a party, in an action by the wife (Work v. Campbell 164 Cal. 343; 128 Pac. 943); and an objection for misjoinder of causes of action (Macondray v. Simmons, 1 Cal. 393; Jacks v. Cooke, 6 Cal. 164; Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 217; Lawrence v. Montgomery, 37 Cal. 183; McClory v. McClory, 38 Cal. 575; Cox v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 47 Cal. 87; Roberts v. Eldred, 73 Cal. 394; 15 Pac. 16; Witkowski v. Hern, 82 Cal. 604; 23 Pac. 132; Eversdon v. Mayhew, 85 Cal. 1; 21 Pac. 431; 24 Pac. 382; Healy v. Visalia etc. R. R. Co., 101 Cal. 585; 36 Pac. 125; McKune v. Santa Clara Valley Mill etc. Co., 110 Cal. 480; 42 Pac. 980; Fellows v. Los Angeles, 151 Cal. 52; 90 Pac. 137); and an objection for misjoinder of parties (Warner v. Wilson, 4 Cal. 310; Jacks v. Cooke, 6 Cal. 164; Tissot v. Throckmorton, 6 Cal. 471; Dunn v. Tozer, 10 Cal. 167; Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533; Rowe v. Bacigalluppi, 21 Cal. 633; Gillam v. Sigman, 29 Cal. 637; McKee v. Greene, 31 Cal. 418; Calderwood v. Pyser, 31 Cal. 333; Hastings v. Stark, 36 Cal. 122; Rutenberg v. Main, 47 Cal. 213; Tennant v. Pfister, 51 Cal. 511; Heinlen v. Heilbron, 71 Cal. 557; 12 Pac. 673; Gruhn v. Stanley, 92 Cal. 86; 28 Pac. 56; Ah Tong v. Earle Fruit Co., 112 Cal. 679; 45 Pac. 7; Kerry v. Pacific Marine Co., 121 Cal. 564; 66 Am. St. Rep. 65; 54 Pac. 89; Hopper v. Barnes, 113 Cal. 636; 45 Pac. 874; Kippen v. Ollasson, 136 Cal. 640; 69 Pac. 293; Dewey v. Parcells, 137 Cal. 305; 70 Pac. 174); and an objection for non-joinder of parties (Ashton v. Zeila Mining Co., 134 Cal. 408; 66 Pac. 494; Reclamation District v. Van Loben Sels, 145 Cal. 181; 78 Pac. 638; Williams v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 110 Cal. 457; 42 Pac. 974; Ah Tong v. Earle Fruit Co., 112 Cal. 679; 45 Pac. 7; Smith v. Cucamonga Water Co., 160 Cal. 611; 117 Pac. 764), where the party not joined is not an indispensable party. Potter v. Dear, 95 Cal. 578; 30 Pac. 777. An objection for non-joinder cannot be taken on appeal. Beard v. Knox, 5 Cal. 252; 63 Am. Dec. 125. Where a defect in parties plaintiff is apparent upon the face of the complaint, or where it appears therefrom that plaintiff has not the legal capacity to sue, an objection on either ground must be taken by demurrer, or is waived; or if such defects do not appear upon the face of the complaint, any objection or defense thereto must be taken advantage of by answer, or it is waived. Tingley v. Times Mirror Co., 151 Cal. 1; 89 Pac. 1097. Where, in an action by heirs, the defendant goes to trial without raising the issue, by answer, that there are other heirs, the objection that there are other heirs is waived. Salmon v. Rathjens, 152 Cal. 290; 92 Pac. 733. Where a partner is sued individually upon a partnership obligation, the plaintiff may recover, if the defendant fails to plead a non-joinder of his copartner: such failure is a waiver of the objection. Baker & Hamilton v. Lambert, 5 Cal. App. 708; 91 Pac. 340. The non-joinder of a tenant as a party to an injunction suit cannot be urged, when not raised by demurrer or answer. Farmer v. Behmer, 9 Cal. App. 773; 100 Pac. 901. Objection to defect of parties cannot be taken by nonsuit (Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 514; 68 Am. Dec. 360; Rowe v. Bacigalluppi, 21 Cal. 633; Pavisich v. Bean, 48 Cal. 364; Williams v. Southern Pacific R. Co., 110 Cal. 457; 42 Pac. 974); hence, a failure properly to object renders valid a judgment against those named therein, and authorizes its introduction under the averments of the original complaint, in an action on such judgment. Lewis v. Adams, 70 Cal. 403; 59 Am. Rep. 423; 11 Pac 833. A defect of parties plaintiff, which does not appear upon the face of the complaint, is waived, unless objection thereto is raised by answer. Russ v. Tuttle, 158 Cal. 226; 110 Pac. 813. Want of legal capacity of the plaintiff to sue is waived, where not objected to by demurrer or answer. Phillips v. Goldtree, 74 Cal. 151; 13 Pac. 313; 15 Pac. 451; Baldwin v. Second Street Cable R. R. Co., 77 Cal. 390; 19 Pac. 644; Quan Wye v. Chin Lin Hee, 123 Cal. 185; 55 Pac. 783; Susanville v. Long, 144 Cal. 362; 77 Pac. 987; Cook v. Fowler, 101 Cal. 89; 35 Pac. 431. An objection, that a cause of action failed to state the appointment of a guardian ad litem, not having been taken by demurrer or answer, is waived, and cannot be raised on appeal (Wedel v. Herman, 59 Cal. 507); and an objection amounting to grounds of special demurrer will not be considered for the first time on appeal (Gale v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 44 Cal. 43); and the objection is waived, by a failure to plead in abatement that articles of incorporation have not been filed (Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Purcell, 77 Cal. 69; 18 Pac. 886; Ontario State Bank v. Tibbits, 80 Cal. 68; 22 Pac. 66; South Yuba Water etc. Co. v. Rosa, 80 Cal. 333; 22 Pac. 222; Riverdale Mining Co. v. Wicks, 14 Cal. App. 526; 112 Pac. 896); and that a foreign corporation has not complied with the statute authorizing it to do business in the state. Bernheim Distilling Co. v. Elmore, 12 Cal. App. 85; 106 Pac. 720. The privilege of the statute of limitations is waived, if not taken advantage of by demurrer or answer (Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82; People v. Broadway Wharf Co., 31 Cal. 33; Kelley v. Kriess, 68 Cal. 210; 9 Pac. 129; Gilbert v. Sleeper, 71 Cal. 290; 12 Pac. 172; Reagan v. Justice's Court, 75 Cal. 253; 17 Pac. 195; Allen v. Haley, 77 Cal. 575; 20 Pac. 90); and where the defendant seeks, by general demurrer, to avail himself of the personal privilege of the bar of the statute, he must specify such privilege as a particular ground of his general demurrer, or it is deemed to be waived. Burke v. Maguire, 154 Cal. 456; 98 Pac. 21. Although it appears upon the face of the complaint that the cause of action is barred, yet the privilege is not waived by a failure to demur, as it may be set up by answer. California Safe Deposit etc. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co., 158 Cal. 690; Ann. Cas. 1912A, 729; 112 Pac. 274. An objection that securities sued on do not import a consideration must be taken advantage of by demurrer, or it is waived. Powell v. Ross, 4 Cal. 197. A defect in the title, in not showing the trust relation of the plaintiffs, cannot be objected to otherwise than by special demurrer. Lasar v. Johnson, 125 Cal. 549; 58 Pac. 161. Objection to the failure to allege the presentation of a claim to the administrator of an estate is waived by a failure to demur on such grounds; the objection that the complaint was not sufficiently definite and certain, and that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, does not raise the question. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555; Chase v. Evoy, 58 Cal. 348; Coleman v. Woodworth, 28 Cal. 567; Bank of Stockton v. Howland, 42 Cal. 129; Bemmerly v. Woodward, 124 Cal. 568; 57 Pac. 561. Where one count of a complaint is good, the objection that the other counts do not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, is not waived by failure to demur. Lyden v. Spohn-Patrick Co., 155 Cal. 177; 100 Pac. 236. An error in overruling a demurrer to a complaint is cured, where the plaintiff subsequently amends his complaint in the particular to which the demurrer was directed, and the amended complaint is not demurred to. Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519; 17 Pac. 673.

Objection for insufficiency of facts, not waived. An objection that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, may be urged at any time, without demurrer (Flood v. Templeton, 148 Cal. 374; 83 Pac. 148; Arnold v. American Ins. Co., 148 Cal. 660; 84 Pac. 182; Neale v. Morrow, 163 Cal. 445; 145 Pac. 1052; Wells Fargo & Co. v. McCarthy, 5 Cal. App. 301; 90 Pac. 203; Burke v. Dittus, 8 Cal. App. 175; 96 Pac. 330; Cameron v. Ah Quong, 8 Cal. App. 310; 96 Pac. 1025), except where the benefit of a personal privilege, such as the statute of limitations, is claimed; consequently, an objection to the failure of the complaint against an estate, on a contract, to allege the presentation of a claim to the administrator is not waived, nor has the administrator any power to waive it. Burke v. Maguire, 154 Cal. 456; 98 Pac. 21. Where the complaint of an intervener, upon which the judgment in his favor is based, fails to state a cause of action for want of essential facts, objection thereto is not waived by failure to demur. Cameron v. Ah Quong, 8 Cal. App. 310; 96 Pac. 1025. A stipulation that a general demurrer may be overruled does not estop the defendant from relying on the failure of the complaint to state a cause of action, at any subsequent stage of the proceedings. Hitchcock v. Caruthers, 82 Cal. 523; 23 Pac. 48; Evans v. Gerken, 105 Cal. 311; 38 Pac. 725; Morris v. Courtney, 120 Cal. 63; 52 Pac. 129. The fact that the demurrer was overruled by consent does not preclude the defendant from attacking the judgment on the ground that it rests on a complaint inherently defective. Banbury v. Arnold, 91 Cal. 606; 27 Pac. 934; Jones v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 4 Cal. Unrep. 755; 37 Pac. 656. The failure of the complaint to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action cannot be disregarded on appeal, though a demurrer was interposed on such ground and overruled. Conde v. Dreisam Gold Mining Co., 3 Cal. App. 583; 86 Pac. 825; Haskell v. Moore, 29 Cal. 437. A general demurrer is not waived by the filing of an answer subsequently to the overruling of the demurrer. Hurley v. Ryan, 119 Cal. 71; 51 Pac. 20; Curtiss v. Bachman, 84 Cal. 216; 24 Pac. 379.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note 6 to § 430, ante.

CHAPTER IV.

ANSWER.

§ 437. Answer, what to contain.
§ 437a. Actions to recover insurance. What defendant claiming exemption must set up.
§ 438. When counterclaim may be set up.
§ 439. When defendant omits to set up counterclaim.
§ 440. Counterclaim not barred by death or assignment.
§ 441. Answer may contain several grounds of defense. Defendant may answer part and demur to part of complaint.
§ 442. Cross-complaint.

§ 437. Answer, what to contain. The answer of the defendant shall contain:

1. A general or specific denial of the material allegations of the complaint controverted by the defendant.

2. A statement of any new matter constituting a defense or counterclaim.

If the complaint be verified, the denial of each allegation controverted must be specific, and be made positively, or according to the information and belief of the defendant. If the defendant has no information or belief upon the subject sufficient to enable him to answer an allegation of the complaint, he may so state in his answer, and place his denial on that ground. If the complaint be not verified, a general denial is sufficient, but only puts in issue the material allegations of the complaint.

Pleas in abatement. See ante, § 430.
Amendment. Post, §§ 472, 473.
Appearance, answering is. Post, § 1014.
Counterclaim. Post, §§ 438–441.
Cross-complaint. Post, § 442.
Death of party. Ante, § 385.
Disability of party. Ante, § 385.
Errors and defects to be disregarded. Post, § 475.
Gold, coin, etc. Allegations as to money being payable in, should be denied. Post, § 667.
Striking out. Post, § 453.
Supplemental answer. Post, § 464.
Time to answer, extension of. Post, § 1054.
Writing, setting forth, in answer, effect of. Post, §§ 448, 449.
Particular actions, answers in. See specific title.

Legislation § 437. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; evidently based on Practice Act, § 46, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 702, which read: "The answer of the defendant shall contain: 1. If the complaint be verified, a specific denial to each allegation of the complaint controverted by the defendant, or a denial thereof according to his information and belief; if the complaint be not verified, then a general denial to each of said allegations, but a general denial shall only put in issue the material and express allegations of the complaint. 2. A statement of matter in avoidance, a counterclaim constituting a defense, or the subject-matter of cross-complaint which may entitle a defendant to relief against the plaintiff alone, or against the plaintiff and a co-defendant." When enacted in 1872, (1) in subd. 1, (a) "shall only put" was changed to "only puts," and (b) the words "and express" were stricken out before "allegations"; (2) subd. 2 was changed to read, "2. A statement of any new matter in avoidance, or constituting a defense or counterclaim."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 300.

Form of denial. Any form of denial which fairly meets and traverses the allegations is admissible; the form of the denial, if not evasive, is immaterial; it may be a direct denial, or an assertion controverting what the plaintiff alleges. Hill v. Smith, 27 Cal. 476. The fact that the traverse is in an affirmative instead of a negative form is immaterial (Scott v. Wood, 81 Cal. 398; 22 Pac. 871); and it is not essential that the traverse shall be expressed in negative words: an averment, in the answer, controverting what is alleged in the complaint, is equivalent to a denial (Perkins v. Brock, 80 Cal. 320; 22 Pac. 194; Stetson v. Briggs, 114 Cal. 511; 46 Pac. 603); and an affirmative allegation in the complaint may be traversed in the answer by an affirmative allegation inconsistent with it. Siter v. Jewett, 33 Cal. 92; Churchill v. Baumann, 95 Cal. 541; 3 Pac. 770. The statement that the defendant, for answer, says that he denies, etc., is a good denial (Espinosa v. Gregory, 40 Cal. 58); but a denial in the conjunctive is bad. Bartlett Estate Co. v. Fraser, 11 Cal. App. 373; 105 Pac. 130. If several material facts are stated conjunctively in a verified complaint, an answer which undertakes to deny these averments as a whole, conjunctively stated, is evasive, and an admission of the allegations thus attempted to be denied. Doll v. Good, 38 Cal. 287; Gulf of California Nav. etc. Co. v. State Investment etc. Co., 70 Cal. 586; 12 Pac. 473; Westbay v. Gray, 116 Cal. 660; 48 Pac. 800; Duckworth v. Watsonville Water etc. Co., 150 Cal. 520; 89 Pac. 338; Blodgett v. Scott, 11 Cal. App. 310; 104 Pac. 842; Kinney v. Maryland Casualty Co., 15 Cal. App. 571, 573; 115 Pac. 456. The defendant is not required to deny the allegations in any more specific language than that in which they are set forth in the complaint. McDonald v. Pacific Debenture Co., 146 Cal. 667; 80 Pac. 1090. An issue is made up when a proposition is affirmed on one side and denied on the other, and it is immaterial whether the denial precedes or follows the affirmation; where a negative allegation is necessary in stating the cause of action, it must, of course, precede an averment of the fact negatived, but its position upon the record does not render it inoperative or useless; it constitutes the basis of the issue joined by the subsequent averment, and the latter operates as a traverse, and not as an averment of new matter. Frisch v. Caler, 21 Cal. 71. The answer is sufficient if it states facts inconsistent with the allegations of the complaint, and which, if true, would defeat the plaintiff's right to recover. Pfister v. Wade, 69 Cal. 133; 10 Pac. 369. Any allegation in the answer, which, if found to be true, necessarily shows that the allegation of the complaint, as to the same matter, is untrue, is a good traverse, and sufficient as a denial. Burris v. People's Ditch Co., 104 Cal. 248; 37 Pac. 922. The defendant should set forth the true nature of his defense in his answer. Walton v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 362. A denial, whether general or special, puts in issue only the allegations of the complaint; the difference between a general and a special denial, in this respect, is only in the extent to which the allegations are traversed. Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47.

The general denial. The common-law rule has been changed as to what may be proved under the general issue, so that, under our system, a special defense must be specially pleaded; a general denial puts in issue only the material allegations of the complaint (Elder v. Spinks, 53 Cal. 293; Michalitschke Bros. & Co. v. Wells Fargo & Co., 118 Cal. 683; 50 Pac. 847), and puts in issue only the material allegations of an unverified complaint. Glazier v. Clift, 10 Cal. 303; Mentone Irrigation Co. v. Redlands Electric Light etc. Co., 155 Cal. 323; 7 Ann. Cas. 1222; 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 382; 100 Pac. 1082; San Francisco Commercial Agency v. Widemann, 19 Cal. App. 209; 124 Pac. 1056. A denial, whether general or special, puts in issue only the allegations of the complaint: the difference between a general and a special denial, in this respect, is only in the extent to which the allegations are traversed. Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47. A general denial of an unverified complaint to quiet title puts in issue the plaintiff's interest in or ownership of the land (Pennie v. Hildreth, 81 Cal. 127; 22 Pac. 398); and a general denial of an unverified complaint by an administrator puts in issue the appointment, qualification, etc., of the plaintiff (Pennie v. Hildreth, 81 Cal. 127; 22 Pac. 398); and a general denial of value, in such a complaint, puts in issue the value. Paden v. Goldbaum, 4 Cal. Unrep. 767; 37 Pac. 759. A general denial of an unverified complaint, in an action by the assignee of a cause of action, puts in issue the assignment and the plaintiff's right to sue, and the burden is upon the plaintiff to prove the assignment. Brown v. Curtis, 128 Cal. 193; 60 Pac. 773. In ejectment, the defendant may, under a general denial, show that the consideration of the deed, upon which the plaintiff bases his title and right of entry, was illegal, and the deed therefore void. Sparrow v. Rhoades, 76 Cal. 208; 9 Am. St. Rep. 197; 18 Pac. 245. The general denial has the same influence as the general issue at common law (Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22; 70 Am. Dec. 692; Gavin v. Annan, 2 Cal. 494, and McLarren v. Spalding, 2 Cal. 510), and should not be stricken out as sham or frivolous; under it, payment or failure of consideration may be proved; it admits nothing, under our statute, but the execution of the instrument declared on. Brooks v. Chilton, 6 Cal. 640. A general denial of an unverified complaint on a promissory note does not put in issue the due execution of the note; hence judgment cannot be rendered against the defendant on the pleadings (Hastings v. Dollarhide, 18 Cal. 390; Davanay v. Eggenhoff, 43 Cal. 395); and the denial cannot be stricken out as sham; the defendant has the right to put the plaintiff to proof of his demand, and require that he establish it by evidence admissible for such purpose. Fay v. Cobb, 51 Cal. 313. A want of legal capacity to sue is a personal disability, that may or may not be set up by the defendant: a general denial does not raise this issue. California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 8 Cal. 585; White v. Moses, 11 Cal. 68; Bank of Shasta v. Boyd, 99 Cal. 604; 34 Pac. 337; Brown v. Curtis, 128 Cal. 193; 60 Pac. 773. The allegation of non-payment of a promissory note is material: when the complaint is not verified, non-payment is put in issue by a general denial. Bank of Shasta v. Boyd, 99 Cal. 604; 34 Pac. 337.

The specific denial. If no general denial is made, and specific denials are resorted to, there must be an actual denial, and not one evasive in form and substance. Marsters v. Lash, 61 Cal. 622. The rules of pleading, under our system, are intended to prevent evasion, and to require a denial of every specific averment in a sworn complaint, in substance and in spirit, and not merely a denial of its literal truth: whenever the defendant fails to make such denial, he admits the averment. Doll v. Good, 38 Cal. 287 This was the law of the old equity system of pleading, the rules of which were probably the most perfect for the elucidation of truth ever devised, and they are not less the rules of our present system. Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638. The allegations of a pleading are taken most strongly against the pleader; hence, it is necessary that he should make with distinctness and precision, and without evasion, the allegations; where the pleadings are verified, it is necessary to shape their allegations and denials so as to correspond with at least the admitted facts. Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 393. The evasion of a material or controlling allegation of the complaint is a significant circumstance against the defendant. Baker v. Baker, 13 Cal. 87. In an action to foreclose a mortgage, a denial of the authority of the officers of the corporation defendant to execute the mortgage, without a denial of a ratification alleged, does not raise a material issue, and the plaintiff is entitled to judgment. Gribble v. Columbus Brewing Co., 100 Cal. 67; 34 Pac. 527. In an action to foreclose a laborer's lien, a denial that the plaintiff did work "as a miner" is equivocal and evasive, and raises no issue. Curnow v. Happy Valley etc. Hydraulic Co., 68 Cal. 262; 9 Pac. 149. In an action against the indorser of a note, a denial of due or legal notice of the presentation of the note for payment, and of the non-payment thereof, raises no issue of fact. Young v. Miller, 63 Cal. 302. A denial that an official act alleged was originally performed by the officer in his official capacity is evasive, and tenders no material issue. Shepard v. McNeil, 38 Cal. 72. To deny that no part of the principal sum mentioned in a promissory note sued on has been paid, and to deny that the whole of the principal sum and interest has not been paid, is evasive, and does not present a sufficient denial of an allegation of non-payment. Westbay v. Gray, 116 Cal. 660; 48 Pac. 800. A denial of the value of property sued for, in the language of the complaint, is evasive and of no effect. Marsters v. Lash, 61 Cal. 622. A release should be specially pleaded. Grunwald v. Freese, 4 Cal. Unrep. 182; 34 Pac. 73.

Denial of material or immaterial allegations. A mere denial that the plaintiff is the owner of a note sued on, which appears to have been made to the plaintiff, tenders no material issue, and is irrelevant. Wedderspoon v. Rogers, 32 Cal. 569; Poorman v. Mills, 35 Cal. 118; 95 Am. Dec. 90; Frost v. Harford, 40 Cal. 165; Monroe v. Fohl, 72 Cal. 568; 14 Pac. 514; Bank of Shasta v. Boyd, 99 Cal. 604; 34 Pac. 337. The denial of allegations of indebtedness, as to time, amount, work, etc., in the words of the complaint, raises an immaterial issue, instead of meeting the substantial matter averred, and is therefore insufficient. Caulfield v. Sanders, 17 Cal. 569. Immaterial allegations in a complaint need not be answered (Doyle v. Franklin, 48 Cal. 537); and where they are answered, both the complaint and the answer, so far as they relate thereto, must be disregarded, when the sufficiency of the pleading and the issues is brought in question (Jones v. Petaluma, 36 Cal. 230; Canfield v. Tobias, 21 Cal. 349); nor is the defendant bound to answer matters of evidence which the plaintiff chooses to allege in his complaint; if the plaintiff requires testimony of the defendant, the proper mode is to put him on the stand as a witness. Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450.

Statement of new matter. All new matter of defense must be specially pleaded in the answer. Walton v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 362; Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22; 70 Am. Dec. 692; Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467; Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47; Glazer v. Clift, 10 Cal. 303; Michalitschke v. Wells Fargo & Co., 118 Cal. 683; 50 Pac. 847; Hawkins v. Borland, 14 Cal. 413; Hatton v. Gregg, 4 Cal. App. 542; 88 Pac. 594; Robinson v. American Fish etc. Co., 17 Cal. App. 212, 221; 119 Pac. 388. A denial, whether general or specific, puts in issue only the allegations of the complaint; new matter must be specially pleaded, and whatever admits that a cause of action, as stated in the complaint, once existed, but at the same time avoids it, i. e., shows that it has ceased to exist, is new matter; it is that matter which the defendant must affirmatively establish. Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47; Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467; Wilson v. California Central R. R. Co., 94 Cal. 166; 17 L. R. A. 685; 29 Pac. 861. Whether the matter is new or not, must be determined from the matter itself, and not from the form in which it is pleaded; the test is, whether it operates as a traverse, or by way of confession and avoidance. Frisch v. Caler, 21 Cal. 71. New matter is that which admits that the cause of action stated in the complaint once existed, but at the same time avoids it, that is, shows that it has ceased to exist; such as release, and accord and satisfaction; it is a matter arising subsequently to the origin of the cause of action, and which the defendant must affirmatively plead and establish; but it is otherwise as to matter showing that a cause of action did not exist when the action was begun, and going to prove that a cause of action had not accrued when the suit was brought, which, at common law, it was permissible to show, under the general issue, and new matter was not, according to the strict original principles of the common law, admissible under the general issue, any more than under the system established by the code. Landis v. Morrissey, 69 Cal. 83; 10 Pac. 258. New matter is that which, under the rules of evidence, the defendant must affirmatively establish; if the onus of proof is thrown upon the defendant, the matter to be proved by him is new matter; a defense that concedes that the plaintiff once had a good cause of action, but insists that it no longer exists, involves new matter. Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22; 70 Am. Dec. 692; Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47. New matter is something relied on by the defendant, which is not put in issue by the plaintiff: anything showing that the plaintiff has not the right of recovery at all, or to the extent he claims, on the case as he makes it, is not new matter, and may be given in evidence upon an issue joined by an allegation in the complaint and its denial in the answer. Bridges v. Paige, 13 Cal. 640; Bank of Paso Robles v. Blackburn, 2 Cal. App. 146; 83 Pac. 262. If the answer, directly or by necessary implication, admits the truth of all the essential allegations of the complaint which show a cause of action, but sets forth facts from which it results that, notwithstanding the truth of the allegations, no cause of action existed in the plaintiff at the time the action was brought, those facts are new matter; but if those facts only show that some essential allegation of the complaint is not true, then such facts are not new matter, but only a traverse. Goddard v. Fulton, 21 Cal. 430; Frisch v. Caler, 21 Cal. 71. Any matter which does not avoid or discharge a cause of action theretofore existing, but the purpose of which is to show that the alleged cause of action never did exist, and that material allegations of the complaint are not true, is not new matter required to be specially pleaded. Churchill v. Baumann, 95 Cal. 541; 30 Pac. 770. The defense that the defendant acquired title to the property affected in an ejectment suit, subsequently to the commencement of the action and to his answer therein, is new matter, and must be set up by a supplemental answer in the nature of a plea puis darrein continuance. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467. Evidence that an injury charged to the negligence of the defendant was caused by the negligence of a third party, is matter of denial, simply, and not new matter of defense. Jackson v. Feather River etc. Water Co., 14 Cal. 18. In an action for goods sold and delivered, evidence that the goods were sold on a credit which had not expired when the action was commenced is not new matter. Landis v. Morrissey, 69 Cal. 83; 10 Pac.

258. An averment that a third party, not sued, is the owner of the property affected by the complaint, is not new matter, but merely a traverse of the allegation of the complaint as to ownership. Robinson v. Merrill, 87 Cal. 11; 25 Pac. 162. The defendant may, in ejectment, under the general denial, give in evidence title in himself: the allegation of such title in the answer does not constitute new matter, nor present any new issue. Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176. A defense of unskillful work is new matter, and must be set up in an action on the contract for payment. Kendall v. Vallejo, 1 Cal. 371. The defense of payment is not ordinarily new matter, and need not be set up as a special defense (Brown v. Orr, 29 Cal. 120; Davanay v. Eggenhoff, 43 Cal. 395; Fairchild v. Amsbaugh, 22 Cal. 572; Wetmore v. San Francisco, 44 Cal. 294; Mendocino County v. Johnson, 125 Cal. 337; 58 Pac. 5); but may be put in issue by a general denial. Davanay v. Eggenhoff, 43 Cal. 395. The plea of former recovery is new matter, and must be set up in the answer, such defenses admitting the contract as alleged, but avoiding it by matter ex post facto (Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22; 70 Am. Dec. 692); and in an action on a promissory note, pleas of want of consideration and payment are affirmative defenses, and must be pleaded. Pastene v. Pardini, 135 Cal. 431; 67 Pac. 681. A levy of execution on personal property, sufficient to satisfy the judgment, is not a payment: that fact must be alleged as new matter. Mulford v. Estudillo, 23 Cal. 94. The defense of negligence of a fellow-servant cannot be invoked, unless it is pleaded. Reeve v. Colusa Gas etc. Co., 152 Cal. 99; 92 Pac. 89. If the plaintiff omits to set forth the entire transaction out of which his claim arose, the defendant may supply this omission by setting forth in his answer the omitted facts; the plaintiff cannot select an isolated act or fact, which is only one of a series of acts or steps in the entire transaction, and insist upon a judgment on this fact alone, if the fact is so connected with others that it forms only a portion of the transaction. Story & Isham Commercial Co. v. Story, 109 Cal. 30; 34 Pac. 671. If the answer to a complaint in ejectment fails to state a specific and definite time of the making of a verbal lease, and the plaintiff fails to demur specially to the answer, the defendant is entitled to render such time specific and definite by proof. Armstrong v. Garate, 15 Cal. App. 57; 113 Pac. 698. In an action by a vendor to quiet title, where the contract of sale provides for a rescission of the contract by the vendor upon default of the purchaser in payment of purchase-money, the facts entitling the defendant to a return of purchase-money paid must be specially pleaded. Stratton v. California Land etc. Co., 86 Cal. 353; 24 Pac. 1065. In an action for the recovery of real property, a title by prescription, if not pleaded, is not in issue. Allen v. McKay & Co., 6 Cal. Unrep. 993; 70 Pac. 8. Where both parties treat an affirmative defense as denied, the want of a formal answer thereto will be deemed waived. Kern Valley Bank v. Koehn, 19 Cal. App. 247; 125 Pac. 358.

Denial, where the complaint is verified. A general denial of all the allegations of a verified complaint, followed by separate general denials of each specific allegation, is not sufficient to raise an issue upon the facts stated in the complaint. Hensley v. Tartar, 14 Cal. 508. Where the answer to a verified complaint does not deny the facts therein alleged, they are deemed to be admitted. Blanck v. Commonwealth etc. Corporation, 19 Cal. App. 720; 127 Pac. 805; Rose v. Lelande, 20 Cal. App. 502; 129 Pac. 599; Alden v. Mayfield, 164 Cal. 6; 127 Pac. 45. The rules of pleading, in answer to a verified complaint, as to facts presumptively known, apply as well to corporations defendant as to individuals. Zany v. Rawhide Gold Mining Co., 15 Cal. App. 373; 114 Pac. 1026.

When denial must be positive. The forms of denial prescribed by statute—positively, and upon information and belief—cannot be indiscriminately used; if the facts alleged in the complaint are presumptively within the knowledge of the defendant, he must answer positively: a denial upon information and belief will be treated as an evasion. Curtis v. Richards, 9 Cal. 33. An averment of a fact peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendant, and which is a part of his official duty to know, must be made positively, and not upon information and belief. McConoughey v. Jackson, 101 Cal. 265; 40 Am. St. Rep. 53; 35 Pac. 863. Where the facts stated in a verified complaint are presumptively known to the defendant, or where he has the means of ascertaining, as by consulting public records, whether or not such facts are true, a positive answer is required to raise an issue: an evasive answer, on information and belief, raises no issue, but admits the verified allegations so answered. Mulcahy v. Buckley, 100 Cal. 484; 35 Pac. 144; Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47; 50 Pac. 1066; Raphael Weill & Co. v. Crittenden, 139 Cal. 488; 73 Pac. 238; Jensen v. Dorr, 159 Cal. 742; 116 Pac. 553; Bartlett Estate Co. v. Fraser, 11 Cal. App. 373; 105 Pac. 130; Reclamation District v. Snowball, 160 Cal. 695; 117 Pac. 905; 118 Pac. 514, 515; Le Breton v. Stanley Contracting Co., 15 Cal. App. 429; 114 Pac. 1028, 1030; Zany v. Rawhide Gold Mining Co., 15 Cal. App. 373; 114 Pac. 1026. A defendant is not at liberty to answer any allegation for want of information and belief upon the subject, sufficient to enable him to answer it, when he may be presumed to know, or when he is aware before answering, that he has the means of ascertaining whether or not such allegation is true; and such an answer is improper, where it appears that the defendant knew, before answering, that he could certainly ascertain whether or not the plaintiff had recorded his claim of lien, as alleged in the complaint, by examining a public record in the county in which the land upon which the lien is claimed is situated (Mulcahy v. Buckley, 100 Cal. 484; 35 Pac. 144); but the sufficiency of a recorded document to create a mechanic's lien may be denied upon information and belief. Hagman v. Williams, 88 Cal. 146; 25 Pac. 1111. It is difficult to define with more exact precision when an answer should be positive in its denials, than to say that when the material facts alleged in the complaint are presumptively within the knowledge of the defendant, he must traverse them, if he undertakes to do so at all, directly and positively, or he must show how it is that he is without knowledge of such material facts; he must, by a proper statement of facts or circumstances, overcome the presumption of knowledge on his part, which being done, his answer on information and belief will be deemed all that the law requires. Vassault v. Austin, 32 Cal. 597; Brown v. Scott, 25 Cal. 189; Loveland v. Garner, 74 Cal. 298; 15 Pac. 844; Gribble v. Columbus Brewing Co., 100 Cal. 67; 34 Pac. 527. Rules of pleading are intended to prevent evasion, and require a denial of every averment in a sworn complaint, in substance and in spirit, and not merely a denial of its literal truth. Doll v. Good, 38 Cal. 287; Zany v. Rawhide Gold Min. Co., 15 Cal. App. 373; 114 Pac. 1026; Kinney v. Maryland Casualty Co., 15 Cal. App. 571; 115 Pac. 456.

Denial on information and belief. The only object in requiring the defendant to state his belief is to dispense with the necessity of proof on the part of the plaintiff; and if he admits that he believes the fact to be true, it stands as confessed; the clear result of the requirement is, that the defendant must state his actual belief, whether founded upon mere hearsay evidence, general report, or other information; and when he does so state it, he is precluded from controverting the alleged fact which he believes, but does not know, to exist; and the practical result is, that the plaintiff may establish the existence of a fact, not known to the defendant, by the defendant's mere belief, based upon incompetent evidence; the statute changes the law of evidence in favor of the plaintiff, and against the defendant; it permits the plaintiff to verify his complaint, and then the defendant is compelled to state his belief as to facts he does not know to exist, and when those facts, unknown to the defendant, are alleged and sworn to by the plaintiff, upon his own knowledge, the defendant is compelled either to believe them to be true or to believe the plaintiff guilty of perjury. The object of the statute is to sift the conscience of the defendant, and obtain from him his belief; he must answer according to his belief, whether that belief is founded upon sufficient or insufficient information; the word "belief," as used in the statute, is to be taken in its ordinary sense, and means the actual conclusion of the defendant, drawn from information; there is a clear distinction between positive knowledge and mere belief, and they cannot both exist together. Humphreys v. McCall, 9 Cal. 59; 70 Am. Dec. 621. A denial "upon his information and belief," instead of in the statutory language, "according to his information and belief," is sufficient (Kirstein v. Madden, 38 Cal. 158), being substantially the same as a denial "according to his information and belief." Roussin v. Stewart, 33 Cal. 208. A denial upon information and belief is not sufficient to justify the dissolution of a temporary restraining order or injunction on the ground that the equities of the bill are fully denied by the answer. Porter v. Jennings, 89 Cal. 440; 26 Pac. 965; Dingley v. Buckner, 11 Cal. App. 181; 104 Pac. 478; Chace v. Jennings, 3 Cal. Unrep. 474; 28 Pac. 681. As to matters not presumably within the knowledge of a defendant, a denial upon information and belief is permissible, and a specific denial of each of the allegations as to such matters is not essential, although the complaint is verified. Jensen v. Dorr, 159 Cal. 742; 116 Pac. 553. The defendant may not answer an allegation, the truth of which he may ascertain from the public records, by an averment that he has no information or belief on the subject. Mulcahy v. Buckley, 100 Cal. 484; 35 Pac. 144. An administrator may deny, upon information and belief, an allegation that his intestate executed certain deeds. Thompson v. Lynch, 29 Cal. 189. In an action to foreclose a mortgage, allegations in the answer of a wife, denying, upon information and belief, that the mortgagee delivered the mortgage to her, or to her and her husband, at her request, do not amount to a denial that the document was delivered to her husband acting for her, or negative in any way the presumption of her full knowledge of the transaction. Phillips v. Phillips, 163 Cal. 530; 127 Pac. 346. A denial in the answer, for want of information and belief, framed in the conjunctive form, that plaintiff is now, and at all times mentioned in the complaint has been, a corporation, etc., is insufficient to raise an issue. Bartlett Estate Co. v. Fraser, 11 Cal. App. 373; 105 Pac. 130. If a defendant, presumed to know the facts, has a lack of knowledge in fact, an explanation is essential, where he makes a denial upon information and belief, as to how it happens that he is without such knowledge. Zany v. Rawhide Gold Mining Co., 15 Cal. App. 373; 114 Pac. 1026.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Answer to contain what. General rules. The answer. This is to contain:

1. A general or specific denial of each material allegation of the complaint controverted by the defendant, or of any knowledge or information thereof sufficient to form a belief.

A general denial asserts in a single sentence that every allegation of the complaint is untrue. When a complaint is false in every one of its allegations, the defendant may, if he chooses, group them together, instead of denying each allegation in its turn, and may thus make the denial general, so as to cover all the allegations at once. But this is far from being equivalent to the general issue in common-law pleadings; for that, besides denying all the plaintiff's allegations, denied also that he had any cause of action, even if his allegations were true, and thus enabled the defendant not only to adduce evidence in disproof of the plaintiff's case, but generally in discharge of it, if not disproved. A specific denial singles out specific allegations, and denies them. All allegations not denied are, for the purposes of the action, taken as true. An express admission is, therefore, improper. In equity pleadings, under the former system, express admissions were proper, and often necessary; but in this respect, as in others, there is a wide difference between that system and the one established by the code. A denial must be of the substance of the allegation, not of its form. When, therefore, as is sometimes the case, a defendant denies that an allegation is true in manner and form as stated, or denies that he did what is charged against him at the time and place stated, he puts himself upon the form of the statement, rather than upon its substance, and fails to make that denial which the law requires. His answer is, then, what is sometimes called a negative pregnant; that is, a denial whose truth was consistent with the truth of every material part of the allegation denied. A denial need not be in the very language of the allegation denied, though that is the best mode, when it can be done with truth. Sometimes it is necessary to make what may be called a partial denial; as, for example, when the complaint professes to give the substance of an agreement, which the defendant does not admit to be correctly given, he may answer that the only agreement made on the subject was as follows, and then it set forth.

2. A statement of new matter in avoidance or constituting a defense or counterclaim, in ordinary and concise language, without repetition.

All the defenses must be kept distinct. Each of them should begin with some expression to indicate that it is a new defense, thus: And for a further defense, the defendant answers or alleges, etc. (See Gates v. Kieff, 7 Cal. 125.) Every defense, legal and equitable, may be interposed.

A counterclaim is a cross-demand—a claim of the plaintiff against the defendant. It is more extensive than set-off, the latter being confined to money claims, and those of a particular description, while the former extends not only to money claims, but to recoupment and to equitable defenses, when affirmative relief is sought on the part of the defendant. The main design is, as far as possible, to dispose of the whole controversy between the parties in one action, avoiding thus the multiplication of suits, and bringing the whole of a transaction, or a connected series of transactions, into one view, to be judged as a whole. The counterclaim must show a cause of action in favor of a defendant and against a plaintiff, between whom a several judgment might be had in the action. If, for example, the claim and defense be, as they generally are, such that the plaintiff might recover against one of several defendants, that defendant may, on his part, assert his counterclaim against the plaintiff. The cause of action set forth in the counterclaim must arise either out of the contract or transaction set forth in the complaint as the foundation of the plaintiff's claim, as in case of independent covenants in a deed; or it must be connected with the subject of the action, as in case of an assault upon the defendant by the plaintiff which led to the violence charged in the complaint; or if the action itself be on contract, then any other cause of action, arising also on contract and existing at the commencement of the action, may be the ground of a counterclaim.

In the answer, as well as in the complaint, it is desirable to break the matter into distinct paragraphs, and to number them.

When, therefore, a complaint is brought to an attorney, and he is to prepare an answer, his first question of his client should be: "Is any part of this complaint false?" and if it be so, that part must be specified and denied; he should next inquire if there be any defense which would discharge the defendant if the complaint were proved to be true; and, lastly, he should learn if there be a counterclaim which will avail his client. The different defenses naturally present themselves in the following order:

Denial.
- General.
- Specific.
  - Total.
  - Partial.

Defenses in discharge.

Counterclaim.
- Set-off.
- Recoupment.
- Other claim of defendant on same contract or transaction.
- Other claim of defendant connected with the subject of action.
- Money claim on separate contract against money claim on contract.
- Equitable defense, with a claim of affirmative relief.

The true design of pleading is sometimes misapprehended. It is not to exercise the art of lawyers, but to obtain justice for clients; and in furtherance of that design, it seeks to ascertain and record the facts of the controversy. To ascertain the facts, it is necessary that each party make his own statement of them, and when the points of disagreement are ascertained, evidence is called in. There are persons who prefer oral pleading at the trial. Others prefer oral pleading in the presence of a judge, preparatory to the trial; and of that opinion are some distinguished lawyers in England. The arguments for it are, that it is simpler, quicker, and more certain. The majority, however, are in favor of written pleadings exchanged between the parties before the trial. They reason thus: If there were but two parties, and those near the judge, oral pleading might be preferable; but when the parties are numerous, or distant, the inconvenience of bringing them all before the judge at the same time, to make their respective statements and counter-statements, would be hardly tolerable. Therefore, they would neither call in the jury nor bring the parties before the judge, till they had interchanged with each other written statements of the facts, and ascertained the points of difference. In what manner to order these written statements, so that they shall most surely and most easily evolve the points of difference, is the problem of pleading. How this problem is solved with us, is submitted to the judgment of those who reason for themselves.

The common law sought, by its peculiar scheme of written altercations, to bring out the precise points in dispute, and in doing so, instituted an intricate and toilsome process, which wearied the attorney and the suitor, and failed to attain the end at last. And even if it had been true, as its friends claimed for it, that this scheme was entirely successful in the production of single and close issues, that would not have decided the question of retaining it. For it could not have been maintained in any respect, without upholding the distinction between legal and equitable proceedings, nor could it have been maintained in its integrity without retaining the forms of action. They greatly err, who conceive that they can abolish the forms of action, and yet preserve, as a whole, that mass of regulations, subtilities, and conceits, which formed what was styled the system of pleading at common law. Some of the rules might perhaps have been preserved, when the forms of pleading were abolished; but greater inconvenience and confusion would have resulted from an attempt to modify the system for the purpose of adapting it to a single form of action, than from its entire reconstruction. Whatever was useful in the old system of common law or equity was of course ready for use in the new; but the old had to be taken down, and a new one reconstructed, if any permanent good was to be accomplished. These may be regarded as legal axioms: first, that no scheme of procedure can last which does not provide for the adjudication of the whole of a controversy, be it partly legal and partly equitable, in one action; secondly, that neither the common-law pleading nor the equity pleadings subserved that purpose and attained that end; and, therefore, thirdly, that a new system was indispensable, selecting what was good in each, and adding what seemed to be necessary to make a consistent whole. It certainly would be agreeable to know that in obtaining the benefits of a new and uniform system, we did not lose a single advantage of either of the old. Let us see whether such be not the fact. In the first place, there were, under the old system, in the greater number of the cases, no real issues whatever; the issues were nominal in all cases of general pleading, as has been already explained. So far, certainly, the advantage is greatly on the side of the code. In the next place, the advantage in respect to that smaller number of cases where the pleading was special, is also on the side of the code. What produces an issue? An allegation denied. Under the code the defendant must deny or discharge himself; and if he discharge himself, his allegations in discharge are denied by force of the law. Here there is no general pleading till you get beyond the answer, and then for the first time you meet the general issue—a statutory general issue. The defenses by discharge are few in comparison with defenses by denial, not more probably than as one to ten. And if the affirmations and denials are stated with ordinary skill, they constitute issues as simple and precise as it is possible to put in words. It is only when the pleader is ignorant of his art that they are otherwise. If a pleading contain involved statements, or immaterial averments, lay it not to the account of the law which is violated, but to him who disregards it. The remedy is with the courts. If he who assumes to act as attorney be so faulty in his mind or education as to be unable to make a plain and logical statement, or to contradict one with precision, the court can rectify the pleading, and punish him. They are also vested with the power to make general rules for the purpose of carrying the code into full effect. If they find pleaders inattentive, let them establish as a positive rule what is now the dictate of convenience, and require the allegations to be separated, to be confined each to a single point, and to be numbered. If issues as single and as narrow as it is possible to produce are not thus secured, it is not possible to secure them by any schemes of legislation or any rules of court.

2. Difference between effect of general and special denial. A denial, whether general or special, only puts in issue the allegations of the complaint. The difference between a general and special denial in this respect is only in the extent to which the allegations are traversed. Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47.

3. General denial. In an action for malicious prosecution, the defendants filed a general denial, and also averred that they had nothing to do with the prosecution, except as witnesses; plaintiff filed a replication taking issue on this averment. If plaintiff regarded this as a good defense and joined issue on it, defendants cannot complain; though, probably, the matter was put in issue by the general denial, and the replication was unnecessary. Dreux v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83; White v. Moses, 11 Cal. 69; Brooks v. Chilton, 6 Cal. 640.

4. Qualified general denial. A general denial of the averments of a verified complaint, with the qualifying words, "except as hereinafter admitted," does not put in issue any of its allegations. Levinson v. Schwartz, 22 Cal. 229.

5. Specific denial. A specific denial to each allegation of a complaint is a separate denial of the particular allegation controverted. The plaintiff, if he verified his complaint, could compel the defendant to deny specifically each separate allegation. San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453. The rules of pleading are meant to prevent evasion, and require a denial of every specific averment in a verified complaint, in substance and in spirit, and not merely a denial of its literal truth; and whenever the defendant fails to make such denial, he admits the averment. Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638; see also Fish v. Redington, 31 Cal. 185.

6. In ejectment, all matter of defense must be stated in answer. In ejectment, the defendant is bound to bring forward all matter of a strictly defensive character, or be precluded from again litigating the same; but he is not bound to set up or litigate new matter constituting a cause of action in his favor. Ayres v. Bensley, 32 Cal. 620.

7. Denial on information and belief. If, from the nature of the fact alleged, the knowledge is presumptively on information, defendant is not bound to deny positively, but only "according to his information and belief"; in such case he must answer according to both his information and belief. The word "belief" means the actual conclusion of the defendant drawn from information. Humphreys v. McCall, 9 Cal. 59; 70 Am. Dec. 621. A denial is not sufficient which states that the defendant, a municipal corporation, has no knowledge or information "in respect to the obligations of a count in a verified complaint, and therefore denies the same." San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; see also Brown v. Scott, 25 Cal. 189, and cases there cited; also Fish v. Redington, 31 Cal. 185.

8. Denial on information and belief by administrator. An allegation, by an administrator, as defendant, which "avers, on information and belief, that no such deed or deeds were ever executed," is a sufficient denial of an allegation in the complaint that decedent executed and delivered the particular deeds referred to. Thompson v. Lynch, 29 Cal. 189.

9. Denial on information and belief, when insufficient. If the averments of a verified complaint are presumptively within the knowledge of the defendant, a denial of the same in the answer, according to his information and belief, is evasive of the issue tendered. It should state how it happened that defendant is not informed of the fact alleged. Brown v. Scott, 25 Cal. 194. And as to what may and what may not be denied upon information and belief, see Humphreys v. McCall, 9 Cal. 59; 70 Am. Dec. 621; Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123; Vassault v. Austin, 32 Cal. 597; Ord v. Steamer Uncle Sam, 13 Cal. 369; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Brown v. Scott, 25 Cal. 189; Fish v. Redington, 31 Cal. 185. An averment of the death of plaintiff's ancestor, in a verified complaint, will not be controverted by answer, "that defendant has not sufficient knowledge to form a belief," and therefore neither admits nor denies. Anderson v. Parker, 6 Cal. 197. The allegation of a verified complaint cannot be controverted by a denial of sufficient knowledge or information upon the subject to form a belief. Curtis v. Richards, 9 Cal. 33; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453. A denial "on information and belief" is sufficient. It is not necessary to follow the precise words of the statute, by saying "on his information and belief," etc. Roussin v. Stewart, 33 Cal. 208.

10. What are good denials. Instead of denying the complaint in express terms, averments that the defendant did not commit the act charged, or that the facts alleged to exist do not exist, traverse the matters alleged, and are good denials of the allegations of complaint. Hill v. Smith, 27 Cal. 479. If defendant does not deny the charges in a complaint, making out a prima facie case for the plaintiffs, on him will rest the onus of proving his affirmative allegations. Thompson v. Lee, 8 Cal. 275. See also Caulfield v. Sanders, 17 Cal. 569. Averments of mere evidence are not admitted by failure to deny them in the answer. Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450. If the complaint is verified, a general denial in the answer admits all its material allegations. Pico v. Colimas, 32 Cal. 578.

11. Denial, when sufficient, "upon information and belief." A denial of a material allegation of a complaint, "upon information and belief," is a sufficient denial to raise issue thereupon. Jones v. Petaluma, 36 Cal. 231, affirming Vassault v. Austin, 32 Cal. 597, and Roussin v. Stewart, 33 Cal. 208.

12. What is a sufficient denial. Waiving insufficiency of denial. Where certain material allegations of the complaint were so defectively denied that such denials might, upon motion, have been stricken out as sham and irrelevant, yet, without any objection, the plaintiff was allowed to introduce evidence in support of the averments, during the trial it was held that, by the introduction of such evidence, the plaintiff waived all objection to sufficiency of such denial, and the court properly refused to instruct the jury that the facts averred were admitted to be true, because not properly denied. Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 635; 95 Am. Dec. 152.

13. Denial of material allegations only sufficient. A denial of the ultimate facts, or material allegations of the complaint, is sufficient. Moore v. Murdock, 26 Cal. 524; Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450.

14. What is a sufficient denial to put plaintiff on proof as to a contract. Murphy v. Napa County, 20 Cal. 487.

15. Setting forth contract in terms in answer. Defendant may ask profert of a written instrument, or may, if it is misstated in complaint, set forth in his answer the contract in haec verba, and then demur on the ground of variance. Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 294.

16. Matter contained in complaint by way of anticipating a defense need not be denied. The complaint stated a cause of action for goods sold, and, in addition, with a view to meet a probable defense of payment based upon the giving of certain notes by defendant and a receipt in full by plaintiff, stated the making of the notes and receipt and alleged facts attending the transaction, which, if true, avoided its effect as payment by reason of fraud and misrepresentation on the part of defendant. The answer admitted the original demand, and averred payment by the notes referred to in the complaint, but did not deny the allegations in the complaint respecting the fraud of defendant in the transaction. It was held that the allegations of the complaint in reference to the transaction, claimed to operate as payment, were not material allegations requiring a denial, and were not therefore admitted by the failure of defendant to deny them. Canfield v. Tobias, 21 Cal. 349.

17. Conclusions of law must not be denied. Denial of debt, without a denial of any of the facts from which the debt followed, as a conclusion of law, raises no issue. Curtis v. Richards, 9 Cal. 33; Wells v. McPike, 21 Cal. 215. A denial of a conclusion of law, without the denial of the facts, is insufficient. Nelson v. Murray, 23 Cal. 338; Wedderspoon v. Rogers, 32 Cal. 569; People v. Board of Supervisors, 27 Cal. 655.

18. Denial of conclusions of law admission of certain facts. If a complaint alleges that defendant "wrongfully and unlawfully" took and carried away personal property, and the answer denies that defendant "wrongfully and unlawfully" took and carried it away, it is an admission of the taking and carrying away, and only a denial of its wrongful character. Lay v. Neville, 25 Cal. 549.

19. Answering one of several averments. An averment purporting to answer the whole complaint, but in fact only answering one of the two averments, is bad. This was the rule at common law, and it applies under our system. Wallace v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 18 Cal. 461.

20. General denial under forcible entry and detainer act. Under the act concerning forcible entries and unlawful detainer, a verified "general denial" was a sufficient denial of a complaint duly verified. Sullivan v. Cary, 17 Cal. 85.

21. Denial of conclusion of law and immaterial issues insufficient denial. The complaint alleged that on a certain day plaintiff was the owner and in possession of the property, and that its value was a certain sum. The answer, denying that on the day specified "the plaintiff was the owner and lawfully in possession," and as to its value, averring that the defendant has no knowledge, etc., and therefore denies that it is worth the said sum, is insufficient, because it raises an immaterial issue as to time; and, as to the possession of the property, it amounts merely to a conclusion of law. Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123. An answer to allegations in a complaint which states the rendition of a judgment against the defendant, and states the character of the judgment, denying that the defendant became or was lawfully bound by the judgment, is only a denial of a conclusion of law, and does not raise an issue of fact. If the judgment can be attacked collaterally, the answer must specify the points of its invalidity. People v. Board of Supervisors, 27 Cal. 655. And if the passage of a municipal ordinance is alleged, an answer stating, in general terms, that the ordinance is void and illegal, is insufficient, as no issue of fact is raised. People v. Board of Supervisors, 27 Cal. 655.

22. What are deemed insufficient denials. In a suit to recover the possession of personal property, an averment, that the "plaintiff was the owner and in possession of the property," is not traversed by an answer which denies that the "plaintiff was the owner and entitled to the possession of the property." Nor is the averment that the "defendant wrongfully took the property from plaintiff's possession, and from thence to the time the action was commenced wrongfully detained the same," traversed by a denial "that the defendant at any time wrongfully took and detained the property from the plaintiff. If the answer does not traverse the material allegations of the complaint, and does not set forth facts sufficient to constitute a defense, and the pleadings are not verified, a closing denial, that "the defendants, denying each and every allegation set forth in plaintiff's complaint not consistent with the foregoing answer," fails to raise any issue, and is bad. Richardson v. Smith, 29 Cal. 530. An answer is insufficient and bad if it does not deny any of the material allegations of a verified complaint, either positively or according to information and belief; these are the only forms in which the allegations of a verified complaint can be controverted so as to raise an issue. A denial in any other form is unknown to our system of practice, and is bad. San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453.

23. What are deemed sham or irrelevant answers. Sham or irrelevant answers may be stricken out, on motion. Answers consisting in whole or in part of defective denials, which do not explicitly traverse the material allegations of the complaint, are, as to such denials, sham and irrelevant, within the meaning of the code. Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 646, 95 Am. Dec. 152, citing People v. McCumber, 18 N. Y. 315; 72 Am. Dec. 515; Gay v. Winter, 34 Cal. 153.

24. Denial of allegations stated conjunctively in verified complaint. An answer is insufficient which attempts to deny these allegations as a whole, conjunctively stated. And the allegation thus attempted to be denied is, in fact, admitted. Doll v. Good, 38 Cal. 287. The material facts of the complaint, stated conjunctively, except the allegation that by reason of the premises the plaintiff has been injured and sustained damage in the sum of ten thousand dollars, are undertaken to be answered by the defendants denying them as a whole, as conjunctively stated, as will be seen by placing any one aggregated statement of facts in the complaint in juxtaposition with the answer thereto. This mode of answering is in violation of the principles of common-law pleading, and not less so of the statute, which provides that the defendant's answer to a verified complaint shall contain a specific denial to each allegation of the complaint controverted, or a denial thereof according to the defendants' information and belief. Those interested, and who have any doubt on the subject, will find the following authorities worthy of careful examination: Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638; Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123; Caulfield v. Sanders, 17 Cal. 569; Brown v. Scott, 25 Cal. 195; Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 417; Busenius v. Coffee, 14 Cal. 91; Hensley v. Tartar, 14 Cal. 508; Hopkins v. Everett, 6 How. Pr. 159; Salinger v. Lusk, 7 How. Pr. 430; Davison v. Powell, 16 How. Pr. 467; Shearman v. New York Central Mills, 1 Abb. Pr. 187; Baker v. Bailey, 16 Barb. 54; Fish v. Redington, 31 Cal. 194.

25. Insufficient denial is admission of truth of averments in complaint. On failure of proper denials, plaintiff is entitled to judgment upon the pleadings. The rules of pleading, under our system, are intended to prevent evasion and to require a denial of every specific averment in a sworn complaint, in substance and in spirit, and merely a denial of its literal truth, and whenever the defendant fails to make such denial he admits the averment. Doll v. Good, 38 Cal. 290, citing, as authority, Smith v. Richmond, 15 Cal. 501; Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638; Castro v. Wetmore, 16 Cal. 380; Higgins v. Wortell, 18 Cal. 333; Woodworth v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 169; Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 417; Morrill v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 292; Camden v. Mullen, 29 Cal. 564; Blood v. Light, 31 Cal. 115.

26. Failure to deny, when not an admission. If a complaint alleges the value of all the property destroyed, for which the action is brought, in gross—for some items of which no recovery can be had—an answer containing no denial of the averment of value, does not thereby admit the value of the property for which a recovery may be had. Nunan v. San Francisco, 38 Cal. 689.

27. Denial of averment in the exact words of the complaint. Denial of immaterial issues. A denial of a debt as to time, amount, and work, in the precise words of the complaint, raises only an immaterial issue upon these particulars, instead of meeting the substantial matter averred, and is therefore bad. Caulfield v. Sanders, 17 Cal. 569. The code system is intended to prevent evasion, and to require a denial of each specific averment in a verified complaint in substance and in spirit, and not merely a denial of its literal truth; and whenever the defendant fails to make such denial, he admits the allegations. Smith v. Richmond, 15 Cal. 501; see Camden v. Mullen, 29 Cal. 564; Leffingwell v. Griffing, 31 Cal. 231; Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 416. A denial merely of what is non-essential in the allegations of a complaint, is an admission of all that is essential to a recovery. Leffingwell v. Griffing, 31 Cal. 231.

28. Denial of indebtedness in exact amount is bad. Where the complaint, verified, avers that defendant is indebted to plaintiff for goods, wares, and merchandise, sold and delivered, in the sum of eight hundred and twenty-eight dollars and sixteen cents, an answer denying that defendant is indebted in the sum of eight hundred and twenty-eight dollars, sixteen cents, as is set out in the complaint, is bad. Higgins v. Wortell, 18 Cal. 330; see Woodworth v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 164; Towdy v. Ellis, 22 Cal. 650; Verzan v. McGregor, 23 Cal. 339.

29. Other insufficient and bad denials. Where an allegation in a verified complaint embraces several distinct propositions stated conjunctively, a denial in the answer, of the entire averments following the exact words of the complaint, raises no issues, and is bad. Woodworth v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 164; Reed v. Calderwood, 32 Cal. 109. When several averments are not joined by the conjunction "and," a denial of the allegations, conjunctively, will not amount to a denial of the allegations; each proposition should be separately denied. Fitch v. Bunch, 30 Cal. 208; More v. Delvalle, 28 Cal. 170; Fish v. Redington, 31 Cal. 185. An answer to a material allegation of a verified complaint which denies the same upon information and belief, is insufficient. Nelson v. Murray, 23 Cal. 338.

30. Other insufficient denials. An answer to a verified complaint which denies "generally and specifically each and every material allegation in the complaint, the same as if such an allegation were herein recapitulated," and also denying each allegation in the same form, with certain qualifications and exceptions, does not raise an issue upon any fact stated in the complaint. Hensley v. Tartar, 14 Cal. 508. An allegation, in a verified complaint, that "defendants wrongfully and unlawfully entered upon and dispossessed" plaintiff, is not sufficiently denied by a denial that "defendants wrongfully and unlawfully entered and dispossessed plaintiff," because such denial admits entry and ouster. Busenius v. Coffee, 14 Cal. 91.

31. Consistency of answer in all its parts. Where the admissions in an answer are opposed to its general denials, the denials will be disregarded, and judgment given upon the former, where the complaint is verified, and the answer consists of such admissions and denials. Fremont v. Seals, 18 Cal. 433; see also Klink v. Cohen, 13 Cal. 623; Uridias v. Morrell, 25 Cal. 35. Where an amended answer is inconsistent with the original answer, the two cannot stand together. Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123. A verified answer must not deny in one sentence what it admits to be true in the next. Hensley v. Tartar, 14 Cal. 508.

32. Sufficiency of denial, how to be determined. In order to determine whether the denials of an answer are evasive, each separate denial of each separate averment must be taken by itself. If the answer to a particular averment is a denial of it, and there is no admission in the answer inconsistent with the denial, an issue is fairly made. Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450.

33. Misjoinder and non-joinder of parties plaintiff and defendant. Objection to misjoinder of parties defendant should be taken by demurrer or answer. An answer will not be treated as a plea in abatement for a misjoinder of parties defendant, after the testimony has disclosed a proper cause of action against them. Warner v. Wilson, 4 Cal. 313. Where two are joined as plaintiff in an action for the recovery of possession of land, a denial in the answer, that the plaintiffs were in possession of the land, does not raise the issue of a misjoinder of either of the plaintiffs. Gillam v. Sigman, 29 Cal. 637. For non-joinder of parties plaintiff, see Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 516; 68 Am. Dec. 360. And for answer setting up misjoinder and non-joinder of parties. Fulton v. Cox, 40 Cal. 105.

34. An answer is not evidence. Goodwin v. Hammond, 13 Cal. 168; 73 Am. Dec. 574. Nor does it require two witnesses to controvert a verified answer. Bostic v. Love, 16 Cal. 69; Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638.

35. What proof may be made under specific and general denials. See Jackson v. Feather River etc. Water Co., 14 Cal. 18; Hawkins v. Borland, 14 Cal. 413. It was held, that defendant may prove an eviction on a claim for rent in arrear, under the plea nil debit, or general denial. McLarren v. Spalding, 2 Cal. 510. But this was overruled in Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 30; 70 Am. Dec. 692; and consequently an eviction must be set up in the answer.

36. Allegations of complaint admitted, when not denied. Unless the answer denies the allegations of the complaint, they are admitted, and constitute conclusive evidence of the extent of the damages claimed. Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28. The failure to deny a material allegation is an admission of the facts contained in such averment, and such admission is conclusive. Burke v. Table Mountain Water Co., 12 Cal. 403. Under the code, a specific denial of one or more allegations is held to be an admission of all others well pleaded. De Ro v. Cordes, 4 Cal. 117. An admission without fraud to rights of client, by an attorney of record, of the correctness of an amount due, for which judgment is taken, destroys the effect of a denial in an answer. Taylor v. Randall, 5 Cal. 79. An answer is not proof for defendant, but an admission in the answer of a fact stated in the complaint is conclusive evidence against him. Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638. If the complaint contains two causes of action, and the answer takes issue on the allegations of but one, plaintiff is entitled to judgment on the other. Leffingwell v. Griffing, 31 Cal. 231.

37. Allegations not denied are deemed to be admitted. The intent of the statute is fully carried out by excluding parol testimony to contradict a deed; but where parties admit the real facts of the transaction in their pleadings, these admissions are to be taken as modifications of the instrument. Lee v. Evans, 8 Cal. 424. No evidence is required as to facts not denied. Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28.

38. What must be specifically stated in answer. Special defenses. Statute of limitations, see § 458, post, also note 47, post. Release. Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 50; Turner v. Carathers, 17 Cal. 431. Statute of frauds. Osborne v. Endicott, 6 Cal. 149; 65 Am. Dec. 498. Subsequently acquired title by defendant in ejectment. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468. Transfer of title by plaintiff. Id. Tax titles. Russell v. Mann, 22 Cal. 132. Tax titles accruing after action commenced. McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 246; see "Supplemental Answer." Composition with creditors. Smith v. Owens, 21 Cal. 11. Counterclaim should be pleaded. Hicks v. Green, 9 Cal. 74. Disclaimers. Noe v. Card, 14 Cal. 576; De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 331; 87 Am. Dec. 81. Equitable titles, defenses, and estoppels. Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 597; Carpentier v. Oakland, 30 Cal. 439; Flandreau v. Downey, 23 Cal. 354; Blum v. Robertson, 24 Cal. 146; Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 124. Estoppels. Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 593. An estoppel by deed or matter of record should be pleaded as such, where there is an opportunity to plead it. Flandreau v. Downey, 23 Cal. 354. Eviction of the tenant must be set up when. Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 30; 70 Am. Dec. 692. For fixture of mining claims. Wiseman v. McNulty, 25 Cal. 230; Dutch Flat Water Co. v. Mooney, 12 Cal. 534. Former recovery. Vance v. Olinger, 27 Cal. 358; Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176. Fraud, etc. People v. Board of Supervisors, 27 Cal. 656. Grant of an easement of servitude. American Company v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 368. Misjoinder of parties plaintiff, owing to matters which have occurred pending the action, must be taken by supplemental answer, or it is waived. Calderwood v. Pyser, 31 Cal. 333. New matter must be specially pleaded. Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47. New matter occurring after issue joined must be set up by supplemental answer. Jessup v. King, 4 Cal. 331. Payment. Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47; Frisch v. Caler, 21 Cal. 71. In Frisch v. Caler, 21 Cal. 71, it is held that a plea of payment is not new matter, and in Fairchild v. Amsbaugh, 22 Cal. 575, the court say, it follows, that it is not necessary to set it up as a special defense in the answer; but this is opposed to the opinion of Field, C. J., in Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 417; 76 Am. Dec. 492; and Burnett, J., in Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 27; 70 Am. Dec. 692; and to the numerous authorities in New York and elsewhere; see Voorhees' New York Code, 8th ed., pp. 274, 284b; Vansantvoord's Pleading, p. 454; see Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 30; 70 Am. Dec. 692. Unworkmanlike manner of doing work. Kendall v. Vallejo, 1 Cal. 371. Want of capacity in a plaintiff to sue. California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 8 Cal. 585. That items in an account are overcharged. Terry v. Sickles, 13 Cal. 427. Abandonment of land need not be pleaded. Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192. Abandonment was affirmatively averred by the defendant in St. John v. Kidd, 26 Cal. 266. Abandonment. Tooms v. Randall, 3 Cal. 438; Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555. Another action pending was pleaded in the case of O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 314; Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325. Accord and satisfaction. Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47; Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 30; 70 Am. Dec. 692.

39. Pleading discharge in insolvency. Rahm v. Minis, 40 Cal. 421.

40. Pleading equitable titles. It is not the province of the jury, but of the court, to pass upon the equitable title set up in the answer, and it must be sufficiently pleaded to authorize the court to grant a decree which will estop the further prosecution of the action. Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 114; Arguello v. Edinger, 10 Cal. 150; Lestrade v. Barth, 19 Cal. 660; Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Estrada v. Murphy, 19 Cal. 248; Meador v. Parsons, 19 Cal. 294; Blum v. Robertson, 24 Cal. 127; Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 38; 85 Am. Dec. 157; Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 593.

41. New matter set up in answer. Where the pleadings are verified, every matter of defense not directly responsive in the allegations of that complaint must be alleged in the answer. Terry v. Sickles, 13 Cal. 427. New matter must be specially pleaded; and, in ejectment, a transfer of title by the plaintiff, or a title acquired by defendant pending the action, must be pleaded by supplemental answer, or it cannot be given in evidence. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468.

42. Introduction of new matter in avoidance. When defendant seeks to introduce into the case a defense not disclosed by the pleadings; when something relied on by defendant which is not put in issue by the plaintiff, this is new matter. Bridges v. Paige 13 Cal. 640; see also Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47.

In Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 27, 70 Am. Dec. 692, the court say: "Under § 437, there are only two classes of defense allowed. The first consists of a simple denial; and the second, of the allegation of new affirmative matter. And as the code has abolished all distinctions in the forms of action, and requires only a simple statement of the facts constituting the cause of action or defense, these two classes of defense must be the same in all cases.

"The plaintiff is required to state in his complaint the facts that constitute his cause of action; and it seems to have been the intention of the code to adopt the true and just rule, that the defendant must either deny the facts as alleged or confess and avoid them. It is certain that where new matter exists it must be stated in the answer. The answer 'shall contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense.' The language of this section is very clear, that this new matter, whatever it may be, must be set up in the answer. The question then arises, What is 'new matter,' in the contemplation of the code itself? New matter is that which, under the rules of evidence, the defendant must affirmatively establish. If the onus of proof is thrown upon the defendant, the matter to be proved by him is new matter. A defense that concedes that the plaintiff once had a good cause of action, but insists that it no longer exists, involves new matter. 1 Chitty's Pleading, p. 472; Gilbert v. Cram, 12 How. Pr. 455; Radde v. Ruckgaber, 3 Duer, 685; Brazil v. Isham, 12 N. Y. 17.

"If facts which occur subsequently to the date of the original transaction do not constitute new matter, what facts do constitute it? And if any subsequent matter can properly be called 'new matter,' must not all subsequent matters be equally entitled to the same designation? The language of the code is explicit, that the 'answer shall contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense.' The code makes no distinction between different classes of new matter. All new matter of defense must be stated in the answer.

"This feature of the code is one of the most beneficial and obvious improvements upon the former system. This classification of defenses is simple, logical, and just. Each party is distinctly apprised of all the allegations to be proven by the other; and each is, therefore, prepared to meet the proofs of his adversary. The plaintiff is compelled to set out every fact necessary to constitute his cause of action, and the defendant every new matter of defense. This is required by the true principles of pleading. 1 Chitty's Pleading, p. 526.

"Two of the leading ends contemplated by the code are simplicity and economy. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187. As contributing to the attainment of these ends, it was the intention of the code to require the pleadings to be so framed as not only to apprise the parties of the facts to be proved by them, respectively, but to narrow the proofs upon the trial. The intention is clearly shown, not only by the spirit and general scope of the system, but by particular provisions. The different provisions of the act, when construed together and legitimately applied, lead to this conclusion.

"If we take the theory to be true, that, under our system, the defendant, by simply denying the allegations of the complaint, may give in evidence all matters which could be formerly given in evidence under the general issue, it is difficult to perceive what purpose the code has accomplished by the provisions of § 437. The classification of defenses therein found would be substantially useless. In vain has that section provided that the answer shall contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense, when nearly all such matter could be given in evidence under a simple denial in the answer. Under the former system, almost every matter in discharge of the action could be given in evidence under the general issue.

"But this theory would seem to be liable to the most substantial objections, and to lead, in practice, to bad results.

"The plaintiff states the facts that constitute his cause of action. He is not required to state conclusions of law. The liability of the defendant is the result or conclusion which the law draws from the facts alleged. If a complaint should only allege that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in a named sum, which the defendant refused to pay, the complaint would not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The complaint must allege the facts that constitute the indebtedness. When, therefore, the facts constituting the cause of action are stated, a simple denial of these facts can properly put in issue only the constituent facts, and not the mere conclusion from the facts. The plaintiff, therefore, comes prepared to prove the facts, as alleged. But if the defendant, under his simple denial, is permitted to prove almost everything in discharge of the action, the plaintiff cannot know how to avoid surprise upon the trial, unless he comes prepared to meet every possible ground that may be taken by the defendant. The result is a great and unnecessary increase of costs in many cases. The plaintiff is not to blame, because he could not know what he had to meet. The defendant is not to blame, because he only wished to deny the allegations of the complaint, and not to introduce any new matter. But the rule would not allow him to do so, in a form that would apprise the plaintiff clearly of all he intended, and no more. The rule made his answer wider than he intended. He simply denied the allegations of the complaint. He could do no less, if he defended at all.

"If it be said that, under § 441, the defendant may plead as many defenses as he may have, and in this way compel the plaintiff to come prepared to meet as many grounds as he would have had to meet under the general issue, we reply, that the argument is not sound. Under the view we have taken, the defendant may protect himself against unnecessary costs by only putting in issue the allegations of the complaint, or by conceding them to be true and setting up new matter, thus narrowing the proofs upon the trial. So under our view, the plaintiff is protected against sham defenses, which may be stricken out on motion. Post, § 453. A sham answer is one good in form, but false in fact, and not pleaded in good faith. It sets up new matter which is false. Nichols v. Jones, 6 How. Pr. 355; Ostrom v. Bixby, 9 How. Pr. 57, 215, 217; Voorhies' Code, p. 177, note B.

"But if it be true that under a simple denial in the answer the defendant may give in evidence any defense formerly admissible under the general issue, the provisions of § 453, allowing sham answers to be stricken out, would possess but very little practical utility. A simple denial could not be treated as a sham answer; and yet all the purposes of vexation could be as well accomplished by it as by separate defenses. So the provisions of § 441, requiring defenses to be separately stated, would be almost useless. As most of these new matters could be given in evidence under the negative answer, they need not be stated at all.

"Anciently, in England, the general issue was seldom pleaded, except when the defendant meant wholly to deny the allegations of the declaration. Matters in discharge of the action were specially pleaded. But by acts of Parliament special matter was allowed to be given in evidence, under the general issue, in certain cases, affecting public officers. The rule was gradually extended to other cases. It was the opinion of Sir William Blackstone that this relaxation of strictness, anciently observed, did not produce the confusion anticipated. This supposition prevailed for a long time, but subsequent experience led to a change of opinion. The result of this change was the adoption of the Reg. Gen. Hil. T., 4 W., p. 4, 'which puts an end to the misapplication and abuse of the general issue, and compels a defendant, in terms, to deny particular parts of the declaration, and to plead specially every matter of defense, not merely consisting of denial of the allegations of the declaration.' 1 Chitty's Pleading, pp. 473, 512.

"These regulations restored the ancient rule, and placed the science of pleading upon its true principle. The framers of the New York code, from which ours is mainly taken, would seem to have intended to accomplish the same result. It has been there held, and seems now to be the well-settled rule, that new matter must be set forth in the answer. Payment, an award, or a former recovery, must be pleaded. Calkins v. Packer, 21 Barb. 275; Brazil v. Isham, 12 N. Y. 17. Such defenses admit the contract as alleged, but avoid it by matters ex post facto.

"The decisions of this court have not been uniform upon this question. The classification of defenses, under § 45 of the Practice Act of 1850, was the same as that under § 437 of our present code. It was held by this court, in several cases, that all new matter must be set up in the answer. Ladd v. Stevenson, 1 Cal. 18; Grogan v. Ruckle, 1 Cal. 195; Walton v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 363; Kendall v. Vallejo, 1 Cal. 372. But in the case of Gavin v. Annan, 2 Cal. 494, it was held that a general denial has the same influence as the general issue at common law, and, under it, accord and satisfaction may be shown. To the same effect was the decision in the case of McLarren v. Spalding, 2 Cal. 510."

The general denial only puts in issue averments made in the complaint. New matter must be specially pleaded, and must be affirmatively established. Glazer v. Clift, 10 Cal. 303. Where a negative allegation is made, preceding an averment by the opposite party of the fact negatived, it constitutes the basis of the issue joined by the subsequent averment, and the matter traverses the negative allegation, and is not new matter. Frisch v. Caler, 21 Cal. 71. As to what is and is not new matter, see also Goddard v. Fulton, 21 Cal.

430; Woodworth v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 164; Mulford v. Estudillo, 23 Cal. 94; Ayres v. Bensley, 32 Cal. 620; Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47.

Where the averments of an answer, although stated in an affirmative form, are, in effect, only a denial of the allegations of the complaint, they do not constitute new matter, within the meaning of our Practice Act. If the answer, either directly or by way of necessary implication, admits the truth of all the essential averments of the complaint which show a cause of action, but sets forth facts from which it results that, notwithstanding the truth of the allegations of the complaint, no cause of action existed in the plaintiff at the time the action was brought, those facts are new matter; but if the facts averred in the answer only show that some essential allegation of the complaint is untrue, then they are not new matter, but only a traverse. And, generally, as to new matter, see Goddard v. Fulton, 21 Cal. 430.

43. Matter in abatement. Pleas in abatement are not favored, and the party must prove the plea as pleaded. Thompson v. Lyon, 14 Cal. 39. Failure to join. Whitney v. Stark, 8 Cal. 514; 68 Am. Dec. 360. Pendency of prior action. Primm v. Gray, 10 Cal. 522; Thompson v. Lyon, 14 Cal. 39; Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325; People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73; O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312. Misjoinder or misnomer of parties defendant. Warner v. Wilson, 4 Cal. 310; Dunn v. Tozer, 10 Cal. 170; Rowe v. Bacigalluppi, 21 Cal. 633. Change of venue. Tooms v. Randall, 3 Cal. 438. Non-presentation of claim to administrator. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555. Wherever the defense is that the plaintiff cannot maintain any action at any time, it must be pleaded in bar; but matter which only defeats the present proceeding, and does not show that the plaintiff is forever concluded, must generally be pleaded in abatement. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555. Want of authority in the attorney of record to commence an action, cannot be pleaded in abatement. Turner v. Caruthers, 17 Cal. 431.

44. Answer to enable court to render cross-judgment for defendant for value of personal property. In a suit to recover personal property, in order to enable the defendant to obtain the value of the property on judgment of dismissal against the plaintiff for default, the answer must contain some averment as to the change of possession from defendant to plaintiff. The judgment of return or value is in the nature of a cross-judgment, and must be based upon proper averments. Where plaintiff takes the property, the defendant must claim its return in his answer, to enable the court to give the judgment in the alternative form. Gould v. Scannell, 13 Cal. 430.

45. Objection to pleading, when deemed waived. Improper pleading, how cured. Where an equitable estoppel in pais is not properly pleaded, but on the trial evidence is introduced without objection, in the same manner as if it had been properly pleaded, and a verdict is rendered upon the evidence without objection, the objection to the pleading will be deemed waived, and the case will be considered as though the estoppel had been properly pleaded. Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 38; 85 Am. Dec. 157. The introduction of evidence without objection in support of it will not cure the omission of specially pleading a defense. Smith v. Owens, 21 Cal. 11; McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115.

46. Answers in justification. See Thornburgh v. Hand, 7 Cal. 554; Walker v. Woods, 15 Cal. 66; Glazer v. Clift, 10 Cal. 303; Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47, and cases cited; Killey v. Scannell, 12 Cal. 73; Lentz v. Victor, 17 Cal. 271; Knox v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 617; Pico v. Colimas, 32 Cal. 578; Towdy v. Ellis, 22 Cal. 650; Richardson v. Smith, 29 Cal. 529; McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115.

47. Pleading statute of limitation. See §§ 312–363, ante, and notes, and particularly § 458, post.

48. Answer in ejectment suit. For general matters, see Hawkins v. Reichert, 28 Cal. 534; Schenk v. Evoy, 24 Cal. 113; Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638; Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22; 70 Am. Dec. 692; Powell v. Oullahan, 14 Cal. 114; Williams v. Young, 17 Cal. 403; La Rue v. Oppenheimer, 20 Cal. 517; Gregory v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 591; Bodley v. Ferguson, 30 Cal. 511; Smith v. Doe, 15 Cal. 100; Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176; Stephens v. Mansfield, 11 Cal. 363; Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; McGarvey v. Little, 15 Cal. 31; Guy v. Hanly, 21 Cal. 397; Bell v. Brown, 22 Cal. 671; Ladd v. Stevenson, 1 Cal. 18; Moss v. Shear, 25 Cal. 44; 85 Am. Dec. 94; Burke v. Table Mountain Water Co., 12 Cal. 403; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192; Busenius v. Coffee, 14 Cal. 91; Lestrade v. Barth, 19 Cal. 660; Estrada v. Murphy, 19 Cal. 248; Meador v. Parsons, 19 Cal. 294; Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 38; 85 Am. Dec. 157; Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 124; Blum v. Robertson, 24 Cal. 146; see, however, § 379, ante, which materially changes the former law as to ejectment cases.

49. Stating fraud sufficiently in answer. Gushee v. Leavitt, 5 Cal. 160; 63 Am. Dec. 116; Ward v. Packard, 18 Cal. 391; Lamott v. Butler, 18 Cal. 32; Kinney v. Osborne, 14 Cal. 112; King v. Davis, 34 Cal. 100; People v. Board of Supervisors, 27 Cal. 656.

50. Actions for divorce. Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249; 70 Am. Dec. 717; Washburn v. Washburn, 9 Cal. 475; Fox v. Fox, 25 Cal. 587; Bennett v. Bennett, 28 Cal. 599.

51. Verification of inconsistent answer, when perjury. Pleadings will be construed most strongly against the pleader. When a fact which is directly averred in one part of a verified pleading is in another part directly denied, whether it be in the statement of several causes of action in a complaint or of several defenses in an answer, the party verifying it is guilty of perjury. Bell v. Brown, 22 Cal. 671.

§ 437a. Actions to recover insurance. What defendant claiming exemption must set up. In an action to recover upon a contract of insurance wherein the defendant claims exemption from liability upon the ground that, although the proximate cause of the loss was a peril insured against, the loss was remotely caused by or would not have occurred but for a peril excepted in the contract of insurance, the defendant shall in his answer set forth and specify the peril which was the proximate cause of the loss, in what manner the peril excepted contributed to the loss or itself caused the peril insured against, and if he claim that the peril excepted caused the peril insured against, he shall in his answer set forth and specify upon what premises or at what place the peril excepted caused the peril insured against.

Legislation § 437a. Added by Stats. 1907, p. 836.

§ 438. When counterclaim may be set up. The counterclaim mentioned in the last section [section four hundred and thirty-seven] must be one existing in favor of a defendant and against a plaintiff, between whom a several judgment might be had in the action, and arising out of one of the following causes of action:

1. A cause of action arising out of the transaction set forth in the complaint as the foundation of the plaintiff's claim, or connected with the subject of the action;

2. In an action arising upon contract; any other cause of action arising also upon contract and existing at the commencement of the action.

Dismissing action, where counterclaim. Post, § 581.

Omission to set up counterclaim prevents future action thereon. Post, § 439.

Compensated, cross-demands deemed. Post, § 440.

Legislation § 438. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 47 (New York Code, § 150), as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 299, which read: "The county [counter]claim mentioned in the last section shall be one existing in favor of the defendant or plaintiff, and against a plaintiff or defendant, between whom a several judgment might be had in the action and arising out of one of the following causes of action: 1. A cause of action arising out of the transaction set forth in the complaint or answer, as the foundation of the plaintiff's claim, or defendant's defense, or connected with the subject of the action. 2. In an action arising upon contract; any other cause of action arising also upon contract and existing at the commencement of the action."

Counterclaim, defined. This section defines what a counterclaim is, as well as when it may be pleaded; it practically says that a counterclaim is defined to be what the section says may be pleaded as such. Ainsworth v. Bank of California, 119 Cal. 470; 63 Am. St. Rep. 135; 39 L. R. A. 686; 51 Pac. 952. To constitute a counterclaim, the facts must be such as would entitle the defendant to relief against the plaintiff in a separate action; the subject-matter of the answer may be a good defense to the action, but it is not a counterclaim, unless the defendant can recover judgment thereon in an independent action. Belleau v. Thompson, 33 Cal. 495. The term "counterclaim" is broader in its scope and meaning than "set-off," and includes not only demands which are the subject of set-off and recoupment, but also equitable demands; a set-off, prior to the code, could, in most of the states, only be interposed where the demand was certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, and could not be sustained for unliquidated damages in a court of law. Roberts v. Donovan, 70 Cal. 108; 9 Pac. 180; 11 Pac. 599. The term "set-off" differs from "recoupment," in that it is more properly applicable to demands independent in their nature and origin, while "recoupment" simply implies a cutting down of a demand by deductions arising out of the same transaction; and "counterclaim," as used in the code, includes both recoupment and set-off, and is, strictly speaking, a pleading by which matters arising out of recoupment or set-off are averred. St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Gay, 101 Cal. 286; 35 Pac. 876. A counterclaim must in some way qualify or defeat the judgment to which the plaintiff is otherwise entitled; in a foreclosure suit, a defendant who is personally liable for the debt, or whose land is bound by the lien, may properly introduce an offset; but where his personal liability is not in question, and where he disclaims all interest in the mortgaged premises, he cannot counterclaim against the plaintiff on a note, bond, or covenant. Meyer v. Quiggle, 140 Cal. 495; 74 Pac. 40. To require a finding upon any affirmative matter urged to a counterclaim, it must constitute a defense thereto, and be supported by some evidence. L. Scatena & Co. v. Van Loben Sels, 19 Cal. App. 423; 126 Pac. 187. A demand that does not conform to the provisions of this section is not available as a counterclaim. Harron v. Wilson, 4 Cal. App. 488; 88 Pac. 512. Cross-demands against the estate of a deceased person, are ineffectual as counterclaims, if they are barred by the statute of limitations, and were not presented to the personal representative of the deceased. C. Moore v. Gould, 151 Cal. 723; 91 Pac. 616.

How pleaded. A counterclaim must be denominated as such in the answer, in order to be effective (Carpenter v. Hewel, 67 Cal. 589; 8 Pac. 314; Brannan v. Paty, 58 Cal. 330) and where affirmative matter is designated a counterclaim, the defendant cannot, after the trial, treat the same as a cross-complaint, and take judgment on that theory. McAbee v. Randall, 41 Cal. 136. The form in which the plaintiff sets out his cause of action is not conclusive upon the right of the defendant to set forth his counterclaim in his answer; but if other facts in the same transaction are so connected with those set forth in the complaint as to defeat their legal effect, the defendant may set them up, regardless of the form which the plaintiff may have chosen for presenting his own side of the case. Story & Isham Commercial Co. v. Story, 100 Cal. 30; 34 Pac. 671. New matter constituting a counterclaim is deemed controverted by the plaintiff, and the burden of proof is on the defendant. Herold v. Smith, 34 Cal. 122.

Must exist in favor of defendant and against plaintiff. The test is very simple by which it may be determined what is a proper subject of counterclaim: it must be a claim existing, and constituting a right of action, in favor of the defendant and against the plaintiff at the time of the commencement of the action. Chase v. Evoy, 58 Cal. 348. A judgment against parties alleged to be beneficially interested in a claim sued upon is not the subject of a counterclaim; and the fact that such parties are insolvent does not change the rule. Duff v. Hobbs, 19 Cal. 646. In an action by an administrator on a promissory note, the defendant cannot counterclaim his alleged share in an indebtedness of the decedent to a corporation formed by them as partners, for which alleged indebtedness no claim was presented against the estate. Reed v. Johnson, 127 Cal. 538; 59 Pac. 986. In an action against an administrator on a promissory note, where the defendant alleged in his answer that his intestate signed the note for the accommodation of a co-maker, and that, prior to the commencement of the action, the plaintiff was indebted to such co-maker, and such co-maker assigned said indebtedness, after the death of the intestate, to another of the co-makers for the benefit of the latter and of the intestate, the facts stated do not constitute a counterclaim. Chase v. Evoy, 58 Cal. 348. A surety cannot set up a counterclaim existing in favor of his principal; nor can a counterclaim against the plaintiff and another person be set up; nor one in favor of the defendant and a stranger to the action; nor one in favor of another person: the test being, whether the defendant could maintain an independent action on the demand. Roberts v. Donovan, 70 Cal. 108; 9 Pac. 180; 11 Pac. 599; Chase v. Evoy, 58 Cal. 340; Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Giddings, 96 Cal. 84; 30 Pac. 1016. Where three defendants are sued on a joint bond, the counterclaim of one against the plaintiff cannot be interposed. Roberts v. Donovan, 70 Cal. 108; 9 Pac. 180; 11 Pac. 599. The counterclaim of one defendant cannot be interposed in an action against two or more. McDonald v. Poole, 113 Cal. 437; 45 Pac. 702.

Demands must be reciprocal. The rights of several parties to plead a counterclaim in defense to an action by one against the others, for a breach of their respective obligations arising out of the facts in controversy are reciprocal; the entire transaction, and the rights resulting therefrom, are to be determined by the court. Story & Isham Commercial Co. v. Story, 100 Cal. 30; 34 Pac. 671. A surety on a note given for the purchase price of property, cannot set up as a counterclaim the breach of the contract of warranty, not being a party to it. Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Giddings, 96 Cal. 84; 31 Am. St. Rep. 181; 21 L. R. A. 406; 30 Pac. 1016.

Partnership demands. A defendant cannot set up a counterclaim against the plaintiff and several other persons as co-partners. Wood v. Brush, 72 Cal. 224; 13 Pac. 627. In an action for breach of a covenant to indemnify the plaintiff against liabilities, the defendant cannot set up, as a counterclaim, demands which were matters of partnership between the parties. Haskell v. Moore, 29 Cal. 437. In an action for goods sold and delivered, partnership claims, unadjusted, which may be the subject of an accounting, do not constitute proper counterclaim. Lane v. Turner, 114 Cal. 396; 46 Pac. 290.

Counterclaim arising out of transaction set forth in the complaint. A matter that does not arise out of the transaction set forth in the complaint, and which is not the subject of the action, does not constitute a counterclaim. James v. Center, 53 Cal. 31; Harron v. Wilson, 4 Cal. App. 488; 88 Pac. 512. A contract is a transaction, but a transaction is not necessarily a contract. Roberts v. Donovan, 70 Cal. 108; 9 Pac. 180; 11 Pac. 599. In ejectment, where the defendant, after denying the ownership of the plaintiff and averring title in himself, sets up a lease to the plaintiff from himself, and claims thereunder rent for use and occupation, no matters arising out of the transaction or connected with the subject of the action being alleged, a proper counterclaim is not stated. Carpenter v. Hewel, 67 Cal. 589; 8 Pac. 314. A counterclaim for indebtedness due cannot be set up in a proceeding in unlawful detainer (Kelly v. Teague, 63 Cal. 68), as neither a counterclaim or cross-complaint is permissible in such actions. Knight v. Black, 19 Cal. App. 518; 126 Pac. 512. In an action to foreclose a mortgage, an averment of the answer, that after the execution thereof, the defendant sold the plaintiff an interest in certain property as part of the consideration for the cancellation of the mortgage, is a valid counterclaim. Richmond v. Lattin, 64 Cal. 273; 30 Pac. 818. In an action by a lessee against the lessor for the foreclosure of a mortgage, rent due from the lessee to the lessor need not be set up as a counterclaim, and the failure so to set it up is not a waiver, there being no connection between the note and the mortgage and the lease of the premises, which were separate and distinct contracts. Brosnan v. Kramer, 135 Cal. 36; 66 Pac. 979. In an action founded on tort, the facts may be of such character that a counterclaim or cross-complaint will lie, on the theory that the tort is a transaction (Glide v. Kayser, 142 Cal. 419; 76 Pac. 50; and see Meyer v. Quiggle, 140 Cal. 495; 74 Pac. 46); but a counterclaim or cross-complaint, founded on damages to real property, cannot be properly pleaded to a complaint for the recovery of personal property. Glide v. Kayser, 142 Cal. 419; 76 Pac. 50. In an action to quiet title, demand for damages for breach of a contract is not a proper subject of counterclaim, where it does not arise out of any transaction set forth in the complaint as a foundation of the plaintiff's claim, nor have any connection with the land. Meyer v. Quiggle, 140 Cal. 495; 74 Pac. 40. In an action to quiet title brought by one in possession, the answer of the defendant, stating facts essential to a complaint in ejectment, and demanding possession of the premises, does not constitute a counterclaim. Moyle v. Porter, 51 Cal. 639. In an action to foreclose a street assessment, the defendant cannot set up a counterclaim for damages to the land in the prosecution of the work. Engebretsen v. Gay, 158 Cal. 27; 109 Pac. 879. In an action for services in making an abstract of title, the claim of the defendant, that, as the abstract was not made in time, he thereby suffered damages through the loss of a contingent real estate investment, cannot be set up as a counterclaim. Pendleton v. Cline, 85 Cal. 142; 24 Pac. 659. In an action for the balance due on a note secured by pledge, after sale thereof, a counterclaim cannot be set up for damages occasioned by negligence in the use of the pledge, where the defendant consented to such use. Damon v. Waldteufel, 99 Cal. 234; 33 Pac. 903. In an action on a promissory note, the defendant may allege that he is an indorser for accommodation only, and that no demand for payment was made on the maker, or notice of dishonor, etc., given him as an indorser; but he cannot set up the same as a counterclaim, praying it to be adjudged that he is in no wise indebted or liable to the plaintiff on the note. Belleau v. Thompson, 33 Cal. 495. In a proceeding by an heir to procure the payment of an allowed claim, the claim of the executor that the claimant be charged with the value of the use and occupation of property of the estate in his possession, is properly a counterclaim, and must be set up by pleading. Estate of Couts, 100 Cal. 400; 34 Pac. 865. In an action to recover money claimed to be due, the value of the use and occupation of premises held by the plaintiff under a third party, by title adverse to the defendant, cannot be set up as a counterclaim. Quinn v. Smith, 49 Cal. 163. In an action for the restitution of money received by virtue of a judgment of foreclosure, reversed as to some property included in the mortgage, but finally affirmed as to all the other property, a deficiency judgment is a proper subject of counterclaim. Dowdell v. Carpy, 137 Cal. 333; 70 Pac. 167. In an action upon a money demand, founded upon a contract, the defendant cannot file a counterclaim or cross-complaint setting up a mere naked trespass on his property after the commencement of the action. Wangenheim v. Graham, 39 Cal. 169. Where collaterals are lost through the negligence of the pledgee, he is answerable for the loss, and the pledgor may set up a counterclaim for the loss, in an action upon the principal debt. Hawley Bros. Hardware Co. v. Brownstone, 123 Cal. 643; 56 Pac. 468. Where, in practice, the rebates of half the commissions on shipments made by the defendant to the plaintiff were paid at the end of each year, only such rebates on commissions due at the end of any year which expires before the commencement of the action are the proper subject of a counterclaim. L. Scatena & Co. v. Van Loben Sels, 19 Cal. App. 423; 126 Pac. 187.

Action arising upon contract. Where the claim of the plaintiff arises on contract, the defendant may counterclaim any cause arising upon a contract that existed at the commencement of the action. Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 294. While a counterclaim sounding in tort cannot be set up as a defense to an action arising upon contract, yet a promise to pay damages for an injury resulting from tort is a matter arising upon contract, and, as such, may be pleaded as a counterclaim to an action founded upon contract. Poly v. Williams, 101 Cal. 648; 36 Pac. 102. An action for the breach of a contract to deliver merchandise is an action arising upon contract, and a counterclaim may be set up by the defendant therein for goods sold and delivered. Davis v. Hurgren, 125 Cal. 48; 57 Pac. 684. In an action upon an original contract, a substituted contract, superseding the original, cannot be pleaded as a counterclaim, under the first subdivision of this section; but, the facts showing a cause of action in favor of the defendant, and it being a different contract from that described in the complaint, it may be properly pleaded under the second subdivision. Griswold v. Pieratt, 110 Cal. 259, 42 Pac. 820. Where money advanced to a mortgagee by a mortgagor, with interest thereon, is to be applied in payment of a mortgage if a survey of the mortgaged property is confirmed, but is to be returned with interest if not confirmed, there can be no counterclaim for further interest, in a proceeding to foreclose the mortgage, after the payments and the interest thereon amount to the sum of the mortgage debt, and the survey is confirmed. Coleman v. Commins, 77 Cal. 548; 20 Pac. 77. In an action by a vendor to foreclose agreements for the sale of land, the vendee is entitled to set up, as a counterclaim, an indebtedness due him from the vendor, under a contract, entered into subsequently to the breach of the agreement sued on, whereby the vendor agreed to purchase his equitable interest in the land, and to enforce a vendor's lien therefor. Rogers Development Co. v. Southern California Real Estate Inv. Co., 159 Cal. 735; 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 543; 115 Pac. 934. In an action founded on contract, the defendant may set up, by way of counterclaim, a cause of action, in his favor, against the plaintiff, for a balance due on an open mutual and current account. Lindsay v. Stewart, 72 Cal. 540; 14 Pac. 516. In an action by an administrator to recover a mortgage debt due the estate, promissory notes, assigned before maturity, may be set up as a counterclaim by the assignee, although not presented for allowance, if action could be maintained on them at the commencement of the foreclosure suit; but if the notes were assigned after maturity, the assignee takes them subject to all existing equities between the maker and the payee, and they cannot be the subject of a counterclaim, but must be set up as an equitable defense. Lyon v. Petty, 65 Cal. 322; 4 Pac. 103. In an action by a guarantor of rent, to have it decreed what amount was due and unpaid, the lessor may set up, by way of counterclaim, the contract of guaranty and the amount due thereunder, and seek judgment therefor against the plaintiff (McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278); and a prayer for general relief is a sufficient foundation for any relief appropriate to the facts stated. Rogers Development Co. v. Southern California etc. Inv. Co., 159 Cal. 735; 115 Pac. 934. In an action for moneys deposited with the plaintiff, a note secured by a mortgage cannot be set up as a counterclaim or set-off. McKean v. German-American Sav. Bank, 118 Cal. 334; 50 Pac. 656.

Amount of counterclaim. Under the first subdivision, the amount of the counterclaim is of no jurisdictional moment. Griswold v. Pieratt, 110 Cal. 259; 42 Pac. 820. In an action on a contract, another cause of action on a contract, in favor of the defendant, may be set up as a counterclaim, although it does not amount to three hundred dollars. Freeman v. Seitz, 126 Cal. 291; 58 Pac. 690. A counterclaim or set-off of less than three hundred dollars, in an action in the superior court, pleaded as defensive matter, can be properly entertained, and is as much a matter of defense as would be the plea of the payment of a like sum. Freeman v. Seitz, 126 Cal. 291; 58 Pac. 690. An action in a justice's court may be restrained, where the defendant has a counterclaim for more than three hundred dollars, arising out of the transaction upon which the claim is founded, and neither party can secure adequate relief without having the subject of the counterclaim passed upon. Gregory v. Diggs, 113 Cal. 196; 45 Pac. 261.

Complaint suspends limitations on counterclaim. The filing of the original complaint operates to suspend the statute of limitations as to a demand which is the subject of a counterclaim (McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278), if it was not then barred, though, if standing alone, the statute would run against it before the answer is filed. Perkins v. West Coast Lumber Co., 120 Cal. 27; 52 Pac. 118.

Scope and office of counterclaim under the code. See note 89 Am. Dec. 482.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Counterclaim, evidence of. Loss of profits as a counterclaim. Unliquidated damages as counterclaim. Counterclaim, when not set up in answer, evidence thereof, etc. In Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 303–309, Justice Shafter, in a very elaborate opinion upon these subjects says [the code commissioners quote six pages therefrom].

2. When set-off is allowed, and what set-off may consist of. A decree, rendered in an action on a bond, and to foreclose a mortgage as security therefor, which, after reciting the amount found due on the bond, directed that the mortgaged premises be sold, and out of the proceeds, the costs and the amount found due on the bond and accruing interest be paid, and the sheriff pay such surplus into court, but that if the proceeds were insufficient to pay the debt, interest, and costs, the sheriff should report the amount of such deficiency or balance, and the plaintiff have execution against the defendants for the deficiency, merges the original debt in such judgment, so far as to make it a certain and liquidated demand, existing at the date when the amount of balance was ascertained by the sheriff, sufficient as a foundation of a right of action or set-off. A cestui que trust, who is insolvent, cannot, in equity, enforce and collect, through his trustee, a judgment against a party who holds a just and valid demand against the cestui que trust, which he has no means of enforcing or collecting if a set-off is denied; and it is unnecessary that the demand sought to be used as a set-off should be in the form of a personal judgment. Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596. The next position is, that the rules of set-off are the same in equity as at law. It is true that courts of law and equity follow the same general doctrines on the subject of set-off; but where some equity intervenes, independent of the fact of mutual unconnected debts, courts of equity will take jurisdiction, and determine the matter upon the principles of natural equity. And when the law could not give a proper remedy, as in the case of the insolvency of one of the parties, equity will afford relief. Barbour on Set-off, p. 190; Lindsay v. Jackson, 2 Paige, 581. The demands in this case are judgments, and the aid of a court of equity is invoked because the defendants in one of the judgments are insolvent, and the plaintiff in the other is not the real party in interest, but a trustee for the insolvent defendants in the other judgments. Each of these facts forms a ground for applying to a court of equity, and entitles the plaintiffs to equitable relief. On a complaint filed to set off one judgment or decree against another, the jurisdiction of a court of chancery is more extensive than that of common-law courts. In equity, a set-off in such cases is a matter of right, and not of discretion, and it depends, not upon the statutes of set-off, but upon the equitable jurisdiction of the court over its suitors. Barbour on Set-off, p. 194. And the set-off will be allowed as between the real parties in interest, regardless of a nominal party. O'Connor v. Murphy, 1 H. Bl. 657. A person who holds a claim as a trustee cannot have it set off against a demand due from him in his own right. Fair v. McIver, 16 East, 130. And upon the same principle, we think it clear that a set-off should be made in equity as between the real parties in interest, even though one of the judgments is in the name of a trustee, who holds for the use and benefit of such real parties. Wolf v. Beales, 6 Serg. & R. 242; 9 Am. Dec. 425; Barbour on Set-off, pp. 16, 71–73. In other words, the court will decree a set-off as between the real owners or persons beneficially interested in the several demands. Russell v. Conway, 11 Cal. 93. Another position taken by the appellants is, that Fisher should have pleaded the balance due on the judgment of foreclosure, as a set-off against the damages in the action brought by Wm. R. Duff against him and the Knoxes for a specific performance; and not having done so, the plaintiffs claiming under him are estopped or barred from maintaining this action. If he had so pleaded it in that suit, it would probably have been held that the court could not entertain the defense or allow the set-off in that action, on the same grounds that it was ruled out in the subsequent action of Duff v. Hobbs, 19 Cal. 646. But, independent of that, it is clear that a party does not lose his right to bring a separate action for a demand which he might have pleaded as a set-off, but neglected to do. Barbour on Set-off, p. 21, Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 628.

3. Offsets. What may be. Action on an appeal bond, in which defendants claim the right to offset the balance of a decree in a foreclosure suit, which they have purchased and now hold against D. and R., and eleven other defendants in that suit, upon the ground that D. and R. are the parties beneficially interested in the claim in suit in this action, and that they and the other eleven defendants in the decree sought to be offset are insolvent. It was decided that the set-off cannot be allowed, as well because of the provisions of this section, which requires a counterclaim to be between parties to the record, between whom a several judgment might be had in the action, as of the provisions of §§ 626 and 666, post, which would require a judgment for the excess to be given against the plaintiff, although, as against him, it is not claimed that defendants have any demand. The matter set up in the answer is not a defense, legal or equitable, in any other sense than as being purely an offset, and, therefore, such matter cannot be relied on as an equitable defense independent of, and beyond the right of, offset given by the code. Duff v. Hobbs, 19 Cal. 646, commenting on, and in some particulars disapproving, Naglee v. Palmer, 7 Cal. 543, and Russell v. Conway, 11 Cal. 93, and citing as authority the cases of Wheeler v. Raymond, 5 Cow. 231; Warner v. Barker, 3 Wend. 400; Spencer v. Babcock, 22 Barb. 326; Ferreira v. Depew, 4 Abb. Pr. 131.

4. What constitutes an offset. A claim, to constitute a set-off, must be such that the party pleading it could obtain a several judgment upon it; and a joint debt cannot be made a set-off against a several one. To justify the allowance of a set-off of joint debt due from plaintiff, and another against the individual claim of plaintiff, upon equitable grounds, besides showing that the joint debtors owe a considerable amount, and that their property is encumbered by judgments, mortgages, and attachments, it must also be shown that they are insolvent, or that the defendants are in danger of losing their demand. Howard v. Shores, 20 Cal. 277.

5. Damages for breach of contract as a counterclaim. If plaintiff asks, in his complaint, for damages for the breach, on the part of the defendant, of a written contract between the parties, the defendant may interpose in his answer a counterclaim for damages for a breach of the contract by plaintiffs. Dennis v. Belt, 30 Cal. 247.

6. Counterclaim defined. A counterclaim is a cause of action in favor of the defendant, upon which he might have sued the plaintiff and obtained affirmative relief, in a separate action. Belleau v. Thompson, 33 Cal. 495.

7. A joint claim by two persons must not be set up as a counterclaim by the defendant, but he may amend and aver that the whole interest therein had been transferred to him. Stearns v. Martin, 4 Cal. 229; but if the legal and equitable liabilities on claims of money become vested in or may be urged against one, they may be set off against separate demands, and vice versa. Russell v. Conway, 11 Cal. 101; Collins v. Butler, 14 Cal. 223.

8. What is necessary to constitute set-off at law. To authorize a set-off at law, the debts must be between the parties in their own rights, and must be of the same kind and quality, and be clearly ascertained or liquidated; they must be certain and determined debts. Naglee v. Palmer, 7 Cal. 543; see this doubted, however, in Duff v. Hobbs, 19 Cal. 646.

9. What may be set up as a counterclaim, etc., in suits on contracts. Plaintiff sues for balance due on a contract for erecting a building, and a small sum for extra work. Defendant seeks to offset a claim for two and one third months' rent lost by him, because of the neglect of plaintiff to finish the building within the time specified in the contract, defendant having at the date of the contract leased the building to responsible tenants, the lease to take effect from the time of its completion, as required under the contract; but it was decided that defendant cannot offset his rents, because the circumstances show that the contract was modified by the parties as to the time for the completion of the building. McGinley v. Hardy, 18 Cal. 115.

10. Copartnership claims, debts, etc., as set-offs, when. A party may purchase cross-demands against a partnership, and set them up as a defense to a debt due by him to a partnership. Naglee v. Minturn, 8 Cal. 540; Marye v. Jones, 9 Cal. 335. In a suit to recover damages for breach of a covenant to indemnify plaintiff against liabilities, the defendant cannot set up as a counterclaim demands which were matters of partnership between the parties. Haskell v. Moore, 29 Cal. 437. When partners are sued as factors, their claim for disbursements, commissions, etc., need not be stated in their answer as set-offs. Lubert v. Chauviteau, 3 Cal. 463; 58 Am. Dec. 415.

11. Equity will enforce set-off, when. When the parties have mutual demands against each other, which are so situated that it is impossible for the party claiming a set-off to obtain satisfaction of his claim by an ordinary suit at law or in equity, then upon the filing of a bill a court of equity will enforce the equitable set-off. Russell v. Conway, 11 Cal. 93; see also Collins v. Butler, 14 Cal. 227; Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596.

12. Judgments, when set-offs, and how. When a person seeks to set off judgments in different courts, he must go into the court in which the judgment against himself was recovered. Russell v. Conway, 11 Cal. 101. See also, as to judgments as set-offs, Beckman v. Manlove, 18 Cal. 388; Collins v. Butler, 14 Cal. 227; Porter v. Liscom, 22 Cal. 430; 83 Am. Dec. 76; and particularly Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596.

13. Breach of warranty as counterclaim by way of recoupment. See Earl v. Bull, 15 Cal. 425.

14. Set-offs should be specially pleaded. See Hicks v. Green, 9 Cal. 75; Wallace v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 18 Cal. 461; Bernard v. Mullot, 1 Cal. 368; Cole v. Swanston, 1 Cal. 51; 52 Am. Dec. 288.

§ 439. When defendant omits to set up counterclaim. If the defendant omits to set up a counterclaim upon a cause arising out of the transaction set forth in the complaint as the foundation of the plaintiff's claim, neither he nor his assignee can afterwards maintain an action against the plaintiff therefor.

Legislation § 439. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "If the defendant omit to set up a counterclaim in the cases mentioned in the first subdivision of the last section, neither he nor his assignee can afterwards maintain an action against the plaintiff therefor."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 134; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 706; the code commissioner saying, "The causes of action, with respect to which the defendant is obliged to assert a counterclaim, are limited to those arising out of the transaction set forth in the complaint."

Effect of failure to set up counterclaim. This section refers to the cause of action provided for in the first subdivision of § 438, ante. Brosnan v. Kramer, 135 Cal. 36; 66 Pac. 979. A defendant may set up new matter in his answer, constituting a counterclaim, and have any affirmative relief to which he may be entitled; but it does not follow therefrom that he is compelled to do so; such a rule might become mischievous in its results, for the defendant might then be wholly unprepared to make out his case for the want of testimony, which, at another time, might be at his command; and while the statute provides that the defendant may set out new matter as a defense in his favor, and obtain affirmative relief, yet it nowhere provides that he shall do it, under a penalty of forfeiture of his claim: he may therefore do it or not, at his option. Ayres v. Bensley, 32 Cal. 620. Damages for deceit in the sale of property must be set up as a counterclaim in an action to recover the purchase-money: an action cannot be maintained therefor, as an independent action, unless brought before the commencement of the action for the purchase-money. Collins v. Townsend, 58 Cal. 608. To be available, a defendant's claim for unliquidated damages, conceding that it is a cross-demand, should be pleaded. Perkins v. West Coast Lumber Co., 5 Cal. App. 674; 48 Pac. 982. The failure to assert a cross-claim when a demand is presented for payment does not involve a waiver of the counterclaim. Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 294. A claim for rents received by a mortgagee for the use of the mortgagor is not barred by a failure to set them up as a counterclaim in an action to foreclose the mortgage. Freeman v. Campbell, 109 Cal. 360; 42 Pac. 35. A claim for money, the proceeds of crops, paid to a mortgagee, under a mistake that he was entitled to such proceeds, which had been assigned by the mortgagor before answer filed in the foreclosure suit, is not so legally connected with the subject of the action as to be barred by failure to plead it as a counterclaim. Gregory v. Clabrough, 129 Cal. 475; 62 Pac. 72.

§ 440. Counterclaim not barred by death or assignment. When cross-demands have existed between persons under such circumstances that, if one had brought an action against the other, a counterclaim could have been set up, the two demands shall be deemed compensated, so far as they equal each other, and neither can be deprived of the benefit thereof by the assignment or death of the other.

Legislation § 440. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 48, which read: "When cross-demands have existed between persons, under such circumstances, that if one had brought an action against the other, a counterclaim could have been set up, neither shall be deprived of the benefit thereof, by the assignment or death of the other; but the two demands [shall] be deemed compensated, so far as they equal each other." When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "can," before the words "be deprived," was changed from "shall," (2) the word "must" was added before "be deemed," and (3), at the end of the section, this sentence was added: "But a claim existing in favor of the maker of a negotiable instrument and against a holder after maturity, intermediate between the payee and the last holder, is not a cross-demand."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 300.

Cross-demands must exist. The rights of the parties under this section are mutual. Moore v. Gould, 151 Cal. 723; 91 Pac. 616. The mere existence of cross-demands will not justify a set-off in a court of chancery: there must be some peculiar circumstances, based upon equitable grounds, to warrant the court in interfering; and if there are cross-demands between the parties, of such a nature that, if both were recoverable at law, they would be the subject of a set-off, then, and in such a case, if either of the demands be a matter of equitable jurisdiction, the set-off will be enforced in equity; as, for example, if a legal debt is due to the defendant by the plaintiff, and the plaintiff is the assignee of a legal debt due to a third person from the plaintiff, which has been duly assigned to himself, a court of equity will set off the one against the other, if both debts could properly be the subject of a set-off at law (Naglee v. Palmer, 7 Cal. 543), and will do equity to the defendant, although no offset or quantum meruit is pleaded. Turner v. Fidelity Loan Concern, 2 Cal. App. 122; 83 Pac. 62, 70.

Counterclaim may be set up when two demands are compensated. The demand that may be used to compensate another, under this section, must be such as would constitute the subject-matter of the statutory counterclaim; counterclaims differ from the equitable right of set-off, which requires some peculiar circumstances, based upon equitable grounds, such as fraud, insolvency, or the like, to warrant the interference of the court; both the statutory right and the equitable right, however, are founded on the idea that mutual existing indebtedness, arising out of contracts between parties to the record, creates a compensation or payment of both demands, so far as they equal each other; but, under the code, the two demands must be mutual, and coexist as separate causes of action at the commencement of the action upon the principal demand. Lyon v. Petty, 65 Cal. 322; 4 Pac. 103. Cross-demands, under this section, can be deemed compensated, so far as they equal each other, only under such circumstances as where, if one party should bring an action against another, a counterclaim could be set up. McKean v. German-American Sav. Bank, 118 Cal. 334; 50 Pac. 656. Thus, in an accounting, the defendant is entitled to credit for payments made by him to the plaintiff, and the cross-demands must be deemed compensated so far as they equal each other. Dillon v. Cross, 5 Cal. App. 766; 91 Pac. 439. Promissory notes of a deceased person, due at the time of his death, but upon which no claims were presented, and upon which action was barred at the time of the commencement of an action by his administrator to foreclose a mortgage held by the deceased, not due at the time of his death, are not subject to counterclaim or set-off; neither constituting a cause of action upon which a counterclaim was maintainable at the commencement of the foreclosure suit, nor constituting such counterclaim at the time of the death of the decedent, the mortgage debt not then being due, and no cause of action existing thereon. Lyon v. Petty, 65 Cal. 322; 4 Pac. 103. A draft drawn by the plaintiff on the defendant, but not presented or paid, creates no cause of action in the defendant, and consequently creates no right of set-off. Wakeman v. Vanderbilt, 3 Cal. 380. Where a vendor owes the vendee a sum sufficient to pay the contract liability, and the one debt can offset the other, the two demands, so far as they equal each other, are deemed compensated, under this section. Williams v. Pratt, 10 Cal. App. 625; 103 Pac. 151.

Effect of death of party. This section relates to the situation of the parties at the time of the commencement of the action; the death of one of the parties to the demand, though before the maturity thereof, does not change their relative rights in pleading a counterclaim, or in compensating the claims so far as they equal each other, provided the set-off is due when the action is commenced. Ainsworth v. Bank of California, 119 Cal. 470; 63 Am. St. Rep. 135; 39 L. R. A. 686; 51 Pac. 952.

Effect of assignment by party. The owner of premises cannot set off a claim for damages, sustained by being compelled to make repairs on certain work done by a contractor, against the assignee of the contractor, where such claim arose after notice of the assignment. First Nat. Bank v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 107 Cal. 55; 40 Pac. 45. One judgment may be set off against another judgment rendered in the same court (Haskins v. Jordan, 123 Cal. 157; 55 Pac. 786); and a judgment in favor of the defendant may be set off pro tanto against a judgment in favor of the plaintiff in the same action; and this right of set-off is not lost by assignment, by the plaintiff, before making the motion to offset (Porter v. Liscom, 22 Cal. 430; 83 Am. Dec. 76); but the assignee of a judgment, to use it as an offset to a judgment against himself, must show that he is the absolute owner of the judgment and holds beneficial control of it. Jones v. Chalfant, 55 Cal. 505. The assignee of a judgment is deemed to have notice of all the matters disclosed by the record in the action in which the judgment was rendered, and therefore takes judgment subject to the right of set-off disclosed in the record. Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596. The purchaser and assignee of a judgment, even for a valuable consideration and without notice, takes subject to a right of set-off existing at the time of the assignment. McCabe v. Grey, 20 Cal. 509; Porter v. Liscom, 22 Cal. 430; 83 Am. Dec. 76; St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Gay, 101 Cal. 286; 35 Pac. 876; Haskins v. Jordan, 123 Cal. 157; 55 Pac. 786. The judgment against an assignor of the plaintiff or party beneficially interested cannot be pleaded as a set-off or counterclaim. Duff v. Hobbs, 19 Cal. 646. Where the relation of debtor and creditor exists between the parties, and one becomes vested with a right of action against the other, such right is assignable, and enforceable by the assignee, subject to any defense or counterclaim against the assignor. Watkins v. Glas, 5 Cal. App. 68; 89 Pac. 840.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Vinton v. Crowe, 4 Cal. 309. The last clause is added to the section at the instance of Justice Wallace. Although a party may set up an equitable defense to an action at law, his remedy is not confined to that proceeding. He may let the judgment go at law, and file his bill in equity for relief. Lorraine v. Long, 6 Cal. 453.

§ 441. Answer may contain several grounds of defense. Defendant may answer part and demur to part of complaint. The defendant may set forth by answer as many defenses and counterclaims as he may have. They must be separately stated, and the several defenses must refer to the causes of action which they are intended to answer, in a manner by which they may be intelligibly distinguished. The defendant may also answer one or more of the several causes of action stated in the complaint and demur to the residue.

Legislation § 441. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 49 (New York Code, § 150), which had (1) the words "shall each," instead of "must," before "be separately," and (2) the word "shall," instead of "must," before "refer"; but did not have the last sentence.

Defendant may set up all his defenses. That the defendant may set forth as many defenses as he thinks proper, is a right fully recognized, as is also the fact that pleading one defense cannot be held a waiver of another in the same answer, even though inconsistent. Bell v. Brown, 22 Cal. 671; Snipsic Co. v. Smith, 7 Cal. App. 150; 93 Pac. 1035; Harding v. Harding, 148 Cal. 397; 83 Pac. 434; and see McDonald v. Southern California Ry. Co., 101 Cal. 206; 35 Pac. 643, 646. The defendant may rely on several distinct defenses: he is not concluded by one plea, so long as he has others which go to the whole action (Youngs v. Bell, 4 Cal. 201); nor is he required to elect between defenses. Harding v. Harding, 148 Cal. 397; 83 Pac. 434. If the plaintiff objects to inconsistent defenses, he must move to strike out one or the other, or apply for an order compelling the defendant to elect as to which one he will rely upon. Buhne v. Corbett, 43 Cal. 264; Banta v. Siller, 121 Cal. 414; 53 Pac. 935. Inconsistent defenses and hypothetical pleadings are permitted. Eppinger v. Kendrick, 114 Cal. 620; 46 Pac. 613. The defendant may plead any and all of his defenses, and they may be inconsistent with one another, and the effect of a denial in one defense is not aided by setting up affirmative matter in another. Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 308; 46 Pac. 1076; Shepherd-Teague Co. v. Hermann, 12 Cal. App. 394; 107 Pac. 622. He may set up negative as well as affirmative defenses; and affirmative matter, separately pleaded, does not operate as a waiver or withdrawal of the denial in another portion of the answer. Billings v. Drew, 52 Cal. 565. He may deny that he controlled the instrument causing an accident, and, as a separate defense, may deny that the accident occurred through his negligence, and allege contributory negligence of the plaintiff. Banta v. Siller, 121 Cal. 414; 53 Pac. 935. If a plea or defense, separately pleaded, contain several matters, these should not be repugnant or inconsistent in themselves; but the plea or defense, regarded as an entirety, if otherwise sufficient in form or substance, is not to be defeated or disregarded, merely because it is inconsistent with some other defense. Buhne v. Corbett, 43 Cal. 264. The object of sworn pleadings is to elicit the truth; therefore the answer should be consistent, and not deny in one sentence what is admitted to be true in the next. Hensley v. Tartar, 14 Cal. 508. A statement in one defense cannot be used as evidence upon another issue; to allow such would be to deprive the defendant of the benefit of his denials. McDonald v. Southern California Ry. Co., 101 Cal. 206; 35 Pac. 643, 646. In an action for a statutory penalty for a failure to make and post reports of a mining corporation, the defendant may deny the violation of the statute, and, by separate defense, aver matters in extenuation, excuse, and defense; and the effect of a denial in one defense is not waived by the setting up of affirmative matter in another; and, in such case, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove the defendant's violation of the statute. Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 308; 46 Pac. 1076. Inconsistency between defenses will not justify striking out other defenses. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257; 46 Am. St. Rep. 237; 39 Pac. 610; McDonald v. Southern California Ry. Co., 101 Cal. 206; 35 Pac. 643, 646. A denial of the title of the plaintiff, and a separate defense of the statute of limitations, are not inconsistent defenses. Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192.

Right to plead inconsistent defenses. See note 48 L. R. A. 177.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Inconsistent defenses. In Bell v. Brown, 22 Cal. 679, the court say: "The question of inconsistent defenses and hypothetical pleadings under the code has been adjudicated by the courts of other states in numerous cases, and the right of a defendant to set forth as many defenses as he thinks proper is fully recognized, and also that pleading one defense cannot be held a waiver of another in the same answer, even though inconsistent. In Sweet v. Tuttle, 14 N. Y. 465, Mayhew v. Robinson, 10 How. Pr. 162, and Bridge v. Payson, 5 Sandf. 210, a general denial and plea of non-joinder of defendants were united and held good. So in Gardner v. Clark, 21 N. Y. 399, where a plea of performance and a former action pending were joined. So in Doran v. Dinsmore, 20 How. Pr. 503, where a general denial was coupled with a plea of payment. So in Mott v. Burnett, 2 E. D. Smith, 52, it was held that the defendant might deny making the note sued on, allege a set-off, and that one of the makers of the note had been discharged by the holder. In an action to recover personal property it was held the defendant might answer by a general denial, and set up a justification of the taking. Hackley v. Ogmun, 10 How. Pr. 44. In slander, that he may deny the charge and also justify. Ormsby v. Douglas, 5 Duer, 665; Butler v. Wentworth, 17 Barb. 649; Butler v. Wentworth, 9 How. Pr. 282. So, also, that pleas which were not inconsistent under the former practice are good as answers under the code. Lansingh v. Parker, 9 How. Pr. 288. Held, too, that a defendant should never be required to elect between a denial of a material allegation of the complaint and new matter constituting a defense (Hollenbeck v. Clow, 9 How. Pr. 289); and that it was not necessary that the several defenses in an answer should be consistent with each other. Stiles v. Comstock, 9 How. Pr. 48. Also, that denials of allegations in the complaint may be coupled with a defense of the statute of limitations. Ostrom v. Bixby, 9 How. Pr. 57. Held, too, that a defense might be hypothetically predicated upon a fact alleged in the complaint, as an answer after denying that the plaintiff was the owner of the note sued on, averred that if the plaintiff is the owner, he took it with notice of a failure of the consideration. Brown v. Ryckman, 12 How. Pr. 313. Or if the defendants, by their agents, ever issued the certificate of deposit sued on, the same has been paid. Doran v. Dinsmore, 20 How. Pr. 503. Also held that an implied admission in one of the defenses set up in an answer will not conclude or estop the defendant from proving another defense set up in the same answer, as each defense in an answer stands by itself, and an admission in one is not available against the others. Swift v. Kingsley, 24 Barb. 541. In the case of Ketcham v. Zereiga, 1 E. D. Smith, 553, this question was very fully examined, and the right of a defendant to file inconsistent defenses and hypothetical pleadings, under proper circumstances, was fully maintained. In the case of Youngs v. Bell, 4 Cal. 201, the right of a defendant to set up several distinct defenses, and to rely upon all of them in order to put the plaintiff to his proof, was sustained, and it was held that he was not concluded by one plea, so long as he had others which went to the whole action. See also Kidd v. Laird, 15 Cal. 182; 76 Am. Dec. 472. We are aware that there are several decisions, both in our own and other courts, which have laid down contrary views, but the weight of principle and authority is in favor of the rule, that, under proper circumstances, a defendant may set up several defenses in his answer, inconsistent with each other, though each defense must be consistent with itself. The cases decided by the court of appeals in the state of New York, and reported in Sweet v. Tuttle, 14 N. Y. 465, and Gardner v. Clark, 21 N. Y. 399, seem to have settled the rule in that state. The view we take harmonizes the new code with the well-established principle of the old system of practice. Works on pleading are full of precedents and forms recognizing fully the right of a defendant to file several pleas, which, though they might be inconsistent with each other, were required each to be consistent with itself. Bell v. Brown, 22 Cal. 679; see also Klink v. Cohen, 13 Cal. 623; Uridias v. Morrell, 25 Cal. 31; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192; Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450."

2. Generally. See Mudd v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 46; Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 347; Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450.

§ 442. Cross-complaint. Whenever the defendant seeks affirmative relief against any party, relating to or depending upon the contract or transaction upon which the action is brought, or affecting the property to which the action relates, he may, in addition to his answer, file at the same time, or by permission of the court subsequently, a cross-complaint. The cross-complaint must be served upon the parties affected thereby, and such parties may demur or answer thereto as to the original complaint. If any of the parties affected by the cross-complaint have not appeared in the action, a summons upon the cross-complaint must be issued and served upon them in the same manner as upon the commencement of an original action.

Original complaint. Ante, §§ 426, 427.

Dismissing action, where cross-complaint. Post, § 581.

Legislation § 442. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1873–74. p. 301 (changes noted infra).

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 134; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 706.

4. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 966, adding the final sentence.

5. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 298, eliding "to the action," after "party" (added in 1907).

Nature and elements. A cross-complaint must state facts sufficient to entitle the pleader to affirmative relief: it cannot be aided by averments in any of the other pleadings, and must fall, unless sustained by its own allegations; like the complaint, it should contain all the requisite facts. Coulthurst v. Coulthurst, 58 Cal. 239; Kreichbaum v. Melton, 49 Cal. 50. A cross-complaint must state a separate and independent cause of action upon a contract, under the second subdivision of § 438, ante, which is subject to the same grounds of demurrer as an original complaint. Harron v. Wilson, 4 Cal. App. 488; 88 Pac. 512. It must stand or fall on its own allegations of facts. Collins v. Bartlett, 44 Cal. 371. To constitute a counterclaim or cross-complaint, the relief sought must, to some extent, defeat, overcome, or affect the plaintiff's cause of action, or lessen, modify, or interfere with the relief to which the plaintiff is entitled. Yorba v. Ward, 109 Cal. 107; 38 Pac. 48; 41 Pac. 793. A cross-complaint is unnecessary where the relief demanded can be had upon the denials and averments of the answer; but it is proper where full relief cannot be given the defendant upon the answer, and it is sought to have the whole controversy between the parties finally adjudicated and settled in one action. Martin v. Molera, 4 Cal. App. 298; 87 Pac. 1104. Neither a counterclaim nor a cross-complaint is permissible in actions of unlawful detainer (Knight v. Black, 19 Cal. App. 518; 126 Pac. 512), and a cross-complaint is not authorized in a justice's court: it is confined to actions in the superior court. Purcell v. Richardson, 164 Cal. 150; 128 Pac. 31.

Permission of the court. The action of the court in overruling the demurrer of new parties brought in by way of cross-complaint may be taken as evidence of its consent to a cross-complaint. Syvertson v. Butler, 3 Cal. App. 345; 85 Pac. 164.

Relief must relate to or depend upon the transaction upon which the action is brought. Any person made a defendant is authorized to set up by cross-complaint his right to affirmative relief, depending upon the contract or transaction upon which the action is brought, or affecting the property to which the action relates. Lowe v. Superior Court, 165 Cal. 708; 134 Pac. 190. The cause of action set up in the cross-complaint must relate to or depend upon the contract or transaction upon which the plaintiff's action is brought, or affect the property to which it relates; and in an action to foreclose a material-man's lien, a cross-complaint which alleges that the defendant, to avoid litigation, paid to the plaintiff, upon a date prior to that upon which the complaint alleges the contract for the materials was made, a sum of money in excess of what was then due him, and which asks judgment for such excess, is not authorized by this section. Clark v. Taylor, 91 Cal. 552; 27 Pac. 860. In an action for the foreclosure of an equitable mortgage securing a promissory note, the defendant cannot set up, by way of cross-complaint, a cause of action against the plaintiff for the improper levy of an attachment of the property of the defendant, in a prior action instituted by the plaintiff on the note. Clark v. Kelley, 163 Cal. 207; 124 Pac. 846. In an action to enjoin a diversion of water, a cross-complaint, claiming rights in the water diverted, but which nowhere shows that the defendant owns or holds by right any lands riparian to the stream, and merely avers that he owns several lots, and has possession and control of others, without averring that he possesses or controls them by right, and states that the stream flows through its natural channel, over and across the land of the defendant; without stating that it flows across the lots owned by him, does not state a cause of action or ground of cross-complaint. Silver Creek etc. Water Co. v. Hayes, 113 Cal. 142; 45 Pac. 191. In an action to set aside certain proceedings as to land, to which plaintiff asserts title, the defendant, being a purchaser in possession, may maintain a cross-complaint to quiet his title as against a void and fraudulent deed to the plaintiff. Stephenson v. Deuel, 125 Cal. 656; 58 Pac. 258. In an action to foreclose a street assessment, a cross-complaint cannot be interposed for injuries to the land in the prosecution of the work. Engebretsen v. Gay, 158 Cal. 27; 109 Pac. 879. This section authorizes a cross-complaint for the specific performance of an agreement to convey the premises to defendant, in an action to recover buildings removed from the plaintiff's land. Hall v. Cole, 4 Cal. Unrep. 928; 38 Pac. 894.

Must affect property to which the action relates. This section authorizes a cross-complaint whenever the defendant seeks affirmative relief affecting the property to which the action relates, and seemingly permits, in an action regarding real estate, the assertion of a title independent of and paramount to that of the plaintiff. Taylor v. McLain, 64 Cal. 513; 2 Pac. 399; Martin v. Molera, 4 Cal. App. 298; 87 Pac. 1104. In an action for damages for injuries to personal property, damages for a trespass upon real estate is not a proper subject for cross-complaint, unless connection between the causes of action is shown. Demartin v. Albert, 68 Cal. 277; 9 Pac. 157. A cross-complaint must affect the same property as that affected by the original complaint; a claim for an entirely distinct piece of property or easement, not in any way connected with that described in the original complaint, cannot be set up by cross-complaint. Bulwer Consol. Mining Co. v. Standard Consol. Mining Co., 83 Cal. 589; 23 Pac. 1102. Where the original action relates to and affects two parcels of property, the defendant is entitled to interpose, by cross-complaint, any defense he may have as to either or both, and to ask any affirmative relief necessary and proper. Eureka v. Gates, 120 Cal. 54; 52 Pac. 125. The requisite of connection of the defendant's cause of action with the subject of the plaintiff's action is not defined or restricted by this section; nor is it provided that the affirmative relief sought shall affect only the property to which the plaintiff's action relates: only some connection is required. Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Harrold, 127 Cal. 612; 60 Pac. 165. In ejectment, a cross-complaint as to other land is improper. McFarland v. Matthai, 7 Cal. App. 599; 95 Pac. 179.

Must be served on parties affected. Service of the cross-complaint should be made on the plaintiff; but where no right of his was prejudiced by the omission to serve him, the judgment will not be reversed because of it, especially where all matters of substance charged in the complaint were pleaded affirmatively in the answer, which was served on him, so that he met, in the prosecution of his own action, every issue which would have been tendered to him had he been served also with the cross-complaint. Mackenzie v. Hodgkin, 126 Cal. 591; 77 Am. St. Rep. 209; 59 Pac. 36. It may be served on the plaintiff's attorney (Ritter v. Braash, 11 Cal. App. 258; 104 Pac. 592), and upon either the adverse party or his attorney. Wood v. Johnston, 8 Cal. App. 258; 96 Pac. 508. A cross-complaint affecting the interest of defaulting defendants must be served upon them. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Fella, 54 Cal. 598. A party defendant both to the complaint and cross-complaint, in a foreclosure suit, is entitled to service upon him of the cross-complaint, which prays that the defendants, and all persons claiming under them, be barred and foreclosed of all their rights, claim, and equity of redemption, although the cross-complaint does not allege that such defendant claims an interest in the premises. Houghton v. Tibbets, 126 Cal. 57; 58 Pac. 318.

New parties cannot be brought in. Since the amendment of 1907 to this section, new parties cannot be brought into the case by way of cross-complaint. Merchants' Trust Co. v. Bentel, 10 Cal. App. 75; 101 Pac. 31; Clark v. Kelley, 163 Cal. 207; 124 Pac. 846. The defendant in an action to quiet title may, by cross-complaint, bring in whatever parties are necessary to a determination of the controversy; and where the defendant claims under an execution sale of the interest of a beneficiary in possession, for whose benefit the plaintiff holds the legal title, such beneficiary is a proper and necessary party, and may be brought in by the cross-complaint. Winter v. McMillan, 87 Cal. 256; 22 Am. St. Rep. 243; 25 Pac. 407.

Pleading to cross-complaint. The provision of this section, that, where a cross-complaint has been served by the defendant claiming affirmative relief, the party served "may demur or answer thereto as to the original complaint," is an exception to the rule that new matter in avoidance or constituting a defense or counterclaim must be deemed controverted. Moore v. Copp, 119 Cal. 429; 51 Pac. 630. The defense of an action pending does not apply to cross-suits. Helfrich v. Romer, 16 Cal. App. 433; 118 Pac. 458. Matters of affirmative defense and counterclaim are deemed denied, and this rule is operative, although the defendant erroneously styles the pleading a cross-complaint. Pfister v. Wade, 69 Cal. 133; 10 Pac. 369.

Nature and extent of cross-bills. See note 83 Am. Dec. 251.

Use of cross-complaint to bring in new parties. See note 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 127.

CHAPTER V.

DEMURRER TO ANSWER.

§ 443. When plaintiff may demur to answer. § 444. Grounds of demurrer.

§ 443. When plaintiff may demur to answer. The plaintiff may within ten days after the service of the answer demur thereto, or to one or more of the several defenses or counterclaims set up therein.

Demurrer to complaint. Ante, § 430.
Service of demurrer. Post, § 465.
Time to demur, extending. Post, § 1054.
Time to answer, when demurrer overruled, begins to run from service of notice of decision. Post, § 476.

Legislation § 443. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 50 (New York Code, § 152), as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 702, which read: "When the answer contains matter in avoidance, or a counterclaim, the plaintiff may, within the number of days in which the defendant is by the summons required to answer, to be computed from the time of the service of a copy of such answer, demur to the same for insufficiency, stating therein the grounds of such demurrer; and when the answer contains a cross-complaint, the parties against whom relief is therein demanded may demur or answer thereto within the like period. Sham and irrelevant answers and defenses, and so much of any pleading as may be irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial, may be stricken out, upon motion, upon such terms as the court in its discretion may impose." When enacted in 1872, § 443 read: "The plaintiff may, within the same length of time after service of the answer as the defendant is allowed to answer after service of summons, demur to the answer of the defendant."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 301, adding the clause, at the end of the section, "or to one or more of the several defenses or counterclaims set up in the answer."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 134; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 706; the code commissioner saying, "The time within which the plaintiff may demur to the answer is more definitely and clearly fixed by the amendment."

Answer and demurrer applicable to original pleading. This section is applicable only to the original pleadings in a cause, and not to pleadings which are amended or presented at the trial, or during its progress: where a complaint is amended at the trial, the court has the same right to exercise its discretion in determining the time within which an answer, or a demurrer thereto, shall be filed, as it has in determining whether it will allow the amended pleading; and its discretion is not abused by refusing time within which the plaintiff shall demur to an amended pleading, where no ground of demurrer appears. Schultz v. McLean, 109 Cal. 437; 42 Pac. 557.

Disposition of demurrer. Where the record does not show that a demurrer to the answer was disposed of, a judgment in favor of the plaintiff is irregular. Huse v. Moore, 20 Cal. 115. The trial of the case while a demurrer to the answer is still pending amounts only to an irregularity not justifying the granting of a new trial. Calderwood v. Tevis, 23 Cal. 335.

Whether a demurrer to a separate defense may be carried back to the complaint where the defendant has also pleaded a general denial. See note 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 117.

§ 444. Grounds of demurrer. The demurrer may be taken upon one or more of the following grounds:

1. That several causes of counterclaim have been improperly joined, or not separately stated;

2. That the answer does not state facts sufficient to constitute a defense or counterclaim;

3. That the answer is ambiguous;

4. That the answer is unintelligible; or

5. That the answer is uncertain.

Grounds of demurrer. Ante, § 430.

Legislation § 444. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 134; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 707, (1) adding the words "or not separately stated," at the end of subd. 1; and (2) rearranging subd. 3, and making subds. 4 and 5, the original subd. 3 reading, "That the answer is ambiguous, unintelligible, or uncertain."

Grounds of demurrer. A demurrer may be made to a counterclaim, on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to sustain it. Bliss v. Sneath, 119 Cal. 526; 51 Pac. 848. In an action to recover personal property, an answer which denies that the plaintiff is the owner of the property is not demurrable upon the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a defense. Carman v. Ross, 64 Cal. 249; 29 Pac. 510. An objection to an answer, on the ground that separate defenses are not separately stated, cannot be taken by demurrer: such defect can be reached only by motion to strike out, or by some other appropriate proceeding. Hagely v. Hagely, 68 Cal. 348; 9 Pac. 305. An objection to an answer for uncertainty should be taken by demurrer. Harney v. McLeran, 66 Cal. 34; 4 Pac. 884. An answer is bad for ambiguity, where it is impossible to determine therefrom what portion is intended to constitute a legal defense to the action, and what portion a cross-complaint. O'Connor v. Frasher, 53 Cal. 435. The answer of a sheriff, in an action for damages for seizing goods, claimed by the plaintiff, under a writ of attachment against his vendor, which denies the plaintiff's title, and pleads that the sale to him was pretended, false, and fraudulent, and made with the purpose and intent to hinder, delay and defraud his creditors, is demurrable on account of the general allegation of fraud. Sukeforth v. Lord, 87 Cal. 399; 25 Pac. 497. In an action to determine conflicting claims to state lands, the defendant is practically out of court, where a demurrer is sustained on the ground that the answer does not show that he is entitled to purchase. Ramsey v. Flournoy, 58 Cal. 260. The plaintiff is privileged to take advantage of the insufficiency of the answer by demurrer or by motion for judgment, either of which, if finally successful, is sufficient as a foundation for a judgment. Le Breton v. Stanley Contracting Co., 15 Cal. App. 429; 114 Pac. 1028.

Demurrer must be definite. A demurrer will be disregarded, where it is so indefinite that it is impossible to determine therefrom to what portion of the answer it relates. Carman v. Ross, 64 Cal. 249, 29 Pac. 510. The demurrer must be directed to the whole of the pleading, or to a particular and separate count, or statement of a cause of action or defense: a demurrer to all of the defendant's answer after a certain line and page is insufficient (Locke v. Peters, 65 Cal. 161; 3 Pac. 657); and a demurrer to the whole answer is improper, though good as against a counterclaim, where the answer also contained a denial constituting a valid defense to the action. Eich v. Greeley, 112 Cal. 171; 44 Pac. 483.

Waiver of demurrer. Filing an answer to a cross-complaint waives a demurrer previously filed thereto. Booth v. Chapman, 59 Cal. 149. The failure of the court to pass upon a demurrer to an answer is not an error of which the defendant can complain, where it does not attend the trial, nor object to a trial at the time, and the plaintiff insists upon trying the issues of fact: Fincher v. Malcomson, 96 Cal. 38; 30 Pac. 835; and see McCarthy v. Yale, 39 Cal. 585; Silcox v. Lang, 78 Cal. 118; 20 Pac. 297.

Waiver by failure to demur. Inconsistent defenses are waived, if not objected to by demurrer or motion to strike out. Uridias v. Morrell, 25 Cal. 31; Klink v. Cohen, 13 Cal. 623. An objection to an answer for uncertainty in denial is waived by a failure to demur therefor. Harney v. McLeran, 66 Cal. 34; 4 Pac. 884. An objection that matter alleged does not constitute a counterclaim, and is not recognized by law as a defense, is not waived by a failure to demur, but may be taken at any time. MacDougall v. Maguire, 35 Cal. 274; 95 Am. Dec. 98. A counterclaim barred by the statute of limitations must be specially pleaded to by demurrer on this ground, or it is waived, and a judgment in favor of the counterclaim will be affirmed on appeal, if the record does not show that the statute was relied upon as a defense. Bliss v. Sneath, 119 Cal. 526; 51 Pac. 848.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. When inconsistent defenses are set up, the defect must be reached by motion to strike out one of the defenses. If a motion to strike out will not reach or cure the defect, then the objection may be reached by demurrer; and if no objection be taken to the answer on this ground, defendant, on the trial, may rely on any of his defenses, as under the old system. Klink v. Cohen, 13 Cal. 623; affirmed in Uridias v. Morrell, 25 Cal. 37; see also Arnold v. Dimon, 4 Sandf. 680, and cases cited in Van Santvoord's Pleading, p. 287. But a demurrer cannot be stricken out as a sham or irrelevant defense; it can only be disposed of in the usual way. Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 560. Where the plaintiff claims that all the denials are bad, if the answer contains no new matter, he may test the sufficiency of the denials by a motion for judgment upon the pleadings, or by motion to strike out the answer on the ground that it is sham and irrelevant. If some of the denials are good, and the others bad, he may move to strike out the latter. Answers consisting of denials, which do not explicitly traverse the material allegations of the complaint, we hold so far sham and irrelevant within the meaning of the statute. Gay v. Winter, 34 Cal. 161; see also People v. McCumber, 18 N. Y. 315; 72 Am. Dec. 515. Though certain defenses, by way of set-off, are pleaded in the answer in a very informal and inartificial manner, yet, if the facts showing that they constitute valid claims against the plaintiff are sufficiently stated, the defense ought not to be struck out. Wallace v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 18 Cal. 461. An answer without a verification to a complaint, duly verified, may be stricken out on motion, and judgment asked as upon a default. Drum v. Whiting, 9 Cal. 422. The motion in this case to strike out the answers, because denying on information and belief, was properly overruled. Comerford v. Dupuy, 17 Cal. 308. A verified answer, which in any part contains a distinct denial of a fact material to plaintiff's recovery, cannot, no matter how defective it may be, be treated as a nullity, so as to entitle plaintiff to judgment on the pleadings. Ghirardelli v. McDermott, 22 Cal. 539. When plaintiff moves an affidavit to strike out a defense as "sham," the defendant can defeat the motion by making affidavit that his defense is made in good faith. Gostorfs v. Taaffe, 18 Cal. 385; Wedderspoon v. Rogers, 32 Cal. 569, and cases there cited. Inability of counsel to obtain defendant's verification in time cannot avail in resisting a motion to strike out, and for judgment after the answer is filed. Drum v. Whiting, 9 Cal. 422. If an answer is filed, raising an issue, and a trial is had, and witnesses are sworn and examined, and the court takes the case into consideration, it cannot then strike out the answer of the defendant and enter his default. Abbott v. Douglass, 28 Cal. 295. For what have been held to be sham and irrelevant defenses, see McDonald v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 15 Cal. 145; Weimer v. Lowery, 11 Cal. 104; Bates v. Sierra Nevada etc. Mining Co., 18 Cal. 171. Defendants were sued on a note. The complaint was not verified, but set out the note. Defendants pleaded payment. Plaintiff, on affidavits that the plea was false and pleaded in bad faith, moved to strike out the answer, and for judgment, which was granted. The ruling of the court was right. "Sham" answers and defenses are such as are good in form, but false in fact, and pleaded in bad faith; and that such answers, when consisting of affirmative defenses, should be stricken out. Gostorfs v. Taaffe, 18 Cal. 385.

CHAPTER VI.

VERIFICATION OF PLEADINGS.

§ 446. Verification of pleadings.
§ 447. Copy of written instrument contained in complaint admitted, unless answer is verified.
§ 448. When defense is founded on written instrument set out in answer, its execution admitted, unless denied by plaintiff under oath.
§ 449. Exceptions to rules prescribed by two preceding sections.

§ 446. Verification of pleadings. Every pleading must be subscribed by the party or his attorney; and when the complaint is verified, or when the state, or any officer of the state, in his official capacity, is plaintiff, the answer must be verified, unless an admission of the truth of the complaint might subject the party to a criminal prosecution, or, unless an officer of the state, in his official capacity, is defendant. In all cases of a verification of a pleading, the affidavit of the party must state that the same is true of his own knowledge, except as to the matters which are herein stated on his information or belief, and as to those matters that he believes it to be true; and where a pleading is verified, it must be by the affidavit of a party, unless the parties are absent from the county where the attorney has his office, or from some cause unable to verify it, or the facts are within the knowledge of his attorney or other person verifying the same. When the pleading is verified by the attorney, or any other person except one of the parties, he must set forth in the affidavit the reasons why it is not made by one of the parties. When a corporation is a party, the verification may be made by any officer thereof. When the state, or any county thereof, or any officer of the state, or of any county thereof, in his official capacity is plaintiff, the complaint need not be verified.

Attorneys' power to bind client. Ante, § 283.
Verifying accusation for disbarment of attorney. See ante, § 291.
Petition by creditor to appraise homestead must be verified. See Civ. Code, § 1246.

Legislation § 446. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 51 (New York Code, § 156), as amended by Stats. 1862, p. 562, Practice Act, § 52 (New York Code, § 157); as amended by Stats. 1862, p. 562, and Practice Act, § 55 (New York Code, § 157). These sections read: "§ 51. Every pleading shall be subscribed by the party, or his attorney, and when the complaint is verified by affidavit, the answer shall be verified also, except as provided in the next section." "§ 52. The verification of the answer, required in the last section, may be omitted when an admission of the truth of the complaint might subject the party to prosecution for felony or misdemeanor." "§ 55. In all cases of the verification of a pleading, the affidavit of the party shall state that the same is true of his own knowledge, except as to the matters which are therein stated on his information or belief, and as to those matters, that he believes it to be true. And where a pleading is verified, it shall be by the affidavit of the party, unless he be absent from the county where the attorney resides, or from some cause unable to verify it, or the facts are within the knowledge of his attorney, or other person verifying the same. When the pleading is verified by the attorney, or any other person except the party, he shall set forth in the affidavit the reasons why it is not made by the party. When a corporation is a party, the verification may be made by any officer thereof; or when the state, or any officer thereof in its behalf, is a party, the verification may be made by any person acquainted with the facts, except that in actions prosecuted by the attorney-general in behalf of the state the pleadings need not, in any case, be verified."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 134; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 707; the code commissioner saying, "The words 'where the attorney had his office' have been substituted for the words 'where the attorney resides,' and the last sentence has been added."

Necessity for and object of verification. The requirement as to the verification of the pleadings must be complied with, to give validity to acts pursuant thereto. Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27; 62 Pac. 386. The object of the verification is to insure good faith in the averments of the party. Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Silcox v. Lang, 78 Cal. 118; 20 Pac. 297. The proper practice, where the answer is unverified, is to interpose a motion to strike from the files, for judgment on the pleadings, or for judgment for want of answer. Hearst v. Hart, 128 Cal. 327; 60 Pac. 846; and see Drum v. Whiting, 9 Cal. 422; McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298. Upon the filing of an amended complaint, the averments of the original cannot be used to disprove those of the amended complaint, although by the verification of the original the plaintiff makes the statements his own. Johnson v. Powers, 65 Cal. 179; 3 Pac. 625.

Pleadings which must be verified. A petition for habeas corpus must be verified. Ex parte Walpole, 84 Cal. 584; 24 Pac. 308. Exhibits consisting of pleadings and proceedings in an action brought in the name of the United States need no further verification than the certificate of the clerk of the circuit court of the United States. Ely v. Frisbie, 17 Cal. 250. This section applies only to the verification of pleadings: a claim of lien is not a pleading. Parke & Lacy Co. v. Inter Nos Oil etc. Co., 147 Cal. 490; 82 Pac. 51.

When answer must be verified. In an action on a promissory note, where the complaint is verified, a sworn answer is necessary. Brooks v. Chilton, 6 Cal. 640. An answer without a verification may be stricken out on motion, where the complaint is duly verified. Drum v. Whiting, 9 Cal. 422. But where the answer is verified, and denies a single fact material to a recovery by the plaintiff, it cannot be treated as a nullity. Ghirardelli v. McDermott, 22 Cal. 539. In condemnation proceedings brought in the name of a county, the answer need not be verified. Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507; 23 Pac. 700; San Francisco v. Itsell, 80 Cal. 57; 22 Pac. 74. Correcting the answer, in regard to paging and numbering pleadings, to conform with a rule of the court, does not modify or change its denials or averments so as to require verification, and, when the answer is refiled by leave of court, it cannot be stricken out. Buell v. Beckwith, 59 Cal. 480.

Waiver of verification. A waiver of the verification of the answer, where the complaint is verified, does not admit the sufficiency of the answer, nor dispense with the necessity of a specific denial. Harney v. Porter, 62 Cal. 511. A plaintiff will be held to have waived all objection to the verification, by a failure to except to it at the proper time, and will not be allowed to raise the point for the first time on appeal. McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298; San Francisco v. Itsell, 80 Cal. 57; 22 Pac. 74.

Sufficiency of verification. The code does not require the defendant, when the answer is verified, to state in the affidavit that he has heard the foregoing answer read, and knows the contents thereof: the matters stated on information or belief, required by the code, are used in opposition to the rest of the answer, that is, to the matters stated positively. Fleming v. Wells, 65 Cal. 336; 4 Pac. 197. A verification is sufficient, which states that the party has read the foregoing petition, and is acquainted with the contents thereof, and the same is true, of his own knowledge and belief: the words "and belief" are mere surplusage. Seattle Coal etc. Co. v. Thomas, 57 Cal. 197. A statement in the verification, that "the matters set forth in the foregoing answer are true," is the equivalent of a statement that "the foregoing answer is true." Fleming v. Wells, 65 Cal. 336; 4 Pac. 197. A verification, that the foregoing complaint is true, of his own knowledge, but not containing the statement that he has read the complaint, or heard the complaint read, and knows the contents thereof, is sufficient (Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Fleming v. Wells, 65 Cal. 336; 4 Pac. 197); as is also a verification, although not in the exact language of the statute, stating "that the foregoing answer is true, of this defendant's own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated to be upon the information and belief of defendants, and as to those matters he, this defendant, believes the same to be true." Ely v. Frisbie, 17 Cal. 250; Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Kirk v. Rhoades, 46 Cal. 398.

Verification upon information and belief. The verification of a petition in insolvency, upon information and belief, is sufficient, though the statute does not prescribe the form of the verification, since, where there are several creditors having several debts, some of the matters must necessarily be stated upon the information and belief of each of the affiants. Wright v. Cohn, 88 Cal. 328; 26 Pac. 600. In an accusation to disbar an attorney, a verification, by affidavit made upon the information and belief of a person, without explanation why it was not made by one of the informants, and without stating any other reason why he makes it, is insufficient. In re Hotchkiss, 58 Cal. 39. If, in the body of an answer, no fact is stated upon information and belief, the verification is a positive affirmance of the truth of the allegations of the answer. Christopher v. Condogeorge, 128 Cal. 581; 61 Pac. 174; Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28.

Verification by one co-party. A verification by one co-plaintiff or co-defendant is a sufficient verification. Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Claiborne v. Castle, 98 Cal. 30; 32 Pac. 807; Butterfield v. Graves, 138 Cal. 155; 71 Pac. 510. Where there is but one defendant, and the record states that the answer was verified, it will be inferred therefrom that the verification was by such defendant. Roberts v. Eldred, 73 Cal. 394; 15 Pac. 16.

Where corporation is party. The verification of a petition by a corporation, signed by one who therein states that he is the vice-president of the corporation, is sufficient. Alvord v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 106 Cal. 574; 40 Pac. 27.

Verification by attorney. An attorney or other person can only verify by reason of the existence of one of these conditions, viz., 1. The absence of the party from the county where the attorney has his office; 2. The inability of the party, from some other cause, to verify it; and 3. That the facts are within the knowledge of the attorney or other person verifying the same; hence, under the third condition, an attorney or other person must have personal knowledge of the facts, and it follows, necessarily, that he must verify from such knowledge, and not from information and belief (Silcox v. Lang, 78 Cal. 118; 20 Pac. 297; Columbia Screw Co. v. Warner Lock Co., 138 Cal. 445; 71 Pac. 498); and the affidavit of an attorney, which does not state that the facts are within his knowledge, but merely that the facts are more fully known to him than to the defendants, is insufficient, under this third condition. Silcox v. Lang, 78 Cal. 118; 20 Pac. 297. A verification by an attorney, setting forth the fact that he is a resident of the county, and that plaintiffs are absent from such county, is sufficient to authorize the verification: it gains no additional force by the addition, that it is for that reason that it is made by the attorney. Stephens v. Parrish, 83 Cal. 561; 23 Pac. 797.

Verification at trial. Where the complaint is verified, it is not error to permit the defendant to verify his answer on the day of trial, unless it is shown that the plaintiff is thereby taken by surprise. Angier v. Masterson, 6 Cal. 61. Where the court refused to permit the answers to be verified, and struck them out without notice, when the action came to trial, more than six months after they were filed, and after depositions had been taken, there was error and an abuse of discretion. Lattimer v. Ryan, 20 Cal. 628. Where, by mistake, a copy of a verified answer was filed, and no objection was raised thereto until the close of the plaintiff's evidence, there was such an abuse of discretion in the court in refusing to permit the answer to be verified and filed as to require a reversal of the judgment. Arrington v. Tupper, 10 Cal. 464.

Who may take jurat. A county recorder, having authority to take an affidavit to be used in any court of justice, has authority to take a jurat, which is, in form and substance, an affidavit (Pfeiffer v. Riehn, 13 Cal. 643); and the district attorney, also, has authority to take a verification of the answer. Haile v. Smith, 128 Cal. 415; 60 Pac. 1032.

Pleading must be signed. By the provisions of this section, every pleading must be subscribed by the plaintiff or his attorney; hence, all pleadings must be in writing or printed: the party is precluded from making any oral pleading whatever. People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383. Thus, a stipulation, entered in the minutes, waiving the plea of the statute of limitations set up in the answer, does not amount to an amendment of the answer so as to render a finding on such issue unnecessary. Spreckels v. Ord, 72 Cal. 86; 13 Pac. 158. An attorney in fact, who is not an attorney at law, cannot sign his name to the complaint, for his principal, as "plaintiff's attorney": an action so begun is void. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570. Where the attorney's name is printed, instead of written, at the end of the complaint, the judgment is not thereby rendered void or erroneous. Hancock v. Bowman, 49 Cal. 413. Where the court allowed an attorney to insert an omitted signature to an amended complaint to which an answer had been filed, the defendant is not entitled as of right to demur or to answer anew. Smith v. Dorn, 96 Cal. 73; 30 Pac. 1024. Where an attachment was issued on a complaint, made out on a printed form, and the blanks were filled in by the clerk of the court at the request of the plaintiff, but no name was signed to it until the next day, and after other attachments were issued on the same property, when it was signed by the clerk, with the name of the plaintiff's attorney, the action of the clerk, though not correct, is merely an irregularity. Dixey v Pollock, 8 Cal. 570.

Manner and sufficiency of verification of pleading by corporation. See note Ann. Cas. 1913A, 212.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The provisions of § 2 of an act relating to pleadings in behalf of the state, or officers thereof, have been carried into the preceding section. Stats. 1864, p. 261.

1. What is a sufficient verification. Where, in ejectment, the verification to the complaint, made by one of the plaintiffs, is, that "the foregoing complaint is true of his own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated on the information and belief of the plaintiffs, and as to the matters he believes it to be true," the verification, though it does not follow the precise form of the statute, yet is sufficient, although the person making the oath does not state that he has read the complaint, or heard the complaint read, and knows the contents thereof. Copies of the pleadings and proceedings in an action in the United States circuit court, which were attached to an answer as exhibits, need no further verification than what arises from the averment in the answer, that they are such copies; no distinct verification of them is requisite; were it otherwise, the certificate of the United States circuit court is sufficient. Ely v. Frisbie, 17 Cal. 250. If the pleading does not contain a statement of any matter on information and belief, there need be no expression of belief in the affidavit as to any such matter. If he avers matters positively, the verification will be sufficient if his affidavit states that the pleading is true of his own knowledge: if he aver matter "upon information and belief," or "upon information or belief," the verification will be sufficient if his affidavit states that as to the matters thus averred he believes the pleading to be true. The mere observance of the precise letter of the statute is not required. It was not necessary that the verification should have been made by both of the plaintiffs. The affidavit of one of them was sufficient. Patterson

v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28. Attorney of plaintiff, being a notary public, may attest the verification of the complaint. Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123.

2. What is accomplished by verification. Objections to verification when made, etc. By verification of the complaint the plaintiff can require a sworn denial, and thus prevent the defendant from interposing a general denial in suits on promissory notes or bills of exchange. Brooks v. Chilton, 6 Cal. 640. Objection to the want of verification of a complaint, where the same is required by the code, must be taken either before answer or with answer. The filing of an answer is a waiver of the objection. Greenfield v. Steamer Gunnell, 6 Cal. 69. An attorney in fact, who is not an attorney at law, cannot sign his name to a complaint for his principal as "plaintiff's attorney," and an action so attempted to be commenced is void, as began without authority by an entire stranger to the plaintiff. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570; see Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192. An answer to a verified complaint must be verified, or it will be stricken out on motion, and an application for a judgment as upon default may be made at the same time; but the answer need not be verified when the defendant would be excused from testifying as a witness to the truth of any matter denied by such answer. Drum v. Whiting, 9 Cal. 422.

3. At what times verification may be made. To a complaint verified, the defendant filed a copy of the original verified answer by mistake; depositions were taken under the pleading, and subsequently went to trial. After the close of the plaintiff's evidence, his counsel then for the first time brought the mistake to the notice of the court by moving for judgment by default. Held: that the court should even then have allowed the defendant to have verified his answer. Arrington v. Tupper, 10 Cal. 464; see also Lattimer v. Ryan, 20 Cal. 628. When the complaint is verified, it is no error to allow the defendant to verify his answer before trial, unless such would act as a surprise to the plaintiff. Angier v. Masterson, 6 Cal. 61.

When an action is brought upon a written instrument, and the complaint contains a copy of such instrument, or a copy is annexed thereto, the genuineness and due execution of such instrument are deemed admitted, unless the answer denying the same be verified.

Denial of written instrument under oath. See post, § 887.

Legislation § 447. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 53, which had (1) the word "contained" instead of "contains" and (2) the words "shall be" instead of "are."

Verification of answer where action is on written instrument. The genuineness and the due execution of an instrument are regarded as admitted, where a copy of the instrument is attached to the complaint and the answer is not verified (Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569; Board of Supervisors v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66; Corcoran v. Doll, 32 Cal. 82; Burnett v. Stearns, 33 Cal. 468; Brown v. Weldon, 71 Cal. 393; 12 Pac. 280; Waldrip v. Black, 74 Cal. 409; 16 Pac. 226; Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227; Bank of Shasta v. Boyd, 99 Cal. 604; 34 Pac. 337; County Bank v. Greenberg, 127 Cal. 26; 59 Pac. 139; Hearst v. Hart, 128 Cal. 327; 60 Pac. 846; Cutten v. Pearsall, 146 Cal. 690; 81 Pac. 25); and this admission covers the whole tenor and effect of the instrument (Burnett v. Stearns, 33 Cal. 468; Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227); but, in an action against the maker of a note, the indorsement thereon is not admitted by a failure to deny it under oath. Grogan v. Ruckle, 1 Cal. 193; Youngs v. Bell, 4 Cal. 201; Hastings v. Dollarhide, 18 Cal. 390; Mahe v. Reynolds, 38 Cal. 560. The representative of the estate of a person whose signature appears on a bond sued on need not deny on oath its execution by the deceased, in order to prevent its being considered as admitted: the statute does not extend to any others than those who are alleged to have signed the instrument, who are supposed to know the genuineness of their own signatures, and it would be unreasonable to suppose that the representatives of the deceased party possess the same knowledge. Heath v. Lent, 1 Cal. 410. In an action upon a note and mortgage, the terms of the promise sought to be enforced, including the kind of money to be paid, must be ascertained and determined from an inspection and construction of the note; but where the note is set out in the complaint, and its execution is not denied in the answer, a finding upon these matters, whether it agrees or disagrees with the terms of the note, is wholly nugatory. Burnett v. Stearns, 33 Cal. 468. Where the answer fails to deny under oath the genuineness and due execution of the note of a corporation, it is not necessary to prove that the secretary and president of the corporation, who signed the same, were empowered by the corporation so to do. Smith v. Eureka Flour Mills Co., 6 Cal. 1.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The genuineness and due execution of a note, a copy of which is incorporated in the complaint, is admitted, if the answer be not verified. Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 62; 73 Am. Dec. 569; Kinney v. Osborne, 14 Cal. 113; see also Corcoran v. Doll, 32 Cal. 83; Burnett v. Stearns, 33 Cal. 473. And if a copy of a bond be set out in the complaint, an answer denying its execution must be verified, or else the execution is deemed admitted. Sacramento County v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66. In a suit brought against the maker of a promissory note, by a special indorsee, the plaintiff must prove the genuineness of the indorsement, although the defendant has not denied the same under oath. Grogan v. Ruckle, 1 Cal. 158; citing also Hardman v. Chamberlin, Morris (Iowa), 104; see also Youngs v. Bell, 4 Cal. 201. It is clear that this section does not extend to any other parties than those who are alleged to have signed the instrument. Where an instrument is alleged in the complaint to have been executed by the intestate, it is not necessary that his administrator should deny the signature of the intestate on oath. It must be proved. Heath v. Lent, 1 Cal. 410.

§ 448. When defense is founded on written instrument set out in answer, its execution admitted, unless denied by plaintiff under oath. When the defense to an action is founded on a written instrument, and a copy thereof is contained in the answer, or is annexed thereto, the genuineness and due execution of such instrument are deemed admitted, unless the plaintiff file with the clerk, within ten days after receiving a copy of the answer, an affidavit denying the same, and serve a copy thereof on the defendant.

Legislation § 448. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 54, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 702, which read: "When the defense to an action is founded on a written instrument, and a copy thereof is contained in the answer, or is annexed thereto, the genuineness and due execution of such instrument shall be deemed admitted unless the plaintiff file with the clerk, five days before the commencement of the term at which the action is to be tried, an affidavit denying the same; provided, that the due execution of the instrument shall not be deemed to be admitted by a failure to controvert the same on oath, as prescribed in this and the last preceding section, unless the party controverting the same is, upon demand, permitted to inspect the original before filing such answer." When § 448 was enacted in 1872, (1) the words "shall be" were changed to "are," and (2) the proviso was stricken out.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 301.

Execution and genuineness of instrument admitted, unless denied under oath by plaintiff. The genuineness and the due execution of an instrument, pleaded in the answer, are admitted by the failure to file an affidavit of denial. Sloan v. Diggins, 49 Cal. 38; Clark v. Child, 66 Cal. 87; 4 Pac. 1058; Rosenthal v. Merced Bank, 110 Cal. 198; 42 Pac. 640; Cordano v. Wright, 159 Cal. 610; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1044; 115 Pac. 227. The admission is, that the contract is what it purports on its face to be, and that the matters cited in it are true, and that it was executed and delivered by the parties who signed it, and in the capacity in which they appear to have acted. Sloan v. Diggins, 49 Cal. 38. By "genuineness" is meant nothing more than that the instrument is not spurious, counterfeit, or of different import, on its face, from the one executed, but that it is the identical instrument executed by the party. Moore v. Copp, 119 Cal. 429; 51 Pac. 630. An instrument is genuine which is in fact what it purports to be; and it is executed, only when the parties thereto have signed, sealed, and delivered it in the mode prescribed by law. Sloan v. Diggins, 49 Cal. 38. The execution of a written instrument includes its delivery. Clark v. Child, 66 Cal. 87; 4 Pac. 1058. It is not necessary to establish the authority of an agent or partner purporting to sign the names of the plaintiffs to the instrument. Knight v. Whitmore, 125 Cal. 198; 57 Pac. 891. The effect of the admission of the genuineness and the due execution of the instrument, pleaded by the defendant, and not denied, is to avoid the necessity of proof of its genuineness and due execution. Carpenter v. Shinners, 108 Cal. 359; 41 Pac. 473; Knight v. Whitmore, 125 Cal. 198; 57 Pac. 891; Newsom v. Woollacott, 5 Cal. App. 722; 91 Pac. 347; California Packers Co. v. Merritt Fruit Co., 6 Cal. App. 507; 92 Pac. 509. The section applies only to the parties to the instrument, and not to strangers thereto (Marx v. Raley, 6 Cal. App. 479; 92 Pac. 519); it applies to a written contract set up in the answer (Reynolds v. Pennsylvania Oil Co., 150 Cal. 629; 89 Pac. 610), and to a check set forth in the answer (Newsom v. Woollacott, 5 Cal. App. 722; 91 Pac. 347); but not to a letter, pleaded in the answer, which is merely explanatory of a previous letter. Marx v. Raley & Co., 6 Cal. App. 479; 92 Pac. 519. A release set up in the answer is admitted by a failure to deny its execution by affidavit; hence, it must be taken to be what it appears on its face to be. Peterson v. Taylor, 4 Cal. Unrep. 335; 34 Pac. 724; Crowley v. City Railroad Co., 60 Cal. 628; California Packers Co. v. Merritt Fruit Co., 6 Cal. App. 507; 92 Pac. 509; Newsom v. Woollacott, 5 Cal. App. 722; 91 Pac. 347; Clark v. Child, 66 Cal. 87; 4 Pac. 1058.

Defenses admissible on failure to deny execution. Although the genuineness and the execution of an instrument set up in the answer are deemed admitted by a failure to file an affidavit denying it, yet the plaintiff may controvert it by evidence of fraud, mistake, undue influence, compromise, payment, statute of limitations, estoppel, and like defenses; in short, he may, by evidence, controvert the instrument upon any and all grounds, other than its due execution or genuineness. Moore v. Copp, 119 Cal. 429; 51 Pac. 630; Reynolds v. Pennsylvania Oil Co., 150 Cal. 629; 89 Pac. 610. Evidence of mistake, fraud, and the like, may be given to controvert the instrument, although its genuineness and due execution are admitted. Newsom v. Woollacott, 5 Cal. App. 722; 91 Pac. 347; California Packers Co. v. Merritt Fruit Co., 6 Cal. App. 507; 92 Pac. 509. Although the plaintiff did not file an affidavit denying the genuineness and the due execution of an instrument set up in the answer, yet all other affirmative allegations thereof are deemed denied, and the burden of proof is on the defendant to establish them. Clarke v. Fast, 128 Cal. 422; 61 Pac. 72. The affidavit is not evidence, but is only a part of the pleadings (Gernon v. Sisson, 21 Cal. App. 123; 131 Pac. 85); and its terms and legal effect are to be determined from an inspection of the instrument itself (Newsom v. Woollacott, 5 Cal. App. 722; 91 Pac. 347); it stands as an exponent of the facts therein set out, to be construed by the court, and the conclusions of law are to be deduced therefrom. Carpenter v. Shinners, 108 Cal. 359; 41 Pac. 473. Although an affidavit of the plaintiff, denying the genuineness and the due execution of a note, pleaded in the answer, comes too late, yet he has the right to controvert the note by showing any other matters in confession or avoidance thereof. Myers v. Sierra Valley Stock etc. Ass'n, 122 Cal. 669; 55 Pac. 689. The failure of the plaintiff, in an action to foreclose a mortgage, to file an affidavit denying the genuineness and the due execution of a written instrument, set forth in the answer, purporting to extend the time of payment of the note secured by the mortgage, does not preclude proof by the plaintiff that the extension of time was without consideration. Brooks v. Johnson, 122 Cal. 569; 55 Pac. 423. An admission of the genuineness of a note, not purporting to have been made by the corporation defendant, does not involve an admission that it was a corporation note: it may be shown that it was not authorized by the directors, and was without consideration. Myers v. Sierra Valley etc. Ass'n, 122 Cal. 669; 55 Pac. 689. Where a copy of a deed is annexed to the answer of the defendant, and the plaintiff fails to deny it by affidavit, it is not necessary for the defendant to offer the deed in evidence. Rosenthal v. Merced Bank, 110 Cal. 198; 42 Pac. 640; Rianda v. Watsonville Water etc. Co., 152 Cal. 523; 93 Pac. 79. A will set up in an answer, which is not alleged to have been admitted to probate, is not an instrument upon which any defense or cause of action can be founded; its genuineness and due execution are not admitted by the failure of the plaintiff to deny the same by affidavit. Estate of Christensen, 135 Cal. 674; 68 Pac. 112. Where the defendant sets forth in his answer a written release as a bar to the plaintiff's cause of action, and on the trial introduces evidence showing that such release has never been delivered, he is estopped from claiming the benefit of the admission arising out of the plaintiff's failure to deny by affidavit the genuineness and the due execution of the instrument. Clark v. Child, 66 Cal. 87; 4 Pac. 1058. Where the defendant, in an action upon an alleged joint contract, set up separate contracts for the same matter, the plaintiffs, notwithstanding their failure to file the affidavit required by this section, are not precluded from proving by parol the contract alleged in the complaint. Fox v. Stockton etc. Agricultural Works, 73 Cal. 273; 15 Pac. 430.

New matter as a defense to instrument. While new matter in an answer is deemed controverted without any special replication, and the plaintiff has the right, while not denying the genuineness and the due execution of the instrument set out in the answer, to show other matters in confession or avoidance thereof, yet the court, unless he brings to its attention his purpose to offer such evidence, cannot assume that he desires to make any such defense; and where a motion is made by the defendant to dismiss a petition, on the ground of failure of the petitioner to deny the genuineness and the due execution of an instrument set out in the answer, is not opposed on the ground that the petitioner desires to show that it was not freely entered into, or for an adequate consideration, or that it was superseded by a subsequent agreement, or that its performance was waived, but was opposed on other grounds, the motion is properly granted. Estate of Garcelon, 104 Cal. 570; 43 Am. St. Rep. 134; 32 L. R. A. 595; 38 Pac. 414.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See Ely v. Frisbie, 17 Cal. 250, cited in note 1, § 446, ante.

§ 449. Exceptions to rules prescribed by two preceding sections. But the execution of the instrument mentioned in the two preceding sections, is not deemed admitted by a failure to deny the same under oath, if the party desiring to controvert the same is, upon demand, refused an inspection of the original. Such demand must be in writing, served by copy, upon the adverse party or his attorney, and filed with the papers in the case.

Inspection of writings, order for. Post, § 1000.

Legislation § 449. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on the proviso of Practice Act, § 54, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 702, which read: "Provided, that the due execution of the instrument shall not be deemed to be admitted by a failure to controvert the same on oath, as prescribed in this and the last preceding section, unless the party controverting the same is, upon demand, permitted to inspect the original before filing such answer." When enacted in 1872, § 449 constituted the first paragraph of the present section, except that the word "instrument" was then printed "instruments."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 111, adding the last sentence.

CHAPTER VII.

GENERAL RULES OF PLEADING.

§ 452. Pleadings to be liberally construed.
§ 453. Sham and irrelevant answers, etc., may be stricken out.
§ 454. How to state an account in a pleading.
§ 455. Description of real property in a pleading.
§ 456. Judgments, how pleaded.
§ 457. Conditions precedent, how to be pleaded.
§ 458. Statute of limitations, how pleaded.
§ 459. Private statutes, how pleaded.
§ 460. Libel and slander, how stated in complaint.
§ 461. Answer in such cases.
§ 462. Allegations not denied, when to be deemed true. When to be deemed controverted.
§ 463. A material allegation defined.
§ 464. Supplemental complaint and answer.
§ 465. Pleadings subsequent to complaint must be filed and served.

§ 452. Pleadings to be liberally construed. In the construction of a pleading, for the purpose of determining its effect, its allegations must be liberally construed, with a view to substantial justice between the parties.

Legislation § 452. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 70 (New York Code, § 159). When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "effect" was changed from "effects," and (2) the word "must" was changed from "shall."

Construction by the court. Pleadings must be construed by the court, as a matter of law: in no case should the construction of pleadings be left to the jury. Tevis v. Hicks, 41 Cal. 123, 127; Taylor v. Middleton, 67 Cal. 656, 657; 8 Pac. 594; 15 Morr. Min. Rep. 284; Glide v. Dwyer, 83 Cal. 477, 479; 23 Pac. 706. This section should be given a liberal construction. Williams v. Pomona Valley Hospital Ass'n, 21 Cal. App. 359; 131 Pac. 888.

Defects not affecting substantial rights. It is a maxim, that the law respects form less than substance (Civ. Code, § 3528); therefore it is the duty of the court, at every stage of the proceedings, to disregard any defect of pleading which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties. Eachus v. Los Angeles, 130 Cal. 492; 80 Am. St. Rep. 147; 62 Pac. 829; Manning v. App Consol. Gold Mining Co., 149 Cal. 35; 84 Pac. 657. A complaint is sufficient, where a substantial cause of action is alleged. Ingraham v. Lyon, 105 Cal. 254; 38 Pac. 892. Grammatical inaccuracies do not vitiate a pleading (In re Ramazzina, 110 Cal. 488; 42 Pac 970); and an allegation of a conclusion of law may be disregarded (Doyle v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 44 Cal. 264); but the pleading should show clearly and affirmatively the relief demanded. Bigelow v. Gove, 7 Cal. 133.

Pleading construed as a whole. The pleading must be construed as a whole. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 28 Cal. 673. Its sufficiency is to be determined from its general scope and tenor (Glide v. Dwyer, 83 Cal. 477; 23 Pac. 706; Bates v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 479; 29 Am. St. Rep. 133; 16 L. R. A. 745; 30 Pac. 605; Sprigg v. Barber, 122 Cal. 573; 55 Pac. 419); and every allegation is to be regarded with reference to the context. Alemany v. Petaluma, 38 Cal. 553. It is therefore not permissible to treat an isolated sentence, separated from the context and from other portions of the pleading, as an independent averment, contrary to the manifest intent of the pleader (Farish v. Coon, 40 Cal. 33); but averments contained in a paper, not a part of the pleading, although filed with it, cannot be considered in connection therewith. Kimball v. Union Water Co., 44 Cal. 173; 13 Am. Rep. 157.

Construction against pleader. Gould, in his work on Pleading, p. 141, § 169, says: "The rule is founded, not only upon the presumption that each party's statement is the most favorable to himself, of which his case will admit; but also upon the obviously reasonable principle, that it is incumbent on each pleader, in stating the ground of his action or defense, to explain himself fully and clearly; any ambiguity, uncertainty, or omission in the pleadings, must therefore be at the peril of that party in whose allegations it occurs." The pleader selects the language, and should make himself clear, and where there are two intendments, the pleading will be construed against the pleader; the rule is enforced under the reformed procedure, which requires liberality in the construction of pleadings, where the pleading is reasonably capable of two constructions, one favorable and the other unfavorable to the pleader, and where there is an omission of a fact essential to be pleaded. Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184, 198; 26 Pac. 111; Green v. Covillaud, 10 Cal. 317; 70 Am. Dec. 725; Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 393; Castro v. Clarke, 29 Cal. 11, 16; Rogers v. Shannon, 52 Cal. 99; Glide v. Dwyer, 83 Cal. 477; 23 Pac. 706; Silver Creek etc. Water Co. v. Hayes, 113 Cal. 142; 45 Pac. 191. And, in the absence of a special demurrer, where the pleading is capable of different constructions, that which the pleader gives it, or which the court finds necessary to support the action, will be adopted. Ryan v. Jaques, 103 Cal. 280; 37 Pac. 186. The rules of pleading, upon which the statement of the cause of action or defense depends, are founded upon good sense; their object is precision and brevity, which should characterize all pleadings; the pleadings ought to be so drawn that a good issue may be joined thereon, and the court be entitled to give a judgment; it was a rule of the common law, firmly established and constantly acted upon, that a pleading should be most strongly taken against its author. Estate of Wickersham, 153 Cal. 603; 96 Pac. 311; Evinger v. Moran, 14 Cal. App. 328; 112 Pac. 68. But, however, where the ambiguity has been pointed out by special demurrer, which the court has sustained, on appeal, after refusal to amend, the ambiguity and uncertainty will be resolved against the pleader. McIntyre v. Hauser, 131 Cal. 11; 63 Pac. 69. But this rule will not operate to force a construction that will lead to absurdities, if the pleading is reasonably susceptible of a different interpretation. Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176. An interpretation which gives effect is preferred to one that makes void. Civ. Code, § 3541. The interpretation must be reasonable. Civ. Code, § 3542. The rule never requires a pleader to anticipate a defense, or to negative the existence of all other facts whatsoever. Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184, 198; 26 Pac. 111; Jaffe v. Lilienthal, 86 Cal. 91; 24 Pac. 835. If, then, the allegation is not susceptible of two meanings, but the question is as to its sufficiency, it will be given the meaning the pleader places on it, if it is reasonably capable of such construction. Moore v. Moore, 56 Cal. 89. The pleading upon which a judgment is founded will be given as favorable an interpretation as its general scope will warrant (Fudickar v. East Riverside Irrigation Dist., 109 Cal. 29; 41 Pac. 1024); and defects in the pleading, consisting of facts appearing by implication only, are cured by verdict or findings necessarily implying the existence of said facts; but this rule does not apply where the findings are contrary to the inference or implication. Hildreth v. Montecito Creek Water Co., 139 Cal. 22; 72 Pac. 395. Where a defect might have been obviated by amendment, and the party proceeds to trial without objecting thereto, he cannot raise the objection for the first time upon appeal. Hill v. Haskin, 51 Cal. 175; Du Bois v. Podgham, 18 Cal. App. 298; 123 Pac. 207.

Facts not alleged will not be assumed. It is an established maxim of jurisprudence, peculiarly applicable to pleadings, that that which does not appear to exist is to be regarded as if it did not exist. Civ. Code, § 3530; Slater v. McAvoy, 123 Cal. 437; 56 Pac. 49; Hildreth v. Montecito Creek Water Co., 139 Cal. 22; 72 Pac. 395. In the construction of a pleading, nothing can be assumed in favor of the pleader which has not been averred (Cogswell v. Bull, 39 Cal. 320; Harris v. Hillegass, 54 Cal. 463; Smith v. Buttner, 90 Cal. 95; 27 Pac. 29); but, on the contrary, agreeably to the maxim just quoted, the court will assume, where a fact is not alleged, that it does not exist (Slater v. McAvoy, 123 Cal. 437, 439; 56 Pac. 49; Hildreth v. Montecito Creek Water Co., 139 Cal. 22; 72 Pac. 395), or that it occurred at a time or place or in a manner to defeat the claim of the pleader. Triscony v. Orr, 49 Cal. 612; Collins v. Townsend, 58 Cal. 608; Hays v. Steiger, 76 Cal. 555; 18 Pac. 670; People v. Wong Wang, 92 Cal. 277; 28 Pac. 270; Krause v. Sacramento, 48 Cal. 221; Benham v. Connor, 113 Cal. 168; 45 Pac. 258; Siskiyou Lumber etc. Co. v. Rostel, 121 Cal. 511, 513; 53 Pac. 1118; Lewiston Turnpike Co. v. Shasta etc. Wagon Road Co., 41 Cal. 562. No intendment can be indulged in aid of a pleading (Callahan v. Loughran, 102 Cal. 476, 482; 36 Pac. 835): whatever facts are necessary to the cause of action must be alleged, or they will be taken as having no existence (Callahan v. Loughran, 102 Cal. 476; 36 Pac. 835; Hildreth v. Montecito Creek Water Co., 139 Cal. 22; 72 Pac. 395); and it will be presumed that every fact that can be proved has been alleged. Gruwell v. Seybolt, 82 Cal. 79; 22 Pac. 938. The court cannot insert any necessary issuable facts in a pleading (Guy v. Washburn, 23 Cal. 111; Moore v. Besse, 30 Cal. 570, 572); and any inference against the pleader, plainly deducible from a failure to allege facts, must be drawn by the court. Chipman v. Emeric, 5 Cal. 49; 63 Am. Dec. 80.

General allegations controlled by those that are specific. General allegations in a pleading are controlled, limited, and modified by particular ones. Hinkley v. Field's Biscuit etc. Co., 91 Cal. 141; 27 Pac. 594; Gruwell v. Seybolt, 82 Cal. 7; 22 Pac. 938. This is in harmony with the maxim, that particular expressions qualify those that are general. Civ. Code, § 3534. But inconsistent allegations nullify one another. Dickinson v. Maguire, 9 Cal. 46.

Dilatory pleas not favored. The party making a dilatory plea relies upon technical law to defeat his adversary: he is therefore held to technical exactness in his pleading. Thompson v. Lyon, 14 Cal. 39, 42.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. All pleading is taken most strongly against the pleader (Kashaw v. Kashaw, 3 Cal. 322; Moore v. Besse, 30 Cal. 570; Green v. Covillaud, 10 Cal. 317; 70 Am. Dec. 725); but this rule does not apply where the pleader confesses his pleading is bad, and that it imperfectly and ambiguously expresses his meaning and intent, and therefore appeals to the mercy of the court to be allowed to amend it in furtherance of justice, so as to present his case more clearly. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 28 Cal. 684; see also Felch v. Beaudry, 40 Cal. 440. Nor does the rule apply when it would make the pleading absurd, if it will bear any other construction. Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176. In construing a pleading, an isolated sentence should not be taken separated from its context, and the effect of an independent averment given to it, unless from the whole pleading such appears to have been the plain intent. Farish v. Coon, 40 Cal. 33. By substantial justice is meant substantial legal justice, to be ascertained and determined by fixed rules and positive statutes, and not the abstract and varying notions of equity which may be entertained by each individual. Stevens v. Ross, 1 Cal. 98; see also Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 167.

§ 453. Sham and irrelevant answers, etc., may be stricken out. Sham and irrelevant answers, and irrelevant and redundant matter inserted in a pleading, may be stricken out, upon such terms as the court may, in its discretion, impose.

Legislation § 453. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 50, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 702, and Practice Act, § 57 (New York Code, § 160). So much of § 50 as relates to the subject read: "Sham and irrelevant answers and defenses, and so much of any pleading as may be irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial, may be stricken out, upon motion, upon such terms as the court in its discretion may impose." And § 57 read: "If irrelevant or redundant matter be inserted in a pleading, it may be stricken out by the court on motion of any person aggrieved thereby."

What is a sham answer. A sham answer is one good in form, but false in fact, and not pleaded in good faith. Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22; 70 Am. Dec. 692; Greenbaum v. Turrill, 57 Cal. 285; Gostorfs v. Taaffe, 18 Cal. 385; Wedderspoon v. Rogers, 32 Cal. 569; Continental Building etc. Ass'n v. Boggess, 145 Cal. 30, 34; 78 Pac. 245. A frivolous answer is one that denies no material averment in the complaint and sets up no defense: such an answer entitles the plaintiff to judgment on the pleadings (Hemme v. Hays, 55 Cal. 337); but where the answer is rendered evasive by a mere clerical error, a judgment on the pleadings is not warranted. Raker v. Bucher, 100 Cal. 214; 34 Pac. 654, 849. The code does not change the common-law rule in regard to striking out sham answers: an answer cannot be stricken out upon this ground, where it sets up a sufficient defense (Greenbaum v. Turrill, 57 Cal. 285); as where it traverses all the allegations of the complaint (Brooks v. Chilton, 6 Cal. 640, 642; Abbott v. Douglass, 28 Cal. 295, 297; Fay v. Cobb, 51 Cal. 313, 315), or the greater part thereof (Lybecker v. Murray, 58 Cal. 186); or even one material allegation (Bank of Shasta v. Boyd, 99 Cal. 604; 34 Pac. 337; Toland v. Toland, 123 Cal. 140; 55 Pac. 681; Oroville etc. R. R. Co. v. Supervisors, 37 Cal. 354); but where it raises an issue on immaterial matters only, it may be stricken out. Loveland v. Garner, 74 Cal. 298, 300; 15 Pac. 844. It will be seen, therefore, that it results from the cases, that it is only where a defendant, in bad faith, presents a defense which is manifestly false on its face, or where the answer denies no material allegation of the complaint, or sets up no defense, that the answer may be stricken out: the court will be liberal in the allowance of amendments, where the answer is susceptible of amendment by a statement of known facts, so as to constitute a defense. Burns v. Scoffy, 98 Cal. 271; 33 Pac. 86. A mere inconsistency between the facts alleged and those adduced at the trial does not justify the court in granting the motion to strike out; and the correctness of the order is to be tested by reference to the state of the pleadings at the time it was made. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257; 46 Am. St. Rep. 237; 39 Pac. 610. A demurrer, not being a defense, could not, under the Practice Act, be stricken out as sham (Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 560, 566); and of course it cannot, under the code, since it only authorizes the striking out of "answers," and not "defenses," as provided in § 50 of the Practice Act. See Davis v. Honey Lake Water Co., 98 Cal. 415; 33 Pac. 270. The court should strike out improper matter from the counterclaim. Bartlett Estate Co. v. Fraser, 11 Cal. App. 373; 105 Pac. 130.

Irrelevant and redundant matter. A pleading should be confined to a simple narrative of such facts as are necessary to constitute a cause of action or defense, and should state the ultimate facts only (Mitchell v. Steelman, 8 Cal. 363), and not probative facts or conclusions of law. California Raisin Growers' Ass'n v. Abbott, 160 Cal. 601; 117 Pac. 767. Irrelevant, immaterial, and evidentiary matter, having no office to fill, should not be inserted in a pleading, nor allowed to encumber the record (Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 560, 565; Eich v. Greeley, 112 Cal. 173; 44 Pac. 483; Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 414; 76 Am. Dec. 492); and such matter will be stricken out on motion (Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 572; Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 480; Bowen v. Aubrey, 22 Cal. 570; Patterson v. Keystone Mining Co., 30 Cal. 364; Bruck v. Tucker, 42 Cal. 351), as will also irrelevant matter blended with allegations of material facts (Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192); but the court is not bound to strike out matters so blended, where the adverse party is not prejudiced thereby. Sloane v. Southern California Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 668, 684; 32 L. R. A. 193; 44 Pac. 320. Words of description, such as "duly," "wrongfully," and "unlawfully," which tender no issue, and detract from the directness and simplicity of a pleading, will also be stricken out (Miles v. McDermott, 31 Cal. 271), as well as all surplusage (Wheeler v. West, 78 Cal. 95; 20 Pac. 45; Warner v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 9 Cal. 736; Mitchell v. Steelman, 8 Cal. 369; Mora v. Le Roy, 58 Cal. 10; Millan v. Hood, 3 Cal. Unrep. 548; 30 Pac. 1107), and irrelevant matter, not constituting a cause of action or defense (Boggs v. Clark, 37 Cal. 236; Bates v. Sierra Nevada etc. Mining Co., 18 Cal. 171; Weimer v. Lowery, 11 Cal. 104; Silcox v. Lang, 78 Cal. 118; 20 Pac. 297; Barkly v. Copeland, 74 Cal. 1; 5 Am. St. Rep. 413; 15 Pac. 307), and matter of inducement, which adds nothing to the sufficiency of the pleading (Henke v. Eureka Endowment Ass'n, 100 Cal. 429; 34 Pac. 1089; Bremner

v. Leavitt, 109 Cal. 130; 41 Pac. 859); but facts which constitute a necessary part of the pleading, although defectively stated, cannot be reached by the motion. Jackson v. Lebar, 53 Cal. 255; Swain v. Burnette, 76 Cal. 303; 18 Pac. 394; Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257; 46 Am. St. Rep. 237; 39 Pac. 610; McDermont v. Anaheim Union Water Co., 124 Cal. 112; 56 Pac. 779. The matter to be stricken out must be redundant and irrelevant as to the pleading in which it occurs, not as to a cause of action or defense stated in another pleading. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 28 Cal. 673.

Necessity and sufficiency of motion to strike out. Where the facts alleged in a pleading are redundant, the proper remedy is a motion to strike out, and not by demurrer. Henke v. Eureka Endowment Ass'n, 100 Cal. 429; 34 Pac. 1089; Mitchell v. Steelman, 8 Cal. 363. The motion should be specific, and clearly point out the particular matters objected to. People v. Empire Gold etc. Mining Co., 33 Cal. 171. It must not be directed against the whole pleading, but against particular words, clauses, sentences, and allegations. Continental Building etc. Ass'n v. Boggess, 145 Cal. 30; 78 Pac. 245. The court cannot strike out matter of its own motion. Curtis v. Sprague, 41 Cal. 59.

Motion to strike out answer, and hearing thereon. The motion must be made upon notice. Arata v. Tellurium etc. Mining Co., 65 Cal. 340; 4 Pac. 195. If made upon uncontroverted affidavits showing the falsity of the plea and the bad faith of the defendant, it will be stricken out, but where the defendant supports his plea by an affidavit, stating specifically his grounds, he cannot, as a general rule, be deprived of a trial in the ordinary mode. Gostorfs v. Taaffe, 18 Cal. 385. The court cannot dispose of the defendant's answer in a summary way, nor inquire, in advance of the trial, as to the good faith of the defendant in pleading his defense. Fay v. Cobb, 51 Cal. 313. Under no possible circumstances can the court hear oral testimony on the issue of the falsity of the plea, in advance of the trial. Abbott v. Douglass, 28 Cal. 295. The true rule seems to be, that the answer must appear to be sham on its face (Sweetman v. Ramsey, 22 Mont. 323; 56 Pac. 361), or by reference to some matter dehors the record, of which the court may take judicial notice. Edson v. Dillaye, 8 How. Pr. 273; 1 Bac. Abr. 32. All objections to the allegations on the ground that they are sham and irrelevant are waived by introducing evidence. Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152; Silvarer v. Hansen, 77 Cal. 579; 20 Pac. 136. Where the name of the attorney of record appears at the foot of an answer, in connection with the name of other counsel, the court, on motion to strike out the answer, will not try the question whether the signature is genuine, or was put there by associate counsel without any express authority. Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192. The action of the court will not be disturbed, except for an abuse of discretion. Clapp v. Vatcher, 9 Cal. App. 462; 99 Pac. 549. A counterclaim cannot be stricken out without notice to the defendant. Curtis v. Sprague, 41 Cal. 55. The correctness of an order striking a special defense from the original answer is to be tested by reference to the state of the pleadings at the time the order was made; and it cannot be supported upon the ground that the defendant subsequently amended his answer by setting up an inconsistent defense: the question is, whether the facts as pleaded would constitute a defense to the cause of action stated in the complaint. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257; 46 Am. St. Rep. 237; 39 Pac. 610.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Sham answers. See particularly Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 27; 70 Am. Dec. 692, commented on in note 42 to § 437, ante. A sham answer, said the court, in Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 27, 70 Am. Dec. 692, was one good in form, but false in fact, and not pleaded in good faith. The same definition, substantially, was given by the court of appeals of New York in the case of the People v. McCumber, 18 N. Y. 315; 72 Am. Dec. 515. It was suggested, however, that the power to strike out should be carefully exercised, and not extended beyond its just limits. "It is a power," said the court, "simply to inquire whether there is in fact any question to be tried, and if there is not, but the defense is a plain fiction, to strike out the fictitious defense. Where a defendant, on a motion to strike out his defense as sham, supports it by an affidavit, stating specially its grounds, he cannot, as a general rule, be deprived of a trial in the ordinary mode—a case for striking out does not exist." Whether the statute applies to any but affirmative defenses, it is unnecessary to determine; but there is no doubt that where affirmative matter is falsely pleaded for the purpose of delay, it should be stricken out. If the defense, however, be bona fide, the affidavit of the defendant to that effect will be a sufficient answer to any attempt to strike it out. Gastorfs v. Taaffe, 18 Cal. 387. When the plaintiff claims that all the denials are bad, if the answer contains no new matter, he may test the sufficiency of the denials by a motion for judgment upon the pleadings, or by motion to strike out the answer, on the ground that it is sham. If some of the denials are deemed good and the others bad, he may move to strike out the latter. This course is authorized under this section. Answers consisting of denials which do not explicitly traverse the material allegations of the complaint, we hold to be so far sham and irrelevant, within the meaning of the statute. People v. McCumber, 18 N. Y. 315; 72 Am. Dec. 515; Gay v. Winter, 34 Cal. 161.

2. Immaterial, redundant, or irrelevant matter. All redundant, immaterial, or irrelevant matter should be stricken out. Bowen v. Aubrey, 22 Cal. 566; Guy v. Washburn, 23 Cal. 111; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192; Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 561; Felch v. Beaudry, 40 Cal. 440.

3. Frivolous defense. An answer by the payor of a note, that the plaintiff is not the lawful owner or holder of the instrument sued on, when upon its face it runs to him, and which discloses no issuable fact in support of such denial, is simply frivolous. Felch v. Beaudry, 40 Cal. 440. See further sections of this code, relating to complaint, answer, and demurrer.

§ 454. How to state an account in a pleading. It is not necessary for a party to set forth in a pleading the items of an account therein alleged, but he must deliver to the adverse party, within five days after a demand thereof in writing, a copy of the account, or be precluded from giving evidence thereof. The court or judge thereof may order a further account when the one delivered is too general, or is defective in any particular.

Exhibiting original account, and delivering copy to adverse party. See post, § 886.

Legislation § 454. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 56 (New York Code, § 158). When enacted in 1872, (1) in first line, the words "is not" were changed from "shall not be," and (2) the word "must," before "deliver," was changed from "shall."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 2.

Purpose and effect of bill of particulars. The object of the bill of particulars is to amplify the pleadings and apprise the adverse party of the specific demand against him. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371; Ames v. Bell, 5 Cal. App. 1; 89 Pac. 619. The effect of the bill is to restrict the evidence and limit the recovery to the matters set forth therein. Ames v. Bell, 5 Cal. App. 1; 89 Pac. 619; Edelman v. McDonell, 126 Cal. 210; 58 Pac. 528. It becomes a part of the pleading of the party, and he must recover, if at all, on the cause therein stated. Chapman v. Bent, 6 Cal. Unrep. 740; 65 Pac. 959. A defendant can ascertain the items of a claim, under this section. Donegan v. Houston, 5 Cal. App. 626; 90 Pac. 1073. A demand for a copy of the account is the only remedy of a party, who is dissatisfied with the general allegation of indebtedness in the pleading of his adversary. Wise v. Hogan, 77 Cal. 184; 19 Pac. 278; Burns v. Cushing, 96 Cal. 669; 31 Pac. 1124; Rogers v. Duff, 97 Cal. 66; 31 Pac. 836; Farwell v. Murray, 104 Cal. 464; 38 Pac. 199; Pleasant v. Samuels, 114 Cal. 34; 45 Pac. 998; McFarland v. Holcomb, 123 Cal. 84; 55 Pac. 761; Jewell v. Colonial Theater Co., 12 Cal. App. 681; 108 Pac. 527; Aydelotte v. Bloom, 13 Cal. App. 56; 108 Pac. 877. If no bill of particulars is demanded, each item of the account may be proved under the general allegation of the pleading. Knight v. Russ, 77 Cal. 410; 19 Pac. 698; Burns v. Cushing, 96 Cal. 669; 31 Pac. 1124; Tompkins v. Mahoney, 32 Cal. 231; McFarland v. Holcomb, 123 Cal. 84; 55 Pac. 761. In an action for legal services, a bill of particulars may be demanded, though the complaint is not subject to special demurrer for ambiguity and uncertainty. Burns v. Cushing, 96 Cal. 669; 31 Pac. 1124. In an action for services and traveling expenses, any uncertainty as to the sum claimed for either item may be cured by a bill of particulars. Jewell v. Colonial Theater Co., 12 Cal. App. 681; 108 Pac. 527. A mistake in the items of the account, discovered at the trial, does not preclude the party from giving evidence thereof, as the truth of the items is the very point at issue: it is only where the party refuses to furnish any account, after demand in writing, that he is precluded from giving evidence thereof. Graham v. Harmon, 84 Cal. 181; 23 Pac. 1097. This section is applicable to a claim for an aggregate amount for labor done and materials furnished for the construction of a vessel. Jensen v. Dorr, 159 Cal. 742; 116 Pac. 553.

Bill of particulars of account stated. In an action upon a stated account, a party is not authorized, under this section, to demand a bill of particulars of the items of the original account upon which the stated account is based: the stated account is a new contract, and the items of the original account are merged therein (Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; 15 Pac. 371); but the party is entitled to a copy of the alleged stated account. Coffee v. Williams, 103 Cal. 550; 37 Pac. 504. A complaint in the form of a common count for goods sold and delivered, is sufficient as a statement of a cause of action: the defendant may always exact his statement of the particulars of the account. Salinas Valley Lumber Co. v. Magne-Silica Co., 159 Cal. 182; 112 Pac. 1089.

Further account on order of court. If the bill of particulars is too general, the party cannot ignore it, but should ask for a further account (Providence Tool Co. v. Prader, 32 Cal. 634; 91 Am. Dec. 598); and, when furnished, it supersedes the other. Ames v. Bell, 5 Cal. App. 1; 89 Pac. 619. When the account furnished is adjudged defective, and the court or judge orders a further account, the order must state the particulars in reference to which a further specification is required. Conner v. Hutchinson, 17 Cal. 279. If the bill of particulars furnished under such order is not satisfactory to the party, and he intends to object to the introduction of evidence on the subject, he must obtain an order, previous to the trial, to exclude such evidence. Conner v. Hutchinson, 17 Cal. 279; McCarthy v. Mount Tecarte Land etc. Co., 110 Cal. 687; 43 Pac. 391. An amended bill of particulars may include items of a general account for services not specifically mentioned in previous bills. Ames v. Bell, 5 Cal. App. 1; 89 Pac. 619. Where the court, of its own motion, orders a further account, it cannot preclude the party from giving evidence, because of his failure so to furnish a further account. Hart v. Speet, 62 Cal. 187.

Waiver of objection to bill of particulars. Objection to a bill of particulars may be waived by delay (Ames v. Bell, 5 Cal. App. 1; 89 Pac. 619); and there is a waiver, by a failure to object to the form or substance of the account furnished, until the commencement of the trial. Dennison v. Smith, 1 Cal. 437. Where a bill of particulars is not so complete as the defendant desires, or is objectionable in any respect, he waives his right to have the plaintiff precluded from giving evidence thereof, if he fails to ask for a further account, or to make any objection to the one delivered. Union Lumber Co. v. Morgan, 162 Cal. 722; 124 Pac. 228.

Amendment of bill of particulars. See note 51 Am. St. Rep. 421.

Bill of particulars in negligence cases. See note 3 Ann. Cas. 161.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The objection that a bill of particulars is not properly verified by the oath of the party comes too late upon the trial. If the bill is not satisfactory to the defendant, either because it is defective in form or in substance, or because it is not verified by the plaintiff, he should immediately return it, or move the court for a further amended bill. Dennison v. Smith, 1 Cal. 437; see also Providence Tool Co. v. Prader, 32 Cal. 634; 91 Am. Dec. 598; Conner v. Hutchinson, 17 Cal. 280. In an action upon a note, defendant, in general terms, without items, set up an account for work and labor, and for money paid, etc. Plaintiff asked for a copy of the account, which was furnished by defendant. Plaintiff gave notice that he would move the court "for a further account of particulars," etc.; and on hearing, the court ordered the same, which defendant supplied. On the trial, plaintiff offered his note, and rested. Defendant offered evidence of the account set up in the answer, to which plaintiff objected, on the ground that "defendant had not furnished an additional bill of particulars," and the court ruled out the evidence. This was an erroneous ruling: first, because the order for a further account was defective, in not stating the particulars, in reference to which a further specification was required; and second, if the bill of particulars, delivered under the order of the court, was not satisfactory, and plaintiff intended to object to any evidence upon the subject, he should have obtained, previous to the trial, an order excluding such evidence. Where a copy of the account sued on, or set forth in the answer, is called for under this section of the code, the items of the account furnished must be stated with as much particularity as the nature of the case admits of; but the law does not require impossibilities; and if the party gives the items as definitely as he can, he does not forfeit his rights because of his inability to comply with a further demand for particulars. Conner v. Hutchinson, 17 Cal. 280. Where the complaint set forth the bill of sale in its precise words, it was held not to be defective in the description of the quantity of the goods sold. A party must be presumed to know what was intended by his own account. Cochran v. Goodman, 3 Cal. 244. If, in an action to recover a certain amount due for legal services, the complaint is in general terms, and the defendant asks for and receives a bill of particulars, he can make no objection to admitting evidence under it. Tompkins v. Mahoney, 32 Cal. 231.

§ 455. Description of real property in a pleading.

In an action for the recovery of real property, it must be described in the complaint with such certainty as to enable an officer, upon execution, to identify it.

Legislation § 455. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 58, which read: "In an action for the recovery of real property, such property shall be described, with its metes and bounds, in the complaint."

Sufficiency of description of realty. A description by name may be sufficient, where the land is known by a particular name. Hildreth v. White, 66 Cal. 549; 6 Pac. 454. A description of land by name is as good as one by metes and bounds, if it can be rendered certain by evidence; and the fact that the Spanish name of property, when translated into English, is meaningless, does not alter or affect its descriptive quality. Castro v. Gill, 5 Cal. 40; People v. Leet, 23 Cal. 161; Phelan v. Poyoreno, 74 Cal. 448; 13 Pac. 681; 16 Pac. 241. A description is sufficient, where a ranch is designated by name, with the statement that it is bounded by certain misións, and contains six square leagues. More v. Del Valle, 28 Cal. 170. The description of land in a complaint, as being in a certain township, county, and state, and bounded on one side by a certain avenue, and on the other side by the land of a certain person, and on the other two sides by a certain creek, is sufficient. Hihn v. Mangenberg, 89 Cal. 268; 26 Pac. 968; Lawrence v. Davidson, 44 Cal. 177. A description calling for a definite starting-point, the first line being a given distance therefrom to a station fence-post, and all the other lines being described by courses, distances, and monuments, is sufficient. Muir v. Meredith, 82 Cal. 19; 22 Pac. 1080. Where the starting-point in a description is sufficiently definite and certain, and there can be but one such point, this is sufficient, as against an objection that the starting-point is not given. Sherman v. McCarthy, 57 Cal. 507. Where, in the complaint, the lot and block numbers are given, and reference is made to a certain plat of the town, and the street names and distances are given, but reference is made to the caption of the complaint for the name of the county, there is a sufficient description of the premises, and the county is sufficiently indicated. Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432. Where the complaint gives the name of the county where suit is brought, but fails to mention the state, there is no fatal defect. More v. Del Valle, 28 Cal. 170. A description of the premises as being in a certain county and state, giving the number of acres, the commonly known name of the property, and also the distance in a certain direction from a named town, is sufficient. Whitney v. Buckman, 19 Cal.

300. The sufficiency of the description of the premises is a question of fact for the court or jury to determine, where the description does not appear, on the face of the complaint, to be insufficient. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467. A description giving the starting-point as a certain distance from a government base line, thence east a given distance, thence south to a certain point, thence west to the source of a certain creek, and down said creek to place of beginning, is sufficient. Carpentier v. Grant, 21 Cal. 140. In actions before justices of the peace, strictness of description is not required; and the identification is sufficient, where the premises are described as a tract of land in a certain county, ten miles from a certain town, of a given number of acres, known as part of a certain ranch, on the west side of and bordering a certain creek, and opposite the premises of a certain person. Hernandez v. Simon, 4 Cal. 182.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section formerly was as follows: "In an action for the recovery of real property, such property shall be described, with its metes and bounds, in the complaint." Foreclosure suits were not controlled by this section (Emeric v. Tams, 6 Cal. 156); and under this section as it then stood, it was held that a complaint describing land by a certain name was as good a description as one by metes and bounds, if it can be rendered sufficiently certain by evidence. Castro v. Gill, 5 Cal. 40; Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 148; see also Doll v. Fellers, 16 Cal. 432; Whitney v. Buckman, 19 Cal. 300; Paul v. Silver, 16 Cal. 73; Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411; 76 Am. Dec. 492; Grady v. Early, 18 Cal. 108; Carpentier v. Grant, 21 Cal. 140; Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468. The language of the section, as it now stands, seems to express the general intent of the decisions of our supreme court. For description of real property, see Piercy v. Crandall, 34 Cal. 344.

§ 456. Judgments, how pleaded. In pleading a judgment or other determination of a court, officer, or board, it is not necessary to state the facts conferring jurisdiction, but such judgment or determination may be stated to have been duly given or made. If such allegation be controverted, the party pleading must establish on the trial the facts conferring jurisdiction.

Judgment as an estoppel. See post, § 1908.

Legislation § 456. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 59 (New York Code, § 161). When enacted in 1872, (1) the words "court, officer, or board, it is not" were changed from "court or officer of especial jurisdiction, it shall not be," and (2) the word "must" was changed from "shall be bound to."

Jurisdiction of a superior court. A general averment of the jurisdiction of the court that rendered judgment is sufficient (Murdock v. Brooks, 38 Cal. 596), and implies all things essential to jurisdiction. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Boyd, 155 Cal. 193; 100 Pac. 239. An allegation, that the plaintiff recovered judgment in the superior court is sufficient. McCutcheon v. Weston, 65 Cal. 37; 2 Pac. 727; Campe v. Lassen, 67 Cal. 139; 7 Pac. 430; Weller v. Dickinson, 93 Cal. 108; 28 Pac. 854; High v. Bank of Commerce, 95 Cal. 386; 29 Am. St. Rep. 121; 30 Pac. 556. An allegation, that the court "adjudged" that the defendant "should pay" to the plaintiff a certain sum, is not a sufficient allegation that the judgment was duly given. Edwards v. Hellings, 99 Cal. 214; 33 Pac. 799. An allegation that an appeal was dismissed by the superior court, if not complying with this section, is cured by an allegation in the answer, that the court made an order that the appeal be dismissed, which said judgment was duly made, duly rendered, and duly given. Moffat v. Greenwalt, 90 Cal. 368; 27 Pac. 296.

Appointment of assignees and receivers. The appointment of an assignee in insolvency is sufficiently alleged by an averment that he was appointed by an order of the proper court "duly given and made." Bull v. Houghton, 65 Cal. 422; 4 Pac. 529. An allegation, that the court duly gave and made an order appointing an assignee on the return-day of notice to the creditors, and a finding that the order was duly given and made, constitute a sufficient averment and finding. Pomeroy v. Gregory, 66 Cal. 572; 6 Pac. 492. An allegation, that the court, by its order duly given, made, and entered, discharged an assignee from all further duty as such, and by another order, then duly given, made, and entered, appointed another assignee, is sufficient to allege jurisdiction to appoint another assignee. Freeman v. Spencer, 128 Cal. 394; 60 Pac. 979. An allegation that the order appointing a receiver was duly made, is equivalent to an allegation that all jurisdictional prerequisites to the appointment existed. Title Insurance etc. Co. v. Grider, 152 Cal. 746; 94 Pac. 601.

Jurisdiction of a probate court. The jurisdiction of a probate court need not be alleged in pleading a judgment of such court, but the judgment may be stated to have been duly given and made. Beans v. Emanuelli, 36 Cal. 117; Wise v. Hogan, 77 Cal. 184; 19 Pac. 278; Smith v. Andrews, 6 Cal. 652. The jurisdiction of the superior court to appoint administrators and executors need not be alleged. Collins v. O'Laverty, 136 Cal. 31; 68 Pac. 327; Judah v. Fredericks, 57 Cal. 389. A defective allegation, that the plaintiff, by order and decree of the court, was duly appointed administrator, and duly qualified as such, is cured by admissions and averments in the answer, recognizing the representative character of the plaintiff as administrator. Kreling v. Kreling, 118 Cal. 413; 50 Pac. 546. An allegation, that letters of administration were issued by the superior court to the plaintiff, who duly qualified as administrator, is a sufficient averment of the representative capacity of the plaintiff. McCutcheon v. Weston, 65 Cal. 37; 2 Pac. 727. A complaint averring that a will had been duly probated by the superior court of the county where the deceased resided and owned property at the time of his decease, is a sufficient allegation that the will was admitted to probate by the judgment of the superior court: if the judgment admitting the will to probate is pleaded at all, the adverb "duly" is all that is required. Riddell v. Harrell, 71 Cal. 254; 12 Pac. 67.

Jurisdiction of a justice of the peace. The jurisdiction of a justice of the peace must be affirmatively shown by a party asserting a right under a judgment by such justice. Swain v. Chase, 12 Cal. 283; Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321. An allegation, in an answer, that a judgment given by a justice of the peace was "duly rendered," is not sufficient: that term is not equivalent to "given or made." Young v. Wright, 52 Cal. 407.

Jurisdiction of a mayor. An allegation, in an action to recover moneys from a city treasurer, that "an order was made and entered by the mayor," removing the defendant from office, is sufficient. Los Angeles v. Mellus, 59 Cal. 444.

Jurisdiction of a city council. An allegation, that a city council "duly passed and adopted" an ordinance, is sufficient (Los Angeles v. Waldron, 65 Cal. 283; 3 Pac. 890); as is also an allegation that a city council duly made and gave its determination to order certain work done (Pacific Paving Co. v. Bolton, 97 Cal. 8; 31 Pac. 625), and an allegation, in an action to enforce the lien of a street assessment, that all the several acts required to be done by said city council, and by said superintendent of streets, has been duly done, made, and performed, in the manner and at the times and in the form required by law, is sufficient. Bituminous Lime Rock etc. Co. v. Fulton, 4 Cal. Unrep. 151, 33 Pac. 1117. Though a complaint alleges that the common council "duly gave and made" its order and resolution ordering certain work to be done, any legal intendment following such allegation is rendered ineffectual by the pleading of a resolution of intention showing that the council never acquired jurisdiction. Crouse v. Barrows, 156 Cal. 154; 103 Pac. 894.

Jurisdiction of a board of supervisors. An allegation that a board of supervisors duly made and passed a resolution of intention to make a street improvement, is sufficient. Buckman v. Hatch, 139 Cal. 53; 72 Pac. 445. An allegation that a contract was signed by the chairman of the board of supervisors, under the authority of the board, and was executed in pursuance of its orders and determinations in that behalf, duly given and made, is sufficient. Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488. An allegation that a board of supervisors duly declared an irrigation district duly organized, is not an averment of the fact or acts required by the legislature to confer jurisdiction on the board, or to constitute the organization of the irrigation district, nor is it an averment that the order, resolution, or declaration of the board of supervisors had been duly given or made. Decker v. Perry, 4 Cal. Unrep. 488; 35 Pac. 1017. An allegation that a board of supervisors duly made and passed a resolution setting aside an assessment for street improvement, and directing the superintendent to issue a new one, is a statement, in legal effect, that everything necessary to be done to give the resolution validity had been done. Williams v. Bergin, 127 Cal. 578; 60 Pac. 164. It is sufficient to aver, substantially, that an order granting a franchise was duly given or made. Gurnsey v. Northern California Power Co., 7 Cal. App. 534; 94 Pac. 858. Although an ordinance is pleaded by implication it is good against a general demurrer. Gurnsey v. Northern California Powder Co., 7 Cal. App. 534; 94 Pac. 858; Lane v. Williams, 156 Cal. 269; 104 Pac. 301.

Pleading of judgments of justices and other inferior officers. See note 27 Am. Dec. 144.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. In this case the certificate states that A. W. Bradford is surrogate of the city and county of New York, and acting clerk of the surrogate's court; that he has compared the transcript of the papers with the original records in the matter of the estate of William Young, and finds the same to be correct, and a true copy of all the proceedings; and that the certificate is in due form of law—in testimony whereof he sets his hand and affixes his seal of office. We do not see what more could be required to authenticate to us the records which the officer certifies. If the papers show upon their face the jurisdiction of the court, it is not necessary that the complaint should aver this jurisdiction; and if it were, then the defect should have been noticed by demurrer, not by motion to exclude, or objection to the admissibility of the transcript. Here it seems the surrogate is judge and clerk of the court. This being so, it was only necessary that the certificate should state the main facts which are made necessary by the acts of Congress to the authentication of the records of a court which has both judge and clerk. Low v. Burrows, 12 Cal. 188. In an action on a note, the answer alleged the discharge in insolvency of defendant. Plaintiff demurred to the answer, on the ground that it did not allege that the note was described, set forth, and included in defendant's schedule. It was decided that, under this section of the code, it was sufficient to allege in the answer that a judgment had been duly rendered, discharging defendant from the demand sued on; and that whether the demand was sufficiently described was matter of evidence, to be determined on the trial, by inspection of the record. Hanscom v. Tower, 17 Cal. 521.

2. Judgments of justices' courts. A person asserting a right under the judgment of a justice must affirmatively show every fact necessary to confer such jurisdiction. Swain v. Chase, 12 Cal. 283.

3. Judgment of a probate court. Where a judgment of the probate court is pleaded, it is unnecessary to allege the facts conferring jurisdiction, but the judgment may be stated to have been duly rendered. Beans v. Emanuelli, 36 Cal. 117.

4. Judgment of a board. The words "or board" are an addition to the old section. See Himmelman v. Danos, 35 Cal. 448. It was held that a complaint to recover an assessment on a lot in San Francisco for street improvements should show, either by general or special averment, a compliance, by the board of supervisors, with all the steps prescribed by statute to confer jurisdiction upon the board. Himmelman v. Danos, 35 Cal. 448.

§ 457. Conditions precedent, how to be pleaded. In pleading the performance of conditions precedent in a contract, it is not necessary to state the facts showing such performance, but it may be stated generally that the party duly performed all the conditions on his part, and if such allegation be controverted, the party pleading must establish, on the trial, the facts showing such performance.

Conditions precedent. See Civ. Code, §§ 1436 et seq.

Legislation § 457. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 60 (New York Code, § 162), which (1) had the words "shall not be," instead of "is," before the words "not necessary," and (2) the word "shall," instead of "must," before "establish."

General allegation of performance. An allegation, that the plaintiff did all the work in said contract mentioned, and duly performed, on his part, in every respect, the said work, according to the specifications and terms of the contract, sufficiently avers performance: it is not a statutory averment of performance of conditions precedent. California Improvement Co. v. Reynolds, 123 Cal. 88; 55 Pac. 802; City Street Improvement Co. v. Marysville, 155 Cal. 419; 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 317; 101 Pac. 308. An allegation, that the plaintiff has fully performed, on his part, all the covenants of the contract, is sufficiently explicit (California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258; 65 Am. Dec. 511); and an allegation, that the defendant duly performed all the conditions of the contract on his part to be kept and performed, is sufficient (Griffiths v. Henderson, 49 Cal. 566); as is also an allegation that the plaintiff has performed all and singular his agreements and covenants with the defendant (Moritz v. Lavelle, 77 Cal. 10; 11 Am. St. Rep. 229; 18 Pac. 803); and an averment that the plaintiff has duly performed all of the conditions of said contract to be performed by him to this time. Smith v. Mohn, 87 Cal. 489; 25 Pac. 696. Certain conditions subsequent, the non-performance thereof, matters of defense, and certain negative prohibited acts, need not be pleaded by the plaintiff; but the rule does not extend to the essence of the cause of action. Arnold v. American Ins. Co., 148 Cal. 660; 84 Pac. 182. A complaint that avers a full performance of the contract, is sufficient, in the absence of a special demurrer for uncertainty. Wyman v. Hooker, 2 Cal. App. 36; 83 Pac. 79. It is not necessary to plead specially the facts constituting an estoppel. City Street Improvement Co. v. Marysville, 155 Cal. 419; 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 317; 101 Pac. 308. This section applies to building contracts. Needham v. Chandler, 8 Cal. App. 124; 96 Pac. 325.

Conditions precedent. Conditions precedent must be pleaded in all cases, excepting those arising out of contract. People v. Holladay, 25 Cal. 300; Cavillaud v. Yale, 3 Cal. 108; 58 Am. Dec. 388; Rogers v. Cody, 8 Cal. 324; Kelly v. Mack, 45 Cal. 303; Laffey v. Kaufman, 134 Cal. 391; 86 Am. St. Rep. 283; 66 Pac. 471. No obligation of a contract is regarded as a condition precedent, unless made so by the express terms of the contract, or by necessary implication; whether the condition is precedent or otherwise, the breach of it does not constitute a defense. Redpath v. Evening Express Co., 4 Cal. App. 361; 88 Pac. 287.

Demand for deed. A vendee is not required to allege demand for a deed from vendor, before commencing suit to recover damages for breach of contract to convey land. Gray v. Dougherty, 25 Cal. 266. An answer alleging a demand, and also alleging that the defendants have duly performed all the requirements of said deed of trust and agreement on their part to be performed as a condition precedent to the sale of the land, is sufficient, as against an objection that no demand in writing is alleged. Meetz v. Mohr, 141 Cal. 667; 75 Pac. 298.

Performance of conditions of policy. An allegation, that all the conditions of said policy were duly performed and kept by the plaintiff, is sufficient (Blasingame v. Home Insurance Co., 75 Cal. 633; 17 Pac. 925); as is also an allegation that the plaintiffs have duly complied with all the terms and conditions of said insurance policy by them to be kept or performed. Richards v. Travelers Ins. Co., 89 Cal. 170; 23 Am. St. Rep. 455; 26 Pac. 762. The plaintiff is required, in his complaint, only to aver the performance of the prescribed conditions; but in case of a promissory warranty that he will do something, an averment of such stipulation, and of its performance, is required. Cowan v. Phenix Ins. Co., 78 Cal. 181; 20 Pac. 408; and see Breedlove v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc., 124 Cal. 164; 56 Pac. 770; Gillon v. Northern Assurance Co., 127 Cal. 480; 59 Pac. 901. Where the policy provided for the production of a certificate of a magistrate, notary, or commissioner, stating that he has examined the circumstances attending the loss, etc., an allegation that the plaintiff has duly fulfilled all the conditions of such insurance on his part is sufficient. Ferrer v. Home Mutual Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416. A waiver of payment of premium is admissible, under the general allegation of performance of conditions. Berliner v. Travelers Ins. Co., 121 Cal. 451; 53 Pac. 922. In an action on a policy insuring a building while occupied as a dwelling-house, a failure to allege that the loss occurred while the building was so occupied is fatal (Allen v. Home Insurance Co., 133 Cal. 29; 65 Pac. 138): the allegation of such fact is of the essence of the right to recover, and is not merely a condition precedent. Raulet v. Northwestern National Ins. Co., 157 Cal. 213; 107 Pac. 292.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the action is on an executory contract, and each party has something to perform before the other can be placed entirely in default, the party seeking to enforce it against the other must aver in his complaint a performance or tender of performance, or a readiness to perform, on his part. Barron v. Frink, 30 Cal. 486; see Mickle v. Sanchez, 1 Cal. 200. An averment that the plaintiff has fully performed, on his part, all conditions of the contract, is an allegation of performance sufficiently explicit under this section. California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258; 65 Am. Dec. 511. A general allegation of the performance of conditions precedent, is sufficient in cases of contract, but, in all other cases, the facts showing a performance must be specially pleaded. If an act of the legislature prescribes conditions precedent on the performance of which title to land may be recovered, in pleading such title a performance of all the acts required under the law must be averred. People v. Jackson, 24 Cal. 630; see also, generally, Bensley v. Atwill, 12 Cal. 231; Gibbons v. Scott, 15 Cal. 284; Himmelman v. Danos, 35 Cal. 448. The performance of all conditions which are precedent to the liability of the defendant, whether founded upon a contract or a statute, must be alleged in some form, either general or special. In actions upon contracts, a general allegation of performance of conditions precedent is under this section (§ 457) of the code sufficient. But a general allegation of performance of conditions prescribed by a statute has not been so declared, and is not, therefore, sufficient. Himmelman v. Danos, 35 Cal. 448; citing the cases of Dye v. Dye, 11 Cal. 163; People v. Jackson, 24 Cal. 630.

§ 458. Statute of limitations, how pleaded. In pleading the statute of limitations it is not necessary to state the facts showing the defense, but it may be stated generally that the cause of action is barred by the provisions of section —— (giving the number of the section and subdivision thereof, if it is so divided, relied upon) of the Code of Civil Proeedure; and if such allegation be controverted, the party pleading must establish, on the trial, the facts showing that the cause of action is so barred.

Legislation § 458. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Reference to section of statute of limitations. Setting up the statute of limitations by reference to sections of this code, is a sufficient pleading of a prescriptive right. Alhambra Addition Water Co. v. Richardson, 72 Cal. 598; 14 Pac. 379; Churchill v. Louie, 135 Cal. 608; 67 Pac. 1052. The statute of limitations is sufficiently pleaded by reference, in the answer, to the sections of the code. Packard v. Johnson, 2 Cal. Unrep. 365; 4 Pac. 632; Alhambra Addition Water Co. v. Richardson, 72 Cal. 598; 14 Pac. 379; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431; Allen v. Allen, 95 Cal. 184; 16 L. R. A. 646; 30 Pac. 213. The defense of the statute of limitations may, under this section, be pleaded by a mere reference to the sections pleaded: it is not necessary to state the facts. Lillis v. People's Ditch Co., 3 Cal. Unrep. 494; 29 Pac. 780; Churchill v. Woodworth, 148 Cal. 669; 113 Am. St. Rep. 324; 84 Pac. 155. By the averment that the action is barred by the provisions of a designated section of the code, the statute is sufficiently pleaded. Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 157 Cal. 192; 21 Ann. Cas. 1279; 106 Pac. 715. A plea of the statute of limitations, alleged in the form prescribed by this section, is sufficient for all purposes. Miller v. Lane, 160 Cal. 90; 116 Pac. 58. The rule established by this section was intended to simplify the form of pleading the defense of the statute of limitations, and is one which the court cannot depart from on a conjecture that the legislature intended to except from its operation cases of the kind provided for by § 361, ante; hence, pleading the bar of such section by reference to its number is sufficient. Allen v. Allen, 95 Cal. 184; 16 L. R. A. 646; 30 Pac. 213. In pleading the statute of limitations, the proper course is to plead the section establishing the time of limitation, omitting all reference to explanatory sections. Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; 15 Pac. 431; Hagely v. Hagely, 68 Cal. 348; 9 Pac. 305. Where the section contains subdivisions, pleading the statute by reference to the section alone is insufficient: the number of the subdivision must also be given. Wolters v. Thomas, 3 Cal. Unrep. 843; 32 Pac. 565. In pleading the defense of the statute of limitations, it is not necessary to set up the section and subdivision of the statute, if the facts showing the bar of the statute are alleged. Osborn v. Hopkins, 160 Cal. 501; Ann. Cas. 1913A, 413; 117 Pac. 519. The legal effect of pleading the bar of the statute by reference to the section relied upon, by an averment that the action is barred by that section, is the same as the plea non assumpsit infra sex annos, to which the reply was assumpsit infra sex annos. Biddel v. Brizzolara, 56 Cal. 374.

Allegation of limitations. A general allegation, that the action is barred by the statute prescribing two or any other number of years as the limitation for bringing the action, is insufficient. Schroeder v. Jahns, 27 Cal. 274. An allegation, that the cause of action did not accrue within two years next "preceding the commencement of the action," is not defective, in alleging a conclusion of law; it is not necessary to allege that it was more than two years next preceding the filing of the complaint. Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122. An allegation, that every item of the said account prior to such day is barred by time, and defendant pleads and relies upon the statute of the state of California, entitled "An Act defining the time of commencing civil actions," in bar of any recovery of said action, is fatally defective. Caulfield v. Sanders, 17 Cal. 569. An averment, in an action for personal services, that the plaintiff's cause of action for compensation for said services did not accrue within the two years next before the commencement of this action, is sufficient (Osborn v. Hopkins, 160 Cal. 501; Ann. Cas. 1913A, 413; 117 Pac. 519); but a plea, not averring that the cause of action accrued, but only that the services contracted to be performed by the plaintiff were rendered, more than two years before the action was brought, is insufficient. Hartson v. Hardin, 40 Cal. 264. An allegation in the answer, that the defendant has been in the quiet and peaceable possession of the lands involved, adversely to the plaintiff, for a period of over five years, will be construed to relate to the five years next preceding the filing of the answer, and not to those preceding the commencement of the action. Table Mountain Tunnel Co. v. Stranahan, 31 Cal. 387. An allegation, that the action is barred by the statute, is not a statement of fact, but a mere conclusion of law. Schroeder v. Jahns, 27 Cal. 274; Table Mountain Tunnel Co. v. Stranahan, 31 Cal. 387. Where the defendant pleads the bar of the statute, it is not necessary for him to rebut, in advance, matter which the plaintiff might set up in avoidance. Anderson v. Fisk, 36 Cal. 625. Where the statute of limitations applying only to a particular class of cases is intended to be relied upon, it must be pleaded specially; a plea of the general statute is not sufficient. Howell v. Rogers, 47 Cal. 291. When pleading the bar of the statute, under the old rule the facts were required to be stated, and the court applied the law: it was not necessary for the defendant to plead, in separate defenses, all the statutes on which he intended to rely. Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 19; 87 Am. Dec. 146.

Burden of proof. If controverted, it devolves upon the defendant to show that a cause of action is barred. Black v. Vermont Marble Co., 1 Cal. App. 718; 82 Pac. 1060.

Waiver of manner of pleading. An objection to the manner of pleading the bar of the statute is waived by failure to urge it in the trial court. Churchill v. Woodworth, 148 Cal. 669; 113 Am. St. Rep. 324; 84 Pac. 155.

Finding as to limitations. It is not necessary to find, in direct language, that the action is barred by the statute: to find the facts which show that it is so barred is sufficient. O'Neill v. Quarnstrom, 6 Cal. App. 469, 92 Pac. 391.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The commissioners say, in their report, that they introduced this section, believing that a pleading under it will be more concise, and at the same time will afford to the opposite party all the information necessary to enable him to meet the defense made. The utility of the section is manifest. For instance, if the action be for the recovery of the possession of a mining claim, instead of the lengthy averments now required, the plea will be as follows: "Defendant avers that the cause of action is barred by the provisions of § 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure."

§ 459. Private statutes, how pleaded. In pleading a private statute, or an ordinance of a county or municipal corporation, or a right derived therefrom, it is sufficient to refer to such statute or ordinance by its title and the day of its passage. In pleading the performance of conditions precedent under a statute or an ordinance of a county or municipal corporation, or of a right derived therefrom, it is not necessary to state the facts showing such performance, but it may be stated generally that the party duly performed all the conditions on his part required thereby; if such allegations be controverted the party pleading must establish on the trial the facts showing such performance.

Legislation § 459. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 61 (New York Code, § 163), which read: "In pleading a private statute, or a right derived therefrom, it shall be sufficient to refer to such statute by its title and the day of its passage, and the court shall thereupon take judicial notice thereof." When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "shall," before "sufficient," was changed to "is," and (2) the final clause, beginning "and the court," was stricken out.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 135; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 707; the code commissioner saying, "The words 'or an ordinance of a county or municipal corporation' have been added in the first sentence, and the whole of the second sentence has been added, the latter amendment being made on the suggestion of the attorney-general."

Pleading ordinances. The provision of § 765 of the Municipal Corporation Act, that it shall not be necessary to plead or to prove the existence or validity of any ordinance of a city of the fifth class, is unconstitutional, being a special statute; hence, an ordinance of a city of the fifth class is subject to the provisions of this section, and therefore pleading an ordinance as "that certain ordinance of said city, known as ordinance No. 60," is insufficient. Tulare v. Hevren, 126 Cal. 226; 58 Pac. 530. Although the various ordinances are not set out in hæc verba, nor pleaded as authorized by this section, yet, as against a general demurrer, their existence must be considered. Amestoy v. Electric etc. Transit Co., 95 Cal. 311; 30 Pac. 550.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See Dye v. Dye, 11 Cal. 163.

§ 460. Libel and slander, how stated in complaint. In an action for libel or slander it is not necessary to state in the complaint any extrinsic facts for the purpose of showing the application to the plaintiff of the defamatory matter out of which the cause of action arose; but it is sufficient to state, generally, that the same was published or spoken concerning the plaintiff; and if such allegation be controverted, the plaintiff must establish on the trial that it was so published or spoken.

Libel and slander. See Civ. Code, §§ 44 et seq.

Legislation § 460. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 62 (New York Code, § 164), which had (1) the words "shall not," instead of "is," in the first line, (2) the words "shall be," instead of "is," before "sufficient," and (3) the word "shall," instead of "must," before "establish."

Libelous words. An allegation that words were spoken of and concerning the plaintiff is sufficient, where such words are actionable per se. Rhodes v. Naglee, 66 Cal. 677; 6 Pac. 863; Hitchcock v. Caruthers, 82 Cal. 523; 23 Pac. 48. The inducement and the colloquium are dispensed with by this section; and if the words charged are libelous in themselves, the plaintiff is required to allege only that they were spoken "of and concerning the plaintiff"; if not libelous in themselves, or if they require proof to determine their meaning or to show that they are libelous, or if they are in a foreign language, it is necessary to make such allegation as will show them to be actionable; but where the words are in the English language, it will be presumed that they are understood by the person hearing them, and an allegation to that effect is not required; the statute dispenses with the innuendo and the colloquium, only so far as they show that the defamatory words applied to the plaintiff. Harris v. Zanone, 93 Cal. 59; 28 Pac. 845. The office of the innuendo is, merely, to interpret the meaning of the language used; and if the natural import of the language is not actionable, the innuendo cannot serve to introduce a broader meaning to make it so. Grand v. Dreyfus, 122 Cal. 58; 54 Pac. 389. Where it is alleged that the words were spoken of and concerning the plaintiff, and in the presence and hearing of the plaintiff and others named, an allegation that they were understood by those who heard them is unnecessary. Rhodes v. Naglee, 66 Cal. 677; 6 Pac. 863.

Libel in foreign language. A libel published in a foreign language may be pleaded by using, instead of a copy of the original, a correct translation, alleging it to be such. Stevens v. Kobayshi, 20 Cal. App. 153; 128 Pac. 419. Where the Japanese word "mekake" may be translated either "mistress" or "concubiue," the use of the word "concubine," in rendering that word into English, is immaterial, and an objection based on the use of the latter word cannot be sustained. Id.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Where the words complained of were not, in themselves, libelous, it should be averred what the defendant intended and understood them to mean, and what they were understood to mean by those to whom they were published. And where the complaint only averred a libelous intent and meaning on defendant's part in publishing the words, yet if there was no averment that they were so understood by those to whom they were published, the complaint is defective and demurrable. Maynard v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 34 Cal. 57; 91 Am. Dec. 672, citing many authorities, and among them the following: Goodrich v. Woolcott, 3 Cow. 239; Andrews v. Woodmansee, 15 Wend. 234; Gibson v. Williams, 4 Wend. 320; Dexter v. Taber, 12 Johns. 239; Peake v. Oldham, 1 Cowp. 275; 98 Eng. Reprint, 1083. See also, generally, Bradley v. Gardner, 10 Cal. 371; Thrall v. Smiley, 9 Cal. 529; Butler v. Howes, 7 Cal. 87.

§ 461. Answer in such cases. In the actions mentioned in the last section the defendant may, in his answer, allege both the truth of the matter charged as defamatory, and any mitigating circumstances, to reduce the amount of damages; and whether he prove the justification or not, he may give in evidence the mitigating circumstances.

Libel and slander. See Civ. Code, §§ 44 et seq.

Legislation § 461. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 63 (New York Code, § 165).

Justification and mitigation. To constitute a justification, the answer must aver the truth of the defamatory matter charged; without which, the facts detailed can avail only in mitigation of damages; setting up facts tending only to establish the truth of such matter is insufficient. Thrall v. Smiley, 9 Cal. 529. If, in a libel suit, the defendant pleads justification, he may also plead, with his affirmance of good faith and honest belief, all facts and circumstances in support thereof, within his knowledge at the time of the publication, even if they tend to establish the truth of the charge; and if he desires to plead justification, and also the truth or partial truth in mitigation, he must plead these facts and circumstances in mitigation. Davis v. Hearst, 160 Cal. 143; 116 Pac. 530. Only such mitigating circumstances as were within the knowledge of the defendant when he spoke the words complained of can be alleged in the answer. Barkly v. Copeland, 74 Cal. 1; 5 Am. St. Rep. 413; 15 Pac. 307. The mitigating circumstances permitted to be pleaded and proved must be such as tend to rebut the presumption of malice, or to reduce its degree; all libels are conclusively presumed to be, in some degree, malicious; but there are different degrees and phases of malice; and some actionable defamatory publications are in fact published without actual malice; it is eminently just, therefore, that the defendant, with a view to reduce the damages, should be allowed to rebut the presumption of malice by proof of what the statute terms "mitigating circumstances," that is to say, the circumstances under which the publication was made, and the real motives that induced it; but absence of actual malice cannot be shown in bar of the action. Wilson v. Fitch, 41 Cal. 363; Lick v. Owen, 47 Cal. 252. While it is ordinarily true that privilege is to be pleaded as an affirmative matter of defense to an action for libel, yet where the complaint shows on its face that the publication was privileged, the point may be raised on general demurrer. Gosewisch v. Doran, 161 Cal. 511; Ann. Cas. 1913D, 442; 119 Pac. 656.

Plea of justification in libel or slander. See note 91 Am. St. Rep. 292.

Pleading truth as a defense to a civil action for libel and slander. See note 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 138.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The answer must aver the truth of the defamatory matter charged, if justification is sought. Facts which only tend to establish the truth of such matter are not sufficient allegations. Without an averment of its truth, the fact detailed can only avail in mitigation of damages. Thrall v. Smiley, 9 Cal. 529. The defendant may prove the plaintiff's words immediately after defendant uttered the slanderous words. Bradley v. Gardner, 10 Cal. 371.

§ 462. Allegations not denied, when to be deemed true. When to be deemed controverted. Every material allegation of the complaint, not controverted by the answer, must, for the purposes of the action, be taken as true; the statement of any new matter in the answer, in avoidance or constituting a defense or counterclaim, must, on the trial, be deemed controverted by the opposite party.

Cross-complaint, must be replied to. See ante, § 442.

Answers. See generally, ante, § 437.

Material allegations. Post, § 463.

Legislation § 462. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 65 (New York Code, § 168), as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 703, which read: "Every material allegation of the complaint or cross-complaint not controverted by the answer thereto, shall for the purposes of the action be taken as true; the statement of matters in avoidance shall on the trial be deemed controverted by the adverse party."

Material allegations must be controverted. Immaterial allegations in a complaint need not be denied; and failure to answer them is not an admission. Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450; Jones v. Petaluma, 36 Cal. 230. A mere denial of non-essential averments of a complaint is an admission of all that is essential to recovery. Leffingwell v. Griffing, 31 Cal. 231. Allegations in anticipation of the defense are not admitted by failure to deny them. Canfield v. Tobias, 21 Cal. 349. General denials of the allegations of a complaint do not amount to a specific denial thereof; hence, the material allegations of a verified complaint are admitted. Dewey v. Bowman, 8 Cal. 145; Hensley v. Tartar, 14 Cal. 508. An answer denying, as a whole, the conjunctive allegations of a verified complaint, is evasive, and an admission of the allegations. Fish v. Redington, 31 Cal. 185. Where the denial is in the conjunctive, and does not constitute a denial of the averments of the complaint, the averments are admitted. Nolan v. Hentig, 138 Cal. 281; 71 Pac. 440. Where the answer specifically denies only two allegations of the complaint, all the others, well pleaded, are admitted. De Ro v. Cordes, 4 Cal. 117. Where the complaint avers that work was done in consideration of a certain promise, and the answer only denies that the plaintiff did the work, no proof is required from the plaintiff as to the consideration upon which it was performed. Mathewson v. Fitch, 22

Cal. 86. Conclusion of law from facts stated do not call for a denial. Kidwell v. Ketler, 146 Cal. 12; 79 Pac. 514. Matters of evidence set up in the complaint are not admitted either by a failure to deny, or by a defective denial. Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450. In an action for divorce, allegations of residence must be proven, whether denied or not (Bennett v. Bennett, 28 Cal. 599); and if the complaint avers the marriage of the plaintiff and the defendant, failure to deny the averment is an admission of the fact. Fox v. Fox, 25 Cal. 587. The first clause of this section applies to an allegation in an answer, in an action upon a street assessment, that a certain resolution was not "duly" passed. Pacific Paving Co. v. Diggins, 4 Cal. App. 240; 87 Pac. 415. An allegation, in a verified complaint, of an entry by the defendant and ouster by the plaintiff, is admitted by a denial in the answer, that the defendant wrongfully and unlawfully entered and dispossessed the plaintiff: such denial relates to the character, and not to the existence, of these facts. Busenius v. Coffee, 14 Cal. 91. A denial that the defendant has unlawfully, wrongfully, and in violation of the plaintiff's rights, had the possession, etc., is a mere denial of the character and not of the fact of possession, and is an admission of it, and such admission is conclusive. Burke v. Table Mountain Water Co., 12 Cal. 403. A motion for judgment on a pleading is properly granted, where the complaint is sufficient in all respects, and the answer does not deny any of the material allegations thereof, and fails to present anything by way of new matter to bar or defeat the action. San Francisco v. Staude, 92 Cal. 560; 28 Pac. 778; Felch v. Beaudry, 40 Cal. 439; Hemme v. Hays, 55 Cal. 337; Loveland v. Garner, 74 Cal. 298; 15 Pac. 844. Where the complaint alleges that an assignment of guaranty was made for a good consideration, failure to deny the allegation is an admission of the consideration. Cunningham v. Norton, 5 Cal. Unrep. 35; 40 Pac. 491. Imperfect and defective denials, if acted upon at the trial as sufficient, are in no sense admissions of the allegations of a pleading which are attempted to be denied. Loftus v. Fischer, 106 Cal. 616; 39 Pac. 1064. Objections to defective denials are waived, if not taken before the introduction of evidence. Tevis v. Hicks, 41 Cal. 123; Stockton etc. Agricultural Works v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 121 Cal. 167; 53 Pac. 565. Where the denials were defective, and the plaintiff had gone into the evidence in relation to them without question, it is proper to refuse to instruct that certain facts were settled, for the purposes of the trial, by the admissions of the defendant in not denying them in his answer. Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152. In passing upon a motion for a new trial, the court may properly consider admissions which follow a failure to deny material allegations of the complaint. Blodgett v. Scott, 11 Cal. App. 310; 104 Pac. 842.

When allegations in complaint deemed true. There is no issue to be tried, and the material allegations of the complaint must be taken as true, where the answer fails to put them in issue, or to confess and avoid them (Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Brown v. Scott, 25 Cal. 189; Fish v. Redington, 31 Cal. 185; Pomeroy v. Gregory, 66 Cal. 572, 574; 6 Pac. 492, 493; Prentice v. Miller, 82 Cal. 570; 23 Pac. 189; Ortega v. Cordero, 88 Cal. 221; 26 Pac. 80; Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 393; McGowan v. McDonald, 111 Cal. 57; 52 Am. St. Rep. 149; 43 Pac. 418), and the plaintiff is entitled to judgment on the pleadings. Blodgett v. Scott, 11 Cal. App. 310; 104 Pac. 842. The failure to deny allegations of facts which create a presumption, admits the correctness of such allegations, and the presumption thus created by law operates to cast on the defendant the burden of proof, even though such presumption is one of evidence, and not one of pleading; its effect is to require a statement, in the complaint, of matters necessary to show the right to recover; but it does not compel the formal proof of matters which, being alleged, are admitted either expressly or impliedly, and such cases are subject to the general rules of procedure prescribed by this section. Oakland Bank v. Sullivan, 107 Cal. 428; 40 Pac. 546; Stockton v. Dahl, 66 Cal. 377; 5 Pac. 682. Allegations in the complaint, not controverted in the action, must, for the purposes of the action, be taken as true (Crandall v. Parks, 152 Cal. 772; 93 Pac. 1018); they become admitted facts in the case. Merguire v. O'Donnell, 103 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 1033. Facts distinctly and clearly averred in the complaint, and not denied in the answer, are admitted; evidence in support of them is unnecessary. Hanson v. Fricker, 79 Cal. 283; 21 Pac. 751. Failure to deny a material allegation of a complaint is an admission thereof: a finding to the contrary is erroneous. Campe v. Lassen, 67 Cal. 139; 7 Pac. 430. All the material allegations of a verified petition, in the nature of a complaint, to show cause, not denied under oath, are to be taken as true: further evidence in support of them is unnecessary. California Title Ins. etc. Co. v. Consolidated Piedmont Cable Co., 117 Cal. 237; 49 Pac. 1. Failure to deny the execution of a mortgage containing a provision for the payment of attorneys' fees, where the complaint sets up the mortgage and alleges its due execution, is an admission of the right to attorneys' fees. Hubbard v. University Bank, 125 Cal. 684; 58 Pac. 297. The corporate existence of a company is admitted by a failure to deny the allegation of such fact: a finding against such admission cannot be sustained. Moynihan v. Drobaz, 124 Cal. 212; 71 Am. St. Rep. 46; 56 Pac. 1026. Where title to property is distinctly averred in the complaint and not denied in the answer, the fact is deemed admitted; no evidence is necessary upon such point. Powell v. Oullahan, 14 Cal. 114. Where the answer fails to deny the allegation that the plaintiff succeeded to the rights of another person in land, and that he is the owner thereof, the plaintiff's ownership is admitted. White v. Costigan, 138 Cal. 564; 72 Pac. 178. Ownership alleged, and not denied, is admitted. Santa Barbara v. Eldred, 108 Cal. 294; 41 Pac. 410; McGowan v. McDonald, 111 Cal. 57; 52 Am. St. Rep. 149; 43 Pac. 418. The allegation of extra work, in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, is admitted by a failure to deny: this admission supports the lien. McGinty v. Morgan, 122 Cal. 103; 54 Pac. 392. The validity of proceedings under a void statute is not admitted by a failure to deny that such proceedings were duly and regularly taken. People v. Hastings, 29 Cal. 449. Where a fact is expressly alleged in the complaint, and not specifically denied in the answer, the jury should be instructed that such fact is admitted. Tevis v. Hicks, 41 Cal. 123. Where, from the whole conduct of a cause, it appears that a particular fact is admitted by the parties, the jury have the right to draw the same conclusion as to that fact as if it were proven in evidence, and to draw such conclusion as to all the issues on the record. Powell v. Oullahan, 14 Cal. 114. Where, in action for property destroyed, the complaint alleges the value of all such property, in gross, for some items of which no recovery can be had, the answer, which contained no denial of the averment of value, will not be held as admitting the value of the property for which a recovery may be had. Nunan v. San Francisco, 38 Cal. 689. An objection to an assessment, on the ground of the invalidity of the statute, is not obviated by a failure to deny an allegation that the assessment was duly and regularly made. People v. Hastings, 29 Cal. 449.

Affirmative matter in answer deemed controverted. Affirmative matter in the answer is deemed controverted (People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73; Bryan v. Maume, 28 Cal. 238; Doyle v. Franklin, 40 Cal. 106; Brooks v. Haslam, 65 Cal. 421; 4 Pac. 399; Williams v. Dennison, 94 Cal. 540; 29 Pac. 946; Haines v. Snedigar, 110 Cal. 18; 42 Pac. 462; Reed v. Johnson, 127 Cal. 538; 59 Pac. 986; Green v. Duvergey, 146 Cal. 379; 80 Pac. 234; Sarnighausen v. Scannell, 11 Cal. App. 652; 106 Pac. 117), as is also new matter (Lillis v. People's Ditch Co., 3 Cal. Unrep. 494; 29 Pac. 780; Newsom v. Woollacott, 5 Cal. App. 722; 91 Pac. 347; Burke v. Superior Court, 7 Cal. App. 178; 93 Pac. 1058), where it does not call for affirmative relief in behalf of the defendant. Melander v. Western National Bank, 21 Cal. App. 462; 132 Pac. 265. The admission of the execution and genuineness of an instrument set up in the answer is not an admission of new matter pleaded therein, or that the instrument relates to the transaction set out in the complaint. Newsom v. Woollacott, 5 Cal. App. 722; 91 Pac. 374. Affirmative matter set up in the answer, such as undue influence and unfair advantage, is deemed denied. Rankin v. Sisters of Mercy, 82 Cal. 88; 22 Pac. 1134. A contract so pleaded may be shown by the plaintiff to have been procured by fraud, menace, or duress, without any pleading on his part. Sarnighausen v. Scannell, 11 Cal. App. 652; 106 Pac. 117. A replication traversing new matter alleged in the answer is unnecessary, and has no place in our system of pleading: the plaintiff will be deemed to have pleaded any new matter in avoidance of a counterclaim or affirmative defense set up in the answer, and may give evidence of such matter in avoidance. Grangers' Business Ass'n v. Clark, 84 Cal. 201; 23 Pac. 1081. The burden of proof is on the defendant to establish affirmative matter set up in the answer. Bryan v. Maume, 28 Cal. 238; Brooks v. Haslam, 65 Cal. 421; 4 Pac. 399; Reed v. Johnson, 127 Cal. 538; 59 Pac. 986; Clarke v. Fast, 128 Cal. 422; 61 Pac. 72; Green v. Duvergey, 146 Cal. 379; 80 Pac. 234; Merced Bank v. Price, 145 Cal. 436; 78 Pac. 949; People v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 73. For instance, he must prove the law of a sister state, when relied on as a defense. Peck v. Noee, 154 Cal. 351; 97 Pac. 865. Where a husband conveys property to his wife, in reliance upon an oral agreement that she would, upon his death, transfer a certain portion of it to designated parties, the wife, by consenting to such arrangement, is estopped from questioning his power thus to effectuate his intention without her consent in writing; and in an action by the beneficiaries to enforce the constructive trust, allegations in the answer of the wife, setting up the community character of the property, authorize them to rely upon such estoppel, without pleading it specially. Lauricella v. Lauricella, 161 Cal. 61; 118 Pac. 430. In an action to quiet title, where the answer sets up a deed from the plaintiff to the defendant, and alleges a delivery of the deed by the plaintiff, such allegation is deemed to be controverted. Drinkwater v. Hollar, 6 Cal. App. 117; 91 Pac. 664.

Counterclaim and set-off deemed controverted. An answer, wherein is set up a counterclaim or set-off, is not a cross-complaint: no denial thereof by the plaintiff is required. Herold v. Smith, 34 Cal. 122; Jones v. Jones, 38 Cal. 584. The allegations of a pleading that are, strictly speaking, of a character to be treated as a defense or counterclaim, are to be taken as denied, though the pleading is denominated an answer, counterclaim, or cross-complaint. Pfister v. Wade, 69 Cal. 133; 10 Pac. 369. No replication is required to raise an issue upon the matter of a counterclaim; its allegations are deemed denied, and the plaintiff, besides introducing evidence in denial thereof, may also prove any affirmative matter as a defense to the counterclaim, without pleading it. L. Scatena & Co. v. Van Loben Sels, 19 Cal. App. 423; 126 Pac. 187. Where the answer sets up a counterclaim barred by the statute of limitations, the plaintiff is considered to have pleaded the statute by way of replication to the counterclaim (Curtiss v. Sprague, 49 Cal. 301); but where it appears on the face of the counterclaim that it is barred, it must be demurred to on that ground, and will not be deemed controverted, under the provisions of this section, as, under §§ 443, 444, ante, the plaintiff is authorized to demur on the ground that the answer does not set up facts sufficient to constitute a counterclaim. Bliss v. Sneath, 119 Cal. 526; 51 Pac. 848. An exception to the rule that all new matter constituting a defense or counterclaim must, at the trial, be deemed controverted, is found in § 442, ante: where a cross-complaint has been served by a defendant claiming affirmative relief, the party served may demur or answer thereto as to an original complaint; but fraud or mistake, as a defense, may be shown by the plaintiff, to rebut the allegations in the answer, without any replication on his part. Moore v. Copp, 119 Cal. 429; 51 Pac. 630. The plaintiff may, in avoidance of defendant's set-off, show a countervailing indebtedness of defendant to plaintiff's assignor. Davis v. Rawhide Gold Mining Co., 15 Cal. App. 108; 113 Pac. 898.

When plea of bar of statute deemed controverted. The statute of limitations, pleaded in bar, in an answer, is deemed controverted (Fox v. Tay, 89 Cal. 339; 23 Am. St. Rep. 474; 24 Pac. 855; 26 Pac. 897; Pierce v. Southern Pacific Co., 120 Cal. 156; 40 L. R. A. 350; 47 Pac. 874; 52 Pac. 302; London etc. Bank v. Parrott, 125 Cal. 472; 73 Am. St. Rep. 64; 58 Pac. 164; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Boland, 145 Cal. 626; 79 Pac. 365; Curtiss v. Sprague, 49 Cal. 301); and it devolves upon the defendant to establish the facts necessary to support it. Pierce v. Southern Pacific Co., 120 Cal. 156; 40 L. R. A. 350; 47 Pac. 874; 52 Pac. 302. The second clause of this section applies, where a defendant admits that it is a foreign corporation, but pleads the bar of the statute. Black v. Vermont Marble Co., 1 Cal. App. 718; 82 Pac. 1060. The statute of limitations, set up as an affirmative defense in the answer, may be controverted by the plaintiff, without pleading, by proving any facts tending to rebut it (Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Boland, 145 Cal. 626; 79 Pac. 365; Williams v. Dennison, 94 Cal. 540; 29 Pac. 946; London etc. Bank v. Parrott, 125 Cal. 472; 73 Am. St. Rep. 64; 58 Pac. 164); hence, the correct application of payments, under § 1479 of the Civil Code, may be shown for that purpose. London etc. Bank v. Parrott, 125 Cal. 472; 73 Am. St. Rep. 64; 58 Pac. 164.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Allegations of matters of evidence are not admitted, however, though no denial is made by the answer. Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450. If an ultimate fact is admitted in the record, the court will not consider probative facts for the purpose of establishing, modifying, or overcoming it. Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131.

§ 463. A material allegation defined.

A material allegation in a pleading is one essential to the claim or defense, and which could not be stricken from the pleading without leaving it insufficient.

Immaterial allegations need not be answered. See ante, § 462.

Legislation § 463. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 66.

What are material allegations. The test of materiality is, Can the averment be stricken from the pleading without leaving it insufficient? Thus, in an action on a note executed by two defendants, averred to be partners, the denial of the existence of the partnership, without the denial of the execution of the note, entitles the plaintiff to judgment on the pleadings, as the allegation of the partnership is immaterial. Whitwell v. Thomas, 9 Cal. 499. Allegations to intercept and cut off defenses are superfluous and immaterial in the complaint. Canfield v. Tobias, 21 Cal. 349; Sterling v. Smith, 97 Cal. 343; 32 Pac. 320. Evidence should not be alleged in the complaint; it is not only not necessary, but highly improper. Racouillat v. Rene, 32 Cal. 450. In an action for goods sold and delivered, an allegation as to the sale and delivery of the goods is a material one. Napa Valley Packing Co. v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 16 Cal. App. 461; 118 Pac. 469. Where a defendant alleges that certain representations are "false and untrue in every material respect," he should point out specifically what is material. Woodson v. Winchester, 16 Cal. App. 472; 117 Pac. 565.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See § 426, ante; Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 413; 76 Am. Dec. 492; Whitwell v. Thomas, 9 Cal. 499. In an action on a contract, an averment in the complaint that the contract was payable in a specific kind of money is a material allegation. Wallace v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 498.

§ 464. Supplemental complaint and answer. The plaintiff and defendant, respectively, may be allowed, on motion, to make a supplemental complaint or answer, alleging facts material to the case occurring after the former complaint or answer.

Amendments to pleadings. Post, §§ 472, 473.

Legislation § 464. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on last sentence of Practice Act, § 67, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 703, which read: "Where circumstances occurring subsequently to the commencement of the action render it proper, the same may be presented by supplemental pleadings and issue taken thereon in the same manner as in the case of original pleadings." The first part of § 67 formed the basis of § 472; q. v., post.

When supplemental pleading proper. The right to file a supplemental complaint can be exercised only with reference to matter consistent with and in aid of the case made by the original complaint, and which occurred between the time of filing the original complaint and the trial or judgment in the action. Gleason v. Gleason, 54 Cal. 135; Jacob v. Lorenz, 98 Cal. 332; 33 Pac. 119; Gordon v. San Diego, 108 Cal. 264; 41 Pac. 301. The fact to be alleged in the amended or supplemental pleading must be material, and relate to the original case. Brown v. Valley View Mining Co., 127 Cal. 630; 60 Pac. 424; Baker v. Brickell, 102 Cal. 620; 36 Pac. 950. Changing the character of the original bill, and praying for different relief, does not render the supplemental bill defective; every additional or pertinent fact either enlarges or limits the right to relief, or affects the nature of it; but where the subject-matter is the same, the supplemental bill is proper. Baker v. Bartol, 6 Cal. 483. The plaintiff may be allowed to file a supplemental complaint setting up matter consistent with and in aid of the original cause of action, and calling for different and additional relief. Melvin v. E. B. & A. L. Stone Co., 7 Cal. App. 324; 94 Pac. 389. The office of the supplemental complaint is to bring to the notice of the court and the opposite party things which have occurred after the commencement of the action, and which do or may affect the rights asserted and the relief asked in the action as originally instituted. California Farm etc. Co. v. Schiappa-Pietra, 151 Cal. 732; 91 Pac. 593. A new and independent cause of action cannot be substituted by way of supplemental complaint. Gleason v. Gleason, 54 Cal. 135; Jacob v. Lorenz, 98 Cal. 332; 33 Pac. 119; Gordon v. San Diego, 108 Cal. 264; 41 Pac. 301. Another action, in another county, to recover the same property, by the plaintiff, against some of the defendants, may be set up in a supplemental answer. Keech v. Beatty, 127 Cal. 177; 59 Pac. 837. Facts occurring subsequently to the filing of the complaint, and which change the liabilities of the defendants, cannot be incorporated into the complaint by an amendment, without presenting averments inconsistent with the date of the commencement of the action. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308. Where, during the pendency of an action to recover personal property, the defendant is required to deliver the property to another person entitled to its possession, as against both the plaintiff and the defendant, that fact should be set up by supplemental answer. Bolander v. Gentry, 36 Cal. 105; 95 Am. Dec. 162. Discharge by insolvency, after answer, may also be pleaded by way of supplemental answer (Rahm v. Minis, 40 Cal. 421); as may also title acquired after the commencement of the action (Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 238; Thompson v. McKay, 41 Cal. 221), and the termination of the plaintiff's title after answer. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467; Barstow v. Newman, 34 Cal. 90; Hestres v. Brennan, 37 Cal. 385. A failure so to plead renders evidence of title subsequently acquired inadmissible. McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 238; Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256. Damages accruing after the institution of an action to enjoin a threatened injury are properly set up in a supplemental complaint, being a right arising out of and consistent with such injunctive relief. Jacob v. Lorenz, 98 Cal. 332; 33 Pac. 119. Damages may be awarded in a judicial proceeding for further injuries resulting after the commencement thereof, without a supplemental pleading. Hicks v. Drew, 117 Cal. 305; 49 Pac. 189. Where the original complaint is founded on an express contract to pay a fixed sum for services for a certain period, a supplemental complaint setting up the terms of employment should not be allowed. Brown v. Valley View Mining Co., 127 Cal. 630; 60 Pac. 424. Where an insurance policy was made payable to the mortgagee, a supplemental complaint, in an action upon a new agreement, setting up the fact that such person has ceased to have any interest in the policy is proper: it does not change the cause of action. Stockton etc. Agricultural Works v. American Fire Ins. Co., 121 Cal. 182; 53 Pac. 573. Insurance-money paid by a mortgagee after the commencement of foreclosure proceedings, under provisions authorizing him to keep the property insured on the failure of the mortgagor to do so, should be set up in a supplemental complaint. Washburn v. Wilkinson, 59 Cal. 538. In an action for claim and delivery, against a sheriff, where, at the time the property was taken by him under a writ of attachment, the judgment was not barred, it is not error to refuse to permit a supplemental complaint to be filed, setting up that the judgment obtained in such action was barred at the time of filing the amended complaint, many years after the taking, and after the sheriff had gone out of office. Paulson v. Nunan, 72 Cal. 243; 13 Pac. 626.

Effect of filing supplemental complaint. By the filing of a supplemental complaint and the issuance of a summons thereon, the original action becomes merged in the action as supplemented by the addition of parties and subject-matter. McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 300. The filing of a supplemental complaint after the death of the defendant, continuing the action against his representatives, is not the commencement of a new action so as to affect the bar of the statute of limitations. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Wackenreuder, 99 Cal. 503; 34 Pac. 219. The action, as to the new ground set up in the supplemental complaint, must be considered as commenced when the supplemental complaint is filed. Valensin v. Valensin, 73 Cal. 106; 14 Pac. 397. Where an action is prematurely brought, the original complaint must fail, and a supplemental complaint has no place as a pleading. Morse v. Steele, 132 Cal. 456; 64 Pac. 690. Where no cause of action existed at the time of the commencement of the suit, the action cannot be maintained by filing a supplemental complaint founded on matters that subsequently occurred. Wittenbrock v. Bellmer, 57 Cal. 12; Gordon v. San Diego, 108 Cal. 264; 41 Pac. 301; Hill v. Den, 121 Cal. 42; 53 Pac. 642; Lewis v. Fox, 122 Cal. 244; 54 Pac. 823.

New or substituted parties. The representative capacity of a substituted plaintiff may be set up by way of amended complaint, and need not be pleaded by supplemental complaint, when made on the part of the plaintiff. Campbell v. West, 93 Cal. 653; 29 Pac. 219, 645. The claimants of property, brought in as new parties to a foreclosure suit, by supplemental complaint filed more than four years after the cause of action accrued against them, may plead the bar of the statute. Spaulding v. Howard, 121 Cal. 194; 53 Pac. 563. A court of equity will not allow the real holders of the title, who were not parties to a decree of foreclosure, to be made such by a supplemental complaint, where the application is made more than five years after the entry of the decree. Heyman v. Lowell, 23 Cal. 106. Where suit is brought by a female, who subsequently marries, her husband should be made a party: this should be done by a supplemental complaint, and not by an amendment to the original. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308.

Right to set up judgment in another court by amendment or supplemental complaint. See note 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 285.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the defendant demurs to the complaint, the plaintiff must, on motion, be allowed leave to amend his complaint before a decision on the demurrer is rendered. Lord v. Hopkins, 30 Cal. 76.

§ 465. Pleadings subsequent to complaint must be filed and served.

All pleadings subsequent to the complaint, must be filed with the clerk, and copies thereof served upon the adverse party or his attorney.

Service of papers. Post, §§ 1011 et seq.
Amendment of pleadings, service of. Post, § 472; ante, § 432.
Extending time to serve papers. See post, § 1054.

Legislation § 465. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 301, adding the words "copies thereof" before the word "served."

Pleading must be filed. A pleading prepared for the purpose of filing is not a pleading in fact until it is filed and made a part of the record. Fletcher v. Maginnis, 136 Cal. 362; 68 Pac. 1015.

Service of pleadings. An amendment to the complaint, filed as "of course," must be served upon the adverse parties, who are to be bound by the judgment, whether it materially affects them or not. Elder v. Spinks, 53 Cal. 293. A complaint amended after default must be served upon all the defendants: a party cannot be deprived of the right to answer an amended pleading, even after entry of a default against him on the original pleading; for, by amending in matter of substance, the plaintiff opens the default on the original pleading. Thompson v. Johnson, 60 Cal. 292; Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. As the amended complaint must be served upon all adverse parties who are to be bound by the judgment, whether it materially affects them or not, no judgment can be sustained against one upon whom such amended complaint was not served (Linott v. Rowland, 119 Cal. 452; 51 Pac. 687); a defendant who answers an amended complaint waives service of a copy thereof, and he cannot object because his co-defendants were not served. McGary v. Pedroreña, 58 Cal. 91. Where the amendment is a mere matter of form, in the nature of a bill of particulars, neither republication of the summons nor service on the defendant is required. Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 283; 63 Am. St. Rep. 108; 51 Pac. 2,542. The issues are not changed by striking from the title of the action the names of one or more defendants, nor is any additional answer rendered necessary: a complaint so amended is not such a one as by the law or the rules of the court is required to be served upon the defendants, or by which they are entitled to answer. Harney v. Corcoran, 60 Cal. 314. An amendment to the complaint must be served on all the defendants affected thereby, but, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, it will be presumed, on appeal, that the amendments were properly served; and an objection to the complaint is not available to reverse the judgment, where, taken in connection with the exhibits annexed thereto, it shows a cause of action. Riverside County v. Stockman, 124 Cal. 222; 56 Pac. 1027. Where the record shows service of an amended complaint on a party for whom an attorney appeared, it must be presumed that service upon the attorney also was shown to the court, although no record of it has been preserved. Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita etc. Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301. Where the plaintiff gives the defendant written notice, to which is attached a copy of a supplemental complaint, that, on a certain day, he will ask leave of the court to file such complaint, and the court permits the filing thereof, the defendant should be served with a copy thereof after it is filed. Galliano v. Kilfoy, 94 Cal. 86; 29 Pac. 416. Where, in an action against several defendants, judgment is entered against a defaulting defendant, it is unnecessary to serve a copy of an amended complaint, thereafter filed, upon him: he is no longer an adverse party. Cole v. Roebling Construction Co., 156 Cal. 443; 105 Pac. 255. Where the defendant is allowed time to answer, until the plaintiff elects upon which count of the complaint he will go to trial, the plaintiff should serve a copy of the complaint, with notice of his election. Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192.

Acknowledgment of service. A written acknowledgment of service of a cross-complaint, indorsed thereon, and signed by the plaintiff's attorney, is sufficient proof of due service thereof. Wood v. Johnston, 8 Cal. App. 258; 96 Pac. 508.

CHAPTER VIII.

VARIANCE. MISTAKES IN PLEADINGS AND AMENDMENTS.

§ 469. Material variance, how provided for.
§ 470. Immaterial variance, how provided for.
§ 471. What not to be deemed a variance.
§ 472. Amendments of course, and effect of demurrer.
§ 473. Amendments by the court. Enlarging time to plead and relieving from judgments, etc.
§ 474. Suing a party by a fictitious name, when allowed.
§ 475. No error or defect to be regarded unless it affects substantial rights.
§ 476. Time to amend or answer, running of.

§ 469. Material variance, how provided for. No variance between the allegation in a pleading and the proof is to be deemed material, unless it has actually misled the adverse party to his prejudice in maintaining his action or defense upon the merits. Whenever it appears that a party has been so misled, the court may order the pleading to be amended, upon such terms as may be just.

Immaterial variance. Post, § 470.
Variance, and failure of proofs. Post, § 471.
Immaterial errors, generally. See post, § 475.

Legislation § 469. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 579, which read: "A variance between the proof on the trial and the allegations in a pleading, shall be disregarded as immaterial, unless the court be satisfied that the adverse party has been misled to his prejudice thereby."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 302, (1) changing the word "has" from "have," before "actually," (2) changing the word "appears" from "is alleged," after "Whenever it," and (3) omitting, after the word "misled," the clause, "that fact must be proved to the satisfaction of the court, and thereupon the court may order the pleading to be amended, upon such terms as may be just."

Doctrine of variance. The doctrine of variance has been greatly mitigated in its application, as well by the English statutes as by the provisions of this code; but the former operate only by providing for amendments, and the latter mainly in the same way, though also modifying the rules of evidence; otherwise the doctrine remains unaffected, and is recognized and affirmed by the curative statutes themselves; the rule, therefore, is the same, under our system of practice, as at common law, except in so far as the consequences of a variance may, under the statutes, be obviated at the trial. Higgins v. Graham, 143 Cal. 131; 76 Pac. 898. This section applies to an action by stock-brokers to recover moneys advanced upon the purchase and sale of stocks (see Pollitz v. Wickersham, 150 Cal. 238; 88 Pac. 911), and to an action to rescind a voidable contract (Maionchi v. Nicholini, 1 Cal. App. 690; 82 Pac. 1052); but it does not apply to a notice of lien. Lucas v. Rea, 10 Cal. App. 641; 102 Pac. 822. The effect of a variance between a pleading and the proof is not governed by the same rules as in the case of a variance between notice of claim of lien and the proof; the notice of claim of lien must contain a correct statement of the facts required by the statute, and unless so stated, no lien can be enforced; while a variance between the pleading and the proof is not material, unless the adverse party has been misled thereby to his prejudice. Santa Monica Lumber etc. Co. v. Hege, 119 Cal. 376; 51

Pac. 555. If facts are correctly stated in notice of lien, the full amount of the contract price with credits, or the true amount after deducting credits, need not be pleaded. Star Mill etc. Co. v. Porter, 4 Cal. App. 470; 88 Pac. 497.

Application of variance to notice of lien. See note post, § 1187.

Immaterial variances. A variance between the pleading and the proof is not material, unless the adverse party has been thereby misled to his prejudice. Barrett-Hicks Co. v. Glas, 14 Cal. App. 289; 111 Pac. 760; Wood v. James, 15 Cal. App. 253; 114 Pac. 587; Hoover v. Lester, 16 Cal. App. 151; 116 Pac. 382; California Portland Cement Co. v. Wentworth Hotel Co., 16 Cal. App. 692; 118 Pac. 103, 113; Christenson Lumber Co. v. Buckley, 17 Cal. App. 37; 118 Pac. 466; Ostrom v. Woodbury, 18 Cal. App. 142; 122 Pac. 825; Culver v. Newhart, 18 Cal. App. 614; 123 Pac. 975; Union Collection Co. v. Rogers, 18 Cal. App. 205; 122 Pac. 970; Taylor v. Morris, 163 Cal. 717; 127 Pac. 66. An immaterial variance may be disregarded (Crocker v. Garland, 7 Cal. Unrep. 275; 87 Pac. 209; Pogue v. Ball, 4 Cal. App. 406; 88 Pac. 376; Star Mill etc. Co. v. Porter, 4 Cal. App. 470; 88 Pac. 497; Foster v. Carr, 135 Cal. 83; 67 Pac. 43), where the defendant is not actually misled to his prejudice in maintaining his defense upon the merits. Abner Doble Co. v. Keystone Consol. Mining Co., 145 Cal. 490; 78 Pac. 1050; Carter v. Baldwin, 95 Cal. 475; 30 Pac. 595; Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 936; Holt v. Holt, 120 Cal. 67; 52 Pac. 119; Herman v. Hecht, 116 Cal. 553; 48 Pac. 611; California Annual Conference v. Seitz, 74 Cal. 287; 15 Pac. 839; Lyles v. Perrin, 134 Cal. 417; 66 Pac. 472; Knox v. Higby, 76 Cal. 264; 18 Pac. 381. A variance that could not possibly have misled the defendant to his prejudice must be disregarded on appeal. Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242; Bollinger v. Bollinger, 154 Cal. 695; 99 Pac. 196. Immaterial variances will be disregarded on appeal, as not affecting the substantial rights of the parties. Miller v. Ballerino, 135 Cal. 566; 67 Pac. 1046; 68 Pac. 600; Carter v. Rhodes, 135 Cal. 46; 66 Pac. 985; 21 Morr. Min. Rep. 694. A variance between the findings and the allegations, as to matters not affecting the judgment or the rights of the parties, is immaterial. Bollinger v. Bollinger, 154 Cal. 695; 99 Pac. 196. Where the variance does not go to the measure of the defendant's liability, but merely to the identity of the subject-matter upon which that liability is founded, it will be disregarded as immaterial. Clark v. Chapman, 98 Cal. 110; 32 Pac. 812; 33 Pac. 750. The misspelling of a word does not constitute a material variance (People v. Cummings, 57 Cal. 88); neither does the use of abbreviations; nor the use of words and figures, instead of figures only. Corcoran v. Doll, 32 Cal. 82. Any variance that could not have misled or surprised the defendant to his prejudice in maintaining his defense upon the merits, is immaterial (Quackenbush v. Sawyer, 54 Cal. 439); and the court must, in every stage of an action or proceeding, disregard any defect in a pleading or proceeding that does not substantially affect the rights of the parties. Miller v. Ballerino, 135 Cal. 566; 67 Pac. 1046; 68 Pac. 600; Antonelle v. Kennedy etc. Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 309; 73 Pac. 966. Where the entire contract is set up in the answer, with the special averment of the breach of an alleged condition precedent, the defendant cannot be allowed to say that he was misled by the plaintiff's failure to aver what the defendant knew, pleaded, and relied upon. Antonelle v. Kennedy etc. Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 309; 73 Pac. 966. Where it cannot be determined until after the evidence has been received, whether there is a variance between the allegations of the complaint and the evidence offered, and the defendant does not make it appear that he is in any respect misled to his prejudice, no error is committed in striking out the testimony. Moore v. Douglas, 132 Cal. 399; 64 Pac. 705. Where there is a difference between the allegations in the complaint and the proofs as to the amount of money to be paid, such difference is one only in quantity and extent, and does not constitute a legal variance, and could not have misled the plaintiff to his prejudice in maintaining his defense upon the merits to the defendant's cross-complaint, nor can it prevent the court from adjudging the relief to which the parties are entitled. Peasley v. Hart, 65 Cal. 522; 4 Pac. 537. Where the complaint alleges a joint purchase by a partnership and one of its members individually, and the evidence merely shows a sale to the partnership, the variance is not material (Redwood City Salt Co. v. Whitney, 153 Cal. 421; 95 Pac. 885); nor is the variance material, where the difference between the contract offered and received in evidence and the contract pleaded in the complaint was merely as to the price to be paid for the work (Christenson Lumber Co. v. Buckley, 17 Cal. App. 37; 118 Pac. 466); nor where the complaint alleges that goods damaged through the negligence of the defendant were in a building of the plaintiff, and the proof is that some of them were on the roof of the building (Yik Hon v. Spring Valley Water Works, 65 Cal. 619; 4 Pac. 666); nor where the complaint, in an action for damages, alleges that the defendants owned, as tenants in common, the entire block in front of which the accident occurred, and the proof is that they owned distinct parcels thereof in severalty (Gay v. Winter, 34 Cal. 153); nor where the complaint alleges a false arrest and imprisonment upon a charge of larceny, and the evidence is conflicting as to whether the arrest was upon that ground or upon a charge of disturbing the peace. Sebring v. Harris, 20 Cal. App. 56; 128 Pac. 7. Where the complaint alleges that the defendant entered on a date subsequent to that shown by the evidence, there is a variance; but, as the defendant was not misled to his prejudice, it is immaterial. Amador Gold Mine v. Amador Gold Mine, 114 Cal. 346; 46 Pac. 80. In an action for libel, proof that the libel included others besides the plaintiff is not a variance. Robinett v. McDonald, 65 Cal. 611; 4 Pac. 651. The variance between the description in an authorization to sell land and that in the printed receipt on the back thereof, is not fatal, where both refer to an attached diagram, and all parties had reference to the same property. Melone v. Ruffino, 129 Cal. 514; 79 Am. St. Rep. 127; 62 Pac. 93. In an action for damages caused by fire, the place of the origin of the fire is not material, and the defendant could not have been misled by a variance upon the point, to its prejudice, in maintaining its defense upon the merits. Butcher v. Vaca Valley etc. Ry. Co., 2 Cal. Unrep. 427; 5 Pac. 359. Where the complaint avers generally that property was loaned to the defendant, and that he converted it to his own use, and the evidence shows that it was loaned for a special purpose, but the defendant did not use it for that purpose, but converted it to his own use, the variance is immaterial, as the adverse party was not misled to his prejudice. Hitchcock v. McElrath, 72 Cal. 565; 14 Pac. 305. Where a total failure of consideration is set up in the answer, but the proof shows a partial failure only, the variance is not an available one. Plate v. Vega, 31 Cal. 383.

Proofs under pleadings. A party making an allegation that a sale was in writing is not thereby precluded from proving that the sale was a verbal one. Patterson v. Keystone Mining Co., 30 Cal. 360. Where the complaint alleges an express promise to pay a debt, barred by the statute of limitations, it is competent to prove an acknowledgment from which a promise to pay is implied. Farrell v. Palmer, 36 Cal. 187.

How variance objected to. Variance may be taken advantage of, either by objecting to the admissibility of the evidence or by motion for nonsuit. Elmore v. Elmore, 114 Cal. 516; 46 Pac. 458. Where the cause of action shown by the evidence is somewhat, but not radically, different from that stated in the complaint, the objection of variance should be presented either by a specific objection to the evidence, or by a motion for a nonsuit on that particular ground. Eversdon v. Mayhew, 85 Cal. 1; 21 Pac. 431; 24 Pac. 382. A material variance between the contract as alleged and as proved is a ground of nonsuit, unless the plaintiff obtains leave to amend his complaint so as to make it conform to the proofs. Tomlinson v. Monroe, 41 Cal. 94. A serious variance, claimed to exist between the evidence of the plaintiff and that of his principal witness, cannot be considered on a motion for nonsuit Wassermann v. Sloss, 117 Cal. 425; 59 Am. St. Rep. 209; 38 L. R. A. 176; 49 Pac. 566. The question of variance cannot be raised for the first time on appeal (Bell v. Knowles, 45 Cal. 193; Knox v. Higby, 76 Cal. 264; 18 Pac. 381; Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 936; Baxter v. Hart, 104 Cal. 344; 37 Pac. 941; Swamp Land Dist. v. Glide, 112 Cal. 85; 44 Pac. 451; Barrell v. Lake View Land Co., 122 Cal. 129; 54 Pac. 594; Yik Hon v. Spring Valley Water Works, 65 Cal. 619; 4 Pac. 666), because the plaintiff is thereby deprived of an opportunity to amend his complaint to obviate the objection of variance. Davey v. Southern Pacific Co., 116 Cal. 325; 48 Pac. 117. Where a party desires to raise the question as to any variance shown between allegations in a pleading and the proof offered at the trial, such objection must be presented to the trial court; otherwise it is waived. California Portland Cement Co. v. Wentworth Hotel Co., 16 Cal. App. 692; 118 Pac. 103, 113; Rutz v. Obear, 15 Cal. App. 435; 115 Pac. 67.

Amendment to cure variance. Objections on the ground of variance between the allegations of the complaint and the proof offered should be made at the trial, so that, if well taken, the complaint may be amended. Knox v. Higby, 76 Cal. 264; 18 Pac. 381. Under this section, amendments of pleadings may be allowed, upon terms. Hedstrom v. Union Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 278; 94 Pac. 386. Where the case as proved and as found is not the case made by the complaint, the judgment will be reversed on appeal, in order that the complaint may be properly amended. Bryan v. Tormey, 84 Cal. 126; 24 Pac. 319. Where the complaint is for goods sold to two defendants jointly, a judgment rendered against one will be reversed, so that the complaint may be amended; but the issue cannot be changed in the supreme court. Dobbs v. Purington, 136 Cal. 70; 68 Pac. 323. Where the complaint states a cause of action upon an unconditional contract, but the plaintiff introduces the contract in evidence, which limits the liability of the defendant to certain losses, the court may permit the complaint to be amended. Clark v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 36 Cal. 168. Under the Practice Act of 1850, where the defect did not appear on the face of the complaint, the defendant could bring it forward by his answer, and then, in certain cases, as a matter of course, and in others, on application to the court, and on such terms as were proper, the plaintiff could amend by adding or striking out the name of any party, or by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect, and, upon the amended complaint and the answer thereto, the parties were ready to proceed to trial upon the substantial merits. Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 167.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The latter part of this section has been added by the commissioners. It accords with the construction placed by the courts upon the section as it originally stood. Catlin v. Gunter, 10 How. Pr. 321; Cotheal v. Talmadge, 1 E. D. Smith, 575; and see also Began v. O'Rielly, 32 Cal. 11; Plate v. Vega, 31 Cal. 383.

§ 470. Immaterial variance, how provided for. Where the variance is not material, as provided in the last section, the court may direct the fact to be found according to the evidence, or may order an immediate amendment, without costs.

Variance, material. Ante, § 469.

Legislation § 470. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Finding according to evidence. If evidence, not constituting a material variance, is received at the trial, and the plaintiff does not claim that he was misled by its introduction, or in any way prevented from maintaining his cause of action upon its merits, and does not, either by motion to reopen the cause, or afterwards, upon his motion for a new trial, make it appear to the court that he was prejudiced thereby, or in any way prevented from introducing evidence, or that he was able to present any evidence that would tend to overcome the testimony, the evidence, and the findings thereon, are to be regarded as if defendant had amended his answer so as to present these issues, prior to entering upon the trial, or even prior to the introduction of any testimony: the court may properly consider, in making up its decision, any evidence, by depositions or otherwise, relevant to the issues made by an amended answer. Firebaugh v. Burbank, 121 Cal. 186; 53 Pac. 560. Where there is an immaterial variance, of such character as not to mislead the defendant, the court should admit the evidence and find the facts accordingly, or direct an amendment. Cobb v. Doggett, 142 Cal. 142; 75 Pac. 785. Although there is a variance between the allegations of the complaint and the proof, yet the court should find according to the evidence, and, if no other defense is established, should enter judgment thereon for the plaintiff, where he is entitled thereto. Herman v. Hecht, 116 Cal. 553; 48 Pac. 611. Where the variance between the allegations and the proof is such that the defendant was not misled in mistaking his defense, the court should find the fact according to the evidence, without any amendment of the complaint. Duke v. Huntington, 130 Cal. 272; 62 Pac. 510. Where a party has not been misled to his prejudice, in view of the pleadings and the evidence, the facts should be found according to the evidence. Lackmann v. Kearney, 142 Cal. 112; 75 Pac. 668. Where the variance is immaterial, the court may properly find according to the evidence. Vestal v. Young, 147 Cal. 715; 82 Pac. 381; Maionchi v. Nicholini, 1 Cal. App. 690; 82 Pac. 1052. In an action brought to enforce a special promise alleged to have been made on a certain day, the plaintiff may recover upon proof that the promise was made at any time before the commencement of the action, and need not prove that it was made on or about the time alleged in the complaint. Biven v. Bostwick, 70 Cal. 639; 11 Pac. 790.

Amendment to conform to proofs. A variance between the complaint and the evidence may be obviated by an amendment of the complaint so as to conform to the proof (Barrell v. Lake View Land Co., 122 Cal. 129; 54 Pac. 594), where the variance is not material (Hedstrom v. Union Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 278; 94 Pac. 386; Ramboz v. Stansbury, 13 Cal. App. 649; 110 Pac. 472); but the amendment cannot go beyond the proof (McDougald v. Argonaut Land etc. Co., 117 Cal. 87; 48 Pac. 1021); and the court may permit the amendment either on its own motion or on the motion of the plaintiff (Valencia v. Couch, 32 Cal. 339; 91 Am. Dec. 589), even during the trial (Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346; Clark v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 36 Cal. 168; Farmers' Nat. Gold Bank v. Stover, 60 Cal. 387); it has a discretion to allow the plaintiff so to amend his complaint (Yordi v. Yordi, 6 Cal. App. 20; 91 Pac. 348; Doherty v. California Navigation etc. Co., 6 Cal. App. 131; 91 Pac. 419), and it is justified in allowing the amendment (Mills v. Jackson, 19 Cal. App. 695; 127 Pac. 655), even without notice to the defendant. Ramboz v. Stansbury, 13 Cal. App. 649; 110 Pac. 472. Upon discovering a variance, the court should order the pleading amended, before making its findings or judgment. Hedstrom v. Union Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 278; 94 Pac. 386. The defendant may present, in his answer, any matter constituting a defense, and the court may permit him to amend his answer, in order to plead such matter, even after the trial has commenced. Firebaugh v. Burbank, 121 Cal. 186; 53 Pac. 560. An allegation rendered necessary by technical statutory rules may be supplied by amendment. Frost v. Witter, 132 Cal. 421; 84 Am. St. Rep. 53; 64 Pac. 705. While the variance may not be material, yet, if objection is made on that ground, good practice requires an explanation of the variance, and any errors found in an instrument set out in the complaint should be corrected by amendment. Ball v. Putnam, 123 Cal. 134; 55 Pac. 773.

Where the evidence conclusively shows the party to be entitled to relief, an amendment should be allowed or directed, in order to conform the pleadings to the facts which ought to be in issue. Connalley v. Peck, 3 Cal. 75; Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 488; 24 Pac. 930. In cases coming under this section, amendments to the pleading should not only be allowed, but required, not for the purpose of framing issues for the trial, but to supply technical defects. Hedstrom v. Union Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 278; 94 Pac. 386. The pleadings may, under this section, be amended without terms. Hedstrom v. Union Trust Co., 7 Cal. App. 278; 94 Pac. 386.

§ 471. What not to be deemed a variance. Where, however, the allegation of the claim or defense to which the proof is directed, is unproved, not in some particular or particulars only, but in its general scope and meaning, it is not to be deemed a case of variance, within the last two sections, but a failure of proof.

Proof.
1. Generally. Post, §§ 1824, 1869.
2. Failure of, dismissal for. Post, § 581, subd. 5.

Legislation § 471. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Amendment on total failure of proof. This section virtually forbids amendments, except where the allegation of the claim or defense would be changed in its general scope and meaning. Atlantic etc. Ry. Co. v. Laird, 164 U. S. 393; 41 L. Ed. 485; 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120. Variance between the allegations of the complaint and the proof, even if such as actually to mislead the defendant, does not necessarily constitute a failure of proof. Pollitz v. Wickersham, 150 Cal. 238; 88 Pac. 911. Where the allegations to which the proof is directed are not proved, not in some particular or particulars only, but in their general scope and meaning, it is error to allow the plaintiff to file a second amended complaint, which changes the proceeding from an action ex delicto to an action ex contractu. Hackett v. Bank of California, 57 Cal. 335. In an action for slander, the allegata and probata must substantially correspond: the plaintiff is not entitled to recover upon proof of words not set forth, or upon a failure to prove the slanderous words alleged. Haub v. Friermuth, 1 Cal. App. 556; 82 Pac. 571.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The allegations and proof must agree. For actions ex contractu and general matters, see Hathaway v. Ryan, 35 Cal. 188.

§ 472. Amendments of course, and effect of demurrer. Any pleading may be amended once by the party of course, and without costs, at any time before answer or demurrer filed, or after demurrer and before the trial of the issue of law thereon, by filing the same as amended and serving a copy on the adverse party, who may have ten days thereafter in which to answer or demur to the amended pleading. A demurrer is not waived by filing an answer at the same time; and when the demurrer to a complaint is overruled and there is no answer filed, the court may, upon such terms as may be just, allow an answer to be filed. If a demurrer to the answer be overruled, the facts alleged in the answer must be considered as denied, to the extent mentioned in section four hundred and sixty-two.

Complaint, amended, filing. Ante, § 432.
Answer no waiver of demurrer. Ante, § 431.

Legislation § 472. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 67, as amended by Stats. 1865-66, p. 703, which read: "After demurrer, and before the trial of the issue of law thereon, the pleadings demurred to may be amended as of course and without costs by filing the same as amended and serving a copy thereof on the adverse party or his attorney within ten days, who shall have ten days thereafter in which to demur or answer thereto; but a party shall not so amend more than once. A demurrer shall not be deemed waived by the filing of an answer at the same time of filing the demurrer; and when the demurrer to a complaint is overruled, and there is no answer filed, the court may upon terms allow an answer to be filed. If a demurrer to the answer be overruled, the facts alleged in the answer shall be considered as denied to the extent mentioned in section sixty-five. Where circumstances occurring subsequently to the commencement of the action render it proper, the same may be presented by supplemental pleadings and issue taken thereon in the same manner as in the case of original pleadings." The last sentence formed the basis of § 464, ante. The enactment of 1872 had (1) the word "must" instead of the words "may, upon such terms as may be just," and (2) the word "is" instead of "be," before "overruled."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 302.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 135; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Amendment as of course. The plaintiff is entitled to file the first amendment of his complaint as of course, where there has been no trial on the issue of law. Young v. Fink, 119 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 1060; Allen v. Marshall, 34 Cal. 165. Any pleading which may be amended once as of course, and without costs, may be so amended without application to the court, or permission therefrom: it is a right conferred upon the parties, equally with that of pleading originally, a right the court cannot take from a party to an action, and it must be exercised within the time and in the manner specified in the code; it is quite distinct from the numerous cases in which amendments to pleadings can only be made by leave of the court. Spooner v. Cady, 4 Cal. Unrep. 539; 36 Pac. 104. An amended answer cannot be filed as of course after a demurrer to the original answer has been disposed of, nor after the time within which the plaintiff might have demurred, but did not, has expired. Tingley v. Times Mirror Co., 151 Cal. 1; 89 Pac. 1097; Manha v. Union Fertilizer Co., 151 Cal. 581; 91 Pac. 393. This section is to be liberally construed, so as to confer an equal right to amend upon both parties as to all pleadings, but not so as to confer greater rights upon one, in that respect, than are accorded to the other, or to work a hardship upon either party, or to interfere with the progress of a trial after the issues of fact have been made. Tingley v. Times Mirror Co., 151 Cal. 1; 89 Pac. 1097. A defendant has not an absolute right, under this section, to file an amended answer at any time before trial (Manha v. Union Fertilizer Co., 151 Cal. 581; 91 Pac. 393); and it is not an abuse of discretion to refuse to allow further amendments, after a demurrer has been sustained to a third amended complaint. Billesbach v. Larkey, 161 Cal. 649; 120 Pac. 31. The right to amend, after the filing of a demurrer, is absolute, only when it is exercised before the demurrer is argued and submitted. Stewart v. Douglass, 148 Cal. 511; 83 Pac. 699; Manha v. Union Fertilizer Co., 151 Cal. 581; 91 Pac. 393. Upon the reversal of a judgment for the plaintiff, his right to amend the complaint is generally a matter of absolute right, and, when it is refused, the court must be able to say that the complaint cannot be amended so as to state a good cause of action. Norton v. Bassett, 158 Cal. 425; 111 Pac. 253. In general, the question whether or not the court has abused its discretion in granting or refusing permission to amend, depends upon the question whether the amendment is such a permissible one as will perfect a cause of action imperfectly pleaded. Norton v. Bassett, 158 Cal. 425; 111 Pac. 253. An amended demurrer relates to the time of the filing of the original demurrer, and may be made as of course. Pittman v. Carstenbrook, 11 Cal. App. 224; 104 Pac. 699.

Answer after demurrer overruled. When a demurrer to the complaint is overruled, and there is no answer on file, it is within the discretion of the court to grant leave to answer, or to enter final judgment, especially where the demurrer was manifestly frivolous, and confessedly put in to obtain time. Barron v. Deleval, 58 Cal. 95. The party whose demurrer is overruled ought to be required to obtain leave to answer, to satisfy the court that he has a substantial defense on the merits to the action; the allowance of leave to answer rests in the discretion of the court below, subject to review in case of its arbitrary or unreasonable exercise. Thornton v. Borland, 12 Cal. 438; Gillan v. Hutchinson, 16 Cal. 153. When a demurrer to the complaint is overruled, it is not necessary that the order fix the time within which the answer must be filed, although the court has power to fix such time as it may deem proper; but if not fixed, the defendant should answer within the same time as in case of service of a copy of the original complaint with summons. People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 127. Where the defense is invalid, it is not error to refuse to permit the defendant to amend his answer after judgment sustaining a demurrer thereto. Gillan v. Hutchinson, 16 Cal. 153. A refusal to allow an amendment cannot be reviewed on an appeal from an order denying a new trial, where the notice of intention to move for a new trial fails to set forth in what particular the court abused its discretion. Cook v. Suburban Realty Co., 20 Cal. App. 538; 129 Pac. 801.

Effect of sustaining demurrer. When a demurrer to the complaint is sustained on the ground that it does not state a cause of action, without leave to amend, the defendant is entitled to have final judgment entered in his favor. Mora v. Le Roy, 58 Cal. 8. Where the order refusing leave to amend the complaint is inserted in the order sustaining the demurrer thereto, it cannot be presumed that the plaintiff asked leave to amend in advance of the ruling on the demurrer; the order denying the right to amend is deemed excepted to by force of the statute, and the plaintiff is not required to move to vacate or modify it, in order to have the point reviewed on appeal. Schaake v. Eagle Automatic Can Co., 135 Cal. 472; 63 Pac. 1025; 67 Pac. 759. Where the demurrer to the complaint is sustained, with leave to amend, but the plaintiff declines to do so, the judgment will not be reversed on appeal, in order to allow an amendment. Sutter v. San Francisco, 36 Cal. 112. When the demurrer to the complaint is sustained, the plaintiff is entitled to amend, unless the complaint is so defective that it cannot be made good. Ridgway v. Bogan, 2 Cal. Unrep. 718; 12 Pac. 343. Where the demurrer to the complaint is sustained, and plaintiff did not ask leave to amend, he cannot raise the point on appeal. Durrell v. Dooner, 119 Cal. 411; 51 Pac. 628.

Demurrer not waived by answering. It seems to have been formerly held that the filing of an answer after the overruling of the demurrer is a waiver of the demurrer; but by this section, as amended, it is expressly enacted, that the demurrer is not waived by the filing of an answer at the same time. Curtiss v. Bachman, 84 Cal.

216; 24 Pac. 379. A demurrer for insufficiency of the complaint to state a cause of action is not waived by filing an answer at the same time, or subsequently to the filing and overruling of the demurrer, nor is the defect cured by verdict. Hurley v. Ryan, 119 Cal. 71; 51 Pac. 20. It being expressly enacted that the demurrer is not waived by the filing of the answer at the same time, a fortiori it is not waived by the filing of an answer, upon leave given by the court, subsequently to the filing and overruling of the demurrer. Curtiss v. Bachman, 84 Cal. 216; 24 Pac. 379.

Filing amended pleading as waiver of objection to sustaining or overruling of demurrer. See notes 19 Ann. Cas. 306; Ann. Cas. 1913B, 388.

Right to amend pleading after default judgment. See note Ann. Cas. 1913B, 481.

Amendment of pleading as requiring new process. See note Ann. Cas. 1913B, 831.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The original section (§ 67) has been changed so as to permit amendments of course before answer or demurrer. The last clause of the original section is in substance embodied in the last section of the preceding chapter. If the defendant demurs to the complaint, the plaintiff must not be denied leave to amend his complaint before the decision on the demurrer, and if the demurrer is sustained, the plaintiff must have leave to amend his complaint, unless it is so defective that it cannot be remedied by amendment. Lord v. Hopkins, 30 Cal. 76. When a demurrer is overruled, with leave to answer, the order need not fix the time within which the answer must be filed. The court has power to fix such time for answering, but where no time is fixed, the defendant should answer within the same time as in case of service of a copy of the original complaint. People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 128. Where a demurrer to a complaint is sustained, and plaintiff declines to amend, and appeals from the judgment and the order sustaining the demurrer, if the order sustaining the demurrer is affirmed, the supreme court cannot then grant plaintiff leave to amend his complaint. People v. Jackson, 24 Cal. 633. If the plaintiff amends his complaint, and the defendant obtains an order allowing his answer on file to stand as the answer to the amended complaint, the answer is to be treated as if filed when the order is made. Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131. The filing of a new complaint, after demurrer has been sustained, is not commencing a new action. Jones v. Frost, 28 Cal. 246. The party desiring amendment after demurrer sustained, must make his motion to the court, and if he does not so move, he cannot object on appeal that he was not permitted to amend. Smith v. Yreka Water Co., 14 Cal. 201. Where the complaint is defective, the court must sustain the demurrer, giving leave to the plaintiff to amend his complaint, and if the plaintiff then does not amend, final judgment should be given. Gallagher v. Delaney, 10 Cal. 410. The defense relied on in the answer being invalid, permission to amend after judgment sustaining a demurrer to the answer was properly refused. The allowance of the amendment was matter of discretion, for the abuse of which only could the supreme court interfere. Gillan v. Hutchinson, 16 Cal. 153. See also Thornton v. Borland, 12 Cal. 438; Seale v. McLaughlin, 28 Cal. 668. Answer cannot be struck out for failing to pay demurrer fees. People v. McClellan, 31 Cal. 101.

§ 473. Amendments by the court. Enlarging time to plead and relieving from judgments, etc. The court may in furtherance of justice, and on such terms as may be proper, allow a party to amend any pleading or proceeding by adding or striking out the name of any party, or by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect; and may, upon like terms, enlarge the time for answer or demurrer. The court may likewise, in its discretion, after notice to the adverse party, allow, upon such terms as may be just, an amendment to any pleading or proceeding in other particulars; and may upon like terms allow an answer to be made after the time limited by this code; and may, also, upon such terms as may be just, relieve a party or his legal representative from a judgment, order, or other proceeding taken against him through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect; provided, that application therefor be made within a reasonable time, but in no case exceeding six months after such judgment, order, or proceeding was taken. When from any cause the summons in an action has not been personally served on the defendant, the court may allow, on such terms as may be just, such defendant or his legal representative, at any time within one year after the rendition of any judgment in such action, to answer to the merits of the original action. When, in an action to recover the possession of personal property, the person making any affidavit did not truly state the value of the property, and the officer taking the property, or the sureties on any bond or undertaking is sued for taking the same, the officer or sureties may in their answer set up the true value of the property, and that the person in whose behalf said affidavit was made was entitled to the possession of the same when said affidavit was made, or that the value in the affidavit stated was inserted by mistake, the court shall disregard the value as stated in the affidavit, and give judgment according to the right of possession of said property at the time the affidavit was made.

Relief from judgment in justice's court. See post, § 859.

Legislation § 473. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 68, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 843, which read: "The court may, in furtherance of justice, and on such terms as may be proper, amend any pleading or proceedings by adding or striking out the name of any party, or by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect, and may, upon like terms, enlarge the time for an answer or demurrer, or demurrer to an answer filed. The court may likewise, upon affidavit showing good cause therefor, after notice to the adverse party, allow, upon such terms as may be just, an amendment to any pleading or proceeding in other particulars, and may, upon like terms, allow an answer to be made after the time limited by this act; and may, upon such terms as may be just, and upon payment of costs, relieve a party or his legal representatives from a judgment, order, or other proceeding taken against him through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect; and when, for any cause satisfactory to the court, or the judge at chambers, the party aggrieved has been unable to apply for the relief sought during the term at which such judgment, order, or proceeding complained of was taken, the court, or the judge at chambers in vacation, may grant the relief upon application made within a reasonable time, not exceeding five months after the adjournment of the term. When, from any cause, the summons and a copy of the complaint in an action have not been personally served on the defendant, the court may allow, on such terms as may be just, such defendant or his legal representatives at any time within six months after the rendition of any judgment in such action, to answer to the merits of the original action." When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "an" was omitted before the words "answer or demurrer," and, immediately after these words, the words "or demurrer to an answer filed" were also omitted, (2) the word "act" was changed to "code," and (3) the word "representatives" was changed to "representative."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 302, (1) inserting the words "allow a party to," before "amend any"; (2) changing the word "proceedings" to "proceeding," before "by adding"; (3) adding the words "in its discretion," instead of "upon affidavit showing good cause therefor"; (4) inserting the word "also" instead of the words "may, upon such terms as may be just, and upon payment of costs"; (5) after the word "legal," changing "representatives" to "representative"; (6) changing the word "cause" to "reason"; (7) changing the words "at chambers," after "judge," to "thereof"; (8) changing the words "been able" to "failed," before "to apply"; (9) changing the words "at chambers," before "in vacation," to "thereof"; (10) changing, after "exceeding," the word "five" to "six"; (11) omitting the words "and a copy of the complaint," after "summons"; (12) changing the word "have" to "has," before "not been"; (13) changing the words "six months" to "one year," before "after the rendition"; (14) adding the last sentence, beginning "When, in an action," which read as at present, except that it did not contain the words "or undertaking," after "any bond."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 2.

Application for relief, how made. An application for relief, under this section, must be by a proceeding in the cause wherein the default was taken, and not by a separate suit for relief against the judgment. Estate of Griffith, 84 Cal. 107; 23 Pac. 528; 24 Pac. 381. A motion to set aside a judgment is a direct and not a collateral attack upon such judgment; hence, errors which might be the subject of review on appeal therefrom may be considered on an appeal from an order denying the motion. People v. Greene, 74 Cal. 400; 5 Am. St. Rep. 448; 16 Pac. 197. Where judgment was entered by default, after service of summons by publication, and a motion is made to set it aside, six years after entry thereof, the attack, while it may be said to be direct, is, in a technical sense, collateral; it is a proceeding aside from or outside of the regular proceedings in the case. People v. Norris, 144 Cal. 422; 77 Pac. 998. The court may vacate a judgment entered by it, by other proceedings than by a motion for a new trial; and an error committed in vacating the judgment can be corrected on a direct appeal, but on a collateral attack the order will be deemed to have been properly made. Storke v. Storke, 111 Cal. 514; 44 Pac. 173; Butler v. Soule, 124 Cal. 69; 56 Pac. 601. A party making a collateral attack upon a judgment or order must show by the record lack of jurisdiction. Galvin v. Palmer, 134 Cal. 426; 66 Pac. 572. A motion, under this section, is usually made and determined upon affidavits alone, as authorized by § 2009, post. Guardianship of Van Loan, 142 Cal. 423; 76 Pac. 37. Upon a motion by a defendant to vacate a judgment by default, the better practice is to make, prepare, and exhibit to the court the answer he proposes or desires to make. Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422.

Nature and scope of relief provided. This section is remedial in its nature, and is to be liberally construed, with a view to promote justice. Palmer & Rey v. Barclay, 92 Cal. 199; 28 Pac. 226; Malone v. Big Flat Gold Mining Co., 93 Cal. 384; 28 Pac. 1063; Mitchell v. California etc. S. S. Co., 156 Cal. 576; 105 Pac. 590; Norton v. Bassett, 158 Cal. 425; 111 Pac. 253; Burr v. United Railroads, 163 Cal. 663; 126 Pac. 873; Application of Johnson, 7 Cal. App. 436; 94 Pac. 592; Lemon v. Hubbard, 10 Cal. App. 471; 102 Pac. 554; San Francisco etc. Home Bldg. Soc. v. Leonard, 17 Cal. App. 254; 119 Pac. 405; Jaques v. Owens, 18 Cal. App. 114; 122 Pac. 430. The plaintiff, as well as the defendant, may invoke its relief (Lemon v. Hubbard, 10 Cal. App. 471; 102 Pac. 554); and it is applicable to the determination of the question whether a decree as to property conforms to due process of law. Hoffman v. Superior Court, 151 Cal. 386; 90 Pac. 939.

Discretion of court in granting or refusing relief. The granting of relief, under this section, is largely within the discretion of the court (Malone v. Big Flat Gravel Mining Co., 93 Cal. 384; 28 Pac. 1063; Webster v. Somer, 159 Cal. 459; 114 Pac. 575; Link v. Jarvis, 5 Cal. Unrep.

750; 33 Pac. 206; Murphy v. Stelling, 1 Cal. App. 95; 81 Pac. 730; Pelegrinelli v. McCloud River Lumber Co., 1 Cal. App. 593; 82 Pac. 695; Freeman v. Brown, 5 Cal. App. 516; 90 Pac. 970; Doherty v. California Nav. etc. Co., 6 Cal. App. 131; 91 Pac. 419; Klokke v. Raphael, 8 Cal. App. 1; 96 Pac. 392; Lemon v. Hubbard, 10 Cal. App. 471; 102 Pac. 554); though in some cases it is without any discretion in the premises. Holiness Church v. Metropolitan Church Ass'n, 12 Cal. App. 445; 107 Pac. 633. The principal purpose of vesting the court with discretionary power is to enable it so to mold and direct its proceedings as to dispose of cases on their substantial merits, when this can be done without injustice to either party. Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227. The effect of the qualifying phrase, "on such terms as may be just," in this section, is, not to give the court power or discretion to refuse the relief when the statutory conditions, expressed and implied, are met, but merely to confer upon it the power, when it finds the defendant entitled to the relief, to consider whether or not the defendant may not have been negligent in a degree which would amount to laches, or create an estoppel, and whether or not the plaintiff, or his successor, may not have innocently, on the faith of the judgment, incurred costs or expenses which the defendant, in justice, should refund, and to impose on the defendant such terms as may be necessary to do complete justice between the parties, and to fix the time for filing the answer, and limit and define its character, so that it shall be addressed to the merits. Gray v. Lawlor, 151 Cal. 352; Boland v. All Persons, 160 Cal. 486; Osmont v. All Persons, 165 Cal. 587.

Power of appellate court under this section. An appellate court, whether this section is applicable to it or not, should, when the facts justify it, allow a transcript to be filed after the time fixed, and retain the appeal (Estate of Keating, 158 Cal. 109; 110 Pac. 109); but if rules similar to those governing applications for relief under this section are to be applied in the appellate court, the party asking relief from his default must at least show that he has consulted counsel, and has been advised by them that he has reasonable ground to expect a reversal if the appeal is heard upon its merits. Erving v. Napa Valley Brewing Co., 16 Cal. App. 41; 116 Pac. 331. An appeal is not subordinate to an application for relief, under this section. Nevin v. Gary, 12 Cal. App. 1; 106 Pac. 422. A clerical error, disclosed by the pleadings, will be corrected in the appellate court, at the appellant's cost, where no motion was made for its correction in the court below. Tryon v. Sutton, 13 Cal. 490.

Remedy provided for mistakes of law and fact. The court has power to allow an amendment correcting mistakes of law as well as of fact (Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227; Gould v. Stafford, 101 Cal. 32; 35 Pac. 429; Mitchell v. California etc. S. S. Co., 156 Cal. 576; 105 Pac. 590; Churchill v. More, 7 Cal. App. 767; 96 Pac. 108; Dent v. Superior Court, 7 Cal. App. 683; 95 Pac. 672; Amestoy Estate Co. v. Los Angeles, 5 Cal. App. 273; 90 Pac. 42), and to grant relief against a mistake in any respect; although, it may be, the court should require a stronger showing to justify relief from the effect of a mistake of law than in case of a mistake as to a matter of fact. Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227. Not all mistakes of law are to be relieved against; a sound discretion, controlled by an enlightened judgment, keeping in view public interests, and the due and orderly administration of the law, is to be exercised in granting that relief which justice between the parties requires. Douglass v. Todd, 96 Cal. 655; 31 Am. St. Rep. 247; 31 Pac. 623. Where a party has, in good faith, made an earnest effort to ascertain the condition of his case, and has availed himself of such means as would be ordinarily employed, but is misled thereby, he can justly claim that his mistake was not the result of negligence, and he cannot be deprived of the remedy provided by this section. Melde v. Reynolds, 129 Cal. 308; 61 Pac. 932. The general rule, that a party cannot be relieved from an ordinary contract, which is in its nature final, on account of a mistake of law, does not apply to proceedings in an action at law, pending and undetermined. Gould v. Stafford, 101 Cal. 32; 35 Pac. 429. Courts have power, under this section, to relieve parties from mistakes as to the legal effect of acts of their attorneys. Broderick v. Cochran, 18 Cal. App. 202; 122 Pac. 972. A mistake in the name of a party may be corrected. Nisbet v. Clio Mining Co., 2 Cal. App. 436; 83 Pac. 1077. The correction of a mistake as to the names of the assignors of a cause of action does not affect the identity of the cause of action sued upon, as respects the statute of limitations. Nellis v. Pacific Bank, 127 Cal. 166; 59 Pac. 830. A mistake as to the date upon which the service of summons was made is such a mistake as is clearly contemplated by this section, and against which the court may grant relief by vacating a judgment by default. Miller v. Carr, 116 Cal. 378; 58 Am. St. Rep. 180; 48 Pac. 324. An allegation in a cross-complaint, that, at the time an agreement was executed, both parties intended that it should include the property sued for, and that the same was omitted through a mistake, is, in the absence of a demurrer, a sufficient allegation of the mistake in the execution of the agreement. Peasley v. McFadden, 68 Cal. 611; 10 Pac. 179. Relief on the ground of a mistake of fact, not discovered within six months after the entry of the decree, is not confined to a motion under this section (Gerig v. Loveland, 130 Cal. 512; 62 Pac. 830); but equitable relief may be had, upon the setting out, in extenso, of the facts justifying such relief, in addition to the ordinary statements of the cause of action. Brackett v. Banegas, 116 Cal. 278; 58 Am. St. Rep. 164; 48 Pac. 90.

Correction of clerical errors. The authority of the court to cause its records to be corrected in accordance with the facts, is undoubted. Kaufman v. Shain, 111 Cal. 16; 52 Am. St. Rep. 139; 43 Pac. 393. The court may, at any time, amend a judgment, where the record discloses that the entry on the minutes does not correctly state the judgment (Seamman v. Bonslett, 118 Cal. 93; 62 Am. St. Rep. 226; 50 Pac. 272); it has power, at all times, in a proper case, to direct any amendment or correction in a judgment, to the end that, as entered, it may express what was rendered, and the record thus made to speak the fact (Cosby v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 45; 42 Pac. 460); and, while it has physical control of its records, may amend its judgment or orders, where the record furnishes the data by which to amend, and where the necessity for the amendment is apparent upon the record (Bostwick v. McEvoy, 62 Cal. 496; Dickey v. Gibson, 113 Cal. 26; 54 Am. St. Rep. 321; 45 Pac. 15; Seamman v. Bonslett, 118 Cal. 93; 62 Am. St. Rep. 226; 50 Pac. 272); and it is its duty so to amend its judgment or record as to make it conform to its actual decision (Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita etc. Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301; O'Brien v. O'Brien, 124 Cal. 422; 57 Pac. 225); but not to express something the court did not pronounce, even though the amendment embraces matters that ought to have been pronounced. First Nat. Bank v. Dusy, 110 Cal. 69; 42 Pac. 476. The court may amend its judgments or orders while the records are under its control, and where they furnish the data by which to amend, and the necessity for the amendment is manifest therein (Bostwick v. McEvoy, 62 Cal. 496); but the court may amend its record upon any competent legal evidence. Kaufman v. Shain, 111 Cal. 16; 52 Am. St. Rep. 139; 43 Pac. 393. Any error or defect in the record, occurring through acts of omission or commission of the clerk, that may be termed a clerical misprision, if the record affords evidence thereof, may be corrected at any time by the court, upon its own motion or upon the motion of an interested party, either with or without notice (Seamman v. Bonslett, 118 Cal. 93; 62 Am. St. Rep. 226; 50 Pac. 272; Dickey v. Gibson, 113 Cal. 26; 54 Am. St. Rep. 321; 45 Pac. 15), even after appeal and affirmance of judgment, and the issuance and service of execution (Rousset v. Boyle, 45 Cal. 64), providing the party moving proceeds with due diligence (Hegeler v. Henckell, 27 Cal. 491), and the mistake is one which does not go to the merits of the case. Fallon v. Brittan, 84 Cal. 511; 24 Pac. 381; Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22; O'Brien v. O'Brien, 124 Cal. 422; 57 Pac. 225. Such amendments can be made after the expiration of six months from the entry of the judgment (Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22), but they do not operate to extend the time for taking an appeal from the decree. Fallon v. Brittan, 84 Cal. 511; 24 Pac. 381. An error of description in a name, which is apparent upon the face of the record, and amounting only to a clerical error, may be corrected by the court at any time. Fallon v. Brittan, 84 Cal. 511, 24 Pac. 381. The fact that the judgment is signed by the judge does not show that the mistake is not a clerical error. Bemmerly v. Woodward, 124 Cal. 568; 57 Pac. 561. The action of the clerk in inserting in a decree of foreclosure the amount of costs as claimed by the plaintiff, before the same has been taxed or ascertained, is a mere clerical misprision, which may be amended by the court, and does not affect the validity of the decree, or the validity of the order of sale thereunder. Janes v. Bullard, 107 Cal. 130; 40 Pac. 108. If one person is named as defendant in a suit, and is served with summons, and suffers default, but by a clerical misprision a decree is entered against another, the error may be corrected at any time by the court, and its power to do so is not affected by the fact of an appeal taken in the name of the misnamed defendant. Fay v. Stubenrauch, 141 Cal. 573; 75 Pac. 174. An accident in entering judgment against two defendants instead of one, if not corrected before motion to set it aside is made, may be corrected by amendment, in the discretion of the court. Lewis v. Rigney, 21 Cal. 268. Where the court, by its decree, ordered encumbered property to be sold by the sheriff, while the order, made and entered the same day, appointed a commissioner to discharge the same duty, this is a mere oversight by the court, which may be remedied at any time on motion, by striking out the word "sheriff," wherever it occurs, and inserting "commissioner." McDermot v. Barton, 106 Cal. 194; 39 Pac. 538. Where a defendant is convicted of practicing dentistry without a license, and judgment is rendered against him, an erroneous recital in the entry of the judgment, that the defendant had been convicted of practicing "medicine" without a license, is a mere clerical mistake, which the court may amend to conform to the facts. Ex parte Hornef, 154 Cal. 355; 97 Pac. 891.

Correction of judicial errors. A judicial error can be remedied, only through motion for a new trial or on appeal (Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22; O'Brien v. O'Brien, 124 Cal. 422; 57 Pac. 225; Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita etc. Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301); it cannot be summarily corrected at any time. Forrester v. Lawler, 14 Cal. App. 171; 111 Pac. 284. The court has no power, after the entry of judgment, to correct judicial omissions or mistakes (First Nat. Bank v. Dusy, 110 Cal. 69; 42 Pac. 476), or to make a new order, directing a relief different from that embraced in the original order and judgment; and where the judgment is entered by the clerk exactly as ordered by the court, there is no mistake or misprision of the clerk; if any error is committed in rendering the judgment, it is a judicial error, which can be remedied only by an appeal or by a motion for a new trial. Bryne v. Hoag, 116 Cal. 1; 47 Pac. 775; Lemon v. Hubbard, 10 Cal. App. 471; 102 Pac. 554. Where judgment was entered against an administrator, substituted for a deceased plaintiff, and a blank was left for costs against the plaintiff personally, such judgment cannot, years afterwards, be amended by the record as a mere clerical misprision, so as to make the costs chargeable against the estate; and there being no record evidence to show that the judgment entered was not the correct judgment of the court, it must, if erroneous, stand as the judgment until reversed. Leonis v. Leffingwell, 126 Cal. 369; 58 Pac. 940. A record sent to the supreme court cannot be assailed by evidence of lower dignity than itself; if it is incorrect, the court below, on a proper showing by evidence, has power to alter it so as to make it speak the truth. Boyd v. Burrel, 60 Cal. 280.

Matters which may be amended. A void process cannot be amended, but an erroneous process may. Newmark v. Chapman, 53 Cal. 557. Proof of service of summons may be amended, where imperfect (Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509); as may also an insufficient affidavit of merits, on motion to change the place of trial. Palmer & Rey v. Barclay, 92 Cal. 199; 28 Pac. 226; Jaques v. Owens, 18 Cal. App. 114; 122 Pac. 430. An affidavit and undertaking on attachment, before the amendment of 1909 to § 558, post, was not amendable. Tibbet v. Tom Sue, 122 Cal. 206; 54 Pac. 741. No substantial change can be made in an allowed claim after the expiration of the time allowed for the presentation of claims (Estate of Sullenberger, 72 Cal. 549; 14 Pac. 513; Estate of Turner, 128 Cal. 388; 60 Pac. 967); and an application to amend for inadvertence or mistake cannot be made after the expiration of six months from the allowance of the claim. Estate of Turner, 128 Cal. 388; 60 Pac. 967. A claim of lien is not capable of being amended or reformed (Madera Flume etc. Co. v. Kendall, 120 Cal. 182; 65 Am. St. Rep. 177; 52 Pac. 304), but a cost-bill is. Burnham v. Hays, 3 Cal. 115; 58 Am. Dec. 389. A stipulation, entered into between attorneys in a pending action, which performs the function of a replication to the answer, may be amended or set aside, as if it were a pleading. Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227. The trial court cannot, after a judgment has been affirmed on appeal, change or modify such final judgment. Wickersham v. Crittenden, 103 Cal. 582; 37 Pac. 513.

Liberality in allowing amendments to pleadings. As experience shows that, in the attainment of justice by resort to judicial tribunals, amendments to pleadings are of ever-recurring necessity, the tendency of judicial decision is towards liberality in permitting, where it can be done without working great delay, such amendments as facilitate the production of all the facts bearing upon the questions involved. Burns v. Scooffy, 98 Cal. 271; 33 Pac. 86. The liberality required in allowing amendments to pleadings should be exercised only in the furtherance of justice (Bank of Woodland v. Heron, 122 Cal. 107; 54 Pac. 537); and such amendments should be allowed at any stage of the trial, in the furtherance of justice (Link v. Jarvis, 5 Cal. Unrep. 750; 33 Pac. 206; Hanson v. Stinehoff, 139 Cal. 169; 72 Pac. 913; Tingley v. Times Mirror Co., 151 Cal. 1; 89 Pac. 1097), where they do not seriously impair the rights of the opposite party: this rule is particularly applicable to amendments to the answer. Gould v. Stafford, 101 Cal. 32; 35 Pac. 429. It is proper to allow the pleadings to be amended so that they shall conform to the grounds upon which the case must be tried. Chalmers v. Chalmers, 81 Cal. 81; 22 Pac. 395. It is within the discretion of the court to permit the plaintiff so to amend his complaint as to correct an inconsistency between the allegations and the prayer (French v. McCarthy, 125 Cal. 508; 58 Pac. 154); and he should be permitted so to amend his complaint as to present his legal rights for the determination of the jury, otherwise the case should be dismissed. McDonald v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 15 Cal. 145. Where the plaintiff has a good cause of action, which, by accident or mistake, he has failed to set out in his complaint, the court, on motion for judgment on the pleadings, should, on his application so to do, permit him to amend; but where he fails to make such application, the defendant is entitled to judgment on the pleadings. Kelley v. Kriess, 68 Cal. 210; 9 Pac. 129. There is no error in permitting the plaintiff so to amend his complaint as to express the cause of action originally intended, but not clearly expressed, where such intention can be gathered from the face of the pleading. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 28 Cal. 673. Permission to amend should be granted, unless it is clear to the trial court that a defective complaint cannot be amended so as to obviate objections made thereto. Payne v. Baehr, 153 Cal. 441; 95 Pac. 895. Where the amended complaint is unobjectionable, and judgment is rendered thereupon, the fact that the original complaint did not state a cause of action is immaterial. Hunter v. Bryant, 98 Cal. 247; 33 Pac. 51. Where an action was tried, on both sides, upon a wrong theory, the plaintiff will be permitted, upon reversal of the judgment, to amend his complaint so as to avail himself of any equities, where, under pleadings properly framed for that purpose, he might be entitled to a judgment for specific performance, or some other equitable relief. Fudickar v. East Riverside Irrigation Dist., 109 Cal. 29; 41 Pac. 1024. In an action to recover for services, it is error not to permit the complaint to be amended so as to state the value of the services. Cowdery v. McChesney, 124 Cal. 363; 57 Pac. 221. Where the plaintiff, in replevin, discovers, before trial, that he is not entitled to all of the property sued for, it is within the discretion of the court to permit the complaint to be so amended as to exclude therefrom the portion to which he is not entitled. Mills v. Jackson, 19 Cal. App. 695; 127 Pac. 655. It can very rarely happen that a court will be justified in refusing a party leave to amend his pleading so that he may properly present his case, and obviate any objection that the facts constituting his cause of action or his defense are not embraced within the issues, or properly presented by his pleading; this rule is especially cogent where the objection to the testimony is, not that it is then for the first time brought to the notice of the adversary, but that, by reason of the language of the pleading, it is not within the terms of the issue. Guidery v. Green, 95 Cal. 630; 30 Pac. 786; Crosby v. Clark, 132 Cal. 1; 63 Pac. 1022. Where amendments proposed to a complaint, together with the complaint, state a cause of action, the refusal to allow such amendments is error. Campbell-Kawannanakoa v. Campbell, 152 Cal. 201; 92 Pac. 184. To strike out a pleading susceptible of being amended by a statement of facts known to exist, and which constitute a cause of action or defense to the action, is a harsh proceeding, and should be resorted to only in extreme cases: to refuse permission to answer, with a valid defense in hand, can be justified only in the face of facts showing willful neglect, inexcusable carelessness, or irreparable injury to the plaintiff. Burns v. Scooffy, 98 Cal. 271; 33 Pac. 86. A defective complaint in an attachment suit may be amended without affecting the attachment lien; and an objection that the amendment stated a different cause of action from that declared on in the original complaint cannot be urged for the first time in a collateral suit on a bond given for a release of the attachment. Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 971. Where the complaint states a cause of action, it is an abuse of discretion, apparent upon the face of the record, to sustain demurrers thereto, on any ground, without granting leave to amend; but where the fault cannot be remedied, or it is evident that there is a want of facts, further amendments should be refused. Schaake v. Eagle Automatic Can Co., 135 Cal. 472; 63 Pac. 1025; 67 Pac. 759. While it is generally a matter of absolute rule to permit the plaintiff to amend his complaint, yet permission may be refused, where the complaint cannot be so amended as to state a good cause of action (People v. Mount Shasta Mfg. Co., 107 Cal. 256; 40 Pac. 391); and where the complaint is incapable of amendment, in any radical particular, the refusal of the court to allow the plaintiff to amend is not error (San Joaquin etc. Irrigation Co. v. Stanislaus County, 155 Cal. 21; 99 Pac. 365); and where the granting of an application for leave to amend will work a continuance of the trial, the refusal is justified. Manha v. Union Fertilizer Co., 151 Cal. 581; 91 Pac. 393. A plaintiff who declines to amend his complaint, when offered the opportunity to do so, cannot afterwards be allowed to treat it as amended, where no amendment was in fact made. Carpentier v. Brenham, 50 Cal. 549; Guidery v. Green, 95 Cal. 630; 30 Pac. 786. Error of the court in striking out portions of an original complaint, is waived by filing an amended complaint subsequently. Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085. There is no distinction between an amendment "to" a pleading and an amendment "of" a pleading. Giddings v. 76 Land and Water Co., 109 Cal. 116; 41 Pac. 788.

Discretion as to amendments. The court always has a discretion to grant or to refuse leave to amend, under this section (Norton v. Bassett, 158 Cal. 425; 111 Pac. 253; Smith v. Riverside Groves etc. Co., 19 Cal. App. 165; 124 Pac. 870); and where it abuses or illegally exercises such discretion, its action will be corrected on appeal (Cooke v. Spears, 2 Cal. 409; 56 Am. Dec. 348); but the appellate court will not interfere with the action of the lower court, unless it is shown by the record that there has been an abuse of discretion. Stewart v. Douglass, 148 Cal. 511; 83 Pac. 699; Thornton v. Borland, 12 Cal. 438; Robinson v. Smith, 14 Cal. 254; Gillan v. Hutchinson, 16 Cal. 153; Lestrade v. Barth, 17 Cal. 285; Wixon v. Devine, 91 Cal. 477; 27 Pac. 777. The refusal of the trial court to allow amendments is not, per se, error. Emeric v. Alvarado, 90 Cal. 444; 27 Pac. 356. Where the complaint is amended at the trial, the court, in the exercise of its discretion, may determine the time within which the answer or a demurrer thereto shall be filed; and where this discretion is not abused, the action of the lower court will not be reviewed. Schultz v. McLean, 109 Cal. 437; 42 Pac. 557. In an ordinary case of absence of averment, or of insufficient averment, it is an abuse of discretion to refuse leave to amend. Robertson v. Burrell, 110 Cal. 568; 42 Pac. 1086. In an action for damages for the death of a person, it is not error for the court, in its discretion, during the progress of the trial, and several months after the answer is filed, to refuse to allow an amendment to the answer, alleging, on information and belief, the existence of other heirs, so as to authorize the admission of evidence on that subject, where the defendant has rested until such time, without alleging the existence of other heirs, and without showing why an earlier objection was not made. Salmon v. Rathjens, 152 Cal. 290; 92 Pac. 733. Leave to file an additional answer, which raises an issue antagonistic to that made by the complaint and the defendant's original answer, is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the court, and refusal to allow the filing of such answer will not be interfered with, in the absence of anything tending to show an abuse of discretion (Harney v. Corcoran, 60 Cal. 314); but where it clearly appears that a proposed amendment is in furtherance of justice, and is seasonably presented at an opportune time, a refusal to allow it is an abuse of the discretion committed to the trial court by this section. San Francisco etc. Home Bldg. Soc. v. Leonard, 17 Cal. App. 254; 119 Pac. 405. It is not an abuse of discretion for the court to refuse to allow the filing of an answer which changes the issue already made in the case (Harney v. Corcoran, 60 Cal. 314); or to refuse leave to amend, in the absence of a specification of what amendment could be made, or which was desired to be made (Burling v. Newlands, 112 Cal. 476; 44 Pac. 810); or to refuse to allow the plaintiff to file a second amended complaint, where the transcript does not show that any proposed amendment was served or presented, or that the notice of motion pointed out the precise amendment which the plaintiff would ask leave to make or to file (Martin v. Thompson, 62 Cal. 618; 45 Am. Rep. 663); or to refuse to allow an amendment to an answer, in order to plead the statute of limitations, where the application therefor was not made until after the trial and submission of the cause (San Joaquin Valley Bank v. Dodge, 125 Cal. 77; 57 Pac. 687); or to refuse to permit the plaintiff to amend his complaint, after the trial had been in progress several days, and he had notice that the defendant considered his complaint defective, where a continuance would be the result (Hancock v. Hubbell, 71 Cal. 537; 12 Pac. 618); or to refuse to permit the defendant to file an amended answer, where the matters of amendment are sufficiently pleaded in the original answer (Heilbron v. Kings River etc. Canal Co., 76 Cal. 11; 17 Pac. 933); nor is it an abuse of discretion for the court to permit the defendant, at the close of the trial, so to amend his answer as to set up the pendency of another action, involving the same subject-matter (Coubrough v. Adams, 70 Cal. 374; 11 Pac. 634); or to allow an answer to be amended, in order to admit written evidence, well known to the plaintiff long before the trial, where he could not be surprised by its production, and where its admission is eminently just, to settle the rights of the parties upon the merits (Hart v. British etc. Ins. Co., 80 Cal. 440; 22 Pac. 302); or to allow the correction of an evident mistake, made in describing land sought to be recovered (Heilbron v. Heinlen, 72 Cal. 376; 14 Pac. 24); or to allow an amendment, in order to change an action seeking to recover on a contract to an action on quantum meruit (Cox v. McLaughlin, 76 Cal. 60; 9 Am. St. Rep. 164; 18 Pac. 100); and the court, in its discretion, may allow a motion to be renewed, which it has previously denied. Mace v. O'Reilley, 70 Cal. 231; 11 Pac. 721. Where the court allows the plaintiff at once to amend his complaint, which is done in a few lines, there is no abuse of discretion in ruling the defendant to an immediate answer, which is made at once, briefly, sufficiently, and without any inconvenience: such action cannot be construed as a surprise sprung upon the defendant. Ellen v. Lewison, 88 Cal. 253; 26 Pac. 109. After a final judgment sustaining a demurrer to a complaint, the action of the court in setting aside the judgment, and permitting the plaintiff to file an amendment so as to set up a mistake, is an abuse of discretion, where the mistake was apparent upon the face of the instrument sued on, and was known to the plaintiff months before the commencement of the action. Weisenborn v. Neumann, 60 Cal. 376.

Amendments should be in furtherance of justice. The court has power to allow amendments at any stage of the proceedings, in the advancement of justice; and this power should be liberally exercised, in order to secure a fair and speedy trial on the merits, where the adverse party will not be prejudiced. Lestrade v. Barth, 17 Cal. 285; Hayden v. Hayden, 46 Cal. 332; Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519; 17 Pac. 673; Beronio v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 86 Cal. 415; 21 Am. St. Rep. 57; 24 Pac. 1093; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Jones, 89 Cal. 507; 26 Pac. 1089; Burns v. Scooffy, 98 Cal. 271; 33 Pac. 86. Leave to amend, when addressed to the discretion of the court, should be liberally granted, in order to subserve the ends of justice (Robertson v. Burrell, 110 Cal. 568; 42 Pac. 1086; McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339; Kirby v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 604; 10 Pac. 119), and to secure a fair and speedy trial on the merits (Smith v. Yreka Water Co., 14 Cal. 201; Hayden v. Hayden, 46 Cal. 332; Farmers' Nat. Gold Bank v. Stover, 60 Cal. 387), where the adverse party will not be prejudiced. Kirstein v. Madden, 38 Cal. 158; Wells Fargo & Co. v. McCarthy, 5 Cal. App. 301; 90 Pac. 203. The power of the court to allow amendments to be made is granted in general terms, unqualified by anything that relates to the jurisdiction of the court; the mere fact that the matters to be amended relate to the jurisdiction of the court does not affect the power of the court to allow the amendments (Contra Costa Coal Mines R. R. Co. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 323); nor is the power of the court to allow amendments limited by the character of the mistake that calls forth its exercise: the fact that the proposed amendment is based merely upon a mistake of law is immaterial. Gould v. Stafford, 101 Cal. 32; 35 Pac. 429. The court should allow an amendment, whenever it appears that a party has committed a mistake, or error has occurred which could not have been reasonably avoided. Smith v. Brown, 5 Cal. 118. Amendments are not allowed as matter of course, but only upon good cause shown therefor. Hayden v. Hayden, 46 Cal. 332. In passing upon an application for leave to amend, the controlling principle must be, whether the amendment is in furtherance of justice; and the application should be refused where the demand is unconscionable. Daley v. Russ, 86 Cal. 114; 24 Pac. 867. The court has no power to strike out allegations that will deprive a party of an opportunity to try the question of his right to a portion of the property involved in the action. Howell v. Foster, 65 Cal. 169; 3 Pac. 647. A motion to amend the findings of fact, conclusions of law, and decree, after the decree has been entered in the case is irregular practice: the appropriate proceeding is a motion for a new trial. Pico v. Sepulveda, 66 Cal. 336; 5 Pac. 515.

Amendment in superior court of pleadings in justice's court. Upon an appeal from a judgment of a justice's court, on questions of law and fact, the superior court may allow amendments to the pleadings, where issues of fact were made in the court below (Ketchum v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 494; 4 Pac. 492); and, also, where the action is certified from a justice's court to the superior court, the latter may permit amendments showing that the title to or the possession of real property is involved in the action, and that therefore the superior court has jurisdiction; or it may permit amendments in any other respect, to the same extent as if the action had been commenced therein. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 114 Cal. 501; 46 Pac. 604.

Amendments changing parties. A party having leave to amend may bring in new parties, without special permission, where they are proper or necessary parties. Louvall v. Gridley, 70 Cal. 507; 11 Pac. 777. The court may allow the plaintiff to amend his complaint, by adding the name of another party plaintiff, where it does not affect the substantial rights of the parties (Polk v. Coffin, 9 Cal. 56; Blood v. Fairbanks, 48 Cal. 171); or by striking out the name of a party, on like conditions (Tormey v. Pierce, 49 Cal. 306); or by striking from the caption of the complaint the names of certain defendants, where the other defendants are not prejudiced thereby. Doane v. Houghton, 75 Cal. 360; 17 Pac. 426. Where an order is made by the court, striking names from the complaint, it is not necessary to file an amended complaint in the names of the remaining plaintiffs. Tormey v. Pierce, 49 Cal. 306. A complaint against a person in his representative capacity cannot be so amended as to state a cause of action against him personally: such amendment would be an entire change of the party defendant, and present a different suit. Sterrett v. Barker, 119 Cal. 492; 51 Pac. 695. The substitution of one party for another, by order of court, is not such an amendment of a pleading as is required to be made on notice, or to be engrossed otherwise than to be entered in the minutes of the court; an order of court allowing the amendment of a pleading, by adding or striking out the name of a party, is different from an order of court substituting a party: the substitution is made by the court, whereas the amendment is allowed to be made by the party; an amendment, by adding or striking out the name of a party, is allowed only at the instance of the party whose pleading is to be so amended, while the substitution may be had at the instance of either party; the addition or the striking out of the name of a party may require a different defense, but the substitution of a party necessitates no change in that regard. Kittle v. Bellegarde, 86 Cal. 556; 25 Pac. 55.

Amendment of complaint, changing cause of action. A complaint cannot be so amended as to introduce a new cause of action, particularly where such new cause of action is barred by the statute at the time of the proposed amendment (Peiser v. Griffin, 125 Cal. 9; 57 Pac. 690); nor is the plaintiff at liberty to strike out the entire substance and prayer of his complaint, and insert a new cause of action by way of amendment (Frost v. Witter, 132 Cal. 421; 84 Am. St. Rep. 53; 64 Pac. 705); but an amendment to the complaint may be allowed, where it does not change the nature of the action, or state an entirely new cause of action, although it enlarges or adds to the property described in the original complaint. Bulwer Consol. Mining Co. v. Standard Consol. Mining Co., 83 Cal. 613; 23 Pac. 1109. The rule that a new or different cause of action cannot be introduced by an amendment must be accepted with some qualification; for the most common kinds of amendments are those where the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; therefore all that can be required is, that a wholly different cause of action shall not be introduced; or in other words, the matter of amendment must not be foreign to the original complaint. Frost v. Witter, 132 Cal. 421; 84 Am. St. Rep. 53; 64 Pac. 705. A plaintiff should not be allowed to amend his declaration so as to change the proceeding from an action ex contractu to an action ex delicto (Ramirez v. Murray, 5 Cal. 222); or an action ex delicto to an action ex contractu. Hackett v. Bank of California, 57 Cal. 335. Where a cause of action is limited to a claim presented to the administrator, and objections to the complaint cannot be met, the complaint cannot be amended so as to set up a new cause of action, upon a subsequent conditional promise. Morehouse v. Morehouse, 140 Cal. 88; 73 Pac. 738. An amendment changing only the remedy, and not the cause of action, is permissible. Frost v. Witter, 132 Cal. 421; 84 Am. St. Rep. 53; 64 Pac. 705. A cause of action at law may be so amended as to change it into a suit in equity (Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519; 17 Pac. 673), where the claim, as presented to the executor, and upon which it is based, stated all the facts upon which the plaintiff relied. Porter v. Fillebrown, 119 Cal. 235; 51 Pac. 322. Under proper circumstances, the trial court may permit a cross-complaint in an action to be amended so as to set up fraud, even after the case has been submitted for decision. Jackson v. Jackson, 94 Cal. 446; 29 Pac. 957. In an action of replevin, it is not error for the court to grant leave to the plaintiff to amend, after the evidence is closed, or before final submission of the case, so as to transform the action virtually into one of trover, charging the defendant with converting property, and claiming damages accordingly. Henderson v. Hart, 122 Cal. 332; 54 Pac. 1110. Where actual damages are sought to be recovered, there is no change of the cause of action, if the plaintiff is permitted so to amend as to charge that the acts were willful and wanton. Esrey v. Southern Pacific Co., 103 Cal. 541; 37 Pac. 500. Where slanderous words, laid in the original complaint, are not qualified or altered in their sense or meaning by those proved to have been used by the defendant, and the former are clearly embraced in the latter, and both substantially charge to the same effect, and the plaintiff amended his complaint by inserting the words proved, the cause of action is not thereby changed. Smullen v. Phillips, 92 Cal. 408; 28 Pac. 442. The plaintiff has the right to abandon a demand made in his complaint, and to strike it therefrom by way of amendment; and if the complaint still states a cause of action, the court should compel the defendant to plead to it. St. Clair v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 142 Cal. 647; 76 Pac. 485. An amendment to a complaint is properly allowed to be filed, although it omits one of the causes of action set forth in the original complaint: the defendant cannot be injured by the abandonment of a cause of action allowed against him (Concannon v. Smith, 134 Cal. 14; 66 Pac. 40); but where the amendment amounts to a discontinuance or abandonment of the action as originally brought, its allowance is improper. Hines v. Ward, 121 Cal. 115; 53 Pac. 427. The objection to an amended complaint, alleged to have been filed by leave of court, cannot be raised upon special demurrer to the complaint, but only on motion to strike out. Harvey v. Meigs, 17 Cal. App. 353; 119 Pac. 941.

Amendment after demurrer sustained. The plaintiff should be allowed to amend his complaint, where a demurrer thereto has been sustained (Lord v. Hopkins, 30 Cal. 76); but it is not error to refuse permission to amend, where it is apparent that the amendment would produce no valid cause of action or defense. Gillan v. Hutchinson, 16 Cal. 153; Levinson v. Schwartz, 22 Cal. 229; Shepard v. McNeil, 38 Cal. 72; Ferrer v. Home Mutual Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416. An amendment of the complaint, after the filing of a demurrer, but before the hearing thereon, should be allowed, the same as though the demurrer had been sustained (Lord v. Hopkins, 30 Cal. 76; Gallagher v. Delaney, 10 Cal. 410; Thornton v. Borland, 12 Cal. 438; Smith v. Yreka Water Co., 14 Cal. 201), and without prejudice to an injunction issued on the original complaint. Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 497. After the overruling of the demurrer, an amendment of the complaint may be allowed, the same as though the demurrer had been sustained. Phelan v. Supervisors, 9 Cal. 15. On sustaining the demurrer, it is not error to fail to give leave to amend, where the party does not ask for such leave, or for any other order on the subject. Smith v. Taylor, 82 Cal. 533; 23 Pac. 217; San Francisco Paving Co. v. Fairfield, 134 Cal. 220; 66 Pac. 255; Williamson v. Joyce, 140 Cal. 669; 74 Pac. 290. An order sustaining a demurrer, without leave to amend, ordinarily disposes of the case; and, in the absence of any directions from the court, it is the duty of the clerk to enter an appropriate judgment. Le Breton v. Stanley Contracting Co., 15 Cal. App. 429; 114 Pac. 1028. Where the defense relied upon in the answer is invalid, it is not error to refuse permission to amend, after judgment sustaining a demurrer to the answer. Gillan v. Hutchinson, 16 Cal. 153.

Time to amend. A motion to amend is always in time, where it immediately follows the objection to the sufficiency of the complaint or answer: a motion to amend the complaint does not come too late because it is not made until after the defendant's motion for a nonsuit. Valencia v. Couch, 32 Cal. 339; 91 Am. Dec. 589. The court has discretion to limit the time in which an amended complaint shall be filed: it may direct that it be filed within twenty-four hours, where the plaintiff is familiar with the facts. Schultz v. McLean, 109 Cal. 437; 42 Pac. 557. While it is not often necessary to amend a complaint after the case has been submitted, yet there is no limitation as to the time, before judgment entered, when the power of the court ceases: even after judgment the power may be exercised for the relief of a party, where the judgment results from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. Lee v. Murphy, 119 Cal. 364; 51 Pac. 549, 955. Where a defendant, upon the plaintiff's motion for judgment on the pleadings, intends to abandon his answer and substitute another in its stead, he should make application for leave before the judgment for the plaintiff is ordered. Felch v. Beaudry, 40 Cal. 439. It is proper to permit an answer to be amended after the jury is impaneled, where the plaintiff is not taken by surprise, or does not suffer any injury. Beronio v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 86 Cal. 415; 21 Am. St. Rep. 57; 24 Pac. 1093. After a judgment is reversed, the parties have, in the court below, the same rights which they originally had, and that court has discretion to permit any proper amendment to the pleadings. Heidt v. Minor, 113 Cal. 385; 45 Pac. 700. It is not error for the court to refuse to allow the plaintiff to amend his complaint, pending a motion for a new trial, so as to strike out an unnecessary averment. Gilliam v. Brown, 126 Cal. 160; 58 Pac. 466. The privilege of amending, after trial of the issue of law raised by the demurrer, is not one of right, but one resting in the discretion of the trial court; if the plaintiff desires to amend again, he should apply to the court below, and if refused, take his exception: it is too late to make the point for the first time on appeal, when nothing in the record shows abuse of discretion. Schaake v. Eagle Automatic Can Co., 135 Cal. 472; 63 Pac. 1025; 67 Pac. 759; Buckley v. Howe, 86 Cal. 596; 25 Pac. 132; Varni v. Devoto, 10 Cal. App. 304; 101 Pac. 934. In an action to recover personal property, no judgment can be rendered directing the return of the property to the defendant, or in his favor for its value, where it has been delivered to the plaintiff, under proceedings in the action, until the defendant asserts his formal claim for return of the property, or its value, in the answer; and there can be no reason why the record should not be rounded, and a formal claim inserted in the answer, at any time prior to the actual entry of judgment. Pico v. Pico, 56 Cal. 453. Where there is unreasonable delay in presenting an amendment to a pleading, the court may properly refuse to allow it; and where there is no intimation of excuse for delay in presenting amendments long before allowed, until the case is declared substantially closed, they must be refused when presented. Emeric v. Alvarado, 90 Cal. 444; 27 Pac. 356. The court does not err in refusing the defendant leave to file an amended answer on the eve of the trial, where the jury is in attendance, and the cause is afterwards tried as if all the matters set forth in the amended answer were pleaded. Shadburne v. Daly, 76 Cal. 355; 18 Pac. 403. Where a case has been at issue nearly two years, and the trial has commenced, a proposed amendment to the answer, tendering new issues, is properly refused. Page v. Williams, 54 Cal. 562. The court cannot allow an amendment to the complaint, when more than one year has elapsed since the rendition and entry of final judgment: such amendments are only allowed for clerical misprisions, when the means for making them, and the right to make them, are furnished by the record itself. Kirby v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 604; 10 Pac. 119. Where a party admits, in his answer, a material allegation, and the case is tried and judgment rendered, and a new trial is granted, he should not be allowed to amend his answer by changing the admission into a denial. Spanagel v. Reay, 47 Cal. 608. Where a defendant, in his answer, virtually admits a material allegation of the complaint, and allows such admission to stand for nearly a year, and until the day of trial, before attempting to controvert it, the refusal of the court to allow a proposed amendment to the answer, which is not positive in its nature, is not an abuse of discretion. Cook v. Suburban Realty Co., 20 Cal. App. 538; 129 Pac. 801. After a motion for a change of place of trial, the court cannot entertain a motion or make an order for the amendment of the complaint in the matter of parties, any more than in the matter of substantive averments; and if, upon the case as it is then presented, the defendants are entitled to have their motion granted, they are entitled to have all judicial action in the cause determined in the superior court of their own county. Brady v. Times Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56; 39 Pac. 209.

Amendment to answer. Amendments are allowed to the defendant with much more caution than to the plaintiff; yet, in a proper case, and with the spirit of equity, the same indulgence will be granted to the defendant as to the plaintiff. Connalley v. Peck, 3 Cal. 75; Hooper v. Wells Fargo & Co., 27 Cal. 11; 85 Am. Dec. 211; Carpentier v. Brenham, 50 Cal. 549. The plaintiff cannot claim the right to enforce a judgment, which, through the mistake and excusable neglect of the defendant, was rendered in his favor: if the defendant has, without any fault on his part, been prevented from presenting his defense, it is but simple justice that he should have an opportunity so to do. Melde v. Reynolds, 129 Cal. 308; 61 Pac. 932. Where a defense is defectively pleaded, and the evidence thereunder is objected to, the defendant should be allowed to obviate such defect by amendment (Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346; Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257; 46 Am. St. Rep. 237; 39 Pac. 610); but a proposed amendment to an answer, not constituting a defense to the cause of action, nor the proper subject of a counterclaim, is properly refused. Wigmore v. Buell, 116 Cal. 94; 47 Pac. 927. Where the answer in a foreclosure suit admits the due execution and acknowledgment of the mortgage, a proposed amendment, denying such acknowledgment, is properly refused: an amendment to the answer should not be allowed so as to permit a merely legal defense which is inequitable (Bank of Woodland v. Heron, 122 Cal. 107; 54 Pac. 537), or to permit the setting up of a defense that could not be made under the original answer. Dorn v. Baker, 96 Cal. 206; 31 Pac. 37; Duff v. Duff, 101 Cal. 1; 35 Pac. 437; Ferrer v. Home Mutual Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416; Edgar v. Stevenson, 70 Cal. 286; 11 Pac. 704. The court may, in its discretion, allow an amended answer to be filed, omitting a defense stated in the original answer, and averring an entirely different one: the defendant can generally set up as many defenses as he may have. Gould v. Stafford, 101 Cal. 32; 35 Pac. 429; Carrie v. Cloverdale Banking etc. Co., 90 Cal. 84; 27 Pac. 58. The action of the court in refusing to allow the filing of an amended answer, except to the portion of the complaint amended, is not error, where the remainder of the proposed answer does not differ, in any essential, from the answer on file. Hawthorne v. Siegel, 88 Cal. 159; 22 Am. St. Rep. 291; 25 Pac. 1114. It is proper to deny a motion to file an amendment to the answer so as to set up a judgment of a court having no jurisdiction of the subject-matter as a bar to the action. Kirsch v. Smith, 64 Cal. 13; 27 Pac. 942. Where the complaint is verified, and the answer tenders no material issue, and is evasive, not verified, nor any offer made to verify it, there is no error in refusing to allow the filing of an amended answer. Shepard v. McNeil, 38 Cal. 72. The court may allow a defendant so to amend his cross-complaint as to aver a tender to the plaintiff, before suit, and the deposit of the amount in question in court. Crosby v. Clark, 132 Cal. 1; 63 Pac. 1022. An amendment, which changes an admission into a denial, cannot be allowed; but where it is not inconsistent with the admission, but is in harmony with it, and does not negative the admission, but explains it, it may be allowed. McPherson v. Weston, 85 Cal. 90; 24 Pac. 733. The fact that new matter, proposed to be set up by amendment, was known to the defendant at the time of filing the original answer, is no good reason why the amendment should not be permitted. Pierson v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 127; Farmers' Nat. Gold Bank v. Stover, 60 Cal. 387; Sharon v. Sharon, 77 Cal. 102; 19 Pac. 230. Where, in an action for divorce, the answer does not contain any prayer for affirmative relief, the defect is cured by an amendment containing such prayer. Mayr v. Mayr, 161 Cal. 134; 118 Pac. 546. Where a judgment is reversed, and remanded for a new trial, it is not error for the court, before such trial, to permit the defendant so to amend his answer as that complete justice may be done between the parties; and it is within the discretion of the court to allow a further amendment to such answer, during the second trial, where the plaintiff is not prejudiced thereby. McPherson v. Weston, 85 Cal. 90; 24 Pac. 733. An amended answer, filed without leave of court, after issue joined, may be stricken from the files. Worley v. Spreckels Bros. Commercial Co., 163 Cal. 60; 124 Pac. 697. A defendant cannot answer an amended complaint by the allegation that it has been improperly filed: he should present an objection to such improper filing of the amendment, if an opportunity offers, or move to strike the amended pleading from the files. Wheeler v. West, 78 Cal. 95; 20 Pac. 45. The order granting leave to the defendant to amend his answer is no part of the judgment roll, and is not required to be entered thereon. Segerstrom v. Scott, 16 Cal. App. 256; 116 Pac. 690.

Amendment setting up statute of limitations. It was formerly the rule, that, where the defendant failed to plead the statute of limitations at the proper time, he could not be permitted to amend his answer, introducing such plea, except to further the ends of justice (Cooke v. Spears, 2 Cal. 409; 56 Am. Dec. 348), and that the court did not err in refusing to permit the defendant to set up the bar of the statute after he had answered to the merits. Stuart v. Lander, 16 Cal. 372; 76 Am. Dec. 538. But the statutes of limitation have become rules of property, and are favored in law. San Diego Realty Co. v. McGinn, 7 Cal. App. 264; 94 Pac. 374. Where an amended complaint, curing a defect, does not state a new or different cause of action, it is error for the court to refuse to permit it to be filed on the ground that a new cause of action, then barred by the statute, is therein stated. Ruiz v. Santa Barbara Gas etc. Co., 164 Cal. 188; 128 Pac. 330. A new cause of action cannot be introduced into the complaint, under the guise of an amendment, so as to avoid the bar of the statute. Nellis v. Pacific Bank, 127 Cal. 166; 59 Pac. 830. Where the effect of the proposed amendment to the complaint would be, not to state a new cause of action against the original defendants, but only an original cause of action against a new defendant, the latter may effectually plead the bar of the statute. Harrison v. McCormick, 122 Cal. 651; 55 Pac. 592. It is not error to permit the defendant, in his amended answer, to plead the statute of limitations, where its consideration did not enter into the judgment. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Jones, 89 Cal. 507; 26 Pac. 1089. The statute of limitations commences to run from the date of the filing of an amended complaint stating a new cause of action. Anderson v. Mayers, 50 Cal. 525. A failure to find upon a plea of the statute of limitations is not material, where the other facts found are sufficient to support the judgment. Richter v. Henningsan, 110 Cal. 530; 42 Pac. 1077. The question of the statute of limitations cannot be raised upon an appeal from a judgment by default, taken upon a judgment roll containing neither answer nor demurrer. Hunter v. Bryant, 98 Cal. 247; 33 Pac. 51.

Amendment to conform to proof. Amendments to pleadings, so as to enable the party to prove all the facts necessary to his cause of action or defense, are favored, subject to the right of the opposite party to a continuance in case of surprise, or subject to such other terms as may be just. Crosby v. Clark, 132 Cal. 1; 63 Pac. 1022. The court may, in furtherance of justice, permit the defendant, even after the evidence is closed, to deny, by an amended answer, certain averments to the complaint (Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Jones, 89 Cal. 507; 26 Pac. 1089), if an opportunity is afforded to meet the amendment. Anglo-California Bank v. Field, 154 Cal. 513; 98 Pac. 267. Where a complaint, praying for legal relief, states facts entitling the plaintiff to equitable relief, the court may, even during the trial, permit the prayer to be so amended as to ask for the appropriate equitable relief. Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519; 17 Pac. 673. Where, at the close of the trial, the plaintiff declines to amend his complaint, upon opportunity offered by the court so to do, whereupon the court announced that, should it become necessary, it would, of its own motion, amend the complaint to make it conform to the case made, and the suit is decided against the plaintiff, without any amendment being made, the plaintiff cannot afterwards be allowed to treat the complaint as amended. Carpentier v. Brenham, 50 Cal. 549.

Effect of amended upon original pleading. An amended pleading supersedes the original. Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 497; Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192; Kentfield v. Hayes, 57 Cal. 409; Thompson v. Johnson, 60 Cal. 292; Mott v. Mott, 82 Cal. 413; 22 Pac. 1140, 1142; Schneider v. Brown, 85 Cal. 205; 24 Pac. 715; La Société Française etc. v. Weidmann, 97 Cal. 507; 32 Pac. 583; Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085; Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 308; 46 Pac. 1076; Witter v. Bachman, 117 Cal. 318; 49 Pac. 202; Linott v. Rowland, 119 Cal. 452; 51 Pac. 687; Nellis v. Pacific Bank, 127 Cal. 166; 59 Pac. 830; Welsh v. Bardshar, 137 Cal. 154; 69 Pac. 977; Rooney v. Gray, 145 Cal. 753; 79 Pac. 523. After a pleading has been amended, admissions in the original pleading cannot thereafter be introduced in evidence against the party making them. Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 308; 46 Pac. 1076. Where an amended complaint has been filed, the original ceases to perform any further function as a pleading (Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 497; Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192; Kentfield v. Hayes, 57 Cal. 409; Thompson v. Johnson, 60 Cal. 292; Schneider v. Brown, 85 Cal. 205; 24 Pac. 715; La Société Française etc. v. Weidmann, 97 Cal. 507; 32 Pac. 583; Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085; Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 308; 46 Pac. 1076); and has the effect to vacate the default of the defendant previously entered. Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192; Schneider v. Brown, 85 Cal. 205; 24 Pac. 715; Linott v. Rowland, 119 Cal. 452; 51 Pac. 687. Where the amendment more fully sets forth the cause of action defectively alleged in the original complaint, it merely supersedes the original, and takes its place, without affecting the identity of the original. Nellis v. Pacific Bank, 127 Cal. 166; 59 Pac. 830. An amendment to the complaint, in matter of substance, after entry of default, constitutes a new complaint, and has the effect of opening the default (Witter v. Bachman, 117 Cal. 318; 49 Pac. 202); it only supersedes the pleadings founded upon the original complaint: it does not affect a cross-complaint, or the names joined thereon, nor does the cross-complaint fall with the fall of the plaintiff's complaint. Mott v. Mott, 82 Cal. 413; 22 Pac. 1140, 1142. Where issues are joined and trial had upon a second amended complaint, errors in rulings made upon the former complaints are immaterial. Rooney v. Gray, 145 Cal. 753; 79 Pac. 523. The original complaint may be considered as a part of the record of the case, for the purpose of showing when the action was commenced, and whether or not a new or different cause of action was introduced by the amendment, and for the determination of other questions that may arise, which often become material on appeal; it is always included in the judgment roll. Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40; Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085. An amended complaint, stating no new cause of action, relates back to the time of the commencement of the action, for the purposes of the statute of limitations (Smullen v. Phillips, 92 Cal. 408; 28 Pac. 442; White v. Soto, 82 Cal. 654; 23 Pac. 210); it does not change the time of the running of the statute of limitations beyond the date of the filing of the original complaint, as against the original defendant; but it runs to the date of the amendment as against a grantee of the defendant, then for the first time made a party (Frost v. Witter, 132 Cal. 421; 84 Am. St. Rep. 53; 64 Pac. 705); and, though made after the expiration of the period of limitation for the action, relates back to the time of its commencement. Ruiz v. Santa Barbara Gas etc. Co., 164 Cal. 188; 128 Pac. 330. The findings need only refer to the complaint as amended. Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67; 58 Pac. 376. Where reference is made in a judgment to a finding, and in the finding to the complaint, which was amended, for a description of property, the reference, though inexcusably circuitous, is not ambiguous, and unmistakably refers to the amended complaint. Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192. An error committed in overruling a demurrer to the complaint is cured by a subsequent amendment to the complaint, although an action at law is changed into a suit in equity. Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519; 17 Pac. 673. Unless new matter inserted in an amended complaint is entirely foreign to the cause of action in the original complaint, the question will not arise, on motion to strike out, whether the amendments in the amended complaint go further than is allowed by the code: matter contained in an amended complaint is not irrelevant or redundant to a cause of action set out in the original complaint in the same action. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 28 Cal. 673. An amended complaint, not allowed to be filed, cannot be considered as any part of the showing on which a temporary injunction was granted, and can only be considered in the light of a counter-affidavit, on a motion to dissolve the injunction. Meetz v. Mohr, 141 Cal. 667; 75 Pac. 298. An amendment as to a matter of substance opens up a default, and gives the defendant in default the right to appear and answer (Thompson v. Johnson, 60 Cal. 292); but an amended complaint which brings in new parties, in which a defaulting defendant is not interested, is not an amendment in matter of substance, and does not open up the default, nor require the service of the amended complaint upon the defaulting party. San Diego Savings Bank v. Goodsell, 137 Cal. 420; 70 Pac. 299. A supplemental complaint is not an amendment to a pleading, as it leaves the former pleading intact; but an amendment to a pleading makes a substituted pleading. Giddings v. 76 Land and Water Co., 109 Cal. 116; 41 Pac. 788. An amended answer supersedes the original, and destroys its effect as a pleading (Gilman v. Cosgrove, 22 Cal. 356; Welsh v. Bardshar, 137 Cal. 154; 69 Pac. 977; Evinger v. Moran, 14 Cal. App. 328; 112 Pac. 68); and all questions in relation to the abandoned answer are waived by filing the amended answer. Kentfield v. Hayes, 57 Cal. 409. An amended answer, improperly filed, and stricken out on motion, does not supersede the original answer, nor can the court render judgment against the defendant, in such a case, because there is no pleading on file; while an amended pleading supersedes the original, yet it must be a valid, subsisting pleading, entitled to recognition as such, in the place and stead of that which it supersedes; if it is a usurper, and exists only until the court can strike it out of existence because it is void ab initio, it fills no such office, and it cannot be treated as void because filed without leave of the court. Spooner v. Cady, 4 Cal. Unrep. 539; 36 Pac. 104. Where an amended answer is filed pending a motion for judgment upon the pleadings, such motion cannot be determined upon the original answer, but must depend upon the sufficiency of the amended answer. Evinger v. Moran, 14 Cal. App. 328; 112 Pac. 68.

Correction of matters relating to bills of exceptions. Relief may be granted from a default in failing to comply with the statute in presenting a bill of exceptions (People v. Everett, 8 Cal. App. 430; 97 Pac. 175); or in failing to serve a proposed bill of exceptions within the prescribed time, where objection to the settlement is made on that ground. Dernham v. Bagley, 151 Cal. 216; 90 Pac. 543; Sauer v. Eagle Brewing Co., 3 Cal. App. 127; 84 Pac. 425; Pollitz v. Wickersham, 150 Cal. 238; 88 Pac. 911. The judge has no power to extend the time for the settlement of a bill of exceptions beyond thirty days, without the consent of the adverse party; nor can he grant an extension after the moving party has made default, where no excuse for delay is shown, or any other facts from which relief could be claimed, or any application made to obtain such relief. Cameron v. Arcata etc. R. R. Co., 129 Cal. 279; 61 Pac. 955. A mistake of one day, by the plaintiff, in giving eleven days' notice of the presentation of a bill of exceptions for settlement, after the service of proposed amendments thereto, does not make the settlement thereof erroneous, where a proper case for relief, under this section, was established by affidavits, and by all the circumstances of the case, showing that the mistake was the result of excusable inadvertence on the part of the plaintiff's attorney. Kaltschmidt v. Weber, 145 Cal. 596; 79 Pac. 272. A bill of exceptions may be corrected (Merced Bank v. Price, 152 Cal. 697; 93 Pac. 866); but not after it is prepared and settled, pending an appeal; nor can the record be amended by the appellate court, which must review the order upon the same record upon which it was made. Baker v. Borello, 131 Cal. 615; 63 Pac. 914. An order settling a bill of exceptions on motion for a new trial may be vacated. Dounelly v. Tregaskis, 7 Cal. App. 317; 94 Pac. 383. A person convicted of a felony is not entitled to notice of a proceeding by the state to correct an error in the bill of exceptions, where the course adopted is in full accord with the practice recognized by this section, which does not require notice to be given of an application for the correction of a mistake in the record. People v. Southern, 118 Cal. 359; 50 Pac. 545. The supreme court will not attempt to control the action of the court below in refusing to settle a bill of exceptions: that is a matter within the discretion of the lower court, assuming that it has power to grant relief. Stonesifer v. Armstrong, 86 Cal. 594; 25 Pac. 50. On appeal from an order refusing to grant relief from a default, in failing to serve a proposed statement on appeal within the prescribed time, the sole question to be considered is, whether the trial court abused its discretion in making such order. Utah-Nevada Co. v. De Lamar, 9 Cal. App. 759; 100 Pac. 884.

Statement on motion for new trial or on appeal. Under § 68 of the Practice Act, the court had power to cancel the certificate settling the statement on appeal, on becoming satisfied that the statement, as settled, was erroneous, and that the certificate was made through inadvertence; provided the error was corrected, either during the term or within five months thereafter. Flynn v. Cottle, 47 Cal. 526. A statement on motion for new trial may be amended to speak the truth. Estate of Thomas, 155 Cal. 488; 101 Pac. 798. In the absence of any showing relieving a party from default in serving a statement on motion for a new trial, such statement cannot be considered on appeal. King v. Dugan, 150 Cal. 258; 88 Pac. 925.

Motion to vacate, or motion for new trial. Where a motion for a new trial was brought up ex parte by opposing counsel, and, without argument or submission by the moving party, or opportunity to his counsel to be heard, was, by the court, inadvertently and improvidently denied, without consideration of the merits, the court has power, upon an ex parte showing, by the affidavit of the moving party, of facts showing inadvertence and improvidence, to vacate the order and to restore the motion to the calendar for argument. Whitney v. Superior Court, 147 Cal. 536; 82 Pac. 37. After the court has rendered judgment in accordance with its findings, neither the findings nor the judgment can be changed, except through a motion for a new trial, or upon appeal: a subsequent modification, otherwise made, is unauthorized (Knowlton v. Mackenzie, 110 Cal. 183; 42 Pac. 580); but the superior court has jurisdiction to vacate a judgment entered by it, by other proceedings than a motion for a new trial; and if error has been committed, it can only be corrected on a direct appeal: on a collateral attack, the order vacating the judgment will be deemed to have been properly made. Storke v. Storke, 111 Cal. 514; 44 Pac. 173. A superior court can set aside its judgments, only upon application, under this section, within a reasonable time, or on motion for a new trial (Fabretti v. Superior Court, 77 Cal. 305; 19 Pac. 481); it has no power to modify an order granting a new trial, by adding conditions not therein expressed, except by proceedings under this section, or by an entry nunc pro tunc. Frost v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 165 Cal. 365; 132 Pac. 1043. A petition for a rehearing is a proceeding unknown to the practice of the superior court. Fabretti v. Superior Court, 77 Cal. 305; 19 Pac. 481. A party cannot, under the form of a motion to amend the judgment, obtain relief, which, if proper to be granted under any circumstances, should be sought through a motion for a new trial. Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22. An application to set aside a judgment should be by motion for a new trial, where the moving party is represented by an attorney at the trial; but it is properly made by motion, under this section, where it is founded on the facts that the moving party was not present at the trial, either in person or by attorney, and that he had no notice of the judgment until the lapse of the term at which it was rendered. McKinley v. Tuttle, 34 Cal. 235. Where a mortgagor conveys the mortgaged premises, and the mortgage is foreclosed in an action in which summons is served on the mortgagor alone, the plaintiff cannot obtain relief by bringing a new action against the mortgagor and the grantee: he must seek relief by a motion in the original action. Aldrich v. Stephens, 49 Cal. 676. Where a party moves for a new trial, it will be presumed that such motion is pending and undetermined at the time he makes a subsequent motion to vacate the decree. Johnson v. Reed, 125 Cal. 74; 57 Pac. 680.

Judgments which may be vacated. The court has power to vacate an order appointing a receiver, made before the trial, notwithstanding the pendency of a motion for a new trial (Copper Hill Mining Co. v. Spencer, 25 Cal. 11; People v. Loucks, 28 Cal. 68); and to vacate an improvident order denying a motion for a new trial, and to restore the motion to the calendar for argument (Whitney v. Superior Court, 147 Cal. 536; 82 Pac. 37); and to vacate or modify an order setting aside a homestead, and it is its duty to hear and determine the matter when presented to it; and mandamus may issue to compel the court to hear and determine the motion upon its merits. Cahill v. Superior Court, 145 Cal. 42; 78 Pac. 467. An order admitting an alien to citizenship may be vacated, upon a proper showing made within time. Tinn v. United States District Attorney, 148 Cal. 773; 113 Am. St. Rep. 354; 84 Pac. 152.

Amendment of judgment. The superior court has power to amend a judgment, at any time, as to immaterial matters occasioned by inadvertence; but not where the amendment would materially affect the rights of litigants objecting thereto. Calkins v. Monroe, 17 Cal. App. 324; 119 Pac. 680. A judgment cannot be amended where there is no element of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. Mann v. Mann, 6 Cal. App. 610; 92 Pac. 740. To entitle a party to an order amending the judgment, order, or decree, he must establish that the entry, as made, does not conform to what the court ordered. First Nat. Bank v. Dusy, 110 Cal. 69; 42 Pac. 476. Where the defendant was sued and served and judgment entered against him under the same name, it is error for the court afterwards, without notice to the defendant, to make an order, on the motion of the plaintiff, amending the judgment, by altering the prænomen of the defendant: the action, in such case, is against one person, and the judgment against another, as, prima facie, two different names signify two different persons. McNally v. Mott, 3 Cal. 235. Where an amendment is made to a judgment in matter of substance, whereby it is made to grant relief different from that granted when it was rendered, it is absolutely void as against a party having no notice of the application to amend it; and where a proposed addition to the judgment is a mere afterthought, and forms no part of the judgment as originally intended and pronounced, it cannot be brought in by way of amendment. Scamman v. Bonslett, 118 Cal. 93; 62 Am. St. Rep. 226; 50 Pac. 272. Where the accident of entering judgment against both defendants happens to the prejudice of the plaintiff, and this error is not corrected before a motion to set aside is made, it is discretionary with the court below to grant the application of the plaintiff to correct the judgment, and its action in denying it will not be disturbed on appeal. Lewis v. Rigney, 21 Cal. 268.

Judgment nunc pro tunc. The court may, at any time, render or amend a judgment nunc pro tunc; but this power is confined to cases where the record discloses that entry on the minutes does not correctly give the exact judgment of the court. Morrison v. Dapman, 3 Cal. 255. All courts have the power to correct clerical errors, and to enter a judgment nunc pro tunc, when the record discloses the error. Swain v. Naglee, 19 Cal. 127. Where the clerk has neglected to enter the judgment for two years after its rendition, the supreme court will direct the court below to cause the judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc as of the time it should have been entered. Cutting Fruit Packing Co. v. Canty, 141 Cal. 692; 75 Pac. 564. A judge at chambers has no power to make an order directing the clerk to enter in the minutes, nunc pro tunc, an order alleged to have been made in open court, where there is nothing in the record to show whether such order was made. Hegeler v. Henckell, 27 Cal. 491. The object of entering judgments and decrees as of some previous date is to supply matters of evidence and to rectify clerical misprisions, but not to enable the court to correct judicial errors; and where costs were not prayed for, and the judgment is silent as to them, the court cannot afterwards remedy the error by ordering an amendment, nunc pro tunc, so as to include costs. Estate of Potter, 141 Cal. 424; 75 Pac. 850.

Proof of service before default granted. The fact, and not the proof, of service gives the court jurisdiction; and lack of jurisdiction must be affirmatively shown by the record. Guardianship of Eikerenkotter, 126 Cal. 54; 58 Pac. 370. A judgment by default, rendered where the proof was imperfect, is not void, if service was in fact made; and the court may allow the proof of service to be amended and filed as of the date of the judgment. Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Matthai, 116 Cal. 424; 48 Pac. 370. Before default can be regularly taken, there must be positive and sufficient evidence in court of due service: no substantial defect in that respect can be cured by subsequent knowledge of the fact. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. After service, the court acquires jurisdiction, by reason of the defendant's default, to enter judgment against him: it is not necessary that a formal default should have been previously entered by the clerk, nor that the summons, with proof of service, should be then on file with the clerk; nor is jurisdiction lost by the neglect to make proof of such service a matter of record before judgment; and where the court, after judgment, amends the record, by supplying proof of service, it is as effective to support the judgment as if it had been filed before its entry. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Matthai, 116 Cal. 424; 48 Pac. 370. Where there has been neither personal service upon nor appearance by the defendant, a judgment by default is utterly void. Glidden v. Packard, 28 Cal. 649. A finding of due service is not conclusive proof, where the defendant does not answer, as against the evidence of service found in the judgment roll; and a default judgment, entered on a void certificate of service, is void, though there is a finding of service, because, where there is no answer, the summons, with proof of service, must be made a part of the judgment roll. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395, 396; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. Where the affidavit of service by mail is insufficient, a default is improperly entered. Hogs Back Consol. Mining Co. v. New Basil Consol. Mining Co., 63 Cal. 121. A judgment by default, rendered upon an attempted service by publication, is void for want of jurisdiction, where the judgment roll does not contain the affidavit for publication, nor the order of court directing it. People v. Greene, 74 Cal. 400; 5 Am. St. Rep. 448; 16 Pac. 197. An affidavit of service, which does not show that the affiant was over the age of eighteen years at the time of service, is insufficient to support a judgment by default. Maynard v. MacCrellish, 57 Cal. 355; Howard v. Galloway, 60 Cal. 10. The clerk has no authority to enter the default of a defendant upon a void certificate of service: his act in doing so is a nullity. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089.

Discretion in vacating defaults. In the matter of opening defaults, much is confided to the discretion of the court; and where the circumstances are such as to lead the court to hesitate, it is better to resolve the doubt in favor of the application, so as to secure a trial and judgment on the merits. Wolff & Co. v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., 123 Cal. 535; 56 Pac. 453; Merchants' Ad-Sign Co. v. Los Angeles Bill Posting Co., 128 Cal. 619; 61 Pac. 277; Petition of Tracey, 136 Cal. 385; 69 Pac. 20; Watson v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 41 Cal. 17; Grady v. Donahoo, 108 Cal. 211; 41 Pac. 41; Banta v. Siller, 121 Cal. 414; 53 Pac. 935. The granting or refusing of an application to set aside a default or a default judgment will not be disturbed, unless a clear abuse of legal discretion is shown. Haight v. Green, 19 Cal. 113; Woodward v. Backus, 20 Cal. 137; Reese v. Mahoney, 21 Cal. 305; Howe v. Independence Consol. Gold etc. Mining Co., 29 Cal. 72; Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422; Davis v. Rock Creek Lumber etc. Mining Co., 55 Cal. 359; 36 Am. Rep. 40; Freeman v. Brown, 55 Cal. 465; Moore v. Kellogg, 58 Cal. 385; Dougherty v. Nevada Bank, 68 Cal. 275; 9 Pac. 112; Hitchcock v. McElrath, 69 Cal. 634; 11 Pac. 487; Garner v. Erlanger, 86 Cal. 60; 24 Pac. 805; Malone v. Big Flat Gravel Mining Co., 93 Cal. 384; 28 Pac. 1063; Williamson v. Cummings Rock Drill Co., 95 Cal. 652; 30 Pac. 762; Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218; Bell v. Peck, 104 Cal. 35; 37 Pac. 766; Harbaugh v. Honey Lake Valley Land etc. Co., 109 Cal. 70; 41 Pac. 792; Smith v. Smith, 113 Cal. 268; 45 Pac. 332; Rauer v. Wolf, 115 Cal. 100; 46 Pac. 902; First Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 122 Cal. 569; 55 Pac. 423; Brittan v. Oakland Bank, 124 Cal. 282; 71 Am. St. Rep. 58; 57 Pac. 84; San Joaquin Valley Bank v. Dodge, 125 Cal. 77; 57 Pac. 687; Nicoll v. Weldon, 130 Cal. 666; 63 Pac. 63; Winchester v. Black, 134 Cal. 125; 66 Pac. 197; Palace Hardware Co. v. Smith, 134 Cal. 381; 66 Pac. 474; Langford v. Langford, 136 Cal. 507; 69 Pac. 235; Grant v. McArthur, 137 Cal. 270; 70 Pac. 88; Moore v. Thompson, 138 Cal. 23; 70 Pac. 930; O'Brien v. Leach, 139 Cal. 220; 96 Am. St. Rep. 105; 72 Pac. 1004; Alferitz v. Cahen, 145 Cal. 397; 78 Pac. 878; Estate of Sheppard, 149 Cal. 219; 85 Pac. 312; Webster v. Somer, 159 Cal. 459; 114 Pac. 575; Jergins v. Schenck, 162 Cal. 747; 124 Pac. 426; Lang v. Lilley, 164 Cal. 294; 128 Pac. 1026; Murphy v. Stelling, 1 Cal. App. 95; 81 Pac. 730; Pelegrinelli v. McCloud River Lumber Co., 1 Cal. App. 593; 82 Pac. 695; Freeman v. Brown, 5 Cal. App. 516; 90 Pac. 970; Wells Fargo & Co. v. McCarthy, 5 Cal. App. 301; 90 Pac. 203; Yordi v. Yordi, 6 Cal. App. 20; 91 Pac. 348; Bond v. Karma-Ajax Mining Co., 15 Cal. App. 469; 115 Pac. 254; Sheehy v. Minaker, 16 Cal. App. 437; 117 Pac. 616; Blumer v. Mayhew, 17 Cal. App. 223; 119 Pac. 202; Behymer v. Superior Court, 18 Cal. App. 464; 123 Pac. 340; Redding Gold etc. Mining Co. v. National Surety Co., 18 Cal. App. 488; 123 Pac. 544; Kearney v. Palmer, 18 Cal. App. 517; 123 Pac. 611; Smith v. Riverside Groves etc. Co., 19 Cal. App. 165; 124 Pac. 870; Doherty v. California Navigation etc. Co., 6 Cal. App. 131; 91 Pac. 419; Oppenheimer v. Radke & Co., 165 Cal. 220; 131 Pac. 365. The appellate court will not interfere with the action of the trial court in making an order setting aside a default and judgment thereon, and permitting the defaulting party to answer, where there is a sufficient affidavit of merits, and there is no abuse of discretion. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. Great latitude is allowed the court in exercising its discretion in setting aside a default, inadvertently permitted by a party having a substantial defense. Hitchcock v. McElrath, 69 Cal. 634; 11 Pac. 487. The discretion of the court in granting or denying a motion to set aside a default or a default judgment is best exercised when it tends to bring about a judgment on the merits. Pearson v. Drobaz Fishing Co., 99 Cal. 425; 34 Pac. 76; San Joaquin Valley Bank v. Dodge, 125 Cal. 77; 57 Pac. 687; Nicoll v. Weldon, 130 Cal. 666; 63 Pac. 63; Mitchell v. California etc. S. S. Co., 156 Cal. 576; 105 Pac. 590; McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278; Andrus v. Smith, 133 Cal. 78; 65 Pac. 320. Where one of two defendants is not a party in interest, and relies upon the promise of his co-defendant to save him harmless in the action, and a default is entered as to both, there is no abuse of discretion in opening the default as to the party not in interest (Santa Barbara Live Stock etc. Co. v. Thompson, 46 Cal. 63); nor is there an abuse of discretion in setting aside a default, where a stenographer made a mistake in writing the defendant's corporate name in the title to the demurrer to the complaint, and the defendant moved promptly to have the default set aside. Will v. Lytle Creek Water Co., 100 Cal. 344; 34 Pac. 830. There may be circumstances in which it is proper for the court to grant leave to move, even a third time, to set aside a default. Hitchcock v. McElrath, 69 Cal. 634; 11 Pac. 487. The refusal of the court to vacate a judgment by default for failure to answer within the time limited, is not an abuse of discretion, in the absence of a valid stipulation from the plaintiff's attorney or of an order of the court extending the time (Wylie v. Sierra Gold Co., 120 Cal. 485; 52 Pac. 809); nor is it an abuse of discretion to refuse to set aside a default or a default judgment, where the applicant is guilty of inexcusable neglect, or the grounds upon which the relief is sought are insufficient (Grant v. White, 57 Cal. 141; Moore v. Kellogg, 58 Cal. 385; Youngman v. Tonner, 82 Cal. 611; 23 Pac. 120; O'Connor v. Ellmaker, 83 Cal. 452; 23 Pac. 531; Dusy v. Prudom, 95 Cal. 646; 30 Pac. 798; Williamson v. Cummings Rock Drill Co., 95 Cal. 652; 30 Pac. 762; Bradford v. McAvoy, 99 Cal. 324; 33 Pac. 1091; Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218; Bell v. Peck, 104 Cal. 35; 37 Pac. 766; Whitney v. Daggett, 108 Cal. 232; 41 Pac. 471; Shay v. Chicago Clock Co., 111 Cal. 549; 44 Pac. 237; Rauer v. Wolf, 115 Cal. 100; 46 Pac. 902; Wylie v. Sierra Gold Co., 120 Cal. 485; 52 Pac. 809); nor is it an abuse of discretion to render a judgment by default, or to refuse a motion to open the default, where the party is regularly served, and leaves the state without answering, and his attorneys do not answer for him. Hancock v. Pico, 40 Cal. 153. A motion to set aside a judgment upon the ground that there had been neither an appearance by the defendant nor service upon him, is not a matter of discretion in the lower court, but a matter of pure legal right, not arising under the provisions of this section. Hunter v. Bryant, 98 Cal. 247; 33 Pac. 51. It is the duty of the appellate court to reverse the action of the trial court, where it is obliged to say that, in setting aside a default and vacating a judgment, an abuse of discretion was involved. Redding Gold etc. Mining Co. v. National Surety Co., 18 Cal. App. 488; 123 Pac. 544.

When default may be set aside. The court may vacate a default judgment, obtained upon a defective complaint, and permit the plaintiff to amend the complaint. Lemon v. Hubbard, 10 Cal. App. 471; 102 Pac. 554. A default judgment should be set aside, where application is promptly made, and the plaintiff is not injured, and where there was no neglect or omission on the part of the defendant or his counsel, but, through the inadvertence and neglect of an employee of the defendant, the papers in the case were mislaid on the removal of the attorney of record, and the default judgment was rendered before the defendant knew that the case was set for trial or that the attorney had ceased to attend to it. Grady v. Donahoo, 108 Cal. 211; 41 Pac. 41. Judgment by default against a defendant should be vacated, where he was misled by incorrect information of the time of the commencement of the suit, appearing in a regularly issued publication, containing information of court proceedings, and relied upon by the business community. Watson v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 41 Cal. 17. A judgment by default against a corporation is properly vacated for excusable neglect, where its agent was misled by the lawyer plaintiff, possibly unintentionally, and where there is a sufficient affidavit of merits. Craig v. San Bernardino Investment Co., 101 Cal. 122; 35 Pac. 558. Where the trial court is convinced that the plaintiff's conduct, as to agreements for continuances, after default, has deceived the defendant, it may properly set aside a judgment by default. McGowan v. Kreling, 117 Cal. 31; 48 Pac. 980. A judgment by default should be set aside, where the defendants, Misión Indians, are helpless and ignorant, and totally unacquainted with the English language and with modes of judicial proceedings, and are incapable of attending to their interests. Byrne v. Alas, 68 Cal. 479; 9 Pac. 850. Where a person claiming an interest in land moves to set aside a judgment by default, entered against it in an action to enforce an assessment, on the ground that he knew nothing of the commencement of the action, or its pendency, or of the judgment therein, until the judgment was rendered, and states facts constituting a perfect defense, the court may vacate such judgment and grant permission to the defendant to answer to the merits of the original action. Reclamation District v. Coghill, 56 Cal. 607. An application to set aside a judgment by default may be granted to enable the defendant, who was not properly served with summons, to plead the statute of limitations as a defense.

San Diego Realty Co. v. McGinn, 7 Cal. App. 264; 94 Pac. 374. Where a demurrer is still on file and undisposed of, a default entered against the defendant is premature, and should be set aside. Tregambo v. Comanche Mill etc. Co., 57 Cal. 501. A judgment by default will be reversed, where the court strikes out an answer, filed in time, though not served until two days afterwards. Lybecker v. Murray, 58 Cal. 186. Where a demurrer to the complaint was overruled, and the defendant was given time to answer, but the record does not disclose that any notice of the order overruling the demurrer was served upon the defendant, a default and judgment entered against him should be set aside, upon application made within proper time. Chamberlin v. Del Norte County, 77 Cal. 150; 19 Pac. 271. Doubt as to the granting of relief under this section should be resolved in favor of the application, so as to secure a trial upon the merits: an order granting an application to open a default will be looked upon more favorably upon appeal, than one refusing the application (Jergins v. Schenck, 162 Cal. 747; 124 Pac. 426), since, where the application is refused, the defendant may be deprived of a substantial right, whereas, nothing to the contrary being shown, it may be assumed that the plaintiff will be able, at any time, to establish his cause of action. Nicoll v. Weldon, 130 Cal. 666; 63 Pac. 63. The court may, at any time, set aside a default judgment, entered by the clerk, where it appears on the judgment roll that he had no power to enter it (Wharton v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192), even although the judgment, if it be for money, has been satisfied. Patterson v. Keeney, 165 Cal. 465; 132 Pac. 1043. The clerk has no authority to enter a judgment by default, on notice by the defendant to the plaintiff that he will move before the court commissioner to dissolve an attachment issued in the cause (Glidden v. Packard, 28 Cal. 649); nor has he jurisdiction to hear the plaintiff's application for default and judgment based upon his affidavits (Oliphant v. Whitney, 34 Cal. 25); nor has he power to determine upon what papers or evidence the court acted (Walsh v. Hutchings, 60 Cal. 228); nor has he any means of knowing what has been done, beyond what is disclosed by his files, and the record made in the regular course of procedure; and when an answer is filed in due time, he has all that he is authorized to look to, in order to determine whether a default is due or not. Oliphant v. Whitney, 34 Cal. 25. The statutory provision that the clerk must enter judgment "immediately" after entering default is merely directory; his failure to do so does not render void a judgment subsequently entered upon such default. Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218. It is not error for the court to enter a default and judgment for the plaintiff, where a frivolous demurrer is filed, and no leave to file an answer is requested. Seale v. McLaughlin, 28 Cal. 668. A motion to set aside a judgment by default is properly denied, where the defendant was duly served, but held the summons and complaint more than ten days without examining them, believing that the suit would be tried in another county, where the cause of action arose, and when he finally left the papers with his attorney, the time for answering had expired. Garner v. Erlanger, 86 Cal. 60; 24 Pac. 805. It is not error to refuse to set aside a default for mere irregularity in the service of summons, or for a defective return. Dorente v. Sullivan, 7 Cal. 279. A clerical error, or a mere slip of the pen, is not ground for vacating a judgment by default, on the ground of irregularity in service. Alexander v. McDow, 108 Cal. 25; 41 Pac. 24. An order setting aside a default and judgment, and restoring an answer to the files, forms no part of the judgment roll. Von Schmidt v. Von Schmidt, 104 Cal. 547; 38 Pac. 361.

Who may have default set aside. The plaintiff may move to set aside a default, although such default was entered at his instance. Thompson v. Alford, 128 Cal. 227; 60 Pac. 686. Where a tenant in possession has, through neglect or by design, permitted a default to be entered against him, the landlord may, upon a proper showing, moving in the name of the tenant, have such default set aside. Dimick v. Deringer, 32 Cal. 488. The successor in interest to property involved in the action may move to set aside a default judgment entered against his grantor. People v. Mullan, 65 Cal. 396; 4 Pac. 348. Where the defendant received no notice of the order dismissing his demurrer, and the court did not refuse leave to answer, the defendant is not deprived of his right to move that the default be set aside by the lapse of the prescribed time before the entry of default. Winchester v. Black, 134 Cal. 125; 66 Pac. 197. Where the judgment against a defendant and his wife is vacated, on her motion, so far as her rights are concerned, the plaintiff may have her default set aside, and the time fixed in which to answer, where there is nothing in the record to show that her rights would, in any respect, be impaired thereby. Thompson v. Alford, 135 Cal. 52; 66 Pac. 983. This section expressly extends to the "legal representative" of a deceased defendant the right "to answer to the merits of the action." Davidson v. All Persons, 18 Cal. App. 723; 124 Pac. 570. The legal representative of a party to an action is entitled to relief, upon such terms as may be just, from a default taken against him through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. Plummer v. Brown, 64 Cal. 429; 1 Pac. 703. Where a judgment quieting title against an administrator is rendered in favor of the holder of a tax deed, a denial of the application of the heirs to set aside the judgment and to permit them to answer will not be disturbed, where no abuse of discretion is shown. Cass v. Hutton, 155 Cal. 103; 99 Pac. 493.

When judgments vacated. Power is conferred upon courts of record, by this section, to relieve from a judgment taken through surprise, excusable neglect, etc.; and by § 859, post, the power to grant such relief is expressly given to justices' courts. Hubbard v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 166; 98 Pac. 394. This section was not designed for the relief of persons not served with summons, who permit a judgment to be taken against them with their full knowledge and consent. Boland v. All Persons, 160 Cal. 486; 117 Pac. 547. A judgment entered without findings is not within the purview of this section. Savings and Loan Society v. Thorne, 67 Cal. 53; 7 Pac. 36. Courts are always inclined to be liberal in relieving parties laboring under disabilities from the effect of decrees which appear to be unjust, and which deprive them of their rights: the lower court is warranted in vacating such decrees, upon diligent application and a reasonable showing. Estate of Ross, 140 Cal. 282; 73 Pac. 976. A mere error or irregularity in making out a bill of costs does not invalidate a judgment otherwise correct. Castle v. Bader, 23 Cal. 75. Where an answer is improperly stricken out, a motion, after decree, to vacate the judgment, to reinstate the answer, and to restore the cause to the calendar for trial, should be granted. Bernheim v. Cerf, 123 Cal. 170; 55 Pac. 759. Where a motion to vacate a judgment for mistake has been denied under this section, the sole question upon an appeal from the order of denial is, whether the trial court abused its discretion. Alferitz v. Cahen, 145 Cal. 397; 78 Pac. 878. An order of the superior court, attempting to set aside its judgment affirming a judgment of a justice's court, upon an appeal on questions of law alone, upon a petition for a rehearing, is coram non judice, and void. Fabretti v. Superior Court, 77 Cal. 305; 19 Pac. 481.

Who may have judgment vacated. Only a party to the action, or his legal representative, can move to set aside a judgment. Smith v. Roberts, 1 Cal. App. 148; 81 Pac. 1026. Where a motion is made by the legal representative of a plaintiff, to set aside a judgment taken against him, on the ground of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, he must show such a state of facts as would support a similar application by the plaintiff. Corwin v. Bensley, 43 Cal. 253. One not a party, nor the legal representative of a party, to an action brought to decide conflicting claims to purchase state lands, is not entitled, though a settler on the land, to have a judgment therein set aside so as to allow him to intervene. Smith v. Roberts, 1 Cal. App. 148; 81 Pac. 1026. The purchaser of all the property involved in an action of partition is the legal representative of all the nominal parties to the action, within the meaning of this section; and, under § 385, ante, he has control of the action, and has the right to move, in the appellate court, to recall a remittitur obtained by fraud of nominal parties to the record, in taking steps adverse to his rights. Trumpler v. Trumpler, 123 Cal. 248; 55 Pac. 1008. Whether the judgment is either for or against a party, he may pray for relief, under this section. Brackett v. Banegas, 99 Cal. 623; 34 Pac. 344. Where the court orders notice to be given of a decree terminating a life estate, a party not personally served, who moves promptly, and within six months thereafter, to vacate such decree, is entitled to relief. Petition of Tracey, 136 Cal. 385; 69 Pac. 20. A judgment cannot be vacated upon the application of a defendant not affected thereby. Churchill v. More, 7 Cal. App. 767, 771; 96 Pac. 108.

Showing necessary to vacate judgment. A judgment by default cannot be vacated, under this section, without a sufficient showing (Ritter v. Braash, 11 Cal. App. 258; 104 Pac. 592); nor can a decree, valid on its face, be set aside without notice and a hearing. Andreen v. Andreen, 15 Cal. App. 728; 115 Pac. 761. Nor can a default and judgment, regularly entered against a litigant, be set aside and vacated, except upon a showing that they were taken against him through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. Redding etc. Mining Co. v. National Surety Co., 18 Cal. App. 488; 123 Pac. 544; Harlan v. Smith, 6 Cal. 173; Chase v. Swain, 9 Cal. 130; People v. O'Connell, 23 Cal. 281; Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422. A motion to set aside a judgment is properly denied, where summons was personally served, and the affidavit makes no averment of mistake, surprise or inadvertence, or any attempt to account for the failure to answer within the prescribed time. Harlan v. Smith, 6 Cal. 173. Where a non-resident has not been personally served within this state, the court has power, on motion, where the return of service is shown to be false, to quash the service of summons and vacate the judgment; and any fact going to show the invalidity of the judgment may be presented at the hearing of the motion. Norton v. Atchison etc. R. R. Co., 97 Cal. 388; 33 Am. St. Rep. 198; 30 Pac. 585; 32 Pac. 452. Application to vacate an order sustaining a demurrer may be made, without any showing of mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect. De la Beckwith v. Superior Court, 146 Cal. 496; 80 Pac. 717. On a motion to set aside a default judgment, the defendant may waive an objection for want of service of summons, and still have relief, under this section, on the ground of mistake and inadvertence. Martz v. American Bran Gold Co., 161 Cal. 531; 119 Pac. 909. From the fact that the relief to be afforded is the privilege of answering "to the merits of the original action," the condition is implied, that the defendant must have a sufficient answer to present, that is, he must have a good defense to the action on the merits: this being one of the conditions of the statute, the defendant must show that such defense exists. Gray v. Lawlor, 151 Cal. 356; 90 Pac. 691; Haub v. Leggett, 160 Cal. 491; 117 Pac. 556. There is no error in denying the defendant's motion to set aside a judgment against him, where there is an averment that gave the court jurisdiction, and the defendant was informed of the fact, made no objection, took no steps to vacate it, and did not have a meritorious defense. Seale v. McLaughlin, 28 Cal. 668. A party seeking to have a judgment set aside on the ground of accident or surprise must also show that he has been injured, and that a different result might be reached in case of another trial, should the judgment be set aside and a new trial granted. McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312. Where a default judgment is void because there is no proof of service, but, at the hearing of the motion to vacate, proof is made of the fact of service at the time mentioned in the void certificate of service, the court is not justified in refusing the motion. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. A defendant corporation is entitled to have a judgment against it vacated, upon a showing that it was rendered without actual service of summons upon any officer or agent of the corporation, and without actual knowledge, on its part, of the pendency of the action. Martz v. American Bran Gold Co., 161 Cal. 531; 119 Pac. 909. A default for failure to answer is improperly set aside, where there was no service of the moving papers, and the application was heard and decided in the absence of the plaintiff's attorney, who had no notice of the motion, and no reasonable excuse was given for the failure to answer within the proper time. Reilly v. Ruddock, 41 Cal. 312. The court will hear counter-affidavits as to an excuse for permitting the default. Douglass v. Todd, 96 Cal. 655; 31 Am. St. Rep. 247; 31 Pac. 623. The motion to set aside a default, and to fix a time for the defendant to plead, does not presumptively involve the determination of any facts presented on a motion to vacate the judgment: the two motions are separate and distinct from each other, depend upon distinct record, and seek distinct relief. Thompson v. Alford, 128 Cal. 227; 60 Pac. 686. A judgment by default, reciting the fact that the defendant was duly served, cannot be set aside on motion, where there is no evidence, either in or dehors the record, tending to rebut the recitals in the judgment. Whitney v. Daggett, 108 Cal. 232; 41 Pac. 471. An application to set aside a default judgment, which expressly refers to and makes all the papers and proceedings on file or of record part of the moving papers, and which is an amendment of a former application, will be so regarded for the purpose of determining the question of diligence. Wolff v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., 89 Cal. 332; 26 Pac. 825. Where there is a perfect affidavit of merits, and the default is properly excused, the judgment may be set aside, to permit the plea of discharge in insolvency or bankruptcy, where the application contains a statement of discharge in insolvency. Tuttle v. Scott, 119 Cal. 586; 51 Pac. 849. Where the motion to vacate a judgment by default is made on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction to render any judgment, by reason of failure to serve the summons, the question whether the facts stated in the application would constitute a defense to the action, is immaterial. Mott Iron Works v. West Coast Plumbing etc. Co., 113 Cal. 341; 45 Pac. 683. Where a defendant seeks relief, under this section, from a default judgment in an action to quiet title under the McEnerney Act, the affidavit on the motion, stating facts sufficient to show that the claimant had a "valid adverse interest" in the property involved in the action when it was begun, is sufficient. Davidson v. All Persons, 18 Cal. App. 723; 124 Pac. 570. Where the defendant has actual notice of the time and place of trial, and that no further postponement would be agreed to by the opposing party, and the case is tried in his absence, he is not entitled to have the judgment vacated and a new trial granted on the ground of accident and surprise. McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312. Where a motion for a new trial was denied on the ground that the moving affidavits were not filed in time, a subsequent motion to set aside the judgment, on the ground of excusable neglect, will also be denied, if sufficient reasons are not shown for the delay in filing the affidavits on the former motion. Heine v. Treadwell, 72 Cal. 217; 13 Pac. 503.

Affidavit of merits. An affidavit of merits is required in proceedings for relief under this section (Nevada Bank v. Dresbach, 63 Cal. 324; Quan Quock Fong v. Lyons, 20 Cal. App. 668; 130 Pac. 33); and the defendant must show that he has a good defense to the action on the merits. People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 127; Gray v. Lawlor, 151 Cal. 352; 12 Ann. Cas. 990; 90 Pac. 691. Where no affidavit of merits is made, an explanation should be given. Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422. In the absence of a showing of merits, relief will be denied.

Reese v. Mahoney, 21 Cal. 305; Bailey v. Taafe, 29 Cal. 422; Parrott v. Den, 34 Cal. 79. No affidavit of merits is necessary on a motion to vacate a judgment rendered upon an invalid stipulation (Toy v. Haskell, 128 Cal. 558; 79 Am. St. Rep. 70; 61 Pac. 89); nor on a motion to set aside a judgment, entered upon a fraudulent stipulation, where the record shows that there is a meritorious defense (Crescent Canal Co. v. Montgomery, 124 Cal. 134; 56 Pac. 797); nor on a motion to vacate a judgment based upon want of jurisdiction of the person (Maclay Co. v. Meads, 14 Cal. App. 363; 112 Pac. 195; 113 Pac. 364); nor on a motion to set aside a decree in a divorce suit (Cottrell v. Cottrell, 83 Cal. 457; 23 Pac. 531); nor where the judgment shows upon its face that it was improvidently made (Clarke v. Baird, 98 Cal. 642; 33 Pac. 756); nor where the judgment is void: in this class of cases the defendant is entitled to relief, independently of the statute. Norton v. Atchison etc. R. R. Co., 97 Cal. 388; 33 Am. St. Rep. 198; 30 Pac. 585; 32 Pac. 452. The court may grant leave to the defendant to amend his affidavit, and to file the same. Palmer v. Barclay, 92 Cal. 199; 28 Pac. 226. The affidavit cannot be controverted (Reclamation District v. Coghill, 56 Cal. 607); nor can counter-affidavits be received (Francis v. Cox, 33 Cal. 323; Gracier v. Weir, 45 Cal. 53); nor can the merits of the case be tried (Rauer's Law etc. Co. v. Gilleran, 138 Cal. 352; 71 Pac. 445); but where the court deems further affidavits necessary, the hearing may be continued for that purpose. Melde v. Reynolds, 129 Cal. 308; 61 Pac. 932. Where the affidavit is insufficient, the court should not set aside the judgment: it has no authority to waive a proper affidavit. Morgan v. McDonald, 70 Cal. 32; 11 Pac. 350. A verified answer is a sufficient showing of merits. Fulweiler v. Hog's Back Consol. Mining Co., 83 Cal. 126; 23 Pac. 65. The affidavit may be made by counsel, where the defendant is ignorant, and unacquainted with modes of judicial proceedings (Byrne v. Alas, 68 Cal. 479; 9 Pac. 850); and it is not objectionable because made by an attorney. Will v. Lytle Creek Water Co., 100 Cal. 344; 34 Pac. 830. A personal affidavit is not jurisdictional. Melde v. Reynolds, 129 Cal. 308; 61 Pac. 932. The affidavit must state that the defendant has fully and fairly stated the facts of the case to his counsel: a statement that he has stated the facts of his defense to counsel is insufficient (Morgan v. McDonald, 70 Cal. 32; 11 Pac. 350); and it is also insufficient, that he stated "his case" to his counsel (People v. Larue, 66 Cal. 235; 5 Pac. 127); and that he had fully and fairly stated to counsel all the facts constituting the defense (Palmer & Rey v. Barclay, 92 Cal. 199; 28 Pac. 226); and that he had fairly and fully stated "all the facts" to his counsel. Jensen v. Dorr, 9 Cal. App. 19; 98 Pac. 46. It is not essential that the affidavit disclose facts constituting a defense. Rauer's Law etc. Co. v. Gilleran, 138 Cal. 352; 71 Pac. 445; Woodward v. Backus, 20 Cal. 137; Francis v. Cox, 33 Cal. 323; Reidy v. Scott, 53 Cal. 69. The rule that a party moving to vacate a judgment by default cannot be deprived of relief because the affidavit is overcome by counter-affidavits, does not apply where no case of inadvertence or excusable neglect is shown. Bond v. Karma-Ajax Consol. Mining Co., 15 Cal. App. 469; 115 Pac. 254. Where the affidavit is materially deficient in showing that the default occurred through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, or that the defendant has a meritorious defense to the action, the judgment should not be vacated. Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422. An affidavit showing that the defense is of a technical character, not affecting the merits of the case, is insufficient (People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 127); as is also an affidavit stating facts that would not constitute a defense to the action upon the merits (Tuttle v. Scott, 119 Cal. 586; 51 Pac. 849); and an affidavit containing no averment of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or any attempt to account for failure to answer within the time allowed by law, where personal service of summons was made (Harlan v. Smith, 6 Cal. 173); and an affidavit, that the affiant was fully advised of the facts and circumstances involved in the defense. Quan Quock Fong v. Lyons, 20 Cal. App. 668; 130 Pac. 33. Where the affidavit discloses a degree of negligence, carelessness, and lack of diligence, hardly to be expected of a prudent business man, the application should be denied. Coleman v. Rankin, 37 Cal. 247; Wolff & Co. v. Canadian Pacific Ry., 89 Cal. 332; 26 Pac. 825. An affidavit by the defendant's attorney, that he has examined the defendant's title, and verily believes, from such examination, that it is better than the plaintiff's, does not show a meritorious defense. Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422. The default should be set aside, where there is a sufficient affidavit, and the facts, if proved, would constitute a meritorious defense. Reidy v. Scott, 53 Cal. 69; Burns v. Scooffy, 98 Cal. 271; 33 Pac. 86. Where a foreign corporation failed to designate an agent in this state, and no service by publication was made, but a substituted service upon the secretary of state, a motion to vacate a judgment by default against such corporation must be denied, where there is no showing of a meritorious defense to the action, and the defendant does not ask to be allowed to come in and make such defense. Olender v. Crystalline Mining Co., 149 Cal. 482; 86 Pac. 1082. The statute of limitations is a defense on the merits, which may be set up after a default has been vacated (Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 157 Cal. 192; 21 Ann. Cas. 1279; 106 Pac. 715); and where the bar of the statute is pleaded as a defense, that is a sufficient answer to the merits to justify the opening of a default. San Diego Realty Co. v. McGinn, 7 Cal. App. 264; 94 Pac. 374.

Mistake or neglect of attorney. Judgment by default may be set aside on account of the mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect of the attorney (O'Brien v. Leach, 139 Cal. 220; 96 Am. St. Rep. 105; 72 Pac. 1004); but an attorney's ignorance of the limit of the court's power to extend time is inexcusable neglect. Utah-Nevada Co. v. De Lamar, 9 Cal. App. 759; 100 Pac. 884. Ignorance of the law requiring an answer to be filed within ten days is no ground for setting aside a judgment by default. Chase v. Swain, 9 Cal. 130. Because more time was required to prepare the answer than in ordinary cases, and because the defendant's attorney was compelled to be absent during a part of the time, are not good grounds for setting aside a judgment by default. Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422. A judgment by default cannot be set aside upon a mere abstract allegation of the attorney's inadvertence in drafting, serving, or filing the answer: reasons, causes, and excuses for inadvertence, must be stated; and a judgment by default should not be vacated, merely on the ground of the attorney's mistake in believing that the service of notice of the overruling of the demurrer to the complaint was unauthorized by law. Shearman v. Jorgensen, 106 Cal. 483; 39 Pac. 863. There is no abuse of discretion in setting aside a judgment by default, where the attorney was mistaken, owing to an error of his clerk, as to the time the case was set for trial, and did not appear (Dougherty v. Nevada Bank, 68 Cal. 275; 9 Pac. 112); nor where the plaintiff's attorney resided at a considerable distance from the place of trial, and he had reason to believe that the case would not be tried when called. Cameron v. Carroll, 67 Cal. 500; 8 Pac. 45. Where the attorney for the plaintiff voluntarily absents himself to attend a trial in another county, not in the capacity of an attorney, but as a witness, and after having agreed to dismiss the cause, and judgment goes for the defendant, the facts are not sufficient to authorize the vacation of the judgment. Gray v. Sabin, 87 Cal. 211; 25 Pac. 422. A judgment, erroneous in substance, entered, after the sustaining of a demurrer, in the absence of the defendant's attorney, and against his express directions to the clerk, may be vacated, where the defendant, on learning of its entry, promptly moved to set it aside. City Street Improvement Co. v. Emmons, 138 Cal. 297; 71 Pac. 332. A default should be set aside, where it was occasioned by the inadvertence of the clerk of the supreme court, in failing to make an entry of the issuance of a remittitur, and in misleading the attorney of the defendant by his statements. Hogs Back Consol. etc. Mining Co. v. New Basil Consol. etc. Mining Co., 65 Cal. 22; 2 Pac. 489. Where the defendant's attorney was misled, through a misunderstanding in a conversation with an attorney for the plaintiff, into the belief that the trial would be postponed, the defendant's motion to vacate the judgment and to grant a new trial should be granted (Symons v. Bunnell, 80 Cal. 330; 22 Pac. 193); and also where it is shown the defendant and his attorney resided at a great distance from the county seat; that they were not notified that the case was set for trial, and did not hear that it had been set until it was too late to be present and answer; and that they had a good and substantial defense to the action on the merits (Buell v. Emerich, 85 Cal. 116; 24 Pac. 644); and also where it is shown that the merits were not passed upon on a first appeal; that no service of an amended complaint was made and no notice of the filing thereof given, except a copy mailed to the attorney of one of the defendants, who did not receive it until a month after mailing, and who had no knowledge of the date of mailing; and that the defendants were not guilty of any negligence in failing to demur or answer to the amended complaint. Malone v. Big Flat Gravel Mining Co., 93 Cal. 384; 28 Pac. 1063. Where the defendant's attorneys were misled, and the defendant's failure to be represented at the trial was the result, and the neglect was excusable, the refusal of the court to vacate and set aside the judgment will be reversed on appeal. Melde v. Reynolds, 129 Cal. 308; 61 Pac. 932.

Vacation of void judgments. A void judgment is not one entered through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, and is not governed by this section. Stierlen v. Stierlen, 18 Cal. App. 609; 124 Pac. 226, 228; People v. Greene, 74 Cal. 400; 5 Am. St. Rep. 448; 16 Pac. 197; Lapham v. Campbell, 61 Cal. 296; Baker v. O'Riordan, 65 Cal. 368; 4 Pac. 232. Where the judgment is in fact void, the party against whom it was rendered has an absolute right, without invoking this section, to have it vacated: he is not required to show that he has a meritorious defense to the action, as a condition to the granting of such right. German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Bien, 18 Cal. App. 267; 122 Pac. 1096. Where the judgment is not void on its face, a motion will not lie to vacate it after the time limited by statute; and in all cases, after the lapse of such time, when the attempt is made to vacate the judgment by a proceeding for that purpose, an action regularly brought is preferable, and should be required; but a judgment void on its face may be attacked at any time, directly or collaterally. People v. Harrison, 84 Cal. 607; 24 Pac. 311; People v. Blake, 84 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 1142; 24 Pac. 313; Wharton v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727; People v. Davis, 143 Cal. 673; 77 Pac. 651. A judgment, void on its face, may be vacated upon motion (Jacks v. Baldez, 97 Cal. 91; 31 Pac. 899), at any time after its entry (People v. Greene, 74 Cal. 400; 5 Am. St. Rep. 448; 16 Pac. 197); and this right exists independently of any statutory provision (George Frank Co. v. Leopold & Ferron Co., 13 Cal. App. 59; 108 Pac. 878); and this rule applies to a deficiency judgment in the foreclosure of a mortgage. Latta v. Tutton, 122 Cal. 279; 68 Am. St. Rep. 30; 54 Pac. 844. The power of the court to vacate a judgment or order, void upon its face, is not extinguished by lapse of time, but may be exercised whenever the matter is brought to the attention of the court; and while a motion for such action, on the part of the court, is appropriate, yet neither a motion, nor notice to the adverse party, is essential: the court has power to take such action, on its own motion, without application on the part of any one. People v. Davis, 143 Cal. 673; 77 Pac. 651. A judgment, void upon its face, and which requires only an inspection of the judgment roll to show its invalidity, will be set aside, on motion, by the court rendering it, at any time after its entry (People v. Temple, 103 Cal. 447; 37 Pac. 414); and where the moving party has succeeded to the rights of the defendant, his motion to set aside the judgment cannot be defeated by mere delay, however great. People v. Goodhue, 80 Cal. 199; 22 Pac. 66. Where a judgment by default is void because entered by the clerk without authority, there is no ground for a resort to a court of equity: the court in which such judgment was rendered can, on motion, at any time, arrest all process issued therein by its clerk. Chipman v. Bowman, 14 Cal. 157; Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200; Bell v. Thompson, 19 Cal. 706; Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170; Murdock v. De Vries, 37 Cal. 527. Judgment without personal service of summons, or authorized appearance by the defendant, is void; but it may be shown that the judgment is void only in certain ways, and the superior court cannot set aside such judgment, except on the evidence found in the judgment roll, where more than six months have elapsed since its rendition. People v. Harrison, 107 Cal. 541; 40 Pac. 956. A judgment void upon its face is one which appears to be void from an inspection of the judgment roll; and the mere absence of a paper from the roll, such as the return of the officer showing service of summons, cannot invalidate the judgment, where the judgment itself recites the fact that the defendant was duly served (People v. Harrison, 84 Cal. 607; 24 Pac. 311; Latta v. Tutton, 122 Cal. 279; 68 Am. St. Rep. 30; 54 Pac. 844; Butler v. Soule, 124 Cal. 69; 56 Pac. 601); and before the amendment of 1895 to § 670, post, neither the affidavit nor order of publication was a part of the roll, and could not be considered on a motion to vacate the judgment. People v. Temple, 103 Cal. 447; 37 Pac. 414; Jacks v. Baldez, 97 Cal. 91; 31 Pac. 899; Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita etc. Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301. A judgment rendered without service of summons upon the defendant, either actual or constructive, is void. People v. Harrison, 107 Cal. 541; 40 Pac. 956. A judgment rendered without personal service, and upon a publication of summons not based upon any affidavit or order of publication, is void; and the court has no power to set it aside, upon evidence not found in the judgment roll, where more than six months have elapsed since its rendition. People v. Harrison, 107 Cal. 541; 40 Pac. 956. Where proof of service of summons on the defendant is not made as required by law, the court acquires no jurisdiction of his person, and a judgment rendered against him, without such proof, is invalid and void, and may be set aside upon motion. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. Where defects in the return of service cannot be supplied by presumption, and the record fails to show jurisdiction, a judgment by default, upon such return, is void for want of jurisdiction. Pioneer Land Co. v. Maddux, 109 Cal. 633; 50 Am. St. Rep. 67; 42 Pac. 295. A judgment is not void because it gives relief in excess of that prayed for; and the lower court has no power to amend or modify it as to the excess, as an act done without jurisdiction. Cohen v. Cohen, 150 Cal. 99; 11 Ann. Cas. 520; 88 Pac. 267. In a foreclosure suit, where the complaint does not make a case entitling the plaintiff to a personal judgment against the defendant, and the decree does not declare any personal liability, an ex parte amendment, after the entry of the final decree, establishing the personal liability of the mortgagor, and directing the clerk to enter a deficiency judgment against him, is without jurisdiction, and void. Scamman v. Bonslett, 118 Cal. 93; 62 Am. St. Rep. 226; 50 Pac. 272. A judgment in a foreclosure suit, commenced in a county other than that where the mortgaged premises are situated, is void. Rogers v. Cady, 104 Cal. 288; 43 Am. St. Rep. 100; 38 Pac. 81.

Notice. Actual notice of the entry of an order appealed from, established by satisfactory evidence of record, starts the time running without service of written notice. Estate of Keating, 158 Cal. 109; 110 Pac. 109. The object of notice is to bring home to the attorney knowledge of a fact upon which he is called to act: where he has direct and positive knowledge, written notice is unnecessary. Bell v. Thompson, 8 Cal. App. 483; 97 Pac. 158. The notice of motion to set aside a judgment by default need not state in detail the facts upon which the relief is asked: it is sufficient if it states the grounds upon which the motion will be made. O'Brien v. Leach, 139 Cal. 220; 96 Am. St. Rep. 105; 72 Pac. 1004.

Time within which party must move. Under the Practice Act, it was necessary for a party to take initiatory steps to obtain the relief authorized, before the expiration of the term at which final judgment was rendered, in all cases, except those in which the defendant had been personally served with summons, in which cases the court could, upon such terms as might be just, allow the defendant to answer to the merits at any time within six months after the rendition of judgment (Casement v. Ringgold, 28 Cal. 335); and, after the expiration of the term, no power remained in the court to set aside a judgment or to grant a new trial (Baldwin v. Kramer, 2 Cal. 582; Morrison v. Dapman, 3 Cal. 255; Suydam v. Pitcher, 4 Cal. 280; Lattimer v. Ryan, 20 Cal. 628; People v. Greene, 74 Cal. 400; 5 Am. St. Rep. 448; 16 Pac. 197); but, since the Practice Act, the legislature has enlarged the power of the court to set aside judgments, and to relieve a party from an unjust or an improperly obtained judgment, at any time, upon good cause shown. People v. Lafarge, 3 Cal. 130. The court has the inherent right and power, at any time, to cause its acts and proceedings to be correctly set forth in its records; but it cannot, under the pretense of an amendment, revise a judgment after the right to correct it in any form has become final. Forrester v. Lawler, 14 Cal. App. 171; 111 Pac. 284. Mere clerical misprisions or omissions are subject to correction at any time, by an order entered for that purpose, but acts not within that category must be distinguished. Cosby v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 45; 42 Pac. 460. To obtain relief under this section, application must be made within the time prescribed: the court has no power to vacate a judgment or order, not void upon its face, after the expiration of the time limited by this section. Hartman v. Olvera, 49 Cal. 101; Amestoy Estate Co. v. Los Angeles, 5 Cal. App. 273; 90 Pac. 42; Estate of Cahalan, 70 Cal. 604; 12 Pac. 427; Dunsmuir v. Coffey, 148 Cal. 137; 82 Pac. 682; Moore v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 495; 25 Pac. 22; Tinn v. United States District Attorney, 148 Cal. 773; 113 Am. St. Rep. 354; 84 Pac. 152; Estate of Dunsmuir, 149 Cal. 67; 84 Pac. 657; Steen v. Santa Clara Valley Mill etc. Co., 4 Cal. App. 448; 88 Pac. 499. Jurisdiction to modify or vacate a default, decree, or judgment is lost, where the time for the proceeding has expired. Reed v. Reed, 9 Cal. App. 748; 100 Pac. 897; Steen v. Santa Clara Valley etc. Co., 4 Cal. App. 448; 88 Pac. 499; Andreen v. Andreen, 15 Cal. App. 728; 115 Pac. 761; Boland v. All Persons, 160 Cal 486; 117 Pac. 547. A judgment will not be vacated upon motion, made after the lapse of the prescribed period, unless it is void upon its face; which is quite consistent with the proposition, that a motion made within the statutory period may be granted as well when the defendant is wholly without fault as when he has been guilty of a mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. Norton v. Atchison etc. R. R. Co., 97 Cal. 388; 33 Am. St. Rep. 198; 30 Pac. 585; 32 Pac. 452. Where a judgment was vacated for inadvertence, and the time to appeal from an order vacating it had expired, without any appeal therefrom or modification thereof, and there is a second judgment or decree, not void upon its face, which it is sought to vacate and set aside, the notice of motion therefor, if served and filed nearly ten months after the entry of decree, comes too late. Butler v. Soule, 124 Cal. 69; 56 Pac. 601. An action to cancel and set aside a judgment, brought more than five years after the entry of judgment, is barred by laches and gross carelessness affirmatively appearing in the complaint. Hildreth v. James, 109 Cal. 301; 41 Pac. 1039. A judgment, not void on its face, cannot be vacated on a mere motion, made years after its rendition (People v. Harrison, 84 Cal. 607; 24 Pac. 311; People v. Blake, 84 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 1142; 24 Pac. 313); but resort should be had to an action, and all parties interested should be notified and have an opportunity to be heard (People v. Temple, 103 Cal. 447; 37 Pac. 414); nor can the judgment be vacated, on a mere motion, after the lapse of twenty-three years, where the moving party's grantor was personally served five months prior to the entry of the judgment. People v. Goodhue, 80 Cal. 199; 22 Pac. 66. A mere error of the court cannot be taken advantage of on motion to set aside a default judgment, where such motion is made nearly five years after the rendition of the judgment. People v. Wrin, 143 Cal. 11; 76 Pac. 646. A judgment, not void on its face, reciting that the defendant was duly served with process, cannot be set aside, on motion made sixteen years after the judgment was entered, on the ground that the summons was not personally served on the defendant, and was published without an affidavit, where the deputy clerk and the district attorney at the time the action was pending testified that no affidavit for publication had been filed, and there was no such filing on the register of actions. People v. Harrison, 84 Cal. 607; 24 Pac. 311. A motion to set aside a judgment, upon the ground that it appears upon its face that the court had no jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, is a direct attack upon the judgment, and is not barred by the mere lapse of time. Rue v. Quinn, 137 Cal. 651; 66 Pac. 216; 70 Pac. 732. The court may, at any time, set aside a judgment by default, entered by the clerk, where it appears from the judgment roll that he had no power to enter it. Young v. Fink, 119 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 1060. The time within which a judgment, the invalidity of which does not appear upon its face, may be set aside upon motion, seems not to have been definitely determined, further than that it may be done within the time limited by this section. People v. Thomas, 101 Cal. 571; 36 Pac. 9. Where a judgment is regular on its face, with no question as to the jurisdiction of the court, a motion to set it aside, not made within the prescribed time, should be denied. Young v. Fink, 119 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 1060. An erroneous judgment is not void; hence, it cannot be set aside on motion after the expiration of the time limited by this section. Blondeau v. Snyder, 95 Cal. 521; 31 Pac. 591; and see Estate of Dunsmuir, 149 Cal. 67; 84 Pac. 657. The limitation of time prescribed by this section is a limitation of the time within which the application must be made, and not of the time within which it must be heard or determined. Wolff v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., 89 Cal. 332; 26 Pac. 825. The superior court has no power or authority to vacate or modify its judgment, on account of judicial error, after the time therefor has expired, no matter how apparent such error may be on the face of the record: its power thereafter is limited to the correction of mere clerical misprisions on the record, or to the excision of such parts of the record as appear or can be shown to be void for lack of jurisdiction or power (Grannis v. Superior Court, 146 Cal. 245; 106 Am. St. Rep. 23; 79 Pac. 891); nor has the superior court jurisdiction to entertain, after the time specified in this section, a petition to set aside a decree for fraud, or because the court was imposed upon by false testimony: a court of equity can grant the proper relief. Estate of Hudson, 63 Cal. 454. While an appeal from a judgment is pending, the court in which the judgment was rendered has no power to correct or amend it. Shay v. Chicago Clock Co., 111 Cal. 549; 44 Pac. 237; Kirby v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 604; 10 Pac. 119. An order vacating and setting aside a judgment and granting a new trial will be reversed, when the time in which the motion might have been made for a new trial had passed, and the right to move therefor gone. Hegeler v. Henckell, 27 Cal. 491. The court has power to allow amendments to judgments, regardless of the lapse of time, where the record, as entered by the clerk, fails to conform to the judgment rendered by the court. Forrester v. Lawler, 14 Cal. App. 171; 111 Pac. 284; Erickson v. Stockton etc. R. R. Co., 148 Cal. 206; 82 Pac. 961; San Francisco v. Brown, 153 Cal. 644; 96 Pac. 281. An application to amend or correct a bill of exceptions, or statement of the case, after settlement, is governed by the time limitation of this section. Sprigg v. Barber, 118 Cal. 591; 50 Pac. 682; Donnelly v. Tregaskis, 7 Cal. App. 317; 94 Pac. 383; Merced Bank v. Price, 152 Cal. 697; 93 Pac. 866; Estate of Thomas, 155 Cal. 488; 101 Pac. 798. The same rule applies to bills of exceptions as to statements on motion for a new trial, in the respect that the party moving for a new trial must prepare and serve his bill of exceptions within the time allowed by law, or it cannot be settled, either at the hearing of the motion or on appeal. Stonesifer v. Armstrong, 86 Cal. 594; 25 Pac. 50. The court has power, and has a large discretion, to settle a statement on motion for a new trial, on the ground of inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, though not presented within the time allowed by law (Banta v. Siller, 121 Cal. 414; 53 Pac. 935); or to allow a bill of exceptions to be settled, for use on the motion for a new trial, after the time limited, upon a showing of sufficient excuse. Mattern v. Alderson, 18 Cal. App. 590; 123 Pac. 972. Any relief from a failure to file the required notice of appeal within the prescribed time, if it can be given at all, must be sought in the lower court. Estate of Keating, 158 Cal. 109; 110 Pac. 109. The grounds for contesting a will, after its admission to probate, cannot be amended after the lapse of the year limited for the institution of the contest, so as to add an independent cause of contest; but an amplification of the original ground may properly be considered as a more definite statement of what was formerly averred, after the expiration of the year. Estate of Wilson, 117 Cal. 262; 49 Pac. 172, 711. The trial court is without power, under this section, to relieve a party from the consequences of his failure to serve and file his notice of motion for a new trial within the time allowed by law. Union Collection Co. v. Oliver, 162 Cal. 755; 124 Pac. 435.

Limitation of six months. The extreme limit of time within which an application may be made to vacate a judgment, under this section, is six months. Wharton v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727; Wolff v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., 89 Cal. 332; 26 Pac. 825; Hill v. Beatty, 61 Cal. 292. Where the judgment is unauthorized, the court may set it aside at any time within six months after its entry, even upon its own motion, and without any request therefor. Kaufman v. Shain, 111 Cal. 16; 52 Am. St. Rep. 139; 43 Pac. 393. A judgment, not void on its face, nor fraudulent, cannot be set aside on mere motion, unless made within the six months' limitation of this section. People v. Goodhue, 80 Cal. 199; 22 Pac. 66; People v. Harrison, 84 Cal. 607; 24 Pac. 311; People v. Blake, 84 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 1142; 24 Pac. 313; Moore v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 495; 25 Pac. 22; Jacks v. Baldez, 97 Cal. 91; 31 Pac. 899; Norton v. Atchison etc. R. R. Co., 97 Cal. 388; 33 Am. St. Rep. 198; 30 Pac. 585; 32 Pac. 452; Brackett v. Banegas, 99

Cal. 623; 34 Pac. 344; People v. Temple, 103 Cal. 447; 37 Pac. 414; People v. Dodge, 104 Cal. 487; 38 Pac. 203; Butler v. Soule, 124 Cal. 69; 56 Pac. 601; Estate of Eikerenkotter, 126 Cal. 54; 58 Pac. 370; May v. Hatcher, 130 Cal. 627; 63 Pac. 33. A judgment against a dead corporation may be vacated within six months after its entry. Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co., 150 Cal. 575; 89 Pac. 335. Where the parties entered into a stipulation as to the judgment, but it was erroneously rendered in excess of such stipulation, a motion, made more than six months thereafter, to obtain relief therefrom, cannot be granted. Dyerville Mfg. Co. v. Heller, 102 Cal. 615; 36 Pac. 928. Where delay was assented to by the opposing party, or does not appear to have been injurious to his rights, the six months' limitation should be considered as the only limit of reasonable time. Wolff v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., 89 Cal. 332; 26 Pac. 825. A motion to vacate the judgment for want of findings is not limited to six months from the time of the entry of judgment (Mace v. O'Reilley, 70 Cal. 231; 11 Pac. 721); and where findings are necessary, a judgment entered without them may properly be set aside after a lapse of more than six months, this section not being applicable. Savings and Loan Society v. Thorne, 67 Cal. 53; 7 Pac. 36. A bill of exceptions or statement, settled after an appeal taken, may be corrected by proper proceedings, if commenced within six months after settlement: in such cases the court is empowered to settle the bill or statement, that is, to complete the record, after and for the purposes of the appeal taken. Baker v. Borello, 131 Cal. 615; 63 Pac. 914. An application to amend or correct a bill of exceptions or statement, made more than six months from the date of the certification, is too late. Merced Bank v. Price, 152 Cal. 697; 93 Pac. 866; Sprigg v. Barber, 118 Cal. 591; 50 Pac. 682. No relief can be granted to a party, after service of the proposed bill of exceptions and amendments, where the prescribed six months in which such relief might be granted has long since passed. Moultrie v. Tarpio, 147 Cal. 376; 81 Pac. 1112. The taking and entering of a default by the clerk or by the court, at the instance of the adverse party, fixes the beginning of the period of six months within which the motion to set aside the default must be made. Title Insurance etc. Co. v. King Land etc. Co., 162 Cal. 44; 120 Pac. 1066. Application to set aside a judgment must be made within six months after the entry thereof, even though the mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect has been caused or brought about by fraud practiced by the party in whose favor the judgment or proceeding was taken: after that period, the question of mistake, etc., whatever the remedy in equity may be, cannot be tried by affidavit on motion for summary relief. Wharton v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727; Dyerville Mfg. Co. v. Heller, 102 Cal. 615; 36 Pac. 928. Where the proposed statement on motion for a new trial embodies the evidence, but does not contain a specification of the particulars wherein it is alleged to be insufficient to sustain the verdict, prior to its settlement by the judge, it may be amended by the insertion of such specifications, at any reasonable time after its proposal: the six months' limitation, as provided by this section, does not apply. Smith v. Stockton, 73 Cal. 204; 14 Pac. 675. Where, after a judgment by default, the defendant appeals on the ground of defective service by publication, the judgment will not be disturbed: the remedy is by motion in the court below, within six months after the judgment. Guy v. Ide, 6 Cal. 99; 65 Am. Dec. 490. The mere serving and filing of a notice of motion, before the expiration of the six months, that an application for relief from a judgment will be made, is not the making of the application within six months (Thomas v. Superior Court, 6 Cal. App. 629; 92 Pac. 739): a motion is an application for an order; and the application is that which is to be made within the six months. Brownell v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 703; 109 Pac. 91. The rule of diligence required in making the application does not control the subsequent proceedings, nor is six months necessarily a measure of reasonable time for the subsequent diligence: if the application is made within six months, the court is free to dispose of it as the exigencies of business and the circumstances of the case permit. Wolff v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., 123 Cal. 535; 56 Pac. 453. If a sufficient application is made within six months, the matter may be determined after that time. Brownell v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 703; 109 Pac. 91. A second application for relief will not be entertained, unless made within six months. Thomas v. Superior Court, 6 Cal. App. 629; 92 Pac. 739. Where the record does not show error, and resort must be had to evidence aliunde, notice must be given, of a motion to amend the judgment, to the parties to be affected thereby, and this motion must be made within six months, except where personal service has not been had, in which case the court may grant relief within one year after entry of judgment. Scamman v. Bonslett, 118 Cal. 93; 62 Am. St. Rep. 226; 50 Pac. 272. An equitable action to set aside a judgment, on the ground of fraud in its procurement, may be made after the expiration of six months. Estate of Hudson, 63 Cal. 454; California Beet Sugar Co. v. Porter, 68 Cal. 369; 9 Pac. 313; Ex-Mission Land etc. Co. v. Flash, 97 Cal. 610; 32 Pac. 600. A judgment of the former probate court, procured by fraud, could not be reached by a mere motion, under this section, unless it was made within six months after the rendition of judgment: the only remedy of the party aggrieved was by an independent suit in equity, and the issuing and serving of summons thereon, the matter having passed beyond the jurisdiction of the superior court as a court of probate. Dean v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 473. A judgment, regular on its face, cannot be set aside, on motion, after six months from the entry of judgment, on the ground of mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect, in not answering, or on the ground that it was procured by fraud and without notice, where the amended complaint in the case, in pursuance of a verbal agreement, was not personally served. Young v. Fink, 119 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 1060. The court has no power to set aside the default of a defendant, who has been personally served, unless the application therefor is made within six months after the default was entered. Title Insurance etc. Co. v. King Land etc. Co., 162 Cal. 44; 120 Pac. 1066. A judgment by default cannot be set aside, after the expiration of the prescribed time, unless it is void; and where the court has jurisdiction, and the affidavit of publication of summons, though defective, shows some diligence, and the order therefor is valid, the judgment is also valid. People v. Wrin, 143 Cal. 11; 76 Pac. 646.

Reasonable time. Terms of court are now abolished; but the relief that formerly could be had during a term may be sought within a reasonable time, which is defined to be six months, except where personal service has not been had, in which case the court may grant relief within one year. People v. Greene, 74 Cal. 400; 5 Am. St. Rep. 448; 16 Pac. 197; Wiggin v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 398; 9 Pac. 646; Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301; People v. Davis, 143 Cal. 673; 77 Pac. 651. Where an application to vacate a judgment by default is made immediately after the default, and so soon that no considerable delay or injury is occasioned to the plaintiff, the defendant should be given an opportunity to defend upon the merits. Grady v. Donahoo, 108 Cal. 211; 41 Pac. 41. A motion to vacate a judgment on the ground that it is void on its face, is not a collateral but a direct attack, and such motion may be made within a reasonable time after the expiration of the time limited by this section. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089; People v. Thomas, 101 Cal. 571; 36 Pac. 9; People v. Temple, 103 Cal. 447; 37 Pac. 414; People v. Dodge, 104 Cal. 487; 38 Pac. 203; People v. Harrison, 107 Cal. 541; 40 Pac. 956. The superior court, in setting aside an order or judgment made inadvertently or through mistake, must exercise its jurisdiction within a reasonable time. Fabretti v. Superior Court, 77 Cal. 305; 19 Pac. 481. What is a reasonable time, short of the extreme limit of six months, within which a motion may be made to set aside a judgment, not void upon its face, must depend somewhat on the circumstances of each particular case, all of which should be considered by the court, and is not definitely determined, further than that it will not extend beyond the limit fixed by this section. People v. Temple, 103 Cal. 447; 37 Pac. 414; Wolff v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., 89 Cal. 332; 26 Pac. 825; Smith v. Pelton Water Wheel Co., 151 Cal. 394; 90 Pac. 932, 1135. The question is one largely within the discretion of the trial court. George Frank Co. v. Leopold & Ferron Co., 13 Cal. App. 59; 108 Pac. 878. Twelve years from the rendition of the judgment is not a reasonable time. People v. Temple, 103 Cal. 447; 37 Pac. 414. If, under this section, a defendant may be relieved, on motion, from a default judgment taken against him through his mistake or excusable neglect, provided his motion is made within a reasonable time, not exceeding six months, a fortiori he should be relieved, on motion made, within the same time, when he is not guilty of any neglect. Norton v. Atchison etc. R. R. Co., 97 Cal. 388; 33 Am. St. Rep. 198; 30 Pac. 585; 32 Pac. 452. Where the complaint is unverified, and the court inadvertently strikes out the answer on motion of the plaintiff, the defendant not having appeared, and judgment goes for the plaintiff, and he moves promptly to vacate the judgment on discovery of the error, the allowance of the motion does not prejudice any of the defendant's rights. Bernheim v. Cerf, 123 Cal. 170; 55 Pac. 759; Whitney v. Superior Court, 147 Cal. 536; 82 Pac. 37.

Limitation one year, in absence of personal service. One who has only constructive notice of a suit brought against him may invoke the benefit of this section, and defend upon the merits (Zobel v. Zobel, 151 Cal. 98; 90 Pac. 191); and the judgment may be vacated, within the time prescribed, though the proceedings by publication were regular and the judgment is valid upon its face. Fox v. Townsend, 149 Cal. 659; 87 Pac. 82. The one-year clause of this section applies to cases where service was by publication, and may possibly apply where personal service was of such character as to be equivalent to no service at all; but it does not apply where the summons was personally served. Young v. Fink, 119 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 1060. Service by publication, under the order of court, has the same effect as service by either of the other statutory modes, except that, where service is by publication alone, the defendant, on a proper showing, may be allowed to answer to the merits at any time within one year after the rendition of judgment. Dunlap v. Steere, 92 Cal. 344; 27 Am. St. Rep. 143; 16 L. R. A. 361; 28 Pac. 563. A judgment by default should be set aside, as inadvertently entered, on motion made within one year after the entry thereof, where service was by publication, but no copy of the summons, by mail or otherwise, was served on the defendants, who were non-residents and whose residence was known, and the order for publication required copies of the summons to be mailed to each of them. Schart v. Schart, 116 Cal. 91; 47 Pac. 927. A judgment by default, not void on its face, where service was by publication, cannot be set aside on motion made more than one year after the entry of judgment. Howard v. McChesney, 103 Cal. 536; 37 Pac. 523. A judgment by default cannot be set aside on motion, not made within a year after the entry thereof, where the ground of the motion is, not that summons was not duly served on the defendant, but that the record does not show service, and there is no showing of any defense to the action or injury to the mover. Whitney v. Daggett, 108 Cal. 232; 41 Pac. 471. A defendant, not served with summons, against whom a false return of service thereof was made, has the absolute right, upon application within six months after the entry of judgment, and upon proof of the facts, to have the judgment vacated for want of jurisdiction, and the service of summons quashed, without condition: such application is not within this section. Waller v. Weston, 125 Cal. 201; 57 Pac. 892. A judgment upon a fraudulent claim, entered upon the defendant's default, after publication of summons, is not void, and cannot be set aside upon motion not made within one year. Dunlap v. Steere, 92 Cal. 344; 27 Am. St. Rep. 143; 16 L. R. A. 361; 28 Pac. 563. Where an amended complaint was not served upon the defendant a judgment entered thereon is void, and may be vacated, upon motion, within one year after its entry. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. A motion to vacate a judgment cannot be made after the expiration of six months, or with respect to one ground for setting aside the default, after one year, unless it is void on its face. Norton v. Atchison etc. R. R. Co., 97 Cal. 388; 33 Am. St. Rep. 198; 30 Pac. 585; 32 Pac. 452. This section is wholly independent of the remedy by appeal, and the year's limitation prescribed is not affected by the shortening of the time for appeal. Fox v. Townsend, 2 Cal. App. 193; 83 Pac. 272.

Constructive service of process. Service of summons by mailing, pursuant to an order for its publication, is not personal service; and a defendant so served is entitled to have his default set aside, without any showing of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect (Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 157 Cal. 192; 21 Ann. Cas. 1279; 106 Pac. 715); nor is service of summons upon a foreign corporation personal, and the court must, upon application made in due time, relieve the defendant from a judgment entered against it: in such a case the court has no discretion. Holiness Church v. Metropolitan Church Ass'n, 12 Cal. App. 445; 107 Pac. 633. A motion to vacate a judgment by default, based upon constructive service by publication, may be made, even after the expiration of ten years or more after its entry, where no jurisdiction was ever acquired, and the judgment is erroneous and void. People v. Pearson, 76 Cal. 400; 18 Pac. 424.

Vacation of judgment of dismissal. A judgment of dismissal, sending plaintiff out of court without the relief to which he is entitled, is a judgment against him, and in favor of the defendant; and if he consents to the dismissal to his injury, under an excusable mistake of fact, he is not barred of relief. Palace Hardware Co. v. Smith, 134 Cal. 381; 66 Pac. 474. Even if § 581, post, which authorizes a dismissal when the plaintiff abandons the case, were mandatory, the party in default may apply for relief under this section, where his neglect is excusable. Rosenthal v. McMann, 93 Cal. 505; 29 Pac. 121. Where an action is dismissed upon the plaintiff s direction, it is within the discretion of the court to vacate such dismissal, although entered by the clerk. Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644; 59 Pac. 143. A stipulation for the dismissal of an action, signed only by the plaintiff, and not by his attorney of record, and made without his consent, is invalid, and the court should correct its erroneous judgment of dismissal, based upon such stipulation, by setting the judgment aside, upon motion properly made to that effect by plaintiff, through his attorney. Toy v. Haskell, 128 Cal. 558; 79 Am. St. Rep. 70; 61 Pac. 89. A motion to dismiss an action for want of prosecution is one resting largely in the discretion of the court, and an order granting it will not be interfered with on appeal, unless such discretion is abused. Moore v. Thompson, 138 Cal. 23; 70 Pac. 930. There is no error in refusing to set aside a judgment dismissing an action for failure to file an amended complaint within the time allowed, where the affidavits and counter-affidavits upon the application do not show an abuse of discretion. Rauer v. Wolf, 115 Cal. 100; 46 Pac. 902.

Decree in divorce proceedings. The superior court has jurisdiction to vacate a judgment of divorce by other proceedings than a motion for a new trial. Storke v. Storke, 111 Cal. 514; 44 Pac. 173. A final decree of divorce, entered without a previous interlocutory decree, is wholly void as a final judgment granting an immediate divorce, and it is within the power of the superior court, at any time, on the motion of either party, or of its own motion, to declare it null in so far as it purports to be of such effect; but such decree may be vacated, under this section, so far as it purports to award an absolute divorce, leaving the judgment, in so far as it may determine that the plaintiff is entitled to a divorce, neither modified nor affected by an order vacating such decree. Grannis v. Superior Court, 146 Cal. 245; 106 Am. St. Rep. 23; 79 Pac. 891. It may nevertheless stand as a valid interlocutory decree, if, in form, it is sufficient therefor. Claudius v. Melvin, 146 Cal. 257; 79 Pac. 897. The authority of the court to vacate a judgment of divorce, on mere motion, is limited, by this section, to six months after its entry. Storke v. Storke, 116 Cal. 47; 47 Pac. 869; 48 Pac. 121. Within six months after the rendition of a decree of divorce, the trial court may relieve the party against whom judgment was rendered, on the ground of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. Deyoe v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 476; 98 Am. St. Rep. 73; 74 Pac. 28; Estate of Wood, 137 Cal. 129; 69 Pac. 900. After the court has rendered and entered judgment on an issue presented in an action for divorce, the judgment cannot be vacated, except by such proceedings as would authorize the court to vacate a judgment in any other action. Storke v. Storke, 116 Cal. 47; 47 Pac. 869; 48 Pac. 121. If the defendant, in an action for divorce, is served by publication, he may apply for relief, under this section, at any time within one year from the entry of the interlocutory decree: after that time, the final decree must stand. Andreen v. Andreen, 15 Cal. App. 728; 115 Pac. 761. The court should be very liberal in granting applications to set aside defaults in divorce actions, where it appears at all probable that there was no service, either personal or by publication. McBlain v. McBlain, 77 Cal. 507; 20 Pac. 61; Cottrell v. Cottrell, 83 Cal. 457; 23 Pac. 531. There is no abuse of discretion in denying a motion to set aside a judgment by default in a divorce case, where the evidence adduced thereupon is conflicting. Morton v. Morton, 117 Cal. 443; 49 Pac. 557. An action to procure a judgment of divorce is a purely personal action, which cannot survive the death of either party; and where the plaintiff in such an action dies subsequently to the entry of a judgment decreeing a divorce in her favor, the court is deprived of all power to review its action and determine her right to a divorce. Kirschner v. Dietrich, 110 Cal. 502; 42 Pac. 1064. Where a child is adopted subsequently to a decree of divorce, the superior court thereby loses jurisdiction to modify the decree relating to the child's custody. Younger v. Younger, 106 Cal. 377; 39 Pac. 779. In an action of divorce, where service is by publication, but the defendant, prior to the beginning of the action, leaves the state with the children of the marriage, and the court grants a decree, it has no jurisdiction to provide therein for alimony or support of the plaintiff, or for the support, custody, or control of the children, if they are in a foreign jurisdiction, and the judgment may be vacated upon defendant's motion, without reference to this section. De la Montanya v. De la Montanya, 112 Cal. 101; 53 Am. St. Rep. 165; 32 L. R. A. 82; 44 Pac. 345. Upon a wife's motion to vacate a decree of divorce, where the petition states that she obtained an order for the payment of counsel fees upon the motion, but does not state the grounds of her motion, nor the facts on which she relied for support, all presumptions are in favor of the jurisdiction of the court; and if the period of six months allowed by this section has not elapsed, it will be presumed that she attempted to make a motion for relief under this section. Grannis v. Superior Court, 143 Cal. 630; 77 Pac. 647. Pending a decision in an action for divorce, where the parties enter into a stipulation fixing their property rights, but the court declines to incorporate such stipulation in the judgment, the court has no jurisdiction, under this section, upon a motion made more than six months after the entry of the judgment, to order it to be amended by incorporating such stipulation therein. Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22. A decree for the permanent maintenance of a wife and child when living together, may be modified by the court, but the modified decree cannot be attacked by a petition for a new modification thereof, for matters occurring before its rendition, on a mere affidavit which shows no circumstance of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. Smith v. Smith, 113 Cal. 268; 45 Pac. 332. A judgment by default, in an action for divorce on the ground of the adultery of the wife, assigning to the husband all the community property, and awarding to him the four minor children, three of whom are girls, the eldest only eight years of age, is a harsh judgment, and, upon motion to vacate it, the court should be prompt to set it aside, and allow the defendant to answer, so that the case may be heard and determined on the merits. Mulkey v. Mulkey, 100 Cal. 91; 34 Pac. 621. In an action for divorce, as in any other, where the defendant makes default, and suffers judgment upon a mere ex parte showing, his remedy, in seeking relief, is under this section, and not by motion for a new trial (Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122); and where the question of alimony is at issue, and there is no finding and the decree is silent on the subject, the court, after entry of judgment, has no further jurisdiction over the parties or the subject-matter; and the appearance of the defendant in the subsequent matter of a motion for permanent alimony does not have the effect of reopening the judgment or authorizing its amendment by motion. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 124 Cal. 422; 57 Pac. 225. In order to set aside a judgment by default in an action of divorce, no affidavit of merits is required (McBlain v. McBlain, 77 Cal. 507; 20 Pac. 61; Mulkey v. Mulkey, 100 Cal. 91; 34 Pac. 621); and there is no statutory provision requiring that proof of any other fact shall be made by affidavit, nor is there any decision of the supreme court to that effect. Cottrell v. Cottrell, 83 Cal. 457; 23 Pac. 531.

Appointment of guardians. Upon a motion, by a person entitled to letters of guardianship of the person of a minor, to set aside an order granting letters to another person, made without the knowledge or consent of the moving party, no further affidavit of merits is necessary than the showing that she is a competent and fit person to have the care, control, and custody of such minor. Guardianship of Van Loan, 142 Cal. 423; 76 Pac. 37. Where the record discloses that the court had no power to make the order appointing a guardian, such order is void upon its face, and it can be attacked at any time. Guardianship of Eikerenkotter, 126 Cal. 54; 58 Pac. 370.

Orders in probate. Relief may be had in probate matters, under this section (Levy v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 590; 73 Pac. 417), which contemplates a motion in the cause in which the default was taken, and not a separate suit with separate pleadings. Estate of Griffith, 84 Cal. 107; 23 Pac. 528; 24 Pac. 381. A probate order is not "taken," within the meaning of this section, until the formal order is signed and filed. Brownell v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 703; 109 Pac. 91. No relief can be granted to the heirs, upon the ground that they had no notice or knowledge of proceedings for the sale of the real property of the decedent, where the facts show that they did have notice, and where the statutory mode of acquiring jurisdiction was followed. Estate of Leonis, 138 Cal. 194; 71 Pac. 171. The probate court has not power to revoke its decree, after it has become final by the lapse of time to appeal therefrom (Estate of Nolan, 145 Cal. 559; 79 Pac. 428); nor has it power to vacate an order of sale of real property, made on constructive notice, where it is supported by an unassailed finding that the sale was for the best interests of the estate (Estate of Leonis, 138 Cal. 194; 71 Pac. 171); but it has power to grant the motion of a minor heir to set aside the confirmation of a sale, on the ground he has been defrauded (Application of Johnson, 7 Cal. App. 436; 94 Pac. 592); and to vacate a decree of distribution, upon a proper showing (Pedroreña v. Superior Court, 80 Cal. 144; 22 Pac. 71); and to relieve the pretermitted minor grandchild of a deceased testator from the effects of a decree of distribution, under the terms of the will, on the ground of inadvertence and excusable neglect (Estate of Ross, 140 Cal. 282; 73 Pac. 976); and to set aside a decree of final discharge of an administrator, made and entered inadvertently and ex parte (Wiggin v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 398; 9 Pac. 646); and to vacate and set aside an order settling the final account of the administrator and distributing the estate, upon application of the minor heirs, made within the time prescribed (Estate of Hickey, 129 Cal. 14; 61 Pac. 475); and to vacate an order setting aside a homestead, on application of the executors and an heir, made within six months, on the ground of inadvertence, surprise, and excusable neglect. Levy v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 590; 73 Pac. 417. The superior court, in an equitable proceeding, may set aside a decree of a probate court, obtained by fraud, and without notice to the party against whom it was rendered: such a decree is void, and the plaintiff is entitled to relief beyond any which the court could give him under this section, and to have the judgment set aside and annulled absolutely. Baker v. O'Riordan, 65 Cal. 368; 4 Pac. 232.

Relief against judgments on stipulations. A motion to set aside a judgment rendered on an invalid stipulation need not be in accordance with this section. Toy v. Haskell, 128 Cal. 558; 79 Am. St. Rep. 70; 61 Pac. 89. The court has power to relieve parties from the effects of a stipulation which admits as a fact that which is not true, if the application therefor is made in time. Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50, 227. Where there is matter of record by which an amendment can be made, it is within the power of the court to make it, notwithstanding the rule as to time laid down in this section, and this applies to clerical misprisions; but a judgment in excess of a stipulation is erroneous, and the error being one of law committed at the trial, the remedy is either by motion for a new trial or by appeal, and not by a motion under this section. Dyerville Mfg. Co. v. Heller, 102 Cal. 615; 36 Pac. 928. Where judgment is rendered in an action involving title to real property, in which the defendant has transferred his interest, and entered into a fraudulent stipulation with the plaintiff for the entry of judgment in his favor, the motion of the successor in interest of the defendant, to set aside and vacate such judgment, is properly granted. Crescent Canal Co. v. Montgomery, 124 Cal. 134; 56 Pac. 797.

Imposition of terms as condition for granting relief. The payment of costs was formerly required as a condition precedent to granting an application to set aside a judgment by default (Roland v. Kreyenhagen, 18 Cal. 455; People v. O'Connell, 23 Cal. 281; Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422; Leet v. Grants, 36 Cal. 288; Watson v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 41 Cal. 17; Swift v. Canovan, 47 Cal. 86; Heermanr v. Sawyer, 48 Cal. 562; Ryan v. Mooney, 49 Cal. 33; Clune v. Sullivan, 56 Cal. 249); and judgment, vacated upon the payment of costs, remained in force until the costs were paid. Gregory v. Haynes, 21 Cal. 443. A complaint might have been amended by striking out the names of some of the plaintiffs therefrom, without the payment of costs (Tormey v. Pierce, 49 Cal. 306); but the payment of costs is no longer required. Cottrell v. Cottrell, 83 Cal. 457; 23 Pac. 531. Conditions may be imposed in granting relief under this section (McCarty v. Wilson, 2 Cal. App. 154; 83 Pac. 170); but the court has no power to impose costs as a condition to the vacation of the judgment. Waller v. Weston, 125 Cal. 201; 57 Pac. 892. The allowance of the application to set aside a judgment by default should be upon such terms and conditions as the circumstances may warrant. Pearson v. Drobaz Fishing Co., 99 Cal. 425; 34 Pac. 76. It is not an abuse of discretion for the court to impose terms upon which the defendant may be allowed to amend his answer, where there was a delay of two years, and the plaintiff and his counsel come a considerable distance to the place of trial, and a further continuance is necessary. Culverhouse v. Crosan, 94 Cal. 544; 29 Pac. 1100. Where the circumstances justify it, the court does not abuse its discretion in vacating a judgment by default without imposing terms as a condition. Robinson v. Merrill, 80 Cal. 415; 22 Pac. 260. Where a party is subjected to delay or inconvenience in having a default set aside, he can be compensated therefor by the terms which the court will impose as a condition of granting the motion (Nicoll v. Weldon, 130 Cal. 666; 63 Pac. 63); and if the delay is satisfactorily explained, the court has power, upon terms, to accept such explanation, and to make a final order granting the motion. Wolff v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., 123 Cal. 535; 56 Pac. 453. An amendment may be permitted, upon such terms as may be just (Williams v. Myer, 150 Cal. 714; 89 Pac. 972), on the trial of a case within the original jurisdiction of the superior court; it is also allowable on a trial de novo within its appellate jurisdiction. Ketchum v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 494; 4 Pac. 492. The phrase, "on such terms as may be just," does not authorize the refusal of the relief sought, when the statutory conditions are met; but it does authorize the imposition of such terms as may be necessary to do complete justice between the parties. Gray v. Lawlor, 151 Cal. 352; 12 Ann. Cas. 990; 90 Pac. 691. No error is committed in permitting an amendment of the complaint, upon terms, where it does not operate as a surprise to the defendant, nor work any hardship upon him. Riverside Land etc. Co. v. Jensen, 73 Cal. 550; 15 Pac. 131; Bean v. Stoneman, 104 Cal. 49; 37 Pac. 777; 38 Pac. 39. After a motion for a nonsuit, the court may, upon terms, allow an amendment of the declaration, where it will not operate as a surprise upon the defendants; but if this is not done, the plaintiff cannot recover. Farmer v. Cram, 7 Cal. 135. In setting aside a default judgment, it is proper to impose terms which will leave the plaintiff secure in his right to subject certain property of the defendant to satisfaction of any judgment he may obtain. Douglass v. Todd, 96 Cal. 655; 31 Am. St. Rep. 247; 31 Pac. 623. Where the court allows the proposed amendment of the complaint, upon a condition which is not accepted, the plaintiff cannot afterwards complain of the denial of his application, where the court does not abuse its discretion. Wise v. Wakefield, 118 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 310; Eltzroth v. Ryan, 91 Cal. 584; 27 Pac. 932. Where, by reason of the defendant's proposed amendments to his answer, the court is satisfied that the plaintiff is taken by surprise, and that he requires further time to meet the defense, it can continue the case, and impose such terms as will compensate the plaintiff for the expense and delay caused thereby. Guidery v. Green, 95 Cal. 630; 30 Pac. 786. Where a judgment is reversed on appeal, with leave to the plaintiff to amend, the lower court has no power to make a conditional order requiring the plaintiff to pay the costs of the appeal, with its accruing costs, as a condition. Dixon v. Risley, 114 Cal. 204; 46 Pac. 5.

Waiver of objections and of relief. A party may waive and abandon his right to relief under this section, by not pressing his motion to a ruling by the court. Johnson v. German American Ins. Co., 150 Cal. 336; 88 Pac. 985; King v. Dugan, 150 Cal. 258; 88 Pac. 925. Where counsel for both sides are present at the hearing of the motion to vacate a judgment, and contest the same, there is a waiver of written notice. Acock v. Halsey, 90 Cal. 215; 27 Pac. 193; Toy v. Haskell, 128 Cal. 558; 79 Am. St. Rep. 70; 61 Pac. 89. A default is waived, where the party subsequently appears, files pleadings, and goes to trial upon the merits. Sawtelle v. Muncy, 116 Cal. 435; 48 Pac. 387. A party defendant, by making a motion to vacate a judgment against it, on the ground that the affidavit of publication of summons was insufficient, and that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, thereby puts in a general appearance, instead of a special one, and waives all objection to the judgment for want of jurisdiction of his person. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Boston etc. Fruit Co., 126 Cal. 418; 58 Pac. 941; 59 Pac. 296.

Presumptions as to judgment. Every presumption will be indulged in favor of the validity of a judgment: any condition of facts consistent with its validity will be presumed to have existed, rather than one that will defeat it. Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita etc. Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301. Recitals in a decree of foreclosure must be deemed to be true, and to import absolute verity, where there is nothing in the judgment roll to contradict or impeach them: they are conclusive as to a tenant in possession under the mortgagor, who moves to vacate the decree for want of jurisdiction over the person or the subject-matter. Butler v. Soule, 124 Cal. 69; 56 Pac. 601. Where the plaintiff, in an action to quiet title under the McEnerney Act, makes the required affidavit as to persons claiming any interest in the property adversely to him, the findings and decree are not conclusive of the truth of such affidavit, if shown to be false and fraudulent as against a party not served with summons, who asks relief under this section, and directly and unequivocally states that the plaintiff knew, at the commencement of the action, and when he took his decree, that the claimant had an interest in the property. Davidson v. All Persons, 18 Cal. App. 723; 124 Pac. 570. Where there is nothing in the record to show the character of a proposed amendment, it will be presumed that the action of the court in refusing the application to amend is correct. Jessup v. King, 4 Cal. 331. Where an amended answer, filed in the name of a deceased defendant, on the day when the executors were substituted, recites that it was filed by leave of the court, and is found among the pleadings, and it appears that the cause was tried without objection, it must be presumed, upon appeal, that it was treated as a pleading in the case, although filed after the defendant's death, and no order of the court allowing the amendment appears in the record. Frazier v. Murphy, 133 Cal. 91; 65 Pac. 326. Where a judgment by default is rendered against the defendant, and an appeal is taken from an order denying his motion to set aside the default and to be allowed to answer, and where there is nothing in the judgment roll inconsistent with the finding of due service of summons, and where nothing further is shown on the subject, it will be presumed, in support of the judgment, that the finding was based upon service made in pursuance of the statute. La Fetra v. Gleason, 101 Cal. 246; 35 Pac. 765. If any matters could have been presented to the court below which would have authorized an amended judgment, it must be presumed, upon appeal, that such matters were so presented, and that the judgment was rendered in accordance therewith. Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita etc. Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301. Where a judgment is claimed to be void because it is a second judgment, the former one having been set aside by the court, and it is claimed that the order setting aside the former judgment is void, it will be presumed that the order vacating the first judgment was properly made, and that the court had jurisdiction to enter the second judgment. Butler v. Soule, 124 Cal. 69; 56 Pac. 601.

Appealable orders. An order denying relief under this section is appealable. Freeman v. Brown, 4 Cal. App. 108; 87 Pac. 204. As to the right of appeal, there is no distinction between judgments by default and judgments after issue joined and a trial. Hallock v. Jaudin, 34 Cal. 167. An order entering a default is not appealable; but one made after final judgment, denying the plaintiff's motion to set aside a judgment by default, previously entered, and to fix a time for the defendant to plead, is appealable (Thompson v. Alford, 128 Cal. 227; 60 Pac. 686); and, unless the appeal is taken within sixty days, it must be dismissed (Doyle v. Republic Life Ins. Co., 125 Cal. 15; 57 Pac. 667); and an order refusing to set aside a judgment on a motion is appealable. De la Montanya v. De la Montanya, 112 Cal. 101; 53 Am. St. Rep. 165; 32 L. R. A. 82; 44 Pac. 345. Where a judgment is voidable, but not void on its face, it can be corrected only on appeal, or on motion to set it aside, in the court where rendered, within six months after the rendition thereof; and if the motion is denied, an appeal lies from the order of denial. People v. Dodge, 104 Cal. 487; 38 Pac. 203. If a judgment is not void on its face, an order purporting to set it aside is an absolute nullity, and it is not necessary for the plaintiff to appeal therefrom: the court may, of its own motion, set aside such order at any time. People v. Davis, 143 Cal. 673; 77 Pac. 651. Where a judgment is taken against a defendant, either through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, relief should be sought in the court below: an appeal should not be taken on the judgment roll alone, where no defect is disclosed in the record. Johnston v. Callahan, 146 Cal. 212; 79 Pac. 870. Where the court adds the costs to the amount of the judgment, after the time for filing the memorandum has expired, and after an appeal has been perfected, the error can be corrected only on an appeal from such order. Jones v. Frost, 28 Cal. 245.

Disposition of appeal. The question of the service of summons is one of fact; and if the evidence is conflicting, and the court finds that service was made, and there is sufficient evidence to support the finding, the judgment will not be disturbed on appeal. Hunter v. Bryant, 98 Cal. 247; 33 Pac. 51; Mott v. West Coast Plumbing etc. Co., 113 Cal. 341; 45 Pac. 683. The trial court has a wide discretion, under this section, and its action will not be disturbed on appeal, unless it clearly appears there has been an abuse of discretion. Hole v. Takekawa, 165 Cal. 372; 132 Pac. 445. On an appeal from an order refusing to vacate a judgment by default, all presumptions are in favor of the order of the lower court; where the evidence is conflicting, the judgment will be affirmed. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Estudillo, 134 Cal. 166; 66 Pac. 257. An order vacating a judgment, setting aside a default, and giving leave to answer, will be affirmed on appeal, although the clerk certified to the transcript, where there was no bill of exceptions, or certificate of the judge identifying the papers. Walsh v. Hutchings, 60 Cal. 228. The use of the word "executor," instead of "executors," in a notice of appeal, is evidently one of the scrivener, and could not be misleading, and will be disregarded on appeal. Estate of Nelson, 128 Cal. 242; 60 Pac. 772. Where the court grants leave to file an amended complaint, and only amendments to the complaint were filed, and there is nothing in the record to show that counsel for the defendant was not present and consenting, the appellate court will not disregard such amendments: that leave was granted to file an amended complaint, while only amendments to the complaint were filed, will be regarded as an error of the clerk. Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616. A mistake will be disregarded upon appeal, where its amendment, if it had been moved for, would have followed as a matter of course. Estate of Nelson, 128 Cal. 242; 60 Pac. 772. Where a bill of exceptions, used on the motion for a new trial, was not served in time, and the record shows no relief from the default, the bill cannot be considered on appeal. King v. Dugan, 150 Cal. 258; 88 Pac. 925. Where a demurrer to the complaint is sustained, and the plaintiff declines to amend, and appeals from the judgment and the order sustaining the demurrer, the supreme court cannot so modify the judgment as to grant him leave to amend his complaint. People v. Jackson, 24 Cal. 630. Where a defendant supposed he had, in his answer, denied the material allegations of the complaint, and the court sustained his view of the answer, the appellate court, when it reverses the judgment may allow the court below to exercise its discretion in permitting the answer to be amended. Fish v. Redington, 31 Cal. 185.

When equity will grant relief. After adjournment of a term, a party who sought to set aside a judgment on the ground of fraud or surprise had, under the old law, to proceed by bill in equity. Robb v. Robb, 6 Cal. 21. A party was not confined to his remedy by statute, but could resort to a court of equity for relief against a judgment obtained through fraud or surprise. Carpentier v. Hart, 5 Cal. 406. Even now, a party against whom an unjust judgment has been obtained, through accident, mistake, or fraud, may, in certain cases, maintain a suit in equity to set aside a judgment. Sullivan v. Lumsden, 118 Cal. 664; 50 Pac. 777; Fox v. Townsend, 2 Cal. App. 193; 83 Pac. 272; Rauer's Law etc. Co. v. Standley, 3 Cal. App. 44; 84 Pac. 214. Courts of equity, in granting relief against a judgment, are not confined to cases of fraud, actual or constructive (Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139); but have jurisdiction, in proper cases, which are not very numerous, to set aside judgments rendered in other actions, and to grant new trials thereof; but it must be made to appear with reasonable certainty that the new trial would result in a judgment more favorable to the party asking it than that sought to be set aside. Painter v. J. B. Painter Co., 133 Cal. 129; 65 Pac. 311. A court of equity will not interfere and set aside a judgment at law, except where it has been obtained through fraud, or through some accident or mistake, without laches on the part of the party complaining, and after all remedy at law has been lost (Mastick v. Thorp, 29 Cal. 444); nor will a court of equity, in an independent proceeding, set aside the judgment of another court, except upon a very clear and satisfactory showing. Reay v. Treadwell, 140 Cal. 412; 73 Pac. 1078; 74 Pac. 352. Though an application to set aside a judgment is made under this section, that fact alone should not deprive the applicant of relief outside of this section, if the showing made entitles him to it. Young v. Fink, 119 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 1060. The remedy by motion, under this section, to be relieved from a judgment, does not exclude or displace the remedy in equity, nor is it an adequate substitute therefor. Bacon v. Bacon, 150 Cal. 477; 89 Pac. 317. The denial of a motion, made under this section, to vacate a decree, does not bar relief, in equity, for fraud. Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 149 Cal. 556; 87 Pac. 19. The rule under which a court of equity declines to interfere to give relief against a judgment fraudulently obtained, until after such application has been made to the court in which such judgment was rendered, has no application, where relief has been sought and denied in that court: the denial of that court to grant relief gives to a court of equity the same authority to interfere as if the other court were powerless to render aid. Merriman v. Walton, 105 Cal. 403; 45 Am. St. Rep. 50; 30 L. R. A. 786; 38 Pac. 1108. To entitle a defendant to relief against a judgment or decree on the ground of fraud, it must appear that he had good defense on its merits, and that such defense has been lost to him without any fault on his part. Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085; Eldred v. White, 102 Cal. 600; 36 Pac. 944. Equity has power to grant relief against a fraudulent judgment, establishing right to property, as against parties who purchased such property with notice. Hayden v. Hayden, 46 Cal. 332. Where a party, by the wrongful acts of the other party, is placed in a position from which he can only be relieved by a court of equity, he may obtain relief by an independent action instituted for that purpose. Kelley v. Kreiss, 68 Cal. 210; 9 Pac. 129. The fraudulent conduct of the attorney of a party recovering a judgment may afford sufficient ground for enjoining the judgment. Thompson v. Laughlin, 91 Cal. 313; 27 Pac. 752. Upon an application to vacate a judgment, there may be some reason for sending a defendant into a court of equity, which does not apply where the judgment is void for defects appearing on the roll, and which thus bears on its face the evidence of its invalidity (Wharton v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727; Young v. Fink, 119 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 1060); and the rule is, and should be, that, where the judgment does not show on its face that it is void, and the motion is not made under nor within the time prescribed by this section, the party should be remitted to his equitable action. Young v. Fink, 119 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 1060. Unless the invalidity of a judgment is apparent from the judgment roll, the court rendering it has no power, in the absence of an application made within the time specified in this section, to make an order vacating or setting aside such judgment: the sole remedy of the aggrieved party, who may not in fact have been served, is to be found in a new action on the equity side of the court. People v. Davis, 143 Cal. 673; 77 Pac. 651. Where a judgment does not appear, on the face of the judgment roll, to be invalid, all who purchase, after its entry, in good faith, for a valuable consideration, and without notice, will be protected by it. Hayden v. Hayden, 46 Cal. 332. A judgment taken by fraud, without notice to the injured party, is absolutely void; it is not taken through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect; and the party against whom it is taken has a right to an original action to have it annulled by a court of equity. California Beet Sugar Co. v. Porter, 68 Cal. 369; 9 Pac. 313. While a judgment, void in fact for want of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant, may be vacated on motion, yet the more appropriate remedy is an equitable action to vacate the judgment. People v. Thomas, 101 Cal. 571; 36 Pac. 9. Where a justice of the peace enters a judgment according to law, he has no right to alter it afterwards, without notice to the defendant, so as to make it an illegal or improper judgment, and equity has jurisdiction to vacate the judgment thus altered. Chester v. Miller, 13 Cal. 558. Where a justice's judgment has been procured by fraud, and, on motion, the justice grants an order opening the judgment, but afterwards, without notice, vacates the order, his action in vacating the order is equivalent to a denial of the motion, and there is no appeal to the superior court from this order: a court of equity will give relief against the judgment. Merriman v. Walton, 105 Cal. 403; 45 Am. St. Rep. 50; 30 L. R. A. 786; 38 Pac. 1108. The correct procedure to obtain relief from a judgment obtained through fraud is by a motion to vacate the judgment, which, if granted, will afford the most expeditious mode of relief; but, where the motion is unsuccessful, the injured party is entitled to a regular trial in equity, upon the issue of fraud in the procurement of the judgment. Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 149 Cal. 556; 87 Pac. 19. A complaint in equity to vacate a judgment at law does not authorize the interposition of the court, where such complaint contains no allegation of fraudulent intent, nor a mistake in obtaining the judgment in the original action. Le Mesnager v. Variel, 144 Cal. 463; 103 Am. St. Rep. 91; 77 Pac. 988. In an action to set aside a judgment alleged to have been procured by fraud, the facts and circumstances constituting the alleged fraud must be averred: it is not sufficient to make the averment, in general terms, that the judgment was fraudulent. Castle v. Bader, 23 Cal. 75. A plaintiff's action to set aside a decree, based upon the ground of fraud, accident, or mistake, must not only aver the facts constituting his case, but, if they are denied, prove them also. Eichoff v. Eichoff, 107 Cal. 42; 48 Am. St. Rep. 110; 40 Pac. 24.

Equity will not take jurisdiction, where there is legal remedy. Equity will not give its aid to relieve a party from the effect of a judgment, where there is an ample remedy at law. Imlay v. Carpentier, 14 Cal. 173; Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440; Ede v. Hazen, 61 Cal. 360; Ketchum v. Crippen, 37 Cal. 223; California Beet Sugar Co. v. Porter, 68 Cal. 369; 9 Pac. 313; Heller v. Dyerville Mfg. Co., 116 Cal. 127; 47 Pac. 1016. Where courts of law and equity have concurrent jurisdiction, and a court of law has first acquired jurisdiction and decided a case, a court of equity will not interfere to set aside the judgment, unless the party has been prevented, through fraud or accident, from availing himself of the defense at law (Dutil v. Pacheco, 21 Cal. 438; 82 Am. Dec. 749); nor can the assistance of equity to set aside a judgment be invoked, in a distinct action, so long as the remedy by motion in the original case exists (Bibend v. Kreutz, 20 Cal. 109; Merriman v. Walton, 105 Cal. 403; 45 Am. St. Rep. 50; 30 L. R. A. 786; 38 Pac. 1108); but this rule does not apply, where a judgment is fraudulently taken against an injured party, and executed by a sale of his real property (California Beet Sugar Co. v. Porter, 68 Cal. 369; 9 Pac. 313); and when the time within which the motion may be made has expired, and there has been no laches or want of diligence on the part of the party asking relief, there is nothing in reason or propriety to prevent the interference of equity. Brackett v. Banegas, 116 Cal. 278; 58 Am. St. Rep. 164; 48 Pac. 90; Bibend v. Kreutz, 20 Cal. 109; People v. Lafarge, 3 Cal. 130; Carpentier v. Hart, 5 Cal. 406; Robb v. Robb, 6 Cal. 21; Pico v. Carillo, 7 Cal. 30. The statutory remedy by motion to obtain relief against an unjust judgment, before the court rendering it, was formerly available only during the term at which the judgment was rendered; but this remedy was held not to be exclusive, as it would often result in a denial of obvious justice. Bibend v. Kreutz, 20 Cal. 109. Where judgment is rendered against a defendant after his discharge in insolvency, in a suit previously instituted, he has a complete remedy at law, and is not entitled to relief in equity, by means of an injunction to restrain the enforcement of the judgment. Rahm v. Minis, 40 Cal. 421. Where there has been no service on the defendant, it is not necessary to file a bill in chancery to vacate a judgment by default: it may be set aside or reopened on motion, within the time allowed by law. Pico v. Carillo, 7 Cal. 30. A defendant is not bound to resort to a remedy by motion to set aside a judgment taken against him, where there was no service of summons upon him, or the affidavit of service is false. Lapham v. Campbell, 61 Cal. 296. A judgment taken against a corporation, through the fraud of its directors, may be set aside, either before or after the expiration of six months; but the remedy by motion on the ground of fraud is not exclusive of the remedy by a suit in equity, unless such remedy by motion is perfectly adequate. Ex-Mission Land etc. Co. v. Flash, 97 Cal. 610; 32 Pac. 600. The remedy against an execution issued on a judgment claimed to have been discharged by a decree in insolvency is by motion, and not by a bill in equity for an injunction. Green v. Thomas, 17 Cal. 86.

Equity will not interfere to correct errors. A court of equity will never set aside a judgment for mere error, whether of law or of fact, committed in the rendition of the judgment (Wickersham v. Comerford, 104 Cal. 494; 38 Pac. 101; Estate of Griffith, 84 Cal. 107; 24 Pac. 381); nor will it intervene to correct mere clerical errors: it has no jurisdiction to amend a judgment to insert an omitted contract therein (Hull v. Calkins, 137 Cal. 84; 69 Pac. 838); it will, however, correct a mistake of law; but, wherever inadvertence or mistake is held to be ground for setting aside a judgment, it will be noticed that it is not a mistake of law, or an inadvertent conclusion as to what the law is, but a mistake or an inadvertence in doing something not intended to be done. Sullivan v. Lumsden, 118 Cal. 664; 50 Pac. 777. A mere naked mistake of law, unattended with any special circumstances, such as misrepresentation, undue influence, or misplaced confidence, constitutes no ground for relief in a court of equity (Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461; 76 Am. Dec. 540), save in exceptional cases; but relief will be granted in the original action, upon motion or supplemental bill. Brackett v. Banegas, 116 Cal. 278; 58 Am. St. Rep. 164; 48 Pac. 90. Though a judgment will not be interfered with for mere error, yet want of notice to the defendant, and his consequent inability to be heard, may be a sufficient ground for relief in equity, even where the failure to defend is not chargeable to the plaintiff, and a fortiori where it is so chargeable. Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139. The dismissal of an appeal, for inadvertently omitting to file the undertaking thereon within the statutory time, is not a ground for relief in equity. Daly v. Pennie, 86 Cal. 552; 21 Am. St. Rep. 61; 25 Pac. 67.

Fraud must be extrinsic or collateral. To authorize a court of equity to set aside and annul a judgment, on the ground of fraud in its procurement, the fraud must be extrinsic or collateral to the questions examined and determined in the action, and must have prevented a fair submission of the controversy (Pico v. Cohn, 91 Cal. 129; 25 Am. St. Rep. 159; 13 L. R. A. 336; 25 Pac. 270; 27 Pac. 537; Hanley v. Hanley, 114 Cal. 690; 46 Pac. 736; Steen v. March, 132 Cal. 616; 64 Pac. 994); and a court of equity will not grant relief for fraud involved in any matter upon which the decree was rendered. Fealey v. Fealey, 104 Cal. 354; 43 Am. St. Rep. 111; 38 Pac. 49; Estate of Griffith, 84 Cal. 107; 23 Pac. 528; 24 Pac. 381. In applications for relief under this section, no distinction is made between extrinsic or other fraud. Application of Johnson, 7 Cal. App. 436; 94 Pac. 592. When an equitable action is brought to set aside a judgment at law, the attack, although not collateral, is always indirect. Le Mesnager v. Variel, 144 Cal. 463; 103 Am. St. Rep. 91; 77 Pac. 988. An attack upon a judgment, for fraud in its procurement, is a direct attack, since the establishment of fraud shows that no judgment was rendered; but the fraud from which relief may be had does not include a judgment regularly obtained upon a fraudulent claim or by false testimony: it is limited to the fraud in procuring the judgment. Parsons v. Weis, 144 Cal. 410; 77 Pac. 1007. The rule that fraud relating to the merits of the controversy is concluded by the judgment, does not apply, where the defendant had no knowledge of the pendency of the action. Dunlap v. Steere, 92 Cal. 344; 27 Am. St. Rep. 143; 16 L. R. A. 361; 28 Pac. 563. The failure of a party to introduce evidence, known by him to exist, tending to overthrow his case, is not ground for a suit to set aside the judgment: it is not a fraud extrinsic or collateral to the matter examined in the first suit. Estate of Griffith, 84 Cal. 107; 23 Pac. 528; 24 Pac. 381. The judgment will not be vacated, merely because it was obtained by forged documents or perjured testimony, or by the bribing of a witness to swear falsely. Pico v. Cohn, 91 Cal. 129; 25 Am. St. Rep. 159; 13 L. R. A. 336; 25 Pac. 270; 27 Pac. 537.

Diligence and absence of negligence. A party against whom an alleged fraudulent judgment has been obtained, and who seeks to have it set aside on the ground of fraud, should show that he had made a motion to have it set aside when he had an opportunity to do so; otherwise it would appear that he had not used due and proper diligence to avoid its effect. Chielovich v. Krauss, 2 Cal. Unrep. 643; 9 Pac. 945. A court of equity will not grant relief from a judgment obtained by fraud, unless the party seeking relief has been free from negligence: where the judgment was the result of his carelessness, he is not entitled to relief (Quinn v. Wetherbee, 41 Cal. 247; Champion v. Woods, 79 Cal. 17; 12 Am. St. Rep. 126; 21 Pac. 534); nor will a court of equity annul a judgment at law, after the lapse of thirteen months, where to do so would be unjust and inequitable, and where the effect would be to allow the applicant to avoid the payment of his just debts by pleading the statute of limitations in a subsequent action. Eldred v. White, 102 Cal. 600; 36 Pac. 944. A party may obtain relief against an unjust judgment, by equitable action to set it aside, where no want of diligence is imputable to him in seeking relief. Bibend v. Kreutz, 20 Cal. 109. A judgment will be set aside on the ground of fraud, only where the fraud was practiced in obtaining the judgment, and the party against whom it was rendered, and his counsel, are free from negligence: equity will be concluded by the judgment at law, where fraud is equally a defense as in equity. Zellerbach v. Allenberg, 67 Cal. 296; 7 Pac. 908. The plaintiff cannot attack the settlement and dismissal of an action, upon an insufficient showing of fraud, where there is a delay of fourteen years in asserting the facts. Truett v. Onderdonk, 120 Cal. 581; 53 Pac. 26.

Evidence. On a motion to set aside a judgment, the true facts may be shown by any competent evidence. McKinley v. Tuttle, 34 Cal. 235. Where a judgment by default was taken after service by publication, and motion is made, six years after entry thereof, to vacate, no evidence in the record is admissible to impeach it: the rule is otherwise, where a direct attack is made on the judgment, by appeal or motion within the time prescribed. People v. Norris, 144 Cal. 422; 77 Pac. 998.

Definition of words and phrases. A default occurs when the defendant fails to answer or demur, as prescribed in §§ 850, 871 et seq., post. Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 341; 15 Pac. 849. A motion is an application for an order. Brownell v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 703; 109 Pac. 91. The settlement of a bill of exceptions is a "proceeding" (People v. Everett, 8 Cal. App. 430; 97 Pac. 175; Dernham v. Bagley, 151 Cal. 216; 90 Pac. 543; Freeman v. Brown, 5 Cal. App. 516; 90 Pac. 970; Stonesifer v. Kilburn, 94 Cal. 33; 29 Pac. 332); as is also the settlement of a statement on motion for a new trial (Banta v. Siller, 121 Cal. 414; 53 Pac. 935); there being no substantial difference between a bill of exceptions and a statement (Sauer v. Eagle Brewing Co., 3 Cal. App. 127; 84 Pac. 425); but the mere reservation of an objection to the service of a proposed bill of exceptions does not constitute a "proceeding," within the meaning of this section. Pollitz v. Wickersham, 150 Cal. 238; 88 Pac. 911. A mere memorandum entered in the rough minutes of the clerk is not an order. Brownell v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 703; 109 Pac. 91. Where findings are required, there is no "rendition" of the judgment, until they are filed with the clerk; if none are required, there is no "rendition" of the judgment until the decision is entered in the official minutes of the court. Id. The word "taken," as used in this section, is equivalent to "rendition." Id. The "surprise" contemplated by this section is "some condition or situation in which a party to a cause is unexpectedly placed to his injury, without any default or negligence of his own, which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against." Porter v. Anderson, 14 Cal. App. 716; 113 Pac. 345.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Adding or striking out parties. If plaintiff's testimony on trial shows that there is a non-joinder of persons who should have been plaintiffs, and a motion for a nonsuit is made on this ground, the court may allow an amendment by adding the name of a co-plaintiff. Acquital v. Crowell, 1 Cal. 191; Heath v. Lent, 1 Cal. 412. After ordering defendants, against whom no proof is adduced, to be stricken from the pleadings, can they be reinstated during the progress of the trial? Beach v. Covillaud, 2 Cal. 237. After the close of plaintiff's evidence, the complaint may be amended, by adding the name of another party plaintiff, if it does not affect the substantial rights of the parties. Polk v. Coffin, 9 Cal. 56. If judgment is entered against "the defendants," and a portion of them were not sued, though their names appeared as defendants, by a mistake of the clerk in entitling the cause, the error may be corrected. Browner v. Davis, 15 Cal. 9. If a court alters a judgment, without notice, so as to include a party not served with process, if not void it is voidable at the election of the party. Chester v. Miller, 13 Cal. 558. If a judgment entered embraces more parties than the testimony justifies, the proper practice is to move to correct the judgment in the court below. Mulliken v. Hull, 5 Cal. 245. A court may order judgment creditors, as subsequent encumbrancers, to be made parties to an action by an amendment of the complaint. Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 13 Cal. 70; 73 Am. Dec. 569. Motions to add or strike out parties, etc., see Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 175.

2. Extending time for answer or demurrer. This can be done whenever the ends of justice seem to require it. Wood v. Fobes, 5 Cal. 62; Drum v. Whiting, 9 Cal. 422; Thornton v. Borland, 12 Cal. 438.

3. Amending complaint. If the proof does not sustain the allegations of the complaint, but the proof is sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to relief in a court of equity, under properly framed pleadings, an amendment should be allowed conforming the pleadings to the facts which should be in issue. Connalley v. Peck, 3 Cal. 75; McDonald v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 15 Cal. 145; Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 28 Cal. 673. The plaintiff brought action in assumpsit to recover rent for premises, the possession of which he had previously recovered by ejectment against the defendant. After the trial and verdict, which was set aside by the court, he amended his complaint to make it in form an action of trespass for mesne profits. This should not have been permitted. Such an amendment would virtually change an action ex contractu into an action ex delicto. Ramirez v. Murray, 5 Cal. 222. Facts which occur subsequent to the filing of the original complaint, and which change the liabilities of the defendants, and, in consequence, the character of the judgment which is sought, cannot be incorporated into the original complaint by an amendment, without presenting averments inconsistent with the date of the commencement of the action. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308. Refusing to allow a plaintiff to strike out a claim for damages, without regard to the purpose which may influence him, is error. Grass Valley Quartz Mining Co. v. Stackhouse, 6 Cal. 413. The wife is a proper party defendant in a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage executed upon premises claimed as a homestead. When not made a party, she may intervene, or, by permission of the court, be allowed to file a separate answer, the plaintiff having the liberty to amend his complaint, if any matters are set up in the answer which he might wish to anticipate by further allegations. Moss v. Warner, 10 Cal. 296. If the complaint avers the ownership of land in the bed of and on the banks of a stream, and work done thereon to dig a canal and build a dam to use the waters of the stream, and is framed for a judgment to recover possession of the property from one who is averred to have ousted plaintiff, the plaintiff should, on motion to that effect, be allowed to amend his complaint by inserting therein averments of his prior appropriation of water and a diversion by defendant, with prayer for an injunction. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 28 Cal. 673. A complaint cannot be amended in the supreme court so as to make it correspond with the verdict. The district court, in a proper case, before judgment, may direct the complaint to be so amended. Hooper v. Wells Fargo & Co., 27 Cal. 35; 85 Am. Dec. 211. Plaintiff may amend his complaint at any time before issuance of summons without leave of the court, if there has been no appearance of defendant. Allen v. Marshall, 34 Cal. 165.

4. Amendment to answer. A joint claim by two persons cannot be pleaded as a counterclaim by one defendant; but he may amend, and aver that the whole interest therein has been transferred to him. Stearns v. Martin, 4 Cal. 229. Because new matter set up by an amendment was well known to the defendant at the time he filed his original answer, is no good reason for declining to permit amendment. Pierson v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 127. An amended answer supersedes the original, and destroys its effect as a pleading. Gilman v. Cosgrove, 22 Cal. 356; Jones v. Frost, 28 Cal. 246.

5. Setting aside judgment by default. Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422. A judgment by default may be set aside on the ground of fraud or surprise. Bidleman v. Kewen, 2 Cal. 250. An order of court setting aside a default and judgment entered during vacation is regular and correct, where there has been no service of summons upon the defendants. Pico v. Carrillo, 7 Cal. 30. In an action of ejectment against two defendants, one who was served with summons and made default, and without any service being made upon the other, a judgment was entered against both for possession of the premises and costs. On application of the defendant not served, an order made at a subsequent term of the court, setting aside the entire judgment as to both defendants, with leave to the defendant not served to answer, was not error. The effect of such an order is, not to set aside the default of the defendant who had been served, as to permit his co-defendant to defend for both. A new judgment may be at once entered by the plaintiff against the defaulting defendant. Lewis v. Rigney, 21 Cal. 268. A defendant who, having suffered a default, has obtained from the plaintiff a stipulation that the default may be set aside, must use reasonable diligence in applying to the court therefor, or his right to it will be lost. Reese v. Mahoney, 21 Cal. 305. A motion may be made to set aside a default entered by a clerk at any time before final judgment is rendered in the action, notwithstanding the court has adjourned for the term at which the default was entered, and before the motion is made to vacate it. The court does not lose jurisdiction to vacate a default because the term at which it was entered has adjourned, unless final judgment has been entered in the action. Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192. Where the defendant moves to compel the plaintiff to elect which count of the complaint he will go to trial on, and the court makes an order extending the time to answer until the decision of the motion, and the motion is sustained, a default of the defendant, entered by the clerk in less than ten days after the plaintiff serves notice of his election, is void, and the court may set it aside upon suggestion, without any affidavit of merits. Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192. If the tenant sued in ejectment has, by neglect or design, suffered a default, the landlord may, upon a proper showing and motion in the name of the tenant, have the default set aside. Dimick v.

Deringer, 32 Cal. 488. A judgment by default will not be opened unless it be shown that the judgment, as it stands, is unjust, and an affidavit as to merits is necessary. Parrott v. Den, 34 Cal. 79. Where a case in the twelfth district was set for trial on a particular day, with the knowledge and consent of defendant's attorney, and he then, two or three days before the day of trial, goes into Alameda County to try another cause there, without making any arrangement in respect to the first case, in which, on the day fixed, plaintiff had judgment, no one appearing for defendant, except to state the fact of the attorney's absence, and to ask a postponement, which was denied. It was held that the supreme court would not review the action of the court below in refusing to set aside the judgment because of the absence of said attorney. Haight v. Green, 19 Cal. 113. A judgment by default should not be set aside by the court, unless the defendant shows by competent proof that the judgment was entered through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect on his part; and the payment of the costs should be imposed as a condition of setting aside the judgment by default. People v. O'Connell, 23 Cal. 281; Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422.

6. What must be shown to authorize the setting aside of a judgment. No particular form is required by the code in which application shall be made for setting aside judgment. All that is required is that the facts shall be set forth, and if they show a case coming within the rule, it is sufficient. People v. Lafarge, 3 Cal. 130. An affidavit to the effect that an instrument has been materially altered, without showing in any manner in what the alteration consists, furnishes insufficient grounds upon which to base a motion to set aside a judgment. Taylor v. Randall, 5 Cal. 79. An affidavit of merits, without any averment of mistake, surprise, or excusable neglect, is not sufficient to warrant the opening a default, where personal service of summons was made. Harlan v. Smith, 6 Cal. 173. An affidavit by defendant that he was under the impression, when he retained counsel in a cause, that the time to answer had not expired, that he did not recollect the precise day upon which the summons and complaint were served, that he was quite ill at the time, and did not as carefully note the time as he otherwise would, is not sufficient to set aside a judgment by default. Elliott v. Shaw, 16 Cal. 377; see also People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 128; Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422. An order opening a default will not be granted, unless there is an affidavit of merits. Parrott v. Den, 34 Cal. 79; Reese v. Mahoney, 21 Cal. 305; see also Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422; Woodward v. Backus, 20 Cal. 137; Francis v. Cox, 33 Cal. 323.

7. Setting aside judgment by default. Judgment by default may be set aside on the ground of surprise. Bidleman v. Kewen, 2 Cal. 248. It is no ground for setting aside a judgment by default that the defendant did not know that the law required him to answer in ten days. Chase v. Swain, 9 Cal. 130. The court may set aside a default and judgment entered during vacation, when there has been no service of summons upon the defendants. Pico v. Carrillo, 7 Cal. 32. Where two defendants are jointly sued, and service had on both, the clerk of the court cannot enter judgment by default against one, and his act in so doing is without color of law and void, and may be disregarded or set aside. Stearns v. Aguirre, 7 Cal. 443; see Glidden v. Packard, 28 Cal. 651; Welsh v. Kirkpatrick, 30 Cal. 205; 89 Am. Dec. 85; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 198; Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 530.

8. Setting aside judgment on ground of mistake. A judgment will not be set aside on the application of a creditor of the judgment debtor, upon the ground that the judgment was taken for more than was actually due upon the note, when it appears that a mistake of but a very small amount only was made in calculating the interest due upon the note. Ziel v. Dukes, 12 Cal. 482.

9. Amendment made nunc pro tunc. A court may at any time render or amend a judgment nunc pro tunc, when the record shows that the entry on the minutes does not correctly give what was the judgment of the court. Morrison v. Dapman, 3 Cal. 255. But after adjournment of the term the court cannot direct the clerk to enter in the minutes nunc pro tunc, an order made at the adjourned term, if there is nothing in the record disclosing the fact that any such order had ever been made. Hegeler v. Henckell, 27 Cal. 491; Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 172. Entering judgments nunc pro tunc on death of appellant. Black v. Shaw, 20 Cal. 68; see Swain v. Naglee, 19 Cal. 127.

10. Judgment, when vacated. This section of the code applies not only to cases where a judgment has been taken regularly without personal service, as upon publication of summons, but also to cases of judgments entered erroneously without any service of summons or appearance of defendant. Lewis v. Rigney, 21 Cal. 268. Where a judgment is taken by plaintiffs, in the absence of defendants and their counsel, and this absence results from a mutual and honest mistake between them as to the retainer of the latter, the judgment will be set aside. McKinley v. Tuttle, 34 Cal. 235. After a conditional order to set aside a judgment, the court, in deciding a motion to place the cause on the calendar for trial, "orders that said motion be and the same is hereby denied, and the judgment will remain." Held: that this was a distinct adjudication that the previous order had not taken effect; and held further, that this order directing the judgment remain, being the last in the case, and not having been appealed from, it took the place of any previous order in reference to vacating the judgment. Gregory v. Haynes, 21 Cal. 443. If an appeal is taken from a judgment rendered, the court below loses all control over the judgment and cannot amend it. Bryan v. Berry, 8 Cal. 134.

11. When defendant is permitted to verify answer. Where the complaint is verified, the defendant may be allowed to verify his answer before trial, unless it is shown that the plaintiff is thereby taken by surprise. Angier v. Masterson, 6 Cal. 61; see also Lattimer v. Ryan, 20 Cal. 628.

12. Amendment after reversal of judgment. When a final judgment, sustaining demurrer to the complaint, was reversed, the plaintiff had the right to amend, on application to the court below. Williamson v. Blattan, 9 Cal. 500; see also McDonald v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 15 Cal. 149; Fish v. Reddington, 31 Cal. 186.

13. Amendments to findings. Amending bill of costs. A judge cannot change his findings of facts after the entry of judgment on the findings and adjournment of the term. Carpentier v. Gardiner, 29 Cal. 160; Kimball v. Lohmas, 31 Cal. 154. Under this section of the code, the court may, in the exercise of its discretion, allow the amendment of a bill of costs, and the affidavit accompanying it. Burnham v. Hays, 3 Cal. 115; 58 Am. Dec. 389.

14. Amending return of sheriff. A sheriff cannot, after making a return, amend it so as to affect rights which had already vested in third parties. Newhall v. Provost, 6 Cal. 87; Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 25; 68 Am. Dec. 287. But sheriffs should be allowed to amend their returns so as to make them conform to the true state of facts, and to correct errors and mistakes. Gavitt v. Doub, 23 Cal. 78.

15. Amendment on discovery of fraud. Fraud discovered after suit brought will entitle the party to amend his action so as to include it. Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 269; Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 61; Davis v. Robinson, 10 Cal. 412.

16. Pleading statute of limitations by way of amendment. The plea of the statute of limitations is not favored, unless in aid of justice; but it should be permitted to be pleaded at any time, when justice will be attained thereby. Cooke v. Spears, 2 Cal. 409; 56 Am. Dec. 348; Stuart v. Lander, 16 Cal. 372; 76 Am. Dec. 538. Two defendants filed a joint plea of the statute of limitations, and the plea being held bad as to one defendant, the court, on the trial, permitted the other defendant to amend and file a separate plea of the statute. This was held not to be error. Robinson v. Smith, 14 Cal. 254.

17. Referees cannot permit amendments. Referees cannot allow parties to alter or amend pleadings, after a case has been referred to them. De la Riva v. Berreyesa, 2 Cal. 195.

18. Substitution of papers or pleadings. The substitution of papers (or pleadings in a case) is always within the discretion of the court, and no notice of the motion to apply for it need be given, when the notice of it can be of no use. Benedict v. Cozzens, 4 Cal. 381. But where a pleading in a pending action is lost, its place can only be supplied by motion based on affidavits, showing what the lost pleading contained, and a service of personal notice upon the opposite party, which notice must be sufficiently explicit to advise him of what is intended, as well as to enable him to controvert the affidavits submitted. People v. Cazalis, 27 Cal. 522.

19. Amendments should be readily and freely allowed. The greatest latitude and liberality should be exercised in permitting amendments to pleading, so that delays may be avoided and justice promoted. Butler v. King, 10 Cal. 342; Roland v. Kreyenhagen, 18 Cal. 455; McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339; Smith v. Yreka Water Co., 14 Cal. 201.

20. Amendments during progress of trial. The court may allow pleadings to be amended so as to supply a defect or omission, even after the commencement of a trial. Gavitt v. Doub, 23 Cal. 78. A court may permit a plaintiff, after the defendants have closed their case and before the case is submitted, to supply an omission in the testimony occasioned by mistake or inadvertence; such action is no ground for reversal, unless it appear that injustice has been done by an abuse of discretion. Priest v. Union Canal Co., 6 Cal. 170. After the motion for a nonsuit, the court may, upon terms, permit an amendment of the complaint, if it would not operate as a surprise upon the defendant; but if this is not done, the plaintiff cannot recover. Farmer v. Cram, 7 Cal. 135. The court may permit, after the close of plaintiff's evidence, the complaint to be amended by the addition of the name of another party plaintiff, if it does not affect the substantial rights of the parties. Polk v. Coffin, 9 Cal. 56. If the defendant in an action to recover possession of real estate has acquired title to the demanded premises pending the litigation, and has not pleaded such title in a supplemental answer, and for that reason his proof of such title is excluded by the court, it is not an abuse of discretion of the court to deny his application made during the trial for permission to amend his answer so as to obviate the objection. McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 248. If testimony offered by the defendant is rejected by the court because an averment of the complaint to which it relates is not properly denied in the answer, the defendant should be allowed to amend his denial if he asks to do so. When it is discovered, during the progress of the trial, the pleadings are so defective that the real subject of dispute cannot be finally determined, the court, if an application is made therefor, should allow amendments on such terms as may be just. Stringer v. Davis, 30 Cal. 318. The answer may be verified even after the close of the case on the part of the plaintiff. Arrington v. Tupper, 10 Cal. 464. Two defendants filed a joint plea of the statute of limitations, and the plea being held bad as to one defendant, the court, on the trial, permitted the other defendant to file a separate plea of the statute. This was not such a gross abuse of discretion as to enable the supreme court to revise it. Robinson v. Smith, 14 Cal. 254. The court below has power to grant amendments whenever, at any stage of the trial, they will assist the purposes of justice, and this power should be liberally exercised to secure a fair and speedy trial on the merits. Lestrade v. Barth, 17 Cal. 285; see Peters v. Foss, 16 Cal. 357. When it appears by the plaintiff's testimony that there is a misjoinder of persons who should have been made plaintiffs, and a motion for a nonsuit is made on this ground, the court may allow an amendment by adding the name of a co-plaintiff. Acquital v. Crowell, 1 Cal. 192. A motion to amend a complaint is not too late because made after the plaintiff has closed his testimony and the defendant has moved for a nonsuit. A motion to amend is always in time when it immediately follows an objection to the complaint or answer. Valencia v. Couch, 32 Cal. 340; 91 Am. Dec. 589.

21. Amendments, where made. Amendments correcting mistakes, etc., should be made by motion in the court below, not in the supreme court. Whitney v. Buckman, 13 Cal. 536; Anderson v. Parker, 6 Cal. 197; Guy v. Ide, 6 Cal. 99; 65 Am. Dec. 490;

22. Supplemental complaint as amendment. Facts which occur subsequent to the filing of the original complaint, and which change the liabilities of the defendant, and in consequence, the character of the judgment which is sought, cannot be incorporated with the original complaint by an amendment without presenting averments inconsistent with the date of the action. They must be presented in the form of a supplemental complaint. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 311.

§ 474. Suing a party by a fictitious name, when allowed. When the plaintiff is ignorant of the name of a defendant, he must state that fact in the complaint, and such defendant may be designated in any pleading or proceeding by any name, and when his true name is discovered, the pleading or proceeding must be amended accordingly.

Legislation § 474. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 69 (New York Code, § 175), which (1) did not have the words "he must state that fact in the complaint, and," and (2) had the word "may" instead of "must," before "be amended."

Suing under fictitious name. The defendant may be sued under a fictitious name, only when the plaintiff does not know his true name; and although the individual who is served under such fictitious name may be substituted as a defendant, yet, until such substitution is made, the rights of other parties to the action will not be affected by such service nor by his appearance. Bachman v. Cathry, 113 Cal. 498; 45 Pac. 814.

Effect on limitations. A defendant, sued and served under a fictitious name, where the plaintiff did not know his true name, is a party to the action from its commencement; and this date must control for the purposes of the statute of limitations. Hoffman v. Keeton, 132 Cal. 195; 64 Pac. 264.

Ignorance of true name must be real. The plaintiff's ignorance of the true name of the defendant must be real, and not feigned; it must not be "willful" ignorance, or such as might be removed by mere inquiry, or a resort to means of information easily accessible. Rosencrantz v. Rogers, 40 Cal. 489; Bachman v. Cathry, 113 Cal. 498; 45 Pac. 814. A party sued under a fictitious name is entitled to have the service of summons set aside and the action dismissed, upon a showing that the plaintiff could have ascertained his true name by examining the records of the county. Irving v. Carpentier, 70 Cal. 23; 11 Pac. 391.

Allegation of ignorance of defendant's true name. A party, sued and served with summons under a fictitious name, though not named as a defendant, is entitled to have such service set aside and to have the action dismissed, as against him, where there is no averment that the plaintiff did not know the true name of the person intended to be made a defendant, which might easily have been learned. Rosencrantz v. Rogers, 40 Cal. 489. Parties sued under fictitious names, where the complaint does not show who are intended to be sued, are not affected by the judgment. Ford v. Doyle, 37 Cal. 346; People v. Herman, 45 Cal. 689. In an action to annul a certificate of purchase of state lands, where there is no allegation that the name of the holder is unknown, there is no foundation for bringing an action against a fictitious person, and no authority to make service of summons by publication. People v. Herman, 45 Cal. 689. Where the fact that the true name of a defendant, sued under a fictitious name, was unknown, is alleged in the complaint, followed by a prayer that, when discovered, the complaint might be amended to allege his true name, and an injunction followed the complaint, directed to and served upon the defendant under a fictitious name, and in the affidavit for a writ of attachment the defendant was described as the person served with the injunction, and at the hearing the court found the true name of the defendant, and so stated it in the judgment, this is sufficient. Ex parte Ah Men, 77 Cal. 198; 11 Am. St. Rep. 263; 19 Pac. 380. A plaintiff's allegation, that he is ignorant of the name of a defendant sued under a fictitious name, is not traversable, either by the answer or in any other mode. Irving v. Carpentier, 70 Cal. 23; 11 Pac. 391.

Amendment of complaint. By § 39 of the Practice Act it was provided that the complaint should contain the names of the parties to the action, plaintiff and defendant; and it was held that there was no conflict between § 39 and § 69: the former gave the general rule, and the latter provided an exception to it. Rosencrantz v. Rogers, 40 Cal. 489. By § 69 of the Practice Act it was provided that when the true name of the defendant was discovered the pleading might be amended, where it was intended that the judgment should bind persons sued by fictitious names: there is as little room for question that such was the proper course as there would be where the plaintiff discovers that, by mistake, he has sued the defendant by a wrong name. McKinlay v. Tuttle, 42 Cal. 570. No judgment can be taken and enforced against a party, sued under a fictitious name, where the complaint is not amended by inserting his true name when ascertained. Farris v. Merritt, 63 Cal. 118. The complaint must be amended by inserting the true names, when ascertained, of parties sued under fictitious names, either before or after service of process, so as to allege that they are the persons to be bound by the judgment. McKinlay v. Tuttle, 42 Cal. 570; Campbell v. Adams, 50 Cal. 203; Baldwin v. Morgan, 50 Cal. 585; Farris v. Merritt, 63 Cal. 118. A defendant, sued and served under a fictitious name, who appears and answers, does not thereby waive an amendment to the complaint, describing him by his true name. McKinlay v. Tuttle, 42 Cal. 570. An amendment of the complaint, inserting the defendant's true name, when sued under a fictitious name, does not change the cause of action. Farris v. Merritt, 63 Cal. 118.

Service of amended complaint. Where the complaint is amended when the case comes up for trial, by inserting the true name of a defendant sued under a fictitious name, service of the amended complaint is not required to be made on him, nor is he entitled to ten days in which to answer. Brock v. Martinovich, 55 Cal. 516.

Validity of judgment, where name is fictitious. A judgment by default, against a defendant sued under a wrong name, is not void, where he was served with process. Welsh v. Kirkpatrick, 30 Cal. 202; 89 Am. Dec. 85. Where a party, sued and served under a fictitious name, answers, the judgment against him is not void, and cannot be attacked collaterally, though the complaint was not amended by inserting his true name. Campbell v. Adams, 50 Cal. 203; Baldwin v. Morgan, 50 Cal. 585. Where a company, sued under a wrong name, answers, and judgment is rendered against it under its true name, the supreme court will, on appeal, direct the complaint to be amended, as of a date anterior to the judgment, by substituting the true name. Mahon v. San Rafael Turnpike Road Co., 49 Cal. 269. A judgment against a party sued under a fictitious name will not be reversed on appeal, but, in order to support the judgment, the lower court will be directed to amend the complaint as of a date prior to the judgment (Alameda County v. Crocker, 125 Cal. 101; 57 Pac. 766; Baldwin v. Bornheimer, 48 Cal. 433; Blackburn v. Bucksport etc. R. R. Co., 7 Cal. App. 649; 95 Pac. 668); but such a judgment was reversed in McKinlay v. Tuttle, 42 Cal. 570; San Francisco v. Burr, 4 Cal. Unrep. 631; 36 Pac. 771. Where a defendant is sued under a fictitious name, but is served under his true name, the omission to amend the complaint by substituting his true name is an irregularity for which the decree will be reversed; but the judgment is not void, nor can it be attacked collaterally. Baldwin v. Morgan, 50 Cal. 585. Where a party defendant is sued and answers under a wrong name, and judgment is entered against him accordingly, no advantage can be taken of the misnomer. McCreery v. Everding, 54 Cal. 168.

Method of pleading misnomer. A plea in abatement was formerly the proper way to raise the objection of misnomer; and the question whether a defendant has been sued under his proper name is probably nothing more than matter in abatement, and is analogous to the case of a misnomer, which never renders a judgment void. Welsh v. Kirkpatrick, 30 Cal. 202; 89 Am. Dec. 85.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The words, "he must state that fact in the complaint," are added to the original section, so that it may appear upon the face of the proceedings that the name is a fictitious one. See, generally, Rosencrantz v. Rogers, 40 Cal. 491; Morgan v. Thrift, 2 Cal. 562.

§ 475. No error or defect to be regarded unless it affects substantial rights. The court must, in every stage of an action, disregard any error, improper ruling, instruction, or defect, in the pleadings or proceedings which, in the opinion of said court, does not affect the substantial rights of the parties. No judgment, decision, or decree shall be reversed or affected by reason of any error, ruling, instruction, or defect, unless it shall appear from the record that such error, ruling, instruction, or defect was prejudicial, and also that by reason of such error, ruling, instruction, or defect, the said party complaining or appealing sustained and suffered substantial injury, and that a different result would have been probable if such error, ruling, instruction, or defect had not occurred or existed. There shall be no presumption that error is prejudicial, or that injury was done if error is shown.

Similar provision. Pen. Code, §§ 1258, 1404.

Legislation § 475. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 71 (New York Code, § 176), which read: "The court shall, in every stage of an action, disregard any error or defect in the pleadings, or proceedings, which shall not affect the substantial rights of the parties; and no judgment shall be reversed or affected by reason of such error or defect." When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "shall," after "The court," was changed to "must," and (2) the same word, before "not affect," was changed to "does."

2. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 44.

Construction of section. This section applies to immaterial errors or defects in the statement of an election contest (Chatham v. Mansfield, 1 Cal. App. 298; 82 Pac. 343), and also to those in the form of a judgment (Sherwood v. Wallin, 1 Cal. App. 532; 82 Pac. 566), and to those in rendering a judgment against a wife alone, in a joint action against her and her husband (McKee v. Cunningham, 2 Cal. App. 684; 84 Pac. 260), and to those in holding a decree to be valid. Fogg v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 154 Cal. 209; 97 Pac. 316.

Substantial injury necessary. A judgment will not be reversed, unless the complaining party has suffered substantial injury. Bird v. Utica Gold Mining Co., 2 Cal. App. 674; 84 Pac. 256; Block v. Kearney, 6 Cal. Unrep. 660; 64 Pac. 267; Bollinger v. Bollinger, 154 Cal. 695; 99 Pac. 196; Compressed Air etc. Co. v. West San Pablo Land etc. Co., 9 Cal. App. 361; 99 Pac. 531; Preston v. Central California etc. Irrigation Co., 11 Cal. App. 190; 104 Pac 462; Bradley v. Bush, 11 Cal. App. 287; 104 Pac. 845; Peters v. Peters, 156 Cal. 32; 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 699; 103 Pac. 219; Fogg v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 154 Cal. 209; 97 Pac. 316; Dennis v. Crocker-Huffman Land etc. Co., 6 Cal. App. 58; 91 Pac. 425. Error without prejudice is not a ground for reversal. Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; 9 Pac. 176; 12 Pac. 449; Allen v. McKay, 139 Cal. 94; 72 Pac. 713. A judgment will not be reversed for a mere technical error of law, which, after the case has been tried, is of too little consequence to be, in any substantial sense, a prejudicial error: such error, unaccompanied by injury, will be disregarded on appeal. Sloane v. Southern California Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 668; 32 L. R. A. 193; 44 Pac. 320; Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 114 Cal. 501; 46 Pac. 604; Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 183; 48 Pac. 730, 51 Pac. 183; Hirshfeld v. Weill, 121 Cal. 13; 53 Pac. 402; Holland v. McDade, 125 Cal. 353; 58 Pac. 9; Stephenson v. Deuel, 125 Cal 656; 58 Pac. 258; Foerst v. Kelso, 131 Cal. 376; 63 Pac. 681. Errors not affecting the substantial rights of the parties may be disregarded (Gassen v. Bower, 72 Cal. 555; 14 Pac. 206); they are unavailing on appeal, even when the subject of exception, and much less so when permitted without exception. Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483. When a case has been tried and judgment rendered on the facts, it must appear that some substantial right of a party has been affected, or some prejudicial error, as distinguished from an abstract error, suffered by him, in order to warrant a reversal. Rooney v. Gray Bros., 145 Cal. 753; 79

Pac. 523. A misnomer in entitling the name of the court, on the face of the complaint only, is a defect not affecting the substantial rights of the defendant. Ex parte Fil Ki, 79 Cal. 584; 21 Pac. 974. Where the substantial rights of the parties have not been affected by a misjoinder of causes of action, a judgment, rendered after the trial of the case upon its merits, should not be reversed because the court overruled the demurrer for such misjoinder. Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; 9 Pac. 176; 12 Pac. 449; Asevado v. Orr, 100 Cal. 293; 34 Pac. 777; Hirshfeld v. Weill, 121 Cal. 13; 53 Pac. 402. A judgment should not be reversed because of an alleged error or defect in the summons, which is claimed not to state the cause and general nature of the action, where such error or defect is more technical than real. King v. Blood, 41 Cal. 314. A judgment, otherwise valid, will not be reversed, merely because the action is brought in the name of a reclamation district, instead of in the name of the people; the real party in interest being the reclamation district. Reclamation District v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 54; 4 Pac. 945. An error of the superior court in vacating a void order made by a justice of the peace, is a harmless error. Baird v. Justice's Court, 11 Cal. App. 439; 105 Pac. 259. Where the complaint alleged that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff therein in the sums "hereinbefore" stated, but in the copy of the complaint served on the defendant with the copy of the summons the word "hereinbefore" was written "hereinafter," the variance is immaterial: it could not have misled the defendant nor have affected his substantial rights. Fraser v. Oakdale Lumber etc. Co., 73 Cal. 187; 14 Pac. 829. Harmless error in giving instructions is no ground for reversal of judgment. Los Angeles Cemetery Ass'n v. Los Angeles, 103 Cal. 461; 37 Pac. 375; Chapell v. Schmidt, 104 Cal. 511; 38 Pac. 892; People v. Stanton, 106 Cal. 139; 39 Pac. 525; Baker v. Borello, 131 Cal. 615; 63 Pac. 914; Dunlap v. Plummer, 1 Cal. App. 426; 82 Pac. 445. Where dates in the complaint and in the finding are erroneous, they should be corrected by amendment; but where they are harmless, the judgment will not be reversed because thereof. Thomas v. Jameson, 77 Cal. 91; 19 Pac. 177. Where, before judgment, delivery of property sought to be recovered is made to the plaintiff, a judgment in favor of the plaintiff for its possession is not void or erroneous because not in the alternative, and cannot be reversed. Claudius v. Aguirre, 89 Cal. 501; 26 Pac. 1077. The sufficiency of a notice is not impaired by its being directed to the attorneys for the "executor," where there were three executors; the amendment, in such case, follows as a matter of course. Estate of Nelson, 128 Cal. 242; 60 Pac. 772. Where an amended decree, rendered at the same time as the final decree, is simply what the original decree should have been, and does no injustice to the defendant, it will not be disturbed on appeal on account of an alleged irregularity not affecting the merits. Gronfier v. Minturn, 5 Cal. 492. The order in which motions are overruled does not in any way affect the substantial rights of the parties: this is a harmless irregularity, and will be disregarded on appeal. Pennie v. Visher, 94 Cal. 323; 29 Pac. 711.

Error must change result. No judgment will be reversed for error, unless a different result would have been probable but for the error. Estate of Morcy, 147 Cal. 495; 82 Pac. 57. To reverse the judgment of the court below, and send the case back for a new trial, when the only result would be a judgment the same as that appealed from, would be an unjust hardship on the party, and a sacrifice of substance to form. First Nat. Bank v. Henderson, 101 Cal. 307; 35 Pac. 899. A judgment, otherwise properly rendered, will not be reversed because of an immaterial error in apportioning costs, which, if corrected, would not benefit the appellant. George v. Silva, 68 Cal. 272; 9 Pac. 257. Where the complaint, on its face, shows that the plaintiff could not, in any event, recover upon the cause of action set forth therein, and no amendment could cure it, no erroneous ruling at the trial will justify a reversal of the judgment against him. Peters v. Peters, 156 Cal. 32; 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 699; 103 Pac. 219. The mere failure to include in the judgment a clause which could not have any operative effect, or confer any right or protection upon either the plaintiff or the defendant, does not affect the substantial rights of either party, and is not a sufficient ground for reversal of the judgment. Claudius v. Aguirre, 89 Cal. 501; 26 Pac. 1077. An objection, by demurrer, that the plaintiff improperly joined causes of action, becomes immaterial, where judgment was given for only one of the causes of action. Harris v. Smith, 132 Cal. 316; 64 Pac. 409.

Injury must be to appellant. This section applies in case of immaterial errors or defects in a judgment in favor of a defendant, in whose interests the plaintiff has no concern. People v. Rea, 2 Cal. App. 109; 83 Pac. 165. A judgment or order will not be reversed for any error that does not injure the appellant. Peters v. Peters, 156 Cal. 32; 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 699; 103 Pac. 219. Where an appellant has no interest in the subject-matter of the decree, and he is in no way aggrieved thereby, the action of the court, conceding that it erred, will not be reviewed on appeal. Foster v. Bowles, 138 Cal. 449; 71 Pac. 495. A decree declaring the plaintiff the owner of land, and quieting his title thereto, although it might have been drawn for a reconveyance, or might have ordered a cancellation of the deeds, cannot injure a defendant who has no beneficial interest in the land. Jones v. Jones, 140 Cal. 587; 74 Pac. 143. Upon appeal by one defendant from a several judgment against him, which is supported by the complaint, it does not concern him that there is no separate finding upon the issue made by the separate answer of a co-defendant not appealing. Dobbs v. Purington, 136 Cal. 70; 68 Pac. 323. The failure of the court to find upon a plea of the statute of limitations, set up by the respondent, is entirely immaterial to the appellant. Merrill v. Clark, 103 Cal. 367; 37 Pac. 238. Where, in an action against two defendants, the jury rendered a verdict for the "defendant," the defect is immaterial, and no substantial rights of the plaintiff are affected. Willard v. Archer, 63 Cal. 33.

Matters of discretion. Judgment will not be reversed because of the action of the court in matters as to which it has discretion, where such discretion is not abused. Lee v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 101 Cal. 118; 35 Pac. 572; Wolff v. Wolff, 102 Cal. 433; 36 Pac. 767, 1037; Stockton etc. Agricultural Works v. Houser, 103 Cal. 377; 37 Pac. 179. The action of the trial court in refusing to reopen the case, after the close of the trial, to allow the introduction of additional evidence, is not an abuse of discretion, where there was no excuse for not having produced the evidence at the trial. Consolidated Nat. Bank v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 95 Cal. 1; 29 Am. St. Rep. 85; 30 Pac. 96. Where two defendants filed a joint plea of the statute of limitations, and the plea was held bad as to one, and the other was permitted to file a separate plea, there is not such a gross abuse of discretion as to enable the appellate court to revise it. Robinson v. Smith, 14 Cal. 254. An order granting a new trial will not be reversed on the ground of surprise, unless there has been an abuse of discretion in the court below. Nooney v. Mahoney, 30 Cal. 226. Where the defendant asks leave, at the trial, to verify his answer, pending the motion of the plaintiff to strike it out, the refusal of the court to allow the defendant to do so is such abuse of discretion as amounts to error. Lattimer v. Ryan, 20 Cal. 628. Where the defendant filed a copy of the original verified answer by mistake, which was not discovered until after the case was opened to the jury, the refusal of the court to allow the defendant to correct the error was an abuse of discretion requiring the reversal of the judgment and the granting of a new trial. Arrington v. Tupper, 10 Cal. 464.

Record must show error. A judgment rendered upon a complaint, after a demurrer thereto has been improperly overruled, must be reversed upon appeal, unless it clearly appears that no injury to the defendant resulted therefrom. Thelin v. Stewart, 100 Cal. 372; 34 Pac. 861. The ruling of the trial court in excluding depositions in behalf of the plaintiff cannot be deemed prejudicial, where the transcript does not show their contents or materiality. Glenmore Distilling Co. v. Craig, 128 Cal. 264; 60 Pac. 858. Where an action upon a lost note was unsuccessfully defended after tender of an indemnity bond in the complaint, and the record on appeal does not show what costs had accrued at the time the bond was filed, or when it was tendered, the judgment for costs will not be disturbed on appeal. Farmers' Exchange Bank v. Altura Gold Mill etc. Co., 129 Cal. 263; 61 Pac. 1077.

Immaterial defects in complaint. This section applies in case of immaterial errors or defects in a complaint. Pettit v. Forsyth, 15 Cal. App. 149; 113 Pac. 892. Although a pleading is subject to criticism for ambiguity, yet a reversal of the judgment is not justified therefor, unless it is radically defective. Gassen v. Bower, 72 Cal. 555; 14 Pac. 206. Where the averments of a complaint are simply uncertain and defective, but are sufficient when tested only by a general demurrer, and substantially state a cause of action, a reversal of the judgment is not justified. Grant v. Sheerin, 84 Cal. 197; 23 Pac. 1094. A judgment will not be reversed for uncertainty of the complaint alone, where the answer and trial show that the defendant was not misled to his injury. Williams v. Casebeer, 126 Cal. 77; 58 Pac. 380. A complaint, defective in form, but not in substance, can be reached only by special demurrer that it is ambiguous or uncertain; but such defect, not affecting the substantial rights of the parties, will be disregarded on appeal. Eachus v. Los Angeles, 130 Cal. 492; 80 Pac. 147. Absurd and inconsistent allegations in a complaint, the truth of which is impossible, may be disregarded as surplusage. Board of Supervisors v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66. A complaint stating facts sufficient to sustain a judgment for damages, but not containing a formal allegation of the amount of damages sustained, but concluding with a prayer for judgment for the sum stated, is sufficient: errors or defects will be disregarded on appeal. Riser v. Walton, 78 Cal. 490; 21 Pac. 362. An objection to the complaint, for lack of direct, positive allegations, will be disregarded on appeal, where there was an attempt to allege what should have been alleged in plain, direct, and positive language: the failure so to do constitutes a defect, which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties. Maggini v. Pezzoni, 76 Cal. 631; 18 Pac. 687. Although the prayer of a bill is inartificially framed, under the general prayer for relief, yet the court may disregard the mistakes, and treat them as surplusage, and grant such relief as will conform to the bill. Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 269. An action does not fail because the plaintiff makes a mistake as to the form of his remedy: he can be sent out of court upon his facts, only when he is not entitled to relief either at law or in equity. Bedolla v. Williams, 15 Cal. App. 738; 115 Pac. 747. Where only one cause of action is stated in the complaint, but one portion thereof is introduced with the words, "For a separate and second cause of action, plaintiff avers," etc., this mistaken designation will be disregarded as an error not affecting the substantial rights of the parties. Murray v. Murray, 115 Cal. 266; 56 Am. St. Rep. 97; 37 L. R. A. 626; 47 Pac. 37.

Answer curing defective complaint. A defective averment in a complaint is immaterial, where it is cured by the answer. Burns v. Cushing, 96 Cal. 669; 31 Pac. 1124; Shively v. Semi-Tropic Land etc. Co., 99 Cal. 259; 33 Pac. 848; Walkerley v. Greene, 104 Cal. 208; 37 Pac. 890; Daggett v. Gray, 110 Cal. 169; 42 Pac. 568; Vance v. Anderson, 113 Cal. 532; 45 Pac. 816. The failure of the complaint to state sufficient facts is cured by the statement of the omitted facts in the other pleadings: the fact that there is a demurrer does not take it out of the rule of express aider. Cohen v. Knox, 90 Cal. 266; 13 L. R. A. 711; 27 Pac. 215. The omission of an allegation in the complaint may be so aided by an averment of that fact in the answer as to uphold the judgment. Daggett v. Gray, 110 Cal. 169; 42 Pac. 568. The failure of the complaint to set forth material facts, so that no cause of action is stated, is immaterial, where the answer avers such facts, and the defect is cured. Shively v. Semi-Tropic Land etc. Co., 99 Cal. 259; 33 Pac. 848. The objection that the complaint does not aver that any motion was made in the suit, is not tenable, where the defect, if any, is cured by the answer, which sets out the motion, with the affidavit on which it was made, and the order of the court denying the same. Herd v. Touhy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139. Where the petition for an alternative writ of mandate is defective, the supreme court will not sustain a demurrer to the petition to quash the writ, where matters set out in the answer are of such a nature as to cure the defects in the petition. Walkerley v. Greene, 104 Cal. 208; 37 Pac. 890. The failure to aver non-payment is not fatal, nor ground for a reversal of the judgment, where the pleadings of the opposite party show non-payment. Abner Doble Co. v. Keystone Consol. Mining Co., 145 Cal. 490; 78 Pac. 1050. Where the complaint alleges that the plaintiff was in the possession of the property, and entitled thereto, on the day before the commencement of the action, whatever defect there may be in such allegation is cured by an answer that denies the plaintiff's right of possession on the day named. Flinn v. Ferry, 127 Cal. 648; 60 Pac. 434. Where there is a failure, in the complaint, to aver the ultimate fact that the plaintiff was the owner and entitled to the possession of the property when the action was commenced, the defect is not cured by a mere denial, in the answer, that the plaintiff was the owner or entitled to the possession of the goods at the time alleged, "or at any other time": an insufficient complaint is cured by the answer, only where the material facts omitted are supplied by the averments of the answer. Vanalstine v. Whelan, 135 Cal. 232; 67 Pac. 125.

Allowance or refusal of amendments. Where all the matters averred in a proposed amended answer might have been proved under the original answer, the judgment will not be reversed because of the refusal of the court to allow the filing of such amended answer (Edgar v. Stevenson, 70 Cal. 286; 11 Pac. 704); nor because the court refused to allow the defendant to amend his answer, where both parties introduced evidence just as if the answer were perfect in the particulars sought to be amended. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Purcell, 77 Cal. 69; 18 Pac. 886. The failure to make an amendment, allowed formally upon the record, does not necessitate a reversal of the judgment: the record will be ordered corrected to conform with the order permitting the amendment. French v. McCarthy, 125 Cal. 508; 58 Pac. 154. An error committed by the court in refusing to allow an amendment, is cured by receiving the evidence and making a finding upon the very matter to which the amendment was directed; and, where no objection was made to the evidence in support of the finding at the trial, it cannot be contended that such finding was not within the issues. McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278. Where the record fails to show any request for leave to amend the complaint, a reversal of judgment cannot be had upon that ground on appeal. Prince v. Lamb, 128 Cal. 120; 60 Pac. 689. Where the gist of the action, as stated in the original complaint, is the same as that contained in the complaint upon which the trial was had, and the amended complaint was filed upon terms with which the plaintiff complied, there is nothing to work any hardship or surprise upon the defendant, nor is there any error therein. Riverside etc. Irrigation Co. v. Jensen, 73 Cal. 550; 15 Pac. 131. Where a defendant, without leave of court, filed an amended answer, which is stricken out at the trial, on motion, but is allowed to be filed on request, the error, if any, in striking out the answer in the presence of the jury, is cured by the request. Risdon v. Yates, 145 Cal. 210; 78 Pac. 641. Where the plaintiff is permitted at the trial to amend the statement of his cause of action, and the amendment is not made and filed until after the verdict and the entry of judgment, but the case is tried with reference to it, the defendant is not prejudiced. Stark v. Wellman, 96 Cal. 400; 31 Pac. 259. Where the court allows an attorney to insert an omitted signature to a complaint, to which an answer has been filed, and the court overrules an objection of the defendant thereto, and denies his motion to answer or demur to the complaint as signed, but an amended answer is in fact filed after the close of the plaintiff's evidence, no substantial rights of the defendant are affected. Smith v. Dorn, 96 Cal. 73; 30 Pac. 1024. The defendant is not prejudiced by the court's refusal to allow him to amend his answer, where he is afterwards allowed to file an amended answer, after all the amendments to the complaint are filed, and in which he substantially denies all the material averments of the complaint as amended. Frey v. Vignier, 145 Cal. 251; 78 Pac. 733. Where, on appeal, the defendant appears to have lost his case for want of evidence, and not by reason of any defect in his answer, he is not prejudiced or injured by the refusal of the court to permit him to amend his answer to conform to the proof. Green v. Burr, 131 Cal. 236; 63 Pac. 360. Refusal of the court to permit the plaintiff to strike out a claim for damages is error: he has a right to waive a recovery, without regard to the purpose which may influence him. Grass Valley Quartz Mining Co. v. Stackhouse, 6 Cal. 413. Where a defendant obtrudes himself into an action, without opposition, but the complaint is not amended by adding his name, as it might be, and he avails himself of all the rights and privileges of a defendant, his substantial rights are not affected by the failure to amend, nor is the judgment affected by reason of the defect. Tyrrell v. Baldwin, 67 Cal. 1; 6 Pac. 867. Notice should be given of a motion for leave to file an amended complaint; but where the motion should be granted were due notice given, the granting of leave to amend, without notice, is without prejudice. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 114 Cal. 501; 46 Pac. 604. The amendment of the complaint to conform to the proof does not change the cause of action, nor can it operate to the prejudice of the defendant. Blankenship v. Whaley, 142 Cal. 566; 76 Pac. 235. Where the verdict is for actual damage in excess of that alleged in the complaint, and the evidence was not sufficient to warrant the excess, it is error to allow an amendment of the complaint, after verdict, in order to sustain the verdict; and on appeal, while the judgment will not be reversed, the court will be directed to modify it by reducing it to the extent of the excess. Clark v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 142 Cal. 614; 76 Pac. 507.

Striking out pleadings. Error of the court in refusing to strike out portions of the complaint, if harmless, will be disregarded on appeal. Hunt v. Davis, 135 Cal. 31; 66 Pac. 957. An error in striking out or in refusing to strike out the allegations in a complaint or denials in an answer, will not justify a reversal, where such rulings are without prejudice. Sloane v. Southern California Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 668; 32 L. R. A. 193; 44 Pac. 320. There is no prejudicial error in striking out a part of the defendant's answer, where every material issue is before the court after the objectionable part is stricken out. Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234; 64 Pac. 287. Striking from the answer the denial of the corporate existence of the plaintiff is not reversible error, where the plaintiff is afterwards permitted to put in evidence the certificate of incorporation. People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

Variance. Immaterial variances are to be disregarded on the trial, or whenever the question may be presented: this is a most beneficial statutory provision, and should be liberally construed and carried out. Began v. O'Reilly, 32 Cal. 11. The judgment will not be reversed because of immaterial variance (Houghton v. Trumbo, 103 Cal. 239; 37 Pac. 152; Bancroft Co. v. Haslett, 106 Cal. 151; 39 Pac. 602); nor on the ground of variance between the pleadings and the proof, where such variance has not misled the appellant to his prejudice (Began v. O'Reilly, 32 Cal. 11; Ah Goon v. Tarpey, 2 Cal. Unrep. 483; 7 Pac. 188); nor because of a variance between the proof and the averments of the complaint, where the defendant makes no objection on that ground (Marshall v. Ferguson, 23 Cal. 65); nor because of a technical variance between the evidence and finding of facts and the pleading, where no objection was made thereto at the trial (Dikeman v. Norrie, 36 Cal. 94); nor where there is a variance in the contract between the parties as stipulated at the trial and that alleged in the complaint, and no objection is made on this ground, at any stage of the proceedings (Colfax etc. Fruit Co. v. Southern Pacific Co., 118 Cal. 648; 40 L. R. A. 78; 50 Pac. 775); nor, in an action for conversion, because of a variance between the date of the conversion alleged in the complaint and that established by the proof, if prior to the commencement of the action (Bancroft Co. v. Haslett, 106 Cal. 151; 39 Pac. 602); nor, in an action on a bond, where it is alleged in the complaint that it was executed by certain persons, and the proof is, that it was executed by only some of such persons (Kurtz v. Forguer, 94 Cal. 91; 29 Pac. 413); nor, where the complaint is sufficient as against a general demurrer, and sustains the judgment, because of a variance between the proof and the allegations (Carter v. Rhodes, 135 Cal. 46; 66 Pac. 985; Miller v. Ballerino, 135 Cal. 566; 67 Pac. 1046; 68 Pac. 600); nor where the averment in the complaint is, that the contract price of materials was what they were reasonably worth, and the notice of lien provides that they were to be paid for at current market prices. Santa Monica Lumber etc. Co. v. Hege, 119 Cal. 376; 51 Pac. 555. Where the proof is at variance with the allegation of the complaint as to the sale of property for a specified amount, a finding that the amount of the sale is as alleged is not sustained by the evidence, and the judgment should be reversed. Pettinger v. Fast, 87 Cal. 461; 25 Pac. 680. A defense not pleaded cannot be considered, though shown by the evidence: the rule as to curing defects by litigating a question without objection, applies only where the pleading is defective, and not where there is a total absence of averment. Wilson v. White, 84 Cal. 239; 24 Pac. 114.

Variance between complaint and exhibit. Any variance between the terms of a contract as alleged in the complaint, and those of a copy attached thereto, is only an ambiguity or uncertainty, which is removed by the finding of the court that the copy as set forth in the complaint is the contract into which the parties entered. Cutting Fruit Packing Co. v. Canty, 141 Cal. 692; 75 Pac. 564.

Misnomer. The mere error of one letter in a defendant's christian name, as "Dellie," instead of "Dollie," is immaterial, where she is the person the plaintiff seeks to bind by the action. Thompson v. Alford, 135 Cal. 52; 66 Pac. 983. Where the relief granted in a case is limited to an injunction, the fact that a party, necessary only to a different branch of the case, is sued by a wrong name, does not prejudice the defendant: the misnomer is immaterial. Parrott v. Byers, 40 Cal. 614. The middle initial is a material part of a name; and where the parties sued and served appear to be two different persons, from a variance in the middle initial, and there is no proof, in the record, of the service of summons on the defendant sued, a judgment rendered against him by default will be reversed on appeal. Houghton v. Tibbets, 126 Cal. 57; 58 Pac. 318.

Misjoinder of parties. A judgment, after trial upon the merits, will not be reversed because the court improperly overruled a demurrer upon the ground of misjoinder of parties, where no substantial right of the parties was affected thereby. Woollacott v. Meekin, 151 Cal. 701; 91 Pac. 612. Where an action is brought against a city and the city treasurer, the city, being alone liable, cannot complain of error as to the misjoinder. Madary v. Fresno, 20 Cal. App. 91; 128 Pac. 340.

Rulings on demurrer. This section applies to cases of immaterial errors or defects in rulings on demurrers. Pettit v. Forsyth, 15 Cal. App. 149; 113 Pac. 892; Hentig v. Johnson, 8 Cal. App. 221; 96 Pac. 390. Where there is no substantial injury, the improper overruling of a demurrer to the complaint for uncertainty or ambiguity is not ground for reversal. Holland v. McDade, 125 Cal. 353; 58 Pac. 9; Stephenson v. Deuel, 125 Cal. 656; 58 Pac. 258; Foerst v. Kelso, 131 Cal. 376; 63 Pac. 681. A corporation debtor cannot be prejudiced by the overruling of its demurrers, where the record shows that all of its interests have passed to the purchaser at a receiver's sale, who appeared in the action adversely to the appellant, and is recognized in the decree as its successor in interest. Citizens' Bank of Los Angeles v. Los Angeles Iron etc. Co., 131 Cal. 187; 82 Am. St. Rep. 341; 63 Pac. 462. Where a complaint contains two counts, the action of the court in overruling a demurrer thereto on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action, if error, is without injury, where one count is wholly abandoned at the trial, and the verdict is for a smaller sum than that claimed in the other count. Gillaspie v. Hagans, 90 Cal. 90; 27 Pac. 34. Where two counts in a complaint are evidently intended to represent the same cause of action, it is not prejudicial error to sustain a demurrer to the first, where the plaintiff is not injured thereby. Consolidated Nat. Bank v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 95 Cal. 1; 29 Am. St. Rep. 85; 30 Pac. 96. Where there is enough matter in the answer, well pleaded, to constitute a good defense to the action, the overruling of a demurrer to the answer does not affect any substantial right of the plaintiff, and the judgment will be affirmed. Younglove v. Nixon, 61 Cal. 301. The overruling of a demurrer, before the overruling of an improper motion for a change of venue, is a harmless irregularity, in no way affecting the substantial rights of the parties, which will be disregarded on appeal. Pennie v. Visher, 94 Cal. 323; 29 Pac. 711.

Rulings on evidence. The erroneous exclusion or rejection of evidence, not affecting the substantial rights of the appellant, is not ground for a reversal of the judgment (Alexander v. Central Lumber etc. Co., 104 Cal. 532; 38 Pac. 410; Hoult v. Ramsbottom, 127 Cal. 171; 59 Pac. 587; Glenmore Distilling Co. v. Craig, 128 Cal. 264; 60 Pac. 858; St. Vincent's Institution v. Davis, 129 Cal. 17; 61 Pac. 476; Hudson v. Hudson, 129 Cal. 141; 61 Pac. 773; Bosqui v. Sutro R. R. Co., 131 Cal. 390; 63 Pac. 682; Carpy v. Dowdell, 131 Cal. 499; 63 Pac. 780; People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16; 65 Pac. 9; Hunter v. Milam, 133 Cal. 601; 65 Pac. 1079; Harp v. Harp, 136 Cal. 421; 69 Pac. 28; McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 112; 73 Pac. 808); neither is the erroneous admission of evidence, where the substantial rights of the appellant are not affected (People v.

Daniels, 105 Cal. 262; 38 Pac. 720; People v. Clark, 106 Cal. 32; 39 Pac. 53; Hewes v. Germain Fruit Co., 106 Cal. 441; 39 Pac. 853; People v. Maroney, 109 Cal. 277; 41 Pac. 1097; Simmons v. McCarthy, 128 Cal. 455; 60 Pac. 1037; Coonan v. Lowenthal, 129 Cal. 197; 61 Pac. 940; Hunter v. Milam, 133 Cal. 601; 65 Pac. 1079; Rowe v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 134 Cal. 403; 66 Pac. 569; Bacon v. Kearney Vineyard Syndicate, 1 Cal. App. 275; 82 Pac. 84; Bird v. Utica Gold Mining Co., 2 Cal. App. 674; 84 Pac. 256; Stone v. San Francisco Brick Co., 13 Cal. App. 203; 109 Pac. 103; Higgins v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 5 Cal. App. 748; 91 Pac. 344); nor are erroneous or unimportant rulings upon the evidence, which do not materially injure the appellant. Duffy v. Duffy, 104 Cal. 602; 38 Pac. 443; People v. Worthington, 115 Cal. 242; 46 Pac. 1061; People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7; 52 Pac. 112; Hudson v. Hudson, 129 Cal. 141; 61 Pac. 773; People v. Wynn, 133 Cal. 72; 65 Pac. 126. The admission of immaterial evidence is harmless, and will be disregarded on appeal, where it did not and could not affect the question at issue, nor prejudicially affect the appellant. Redfield v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 220; 43 Pac. 1117; People v. Helm, 152 Cal. 532; 93 Pac. 99. An error in the admission of immaterial evidence is cured by the subsequent amendment of the complaint, before the close of the trial, making the evidence material. Curtiss v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 90 Cal. 245; 25 Am. St. Rep. 114; 27 Pac. 211. There is no prejudicial error in sustaining an objection to questions asked of a witness, where he is afterwards permitted to and does fully answer them. Consolidated Nat. Bank v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 95 Cal. 1; 29 Am. St. Rep. 85; 30 Pac. 96. Where a special contract for the performance of work was proved, the judgment will not be reversed because of the admission of testimony of the value of the plaintiff's services, the action being brought upon quantum meruit. De Boom v. Priestly, 1 Cal. 206.

Failure to rule on objection. Where no possible injury could have resulted to the appellant by reason of the court's failure to rule upon a demurrer, the judgment should not be reversed. Ferrier v. Ferrier, 64 Cal. 23; 27 Pac. 960. The failure of the court to rule upon objections made to evidence offered in support of the defense is immaterial error, where the defense is not so pleaded as to be available. California Raisin Growers' Ass'n v. Abbott, 160 Cal. 601; 117 Pac. 767.

Verdict curing error. The general rule as to the effect of a verdict upon defects in pleading is, that, wherever facts are not expressly stated, which are so essential to a recovery that, without proof of them on the trial, a verdict could not have been rendered under the direction of the court, there the want of the express statement is cured by verdict, provided the complaint contains terms sufficiently general to comprehend the facts in fair and reasonable intendment. Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 268. The expression, "cured by verdict," signifies that the court will, after verdict, presume or intend that the particular thing which appears to be defectively or imperfectly stated or omitted in the pleadings was duly proved at the trial. Treanor v. Houghton, 103 Cal. 53; 36 Pac. 1081. Defective allegations in the complaint are cured by a verdict, and all intendments will be made in support of the judgment thereon. Cutting Fruit Packing Co. v. Canty, 141 Cal. 692; 75 Pac. 564. Where the complaint contains the substantial averments of a cause of action though defective in form and certainty, the defect is cured by a verdict or default (People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 127); but where there is an entire absence of a material allegation, the rule that a defective pleading may be corrected by verdict has no application. Richards v. Travelers Ins. Co., 80 Cal. 505; 22 Pac. 939. Where a cause was tried without any objection to the sufficiency of the complaint to present the issue, it must be held, after verdict, that the issue was sufficiently presented. Cortelyou v. Jones, 132 Cal. 131; 64 Pac. 119.

Judgment curing findings. Where the verdict is manifestly erroneous, the judgment, modified by the court, with the assent of the plaintiff, is without prejudice to the defendant, and will be affirmed. Pettit v. Forsyth, 15 Cal. App. 149; 113 Pac. 892. An erroneous finding, if disregarded by the judgment, is without prejudice. Pugh v. Moxley, 164 Cal. 374; 128 Pac. 1037. Where a cause is properly decided upon the issues raised by special defenses, and the decision does not necessarily rest upon the allegations of the complaint, the latter become immaterial; whether the finding, as to them, was or was not contrary to the evidence is of no consequence. Rauer v. Fay, 128 Cal. 523; 61 Pac. 90. A determination by the court as to whether its findings as signed and filed have been surreptitiously altered will rarely be disturbed on appeal. Morrison v. McCue, 45 Cal. 118.

Conclusions of law. The words, "Let judgment and decree be entered accordingly," added to the findings of fact, must be held, on appeal, to be a sufficient statement of the conclusions of law, where it is evident that any more specific conclusions of law must have been in favor of the party for whom judgment was ordered: the absence of more specific conclusions is not an error or defect affecting any substantial right for which the judgment should be reversed. Rea v. Haffenden, 116 Cal. 596; 48 Pac. 716.

Clerical errors. A clerical mistake in the finding of a probative fact is immaterial, where other facts support the judgment. Welsh v. Bardshar, 137 Cal. 154; 69 Pac. 977. The action of the clerk in entering judgment for an amount in excess of that specified in the summons, is not ground for reversing the judgment, but the superior court will be directed to order its clerk to modify its judgment properly. Alexander v. McDow, 108 Cal. 25; 41 Pac. 24. A judgment against a defendant, otherwise properly rendered, will not be reversed, merely because the amount of the costs of one plaintiff, instead of being entered in his favor, is erroneously included in the judgment in favor of the other. George v. Silva, 68 Cal. 272; 9 Pac. 257. Where the court orders the true name of a defendant, sued and served under a fictitious name, to be inserted in the complaint, in place of the fictitious name, the order is a sufficient amendment, and a finding that such amendment was made is correct, though it was not in fact made; the error, if any, being merely clerical, may be corrected by the court at any time, and will be disregarded on appeal as immaterial. Hoffman v. Keeton, 132 Cal. 195; 64 Pac. 264. A decree of foreclosure, erroneous because of the entry of costs by the clerk before taxation, is amendable, and the subsequent action of the court in taxing costs is an amendment curing the error. Janes v. Bullard, 107 Cal. 130; 40 Pac. 108.

Omitted findings. The judgment will not be reversed because of the want of a finding on a particular issue, which is not prejudicial to the appellant (McCourtney v. Fortune, 57 Cal. 617; Winslow v. Gohransen, 88 Cal. 450; 26 Pac. 504); nor because of the failure to find on an affirmative defense (Mushet v. Fox, 6 Cal. App. 77; 91 Pac. 534); nor because of the failure to find on issues, where finding thereon could not have changed the judgment (Fogg v. Perris Irr. District, 154 Cal. 209; 97 Pac. 316), or where the finding thereon would have been adverse to the appellant. Winslow v. Gohransen, 88 Cal. 450; 26 Pac. 504. After judgment has been entered upon the findings, the court cannot cause to be filed an omitted finding; and the judgment should not be reversed on that ground, where a finding upon that issue is but a conclusion of law from the other facts found. Richter v. Henningsan, 110 Cal. 530; 42 Pac. 1077.

Conflicting findings. The court should not strain the language of the finding to make out a case of conflict: the finding should be reconciled, if it can be reasonably done. Alhambra Addition Water Co. v. Richardson, 72 Cal. 598, 606; 14 Pac. 379; Heaton-Hobson etc. Law Offices v. Arper, 145 Cal. 282; 78 Pac. 721. A finding, by the court, of evidence of title, rather than of the ultimate fact of title, in an action for the wrongful seizure of property, is an error or defect not affecting the substantial rights of the parties, and should be disregarded on appeal, where the court had found that the plaintiff was the owner and entitled to the possession of the property at the time of the commencement of the action. Averett v. Sobrunes, 79 Cal. 207; 21 Pac. 739.

Errors in description. Errors in description, which could not and which do not mislead the opposite party, will be disregarded on appeal. Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074. The judgment will not be reversed because of uncertainty of description, which might prevent the judgment from being executed, unless the defendant may be prejudiced by the defective description. Asbill v. Standley, 3 Cal. Unrep. 665; 31 Pac. 738. Where the judgment refers to the finding, and the finding refers to the complaint, for a description, the reference is inexcusably circuitous, but not ambiguous, where there is but one complaint: the judgment may be modified so as to make the description certain. Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192.

Waiver of defects, errors, and objections. An error in overruling a demurrer to a separate defense in the answer, is without prejudice to the plaintiff, and is waived by the defendant, where he subsequently abandons the defense. Burroughs v. De Couts, 70 Cal. 361; 11 Pac. 734. Where the plaintiff could not file a sufficient bill, and did not ask leave to amend, error will not be presumed. Robertson v. Burrell, 110 Cal. 568; 42 Pac. 1086. Where a party withholds an objection founded upon a defect, so as to induce his opponent to rely on his pleading as sufficient until too late to correct it, there is a fraud upon justice, preventing a fair trial, which will not be tolerated. Greiss v. State Investment etc. Co., 98 Cal. 241; 33 Pac. 195; Abner Doble Co. v. Keystone Consol. Min. Co., 145 Cal. 490; 78 Pac. 1050. The filing of an amended complaint supersedes any other complaint, and is a waiver of any error of the court in rulings made in any previous complaint. Brittan v. Oakland Bank of Savings, 112 Cal. 1; 44 Pac. 339; Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085; Ganceart v. Henry, 98 Cal. 281; 33 Pac. 92. By answering an amended complaint, the defendant waives the objection that it alleges a new cause of action arising after the institution of the suit. Witkowski v. Hern, 82 Cal. 604; 23 Pac. 132. All questions in relation to an amended answer are waived by the filing of an amended answer, upon which the defendant goes to trial. Kentfield v. Hayes, 57 Cal. 409. Where separate defenses are set up in the answer, and a demurrer is sustained to one or more of them, an amended answer, subsequently filed, operates as a waiver of error as to such defenses as are pleaded anew, but not as to defenses to which the demurrer was sustained, and which are not again pleaded. Hagely v. Hagely, 68 Cal. 348; 9 Pac. 305. An objection to a pleading is waived, if not taken at or before the trial: it cannot be urged for the first time on appeal. Baxter v. Hart, 104 Cal. 344; 37 Pac. 941. Where there is no objection to the pleadings, or to the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings, all errors and omissions are cured by the verdict, and waived, and cannot be urged for the first time on appeal. Treanor v. Houghton, 103 Cal. 53; 36 Pac. 1081. Where there was no special demurrer to the complaint, any grounds thereof must be deemed waived. Cuttting Fruit Packing Co. v. Canty, 141 Cal. 692; 75 Pac. 564. Objections are waived, where the demurrer is general, and no special grounds are specified therein. Daggett v. Gray, 110 Cal. 169; 42 Pac. 568. Where a party was in court when a motion was made, he cannot object that he had no notice of the proceeding: his presence constituted a waiver of notice. Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509. Where no exception was taken to the order of the court below, in overruling a motion to set aside the judgment and quash the execution, the question cannot be reviewed on appeal. Smith v. Curtis, 7 Cal. 584. Where, at the close of the testimony in a criminal trial, one judge took the place of another, and heard the argument and received the verdict, and the judge who first sat in the case afterwards resumed his seat, and passed, without objection, on the motion for a new trial, the defendant waived any further control of the proceedings and the passing of sentence. People v. Henderson, 28 Cal. 465. Where judgment is entered on a verdict, without any special findings of fact, there is a waiver of such findings, and the irregularity must be disregarded, where it does not affect the substantial rights of the parties. King v. Ponton, 82 Cal. 420; 22 Pac. 1087. Where the parties to an action agree upon the facts, subject to all legal objections, and the agreed statement of facts is admitted in evidence without objection, neither party, upon appeal, can raise the point that some of the admitted facts were not admissible in evidence under the pleadings. Hess v. Bolinger, 48 Cal. 349. Where a cause is tried as if the complaint were in all respects sufficient, and no error or defect in the record is found which affects the substantial rights of the parties, the judgment will not be reversed. People v. Reis, 76 Cal. 269; 18 Pac. 309. Where the plaintiff amends his complaint, making two counts instead of one, he cannot complain of error of the court in sustaining the demurrer to the original complaint. Gale v. Tuolumne Water Co., 14 Cal. 25. Where a public corporation and its board of directors are made defendants, and disclaim all personal interest in the controversy, and judgment is rendered against the corporation, but all the defendants join in a motion for a new trial, the plaintiff is not injured by the joinder of such defendants in the motion. Boehmer v. Big Rock Irrigation Dist., 117 Cal. 19; 48 Pac. 908. Where a trial is had without objection that a stipulated prayer was not formally added to the complaint, the defendant suffers no substantial injury. Murphy v. Stelling, 8 Cal. App. 702; 97 Pac. 672. Where the denial of an allegation of the complaint was treated as sufficient to raise an issue, the question of its sufficiency will be disregarded on appeal, after judgment against the plaintiff. Rowland v. Madden, 72 Cal. 17; 12 Pac. 226, 870. The judgment will not be reversed upon an objection, in the nature of a demurrer to the answer, on the ground that the facts stated are insufficient to constitute a defense, when made on appeal for the first time, and the point was fully litigated on the trial. Lee v. Figg, 37 Cal. 328; 99 Am. Dec. 271. Where the respondent excepted to the sufficiency of the sureties within five days after the filing of an undertaking on appeal, he is not injured by the failure of the appellant to serve notice of appeal on the day the undertaking was filed. Mokelumne Hill etc. Mining Co. v. Woodbury, 10 Cal. 185. Where a ruling striking out some of the denials of an answer has been obviated by an amended pleading, and the defendant has been able to present to the court his entire cause of action or defense, the ruling is without prejudice, and will be disregarded on appeal. Sloane v. Southern California Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 668; 32 L. R. A. 193; 44 Pac. 320.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Began v. O'Reilly, 32 Cal. 12; Peters v. Foss, 20 Cal. 586; Stout v. Coffin, 28 Cal. 65; Zeigler v. Wells Fargo & Co., 28 Cal. 263; Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145; Plate v. Vega, 31 Cal. 383.

§ 476. Time to amend or answer, running of. When a demurrer to any pleading is sustained or overruled, and time to amend or answer is given, the time so given runs from the service of notice of the decision or order.

Time to answer. Ante, §§ 432, 472, 473.
Notice, service of. Post, §§ 1010 et seq.

Legislation § 476. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 304.
2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 135; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Time to amend or answer after demurrer. This section relates only to the right to amend or answer, and does not affect the right to move for a dismissal. San José Land etc. Co. v. Allen, 129 Cal. 247; 61 Pac. 1083. Where a demurrer is overruled, and time is given to answer, if the notice required by this section is not given or waived, the time to answer does not run, and judgment by default cannot be entered; but, if notice of a decision on demurrer is given or waived, the appellant should make that fact appear in the record. Chamberlin v. Del Norte County, 77 Cal. 150; 19 Pac. 271. Written notice of the overruling of a demurrer is waived by the presence in court of the attorney for the demurring party, at the time of the ruling: the time to amend or answer runs, in such case, from the time the ruling is made. Wall v. Heald, 95 Cal. 364; 30 Pac. 551. The time of the default runs from the date of the filing of the pleading, and not from the date of service. Billings v. Palmer, 2 Cal. App. 432; 83 Pac. 1077. Where the judgment recites that the time for answering had expired, and the record is silent as to the time allowed therefor, as well as to the giving of notice of the overruling of the demurrer, it will be presumed that the court had satisfactory evidence that the time for answering had expired. Catanich v. Hayes, 52 Cal. 338.

PROVISIONAL REMEDIES IN CIVIL ACTIONS.

Chapter I. Arrest and Bail. §§ 478–504.
II. Claim and Delivery of Personal Property. §§ 509–521.
III. Injunction. §§ 525–533.
IV. Attachment. §§ 537–560.
V. Receivers. §§ 564–570.
VI. Deposit in Court. §§ 572–574.

CHAPTER I.

ARREST AND BAIL.

§ 478. No person to be arrested except as prescribed by this code.
§ 479. Cases in which defendant may be arrested.
§ 480. Order for arrest, by whom made.
§ 481. Affidavit to obtain order, what to contain.
§ 482. Security by plaintiff before order of arrest.
§ 483. Order, when made, and its form.
§ 484. Affidavit and order to be delivered to the sheriff, and copy to defendant.
§ 485. Arrest, how made.
§ 486. Defendant to be discharged on bail or deposit.
§ 487. Bail, how given.
§ 488. Surrender of defendant.
§ 489. Same.
§ 490. Bail, how proceeded against.
§ 491. Bail, how exonerated.
§ 492. Delivery of undertaking to plaintiff, and its acceptance or rejection by him.
§ 493. Notice of justification. New undertaking, if other bail.
§ 494. Qualifications of bail.
§ 495. Justification of bail.
§ 496. Allowance of bail.
§ 497. Deposit of money with sheriff.
§ 498. Payment of money into court by sheriff.
§ 499. Substituting bail for deposit.
§ 500. Money deposited, how applied or disposed of.
§ 501. Sheriff, when liable as bail, and his discharge from liability.
§ 502. Proceedings on judgment against sheriff.
§ 503. Motion to vacate order of arrest or reduce bail. Affidavits on motion.
§ 504. When the order vacated or bail reduced.

§ 478. No person to be arrested except as prescribed by this code. No person can be arrested in a civil action, except as prescribed in this code.

Legislation § 478. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 72 (New York Code, § 179), which had (1) "shall" for "can," (2) "by" for "in," and (3) "act" for "code."

Civil action, what is. A proceeding for the settlement of the estate of a deceased person is not a civil action, within the provision of the constitution prohibiting imprisonment for debt. Ex parte Smith, 53 Cal. 204; Carpenter v. Superior Court, 75 Cal. 596; 19 Pac. 174.

Who exempt from arrest. Attendance upon any court as a witness, juror, or party, only exempts the person so in attendance from arrest in a civil action, but not from obeying an ordinary process of the court. Page v. Randall, 6 Cal. 32.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Benninghoff v. Oswell, 37 How. Pr. 235; Williams v. Bacon, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 636.

§ 479. Cases in which defendant may be arrested. The defendant may be arrested, as hereinafter prescribed, in the following cases:

1. In an action for the recovery of money or damages on a cause of action arising upon contract, express or implied, when the defendant is about to depart from the state with intent to defraud his creditors.

2. In an action for a fine or penalty, or for money or property embezzled, or fraudulently misapplied, or converted to his own use, by a public officer, or an officer of a corporation, or an attorney, factor, broker, agent, or clerk, in the course of his employment as such, or by any other person in a fiduciary capacity; or for misconduct or neglect in office, or in a professional employment, or for a willful violation of duty.

3. In an action to recover the possession of personal property unjustly detained, when the property or any part thereof, has been concealed, removed, or disposed of, to prevent its being found or taken by the sheriff.

4. When the defendant has been guilty of a fraud in contracting the debt or incurring the obligation for which the action is brought; or in concealing or disposing of the property for the taking, detention, or conversion of which the action is brought.

5. When the defendant has removed or disposed of his property, or is about to do so, with intent to defraud his creditors.

Arrest.

1. Of witness. See post, §§ 1993, 1994, 2067–2070.

2. Of person suspected of embezzlement from or concealment of papers of an estate. See post, § 1460.

3. Of debtor, when ordered in supplementary proceedings. See post, § 715.

4. Of witness disobeying subpœna. See § 1993.

5. Of executor, to compel attendance. See post, § 1440.

6. For disobedience of order to produce will. See post, § 1302.

7. When ordered in action for forcible entry and detainer. See post, § 1168.

Executor, attachment of, for failure to account. See post, §§ 1627, 1628.

Legislation § 479. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 73 (New York Code, § 179), which (1) had, in the introductory paragraph, after the word "cases," the words "arising after the passage of this act," (2) in subd. 1, after the words "his creditors," had the clause, "or when the action is for willful injury to person, to character, or to property, knowing the property to belong to another," and (3) in subd. 8, instead of the words "to prevent its being," had "so that it cannot be." When enacted in 1872, § 479 contained only two additions to the Practice Act; (1) in subd. 2, the word "fraudulent" was added before "misconduct," and (2) in subd. 3, the word "fraudulently" was added before "concealed."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 304.

Scope of section. There are many cases within the provisions of this section, in which the acts justifying the arrest may be committed after the action is commenced. Ex parte Howitz, 2 Cal. App. 752; 84 Pac. 229. This code prescribes the writs by which, and the proceedings upon which, a defendant may be arrested in a civil action: the writ of ne exeat not being among the number, the superior court has no power to issue it. Ex parte Harker, 49 Cal. 465.

Agency of defendant. Where the defendant received money as agent, he cannot be arrested without a showing of some fraudulent conduct on his part, or a demand on him by the principal, and a refusal to pay. In re Holdforth, 1 Cal. 438. Averments that the defendant received personal property in a fiduciary capacity, as the agent of the plaintiff, and that he was guilty of fraud in receiving and converting it to his own use, are not sufficient to warrant a judgment for the imprisonment of the defendant on the ground of fraud. Payne v. Elliot, 54 Cal. 339; 35 Am. Rep. 80.

Fraudulent transfer of property. The transfer of property, with intent to hinder, delay, and defraud creditors, does not make the party receiving such property liable to arrest on either mesne or final process: such a case does not fall within the provisions of the code or of the constitution, where an arrest may be had in a civil action. Cooper v. Nolan, 138 Cal. 248; 71 Pac. 179. Where a debt is fraudulently contracted by one member of a copartnership, the others being ignorant of the fraud, the liability to an action for the fraud is limited to the partner committing the same, unless the others assent thereto, or ratify it by adopting the fraudulent act, or retaining its fruits with knowledge thereof. Stewart v. Levy, 36 Cal. 159.

Pleadings. Matters pleaded to show fraud, which show no connection with the conversion complained of, and no relation between the plaintiff and the defendant setting forth fraud on the plaintiff's rights, are too general and indefinite, and are insufficient. Kullmann v. Greenebaum, 84 Cal. 98; 24 Pac. 49. Alternative or disjunctive pleadings are not permitted: to charge a defendant with receiving or collecting money as the agent, or attorney in fact, of the plaintiff, is insufficient. Porter v. Hermann, 8 Cal. 619. Where the character or capacity in which a party is alleged to have acted is essential to the charge of fraud, that character or capacity must be averred in direct and positive terms, or the charge must fall. Porter v. Hermann, 8 Cal. 619.

Proof of fraud. Fraud on the part of the defendant is necessary, in order that he may be arrested in a civil action for debt. In re Holdforth, 1 Cal. 438. The fraudulent intent to procure goods without payment is consummated when the possession of the goods is obtained without payment, according to the terms of sale: the debt is, under such circumstances, fraudulently contracted; and though payment after this might satisfy the debt, yet it would not remove the taint of fraud. Stewart v. Levy, 36 Cal. 159. To sustain allegations of fraud and deceit in contracting a debt, it is necessary to prove that the representations alleged to have been fraudulent and deceitful were not true. Belden v. Henriques, 8 Cal. 87.

Form of verdict. A special verdict, that the defendant was not guilty of fraud, is not inconsistent with a general verdict giving judgment against him for funds in his hands belonging to the plaintiff. Portland Cracker Co. v. Murphy, 130 Cal. 649; 63 Pac. 70. Where the defendant denies the indebtedness, and also denies the commission of the alleged fraud, a general verdict in favor of the plaintiff does not amount to a finding against the defendant upon the issue joined as to fraud in contracting the debt. Merritt v. Wilcox, 52 Cal. 238.

Arrest on final process. The liberty of the citizen is not to be imperiled by the presumption that a process has been issued in a proper case: under such a presumption, there is not a single case in which a party might not be arrested and imprisoned on final process, although fraud never entered into the elements of the original suit or controversy. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57. While the arrest of a defendant on final process is not expressly authorized by statute, yet, as the issue of fraud may be framed and tried, and the defendant adjudged guilty upon proper proof, and as the constitution does not prohibit, but by implication authorizes, imprisonment for fraud, the courts may order execution against the person of a defendant adjudged guilty of fraud. Stewart v. Levy, 36 Cal. 159. An execution against a person can issue only under the direction of the court, based upon the special facts found, and such facts cannot be considered by the jury, unless averred in the pleadings; it must be warranted by the judgment, and it has no validity if in excess thereof; to authorize an arrest on execution, the fraud must be stated in the judgment; the facts upon which the charge is based must be specifically alleged in the complaint, in order to authorize the judgment convicting the defendant of fraud; the judgment is the determination of the rights of the parties upon the facts pleaded, for the judgment cannot, in any event, exceed the relief warranted by the case stated in the complaint. Davis v. Robinson, 10 Cal. 411. The courts have power to pronounce such judgment as the exigencies of the case require, by virtue of their organization and common-law powers, except when limited by statute; and it would be an absurd provision of law to authorize the arrest of a party accused of a fraudulent act, and to require his discharge upon his being found guilty. Stewart v. Levy, 36 Cal. 159. A party cannot be imprisoned under a judgment in a civil action for assault and battery: such judgment is as much a debt as though recorded in an action of assumpsit. Ex parte Prader, 6 Cal. 239. A defendant in custody under civil process will be delivered over to the agent of another state upon the proper requisition in a criminal action; the interests of a private suitor being subordinate to those of the people. Ex parte Rosenblat, 51 Cal. 285.

Right to jury trial. The question of fraud must be submitted to the jury, except so far as may be necessary to authorize the arrest of a pending action; to justify execution against the person, which may be followed by imprisonment, an issue must be framed, and determined like issues of fact raised upon the pleadings; fraud is an offense involving moral turpitude, and is followed by imprisonment, not merely as a means of enforcing payment, but also as a punishment, and the right to submit the question of indebtedness to the jury being inviolate, it would be strange to deny a jury trial upon a question involving loss of character and liberty. Davis v. Robinson, 10 Cal. 411. Imprisonment for debt, except in cases of fraud, is prohibited by the constitution; consequently, every intendment must be in favor of the liberty of the subject, and his right to trial by jury, which is likewise secured. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

Arrest under civil process for breach of warranty. See note 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 844.

Right to arrest partner in civil action or proceeding. See note 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 130.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Injury to persons. Subd. 1. The first subdivision of the section (73) of the Practice Act, for which this is a substitute, provided that "the defendant may be arrested, where the action is for willful injury to person or character." It was held, that this provision was in conflict with § 15 of article I of the constitution. Southworth v. Resing, 3 Cal. 378; Ex parte Prader, 6 Cal. 239; see also In re Holdforth, 1 Cal. 438.

2. Actions not arising out of contract. The defendant may be arrested in an action to recover from an innkeeper for baggage lost at his hotel. People v. Willett, 26 Barb. 78. So in an action for a false warranty. Fowler v. Abrams, 3 E. D. Smith, 1, 13. So in an action for fraudulent misrepresentations as to the responsibility of a party, whereby credit was given. Sherman v. Brantley, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 55.

3. Agents. Subd. 2. In an action to recover money received by a person as agent, he cannot be arrested without showing some fraudulent conduct on his part, or a demand on him by the principal and a refusal by him to pay. In re Holdforth, 1 Cal. 438. A, being the owner of an invoice of goods in the city of New York, sold one half-interest therein to B with an arrangement that the latter should proceed to San Francisco and there dispose of the same on joint account. Held, that this constituted a partnership between them, and that B was not an agent, and not subject to arrest in an action by A to recover a part of the proceeds of the sales. Soule v. Hayward, 1 Cal. 345.

4. Fraudulent intent. Subd. 3. Pike v. Lent, 4 Sandf. 650; Roberts v. Randel, 3 Sandf. 710; Watson v. McGuire, 33 How. Pr. 87; Sherlock v. Sherlock, 7 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 22; Merrick v. Suydam, 1 Code Rep. (N. S.) 212.

5. Obligation. Debt. Subd. 4. The alleged fraud must be directly connected with the debt or obligation. Oatley v. Lewin, 47 Barb. 18. "Debt" and "obligation" have the same meaning: both import a contract liability. McGovern v. Payn, 32 Barb. 83; Smith v. Corbiere, 3 Bosw. 634; Ely v. Steigler, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 35. But in Crandall v. Bryan, 15 How. Pr. 48, it was held that the term "obligation" was intended to include those cases where the action would not sound in contract.

6. Allegations of fraud. The allegations in the application must satisfy the judge judicially, but the material facts may be stated upon information and belief, if accompanied by statements of the nature and sources of the information. Crandall v. Bryan, 15 How. Pr. 48; 5 Abb. Pr. 162. A defendant cannot be arrested for fraudulent misrepresentations in obtaining money, when the representations were made after the money was obtained. Snow v. Halstead, 1 Cal. 361.

7. Evidence. To sustain the allegations of fraud and deceit in contracting a debt, it is necessary to prove that the representations alleged to have been fraudulent and deceitful were not true. Belden v. Henriques, 8 Cal. 87.

8. Fraudulent intent. Subd. 5. Proof of an actual intent to defraud is necessary. Pacific Mutual Ins. Co. v. Machado, 16 Abb. Pr. 451; Caldwell's Case, 13 Abb. Pr. 405; Krauth v. Vial, 10 Abb. Pr. 139.

§ 480. Order for arrest, by whom made. An order for the arrest of the defendant must be obtained from a judge of the court in which the action is brought.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 3, omitting from the end of the section, after "brought," the words "or from a county judge."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Granting an order of arrest is discretionary with the judge. Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Ecclesine, 6 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 9; Davis v. Scott, 15 Abb. Pr. 127; Lapeous v. Hart, 9 How. Pr. 541.

§ 481. Affidavit to obtain order, what to contain. The order may be made whenever it appears to the judge, by the affidavit of the plaintiff, or some other person, that a sufficient cause of action exists, and that the case is one of those mentioned in section four hundred and seventy-nine. The affidavit must be either positive or upon information and belief; and when upon information and belief, it must state the facts upon which the information and belief are founded. If an order of arrest be made, the affidavit must be filed with the clerk of the court.

Legislation § 481. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 75 (New York Code, § 181), which had (1) the words "shall appear" instead of "appears," and (2) the word "shall" instead of "must" wherever these words appear.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 305, changing, at the end of the section, the word "court" from "county."

Sufficiency of affidavit. That it may "appear" to the judge, it is necessary that the facts shall be stated by competent evidence; but it is competent to present them by affidavit. Neves v. Costa, 5 Cal. App. 111; 89 Pac. 860. The arrest upon affidavit is intended merely to secure the presence of the defendant until final judgment; and in order to detain and imprison his person afterwards, the fraud must be alleged in the complaint, be passed upon by the jury, and be stated in the judgment. Davis v. Robinson, 10 Cal. 411. The jurisdiction to issue an order of arrest depends upon the affidavit required by this section (Ex parte Howitz, 2 Cal. App. 752; 84 Pac. 229; Neves v. Costa, 5 Cal. App. 111; 89 Pac. 860); and an insufficient affidavit makes the order of arrest void: a warrant issued thereunder does not authorize the detention of the defendant. Ex parte Fkumoto, 120 Cal. 316; 52 Pac. 726. The affidavit must disclose that a sufficient cause of action exists, and that the case is one of those for which the remedy of arrest is provided (McGilvery v. Morehead, 2 Cal. 607); and that the case is one mentioned in § 479, ante (Neves v. Costa, 5 Cal. App. 111; 89 Pac. 860); and the power of the court is limited to the facts and conditions which are made to appear therein. Lay v. Superior Court, 11 Cal. App. 558; 105 Pac. 775. A party is entitled to an order of arrest, where the circumstances detailed would induce in a reasonable mind the belief that a fraud was intended to be perpetrated: it is not necessary that he should show positively the commission of a fraud (Southworth v. Resing, 3 Cal. 377); but circumstances must be disclosed from which an inference can be drawn that the defendant was guilty of fraud either in procuring the property involved in the action, or in withholding the purchase-money received from the sale thereof, as the agent for the plaintiff. In re Holdforth, 1 Cal. 438. As a matter of practice, it is safest to order an arrest, even in cases of doubt, because the defendant is protected against abuse of the process by the undertaking of the plaintiff, while, on the other hand, frauds are proverbially concocted with so much artfulness and ingenuity as to render them at all times difficult to be exposed; and when a case actually exists, the plaintiff is remediless without process of arrest: a different rule would almost, if not certainly, destroy its efficiency as a legal remedy. Southworth v. Resing, 3 Cal. 377. The facts necessary to be shown must appear by the positive averments of the affidavit: a reference to the complaint, or to any other paper, to show what the affidavit itself should disclose, although it is positively averred that such complaint or paper is true, is insufficient. McGilvery v. Morehead, 2 Cal. 607; Ex parte Fkumoto, 120 Cal. 316; 52 Pac. 726. It is not enough to assert a fraudulent intent in general terms: the specific facts must be shown, that the court itself may deduce the fraud, and the question of sufficiency not left to be passed upon by the party. Ex parte Fkumoto, 120 Cal. 316; 52 Pac. 726. The affidavit may be based on information and belief (Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57); but statements of fact, made upon information and belief, or which are of such a character that they could only be so made, without stating the facts upon which such information and belief are founded, are fatally defective. Ex parte Fkumoto, 120 Cal. 316; 52 Pac. 726. The court has no jurisdiction to make an order for arrest, where the affidavit does not aver that the indebtedness sued for, or any other cause of action, exists: such an affidavit is fatally defective (In re Vinich, 86 Cal. 70; 26 Pac. 528); and where there is a total defect of evidence as to any essential fact in the affidavit, the court acts without any jurisdiction, and the act is void; but where the court has jurisdiction, and makes a mistake concerning the just weight and importance of the evidence, the act is merely erroneous, and is good until reversed. Dusy v. Helm, 59 Cal. 188. The presentation of such evidence, as, alone, would be receivable upon the trial of an action to justify an ordinary judgment for money, is required of a plaintiff who desires, in a civil action, to enforce his claim, at the outset, by the arrest and imprisonment of the defendant, that is, to have execution before obtaining judgment. Ex parte Fkumoto, 120 Cal. 316; 52 Pac. 726. Where the judge has no jurisdiction to act, his order of arrest is void; and whether he has jurisdiction, must be determined from the affidavit itself, and not from what the judge thinks it authorizes him to do; the court cannot confer jurisdiction by merely assuming it, nor can its determination that it has jurisdiction confer it; and the plaintiff must see to it that he is clothed with actual, not merely apparent, authority, before he can deprive the defendant of his liberty. Fkumoto v. Marsh, 130 Cal. 66; 80 Am. St. Rep. 73; 62 Pac. 303, 509. An averment that goods were carried away in an express wagon, to a place unknown to the plaintiff, is not sufficient to show a fraudulent purpose: they may have been thus taken for sale or storage, in perfect good faith. Ex parte Fkumoto, 120 Cal. 316; 52 Pac. 726. That the defendant "will escape from the state," etc., is a mere statement of the conclusion or belief of the affiant, and, without the statement of the facts from which such conclusion is drawn, or upon which such belief is founded, is not evidence upon which the court is at liberty to act. Id. That the defendant "will escape from the state," and thus "defraud and cheat the plaintiff," is not the equivalent of the statutory requirement, "that he is about to depart from the state, with intent to defraud his creditors": when the language of such a statute is departed from, the party must, at his peril, employ words of equivalent import, and a failure in this respect is fatal. Id.

New affidavits. Where a party is once arrested and discharged, he cannot be arrested again in the same action; and it being always presumed that the plaintiff, in his affidavit for arrest, states his case as fully as he can to effect his object, new or different affidavits cannot be allowed at pleasure: a different rule would lead to harassing arrests, and open a wide door to perjury. McGilvery v. Morehead, 2 Cal. 607.

Objection to affidavit. Objection to the insufficiency of the affidavit cannot be set up by third parties, nor even by the defendant himself after judgment: by putting in bail and neglecting to move to be discharged, he consents to process, and waives all irregularities. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Affidavit. The affidavit must show the facts relied upon by positive averment; and it is not sufficient to refer to the complaint, or to any other paper, to show what the affidavit ought itself to disclose. McGilvery v. Morehead, 2 Cal. 607. To entitle a party to the remedy of arrest, it is not necessary to show positively the commission of a fraud. It is sufficient if the circumstances detailed would induce a reasonable belief that a fraud was intended. Southworth v. Resing, 3 Cal. 377. An affidavit for arrest, made on information and belief, that the defendant has been guilty of fraud in contracting the debt, or in endeavoring to prevent its collection, in the terms required by statute, and followed by an averment of the facts on which the belief is founded, also stated on information and belief, is sufficient. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57; City Bank v. Lumley, 28 How. Pr. 397; Blason v. Bruno, 21 How. Pr. 112; 12 Abb. Pr. 265; 33 Barb. 520; Cook v. Roach, 21 How. Pr. 152; Peel v. Elliott, 16 How. Pr. 481. Insufficiency of the affidavit on which the writ of arrest issues cannot be set up in defense by third parties, nor by the defendant himself after judgment. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

2. Order of arrest. The order of arrest is only an intermediate remedy or process to secure the presence of the party until final judgment, and the facts on which it is based must be affirmatively found, and the fraud stated in the judgment, in order to authorize an arrest on final process. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57. It is best to award an arrest even in cases of doubt, for the defendant is protected by his bond from abuse by the process, without which process the plaintiff may be remediless. Southworth v. Resing, 3 Cal. 377; see also Davis v. Robinson, 10 Cal. 411.

§ 482. Security by plaintiff before order of arrest. Before making the order, the judge must require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff, with sureties in an amount to be fixed by the judge, which must be at least five hundred dollars, to the effect that the plaintiff will pay all costs which may be adjudged to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the arrest, if the same be wrongful, or without sufficient cause, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking. The undertaking must be filed with the clerk of the court.

Undertakings.

1. Generally. Post, § 1056.
2. Court commissioner's power to take. Ante, § 259.

Legislation § 482. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 76 (New York Code, § 182), which read: "Before making the order, the judge shall require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff, with sureties, to the effect that if the defendant recover judgment, the plaintiff will pay all costs and charges that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the arrest, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking, which shall be at least five hundred dollars.

Each of the sureties shall annex to the undertaking an affidavit that he is a resident and householder, or freeholder, within the state, and worth double the sum specified in the undertaking, over and above all his debts and liabilities, exclusive of property exempt from execution. The undertaking shall be filed with the clerk of the court." When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "shall" was changed to "must," wherever it occurs, and (2) the sentence beginning "Each of the sureties" was omitted.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 305.

Damages for wrongfully procuring arrest. Damages for wrongfully securing the arrest of a defendant should not be imposed on the party applying for the order, where the judge to whom the application was made had jurisdiction to pass upon the sufficiency of the evidence disclosed by the affidavit, unless there was an entire lack of evidence of some essential fact which the law requires to be shown. Dusy v. Helm, 59 Cal. 188.

Action on undertaking in justice's court. A defendant, arrested in an action in a justice's court, and subsequently discharged, cannot maintain an action on the undertaking given to procure his arrest, pending an appeal by the plaintiff to the superior court from the judgment of the justice. Steehhan v. Roraback, 67 Cal. 29; 7 Pac. 7.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The form of affidavit of the sureties is omitted. Section 1057 of this code prescribes the form to be used whenever an undertaking is required. The undertaking may be executed by any person, at the instance of the plaintiff, who will undertake unqualifiedly that the plaintiff will indemnify the defendant for all damages he may sustain. Leffingwell v. Chave, 19 How. Pr. 54; 10 Abb. Pr. 472; 5 Bosw. 703; Bellinger v. Gardner, 2 Abb. Pr. 441; Askins v. Hearns, 3 Abb. Pr. 184. Per contra, Richardson v. Craig, 1 Duer, 666. If a foreign state is plaintiff, the undertaking may be signed by the resident minister. Republic of Mexico v. Arangoiz, 5 Duer, 634. The obligations of sureties are assumed with reference to the law, which becomes part of their contract. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

§ 483. Order, when made, and its form.

The order may be made at the time of the issuing of the summons, or any time afterwards before judgment. It must require the sheriff of the county where the defendant may be found, forthwith to arrest him and hold him to bail in a specified sum, and to return the order at a time therein mentioned, to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending.

Legislation § 483. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 77 (New York Code, § 183), which had (1) the words "to accompany" instead of "at the time of the issuing of," and (2) the word "shall" instead of "must" before "require."

Order before action commenced. Until suit is instituted, there can be no defendant, and consequently no authority to issue an order of arrest; such an order, issued before action commenced, is void for want of jurisdiction. Ex parte Cohen, 6 Cal. 318.

Arrest on final process. See note ante, § 479.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. "Before judgment." These terms mean "the final determination of the rights of the parties in the action." Although a judgment by default has been taken, founded upon allegations of fraud, and the defendant let in to defend the judgment standing as security, yet he may be arrested and held to bail in the action. Union Bank v. Mott, 8 Abb. Pr. 150; Mott v. Union Bank, 35 How. Pr. 332; 38 N. Y. 18; 4 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 270.

2. Form of order. There is but one form under the code, and every order must require the officer to arrest the defendant, and hold him to bail in a specified sum. Tracy v. Veeder, 35 How. Pr. 209; but see Elston v. Potter, 9 Bosw. 635; Sherlock v. Sherlock, 7 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 22.

3. Return. If the order direct the return within "five days after the arrest of the defendant," it is sufficient. Continental Bank v. De Mott, 8 Bosw. 696. If the order is made returnable on Sunday, the irregularity may be remedied either by waiver, as the putting in of bail (Wright v. Jeffrey, 5 Cow. 15), or by amendment. Stone v. Martin, 2 Denio, 185.

§ 484. Affidavit and order to be delivered to the sheriff, and copy to defendant.

The order of arrest, with a copy of the affidavit upon which it is made, must be delivered to the sheriff, who, upon arresting the defendant, must deliver to him a copy of the affidavit, and also, if desired, a copy of the order of arrest.

To excuse omission of duty by sheriff, direction by party or attorney must be in writing. Pol. Code, § 4166.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the copies are not delivered by the sheriff, upon making the arrest, it is an irregularity only, and will not entitle the defendant to a discharge. Barker v. Cook, 25 How. Pr. 190; 16 Abb. Pr. 83; Courter v. McNamara, 9 How. Pr. 255; Keeler v. Belts, 3 Code Rep. 183. An omission, in the copy of the affidavit served, of the jurat and signature of the party, does not affect the validity of the order. Barker v. Cook, 25 How. Pr. 190; 16 Abb. Pr. 83; 40 Barb. 254.

§ 485. Arrest, how made.

The sheriff must execute the order by arresting the defendant and keeping him in custody until discharged by law.

Production of process upon request. Pol. Code, § 4169.

Legislation § 485. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 79 (New York Code, § 185), which had the word "shall" instead of "must."

No second arrest in same action. Where a party is once arrested and discharged, he cannot be arrested again in the same action. McGilvery v. Morehead, 2 Cal. 607.

Place where order of arrest in civil action may be executed. See note Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1376.

§ 486. Defendant to be discharged on bail or deposit. The defendant, at any time before execution, must be discharged from the arrest, either upon giving bail or upon depositing the amount mentioned in the order of arrest.

Legislation § 486. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 80 (New York Code, § 186), which had (1) the word "shall" instead of "must," and (2) at the end of the section, after "arrest," the words "as provided in this chapter."

Discharge of defendant. A party arrested may be relieved therefrom by deposit or bail, or by moving upon affidavit to be discharged; and should the court refuse to discharge him, or should he neglect to apply for such discharge, he does not waive all right and confess such fraud. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

Plaintiff's failure to provide for prisoner's support. The failure of the plaintiff to advance funds for the support of the defendant in jail, under arrest in a civil action, does not, per se, operate to discharge the defendant; the latter's interest being, merely, that he be furnished with proper support while in custody, whether paid for by the plaintiff or not. Ex parte Lamson, 50 Cal. 306.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Release. The attorney for plaintiff may consent to the release of the defendant; but such a release will not discharge the order, and the defendant may thereafter be arrested on final process. Meech v. Loomis, 28 How. Pr. 209; 14 Abb. Pr. 428.

2. Sheriff must accept bail. The defendant is entitled to his discharge upon tendering bond, with sufficient sureties. A refusal to accept such bond renders the sheriff liable to an action. Richards v. Porter, 7 Johns. 137; Posterne v. Hanson, 2 Saund. 59; 85 Eng. Reprint, 658; Smith v. Hall, 2 Mod. 32; 86 Eng. Reprint, 925.

§ 487. Bail, how given. The defendant may give bail by causing a written undertaking to be executed by two or more sufficient sureties, to the effect that they are bound in the amount mentioned in the order of arrest, that the defendant will at all times render himself amenable to the process of the court, during the pendency of the action, and to such as may be issued to enforce the judgment therein, or that they will pay to the plaintiff the amount of any judgment which may be recovered in the action.

Bail, qualifications of. Post, §§ 494, 1057.

Legislation § 487. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 81 (New York Code, § 187), which had (1) the words "stating their places of residence and occupations," after the word "sureties," and (2) the word "shall" instead of "will," before "at all times."

Defense to action on bond. The insufficiency of the affidavit upon which the writ of arrest issues, cannot be set up in defense by third parties, in an action upon the bail bond, nor even by the defendant himself after judgment. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. An officer making the arrest can take only the security prescribed by statute; but the party at whose suit the arrest is made may take any security he pleases. Winter v. Kinney, 1 N. Y. 365; Decker v. Judson, 16 N. Y. 439.

§ 488. Surrender of defendant. At any time before judgment, or within ten days thereafter, the bail may surrender the defendant in their exoneration; or he may surrender himself to the sheriff of the county where he was arrested.

Legislation § 488. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 82 (New York Code, § 188).

Writ of ne exeat not preserved. The procedure by which jurisdiction is to be exercised may be prescribed by the legislature, except where it would impair the constitutional powers of the court, or practically defeat their exercise, and the procedure established by the legislature does not include the writ of ne exeat. Ex parte Harker, 49 Cal. 465.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Sureties on the bail bond of a defendant, arrested in a civil action, are not bound to surrender the defendant within ten days after judgment, unless the plaintiff takes such measures as would authorize the officer to hold defendant in custody. Allen v. Breslauer, 8 Cal. 552. A surrender, within ten days after execution, is a compliance with the statute. Id. A portion of the bail may make the surrender. In re Taylor, 7 How. Pr. 212. The offer of a party to surrender himself in discharge of his sureties, was held to be a good surrender. Babb v. Oakley, 5 Cal. 93. Where the judgment will not warrant a writ of ca. sa. to be issued under it, the bail will not be charged for neglecting to surrender the judgment debtor. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

§ 489. Same. For the purpose of surrendering the defendant, the bail, at any time or place before they are finally charged, may themselves arrest, or, by a written authority indorsed on a certified copy of the undertaking, may empower the sheriff to do so. Upon the arrest of defendant by the sheriff, or upon his delivery to the sheriff by the bail, or upon his own surrender, the bail are exonerated, if such arrest, delivery, or surrender take place before the expiration of ten days after judgment; but if such arrest, delivery, or surrender be not made within ten days after judgment, the bail are finally charged on their undertaking, and bound to pay the amount of the judgment within ten days thereafter.

Legislation § 489. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 83 (New York Code, § 189), which had (1) the word "him" after "themselves arrest," (2) the word "the" instead of "arrest of," (3) the words "shall be" instead of "are," before "exonerated," (4) the word "Provided" instead of "if," before "such arrest," (5) the words "shall be" instead of "are," before "finally charged," and (6) the word "be" before "bound to pay."

Exoneration of sureties. The sureties on a bail bond are exonerated when the defendant is taken into the custody of the sheriff under an order of the court; and the vacation of such order does not, by operation of law, restore the defendant to the custody of the sureties, notwithstanding the fact that the sheriff might have had the defendant in his custody, under such order, only a short time. People v. McReynolds, 102 Cal. 308; 36 Pac. 590; Babb v. Oakley, 5 Cal. 93.

Writ of capias ad satisfaciendum. Where the judgment is not such as will warrant a writ of ca. sa. to be issued under it, the bail will not be charged for neglecting to surrender the judgment debtor. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. It was in Seaver v. Genner, 10 Abb. Pr. 256, held, that where the sureties failed to justify, but the defendant had been released, the sheriff became bail, and might surrender the defendant by rearresting him. See also Sartos v. Merceques, 9 How. Pr. 188.

§ 490. Bail, how proceeded against. If the bail neglect or refuse to pay the judgment within ten days after they are finally charged, an action may be commenced against such bail for the amount of the original judgment.

Legislation § 490. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 84 (New York Code, § 190), as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 60, Kerr ed. p. 86, which had the word "such" instead of "the," before "original judgment."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57; Otis v. Wakeman, 1 Hill, 604. In an action against bail whose liability is fixed, they cannot show either in bar or mitigation that before the recovery of judgment against their principal he was and since has been insolvent. Levy v. Nicholas, 19 Abb. Pr. 282; 1 Rob. 614; Metcalf v. Stryker, 10 Abb. Pr. 12; 31 Barb. 62.

§ 491. Bail, how exonerated. The bail are exonerated by the death of the defendant or his imprisonment in a state prison, or by his legal discharge from the obligation to render himself amenable to the process.

Legislation § 491. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 85 (New York Code, § 191), which had the words "shall also be" instead of "are," after "The bail."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Death. Bail are exonerated by the death of the principal. Merritt v. Thompson, 1 Hilt. 550; Olcott v. Lilly, 4 Johns. 407; Hayes v. Carrington, 12 Abb. Pr. 179; 21 How. Pr. 143.

2. Legal discharge. The final termination, only, of the action in favor of the defendant operates as a legal discharge. Von Gerhard v. Lighte, 13 Abb. Pr. 101.

§ 492. Delivery of undertaking to plaintiff, and its acceptance or rejection by him. Within the time limited for that purpose, the sheriff must file the order of arrest in the office of the clerk of the court in which the action is pending, with his return indorsed thereon, together with a copy of the undertaking of the bail. The original undertaking he must retain in his possession until filed, as herein provided. The plaintiff, within ten days thereafter, may serve upon the sheriff a notice that he does not accept the bail, or he is deemed to have accepted them, and the sheriff is exonerated from liability. If no notice be served within ten days, the original undertaking must be filed with the clerk of the court.

§ 493. Notice of justification. New undertaking, if other bail. Within five days after the receipt of notice, the sheriff or defendant may give to the plaintiff or his attorney notice of the justification of the same, or other bail (specifying the places of residence and occupations of the latter), before a judge of the court or county clerk, at a specified time and place; the time to be not less than five nor more than ten days thereafter, except by consent of parties. In case other bail be given, there must be a new undertaking.

Justification of bail. See post, § 495.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 3, omitting the words "or county judge" after "judge of the court."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Leave to except may, on motion, be granted after the time has expired, but on terms and without prejudice to any right of the sheriff. Zimm v. Ritterman, 5 Rob. (N. Y.) 618.

§ 494. Qualifications of bail. The qualifications of bail are as follows:

1. Each of them must be a resident and householder, or freeholder, within the state.

2. Each must be worth the amount specified in the order of the arrest, or the amount to which the order is reduced, as provided in this chapter, over and above all his debts and liabilities, exclusive of property exempt from execution; but the judge or county clerk, on justification, may allow more than two sureties to justify severally, in amounts less than that expressed in the order, if the whole justification be equivalent to that of two sufficient bail.

Qualifications of bail. Post, § 1057.

Legislation § 494. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 88 (New York Code, § 194), which had (1) the words "shall be" instead of "are," in the introductory paragraph, and (2) also the words "shall be" instead of "must," in first line of subd. 2.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 306, (1) changing, in subd. 1, (a) the words "shall be" to "must," and (b) the word "county" to "state"; (2) adding, in subd. 2, the word "the" before "arrest."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See § 1057 of this code.

Householder. A party who rents and occupies part of a building for an office is a householder, within the meaning of this section. Somerset etc. Savings Bank v. Huyck, 33 How. Pr. 323.

§ 495. Justification of bail. For the purpose of justification, each of the bail must attend before the judge or county clerk, at the time and place mentioned in the notice, and may be examined on oath on the part of the plaintiff, touching his sufficiency, in such manner as the judge or clerk, in his discretion, may think proper. The examination must be reduced to writing, and subscribed by the bail, if required by the plaintiff.

Justification before court commissioner. Ante, § 259, subd. 3.

Failure of sureties to justify. Where sureties refuse to answer pertinent questions, and to disclose the names of makers of negotiable promissory notes, and the evidence tends to show that these notes were made to enable the sureties to justify, there is a failure to justify. Mokelumne Hill etc. Mining Co. v. Woodbury, 10 Cal. 188.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This kind of property is immaterial (1 Till. & Shear. Prac. 586); but it must be in the party's own right. 2 Chit. 97.

§ 496. Allowance of bail. If the judge or clerk find the bail sufficient, he must annex the examination to the undertaking, indorse his allowance thereon, and cause them to be filed, and the sheriff is thereupon exonerated from liability.

Court commissioners, powers of, as to bail. Ante, § 259, subd. 3.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Justification. The justification is not complete until the judge has indorsed his allowance on the undertaking, and caused it to be filed. O'Neil v. Durkee, 12 How. Pr. 94; Overill v. Durkee, 2 Abb. Pr. 383.

2. Fraud in justification. In Brown v. Gillies, 1 Chit. 372, an order for the allowance of bail was discharged, upon it appearing that the bail had perjured himself on his justification. See also Gould v. Berry, 1 Chit. 143.

§ 497. Deposit of money with sheriff. The defendant may, at the time of his arrest, instead of giving bail, deposit with the sheriff the amount mentioned in the order. In case the amount of the bail be reduced, as provided in this chapter, the defendant may deposit such amount instead of giving bail. In either case the sheriff must give the defendant a certificate of the deposit made, and the defendant must be discharged from custody.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Money deposited is in the custody of the law, and, as between the plaintiff and the defendant, is considered the property of the latter. Hermann v. Aaronson, 3 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 389; 34 How. Pr. 272; 8 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 155. Money deposited by a third party becomes the property of the defendant. Salter v. Weiner, 6 Abb. Pr. 191.

§ 498. Payment of money into court by sheriff. The sheriff must, immediately after the deposit, pay the same into court, and take from the clerk receiving the same two certificates of such payment, the one of which he shall deliver to the plaintiff's attorney, and the other to the defendant. For any default in making such payment, the same proceedings may be had on the official bond of the sheriff, to collect the sum deposited, as in other cases of delinquency.

Sheriff. Penalty for non-payment. Pol. Code, § 4161.

§ 499. Substituting bail for deposit. If money is deposited, as provided in the two last sections, bail may be given and may justify upon notice, at any time before judgment; and on the filing of the undertaking and justification with the clerk, the money deposited must be refunded to the defendant.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Hermann v. Aaronson, 34 How. Pr. 272; 3 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 389; 8 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 155; Salter v. Weiner, 6 Abb. Pr. 191.

§ 500. Money deposited, how applied or disposed of. Where money has been deposited, if it remain on deposit at the time of the recovery of a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, the clerk must, under the direction of the court, apply the same in satisfaction thereof; and after satisfying the judgment, refund the surplus, if any, to the defendant. If the judgment is in favor of the defendant, the clerk must, under like direction of the court, refund to him the whole sum deposited and remaining unapplied.

Legislation § 500. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 94 (New York Code, § 200), which had (1) the words "shall have" instead of "has," in the first line, (2) the word "shall" instead of "must," after "the clerk," in both instances, (3) the word "shall" before "refund," and (4) the word "be" instead of "is," after "If the judgment."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The plaintiff is entitled to have the money deposited applied on any judgment he may obtain. Hermann v. Aaronson, 3 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 389; 34 How. Pr. 272; 8 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 155. If the money deposited is lost, stolen, or embezzled, without any act of the plaintiff contributing to that result, the loss is that of the depositor, as between him and the plaintiff. Parsons v. Travis, 5 Duer, 650. See also De Peyster v. Clarkson, 2 Wend. 77.

§ 501. Sheriff, when liable as bail, and his discharge from liability. If, after being arrested, the defendant escape or is rescued, the sheriff is liable as bail; but he may discharge himself from such liability by the giving [of] bail at any time before judgment.

Liability of sheriff permitting—
1. Rescue. See Pol. Code, §§ 4164, 4165.
2. Escape. See Pol. Code, §§ 4163, 4165.

Legislation § 501. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 95 (New York Code, § 201), which had (1) the word "be" instead of

"is," before "rescued," (2) the words "shall himself be" instead of "is," before "liable as bail," and (3) the words "and justification of" before "bail at any time."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The amount of the judgment in the original action is the measure of damages in an action against the sheriff. His liability is that of bail who have justified. Gallarati v. Orser, 4 Bosw. 94; 27 N. Y. 324.

§ 502. Proceedings on judgment against sheriff. If a judgment is recovered against the sheriff upon his liability as bail, and an execution thereon is returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, the same proceedings may be had on his official bond, for the recovery of the whole or any deficiency, as in other cases of delinquency.

Legislation § 502. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 96 (New York Code, § 202), which had the word "be" instead of "is," in both instances.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The sureties on the official bond of the sheriff are liable for any default of the sheriff as bail. People v. Dikeman, 4 Keyes, 93.

§ 503. Motion to vacate order of arrest or reduce bail. Affidavits on motion. A defendant arrested may, at any time before the trial of the action, or if there be no trial, before the entry of judgment, apply to the judge who made the order, or the court in which the action is pending, upon reasonable notice, to vacate the order of arrest or to reduce the amount of bail. If the application be made upon affidavits on the part of the defendant, but not otherwise, the plaintiff may oppose the same by affidavits or other proofs, in addition to those on which the order of arrest was made.

Legislation § 503. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 97 (New York Code, §§ 204, 205), which had the words "to the plaintiff" after "reasonable notice."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 306, (1) substituting for "justification of bail" the words "trial of the action, or if there be no trial, before the entry of judgment," and (2) changing "is" to "be," after "If the application," this latter being a restoration to the original.

Motion to vacate. A motion to vacate an arrest is tried like any other fact, and must be decided by the weight of testimony. Southworth v. Resing, 3 Cal. 377.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A party, once arrested and discharged, cannot again be arrested in the same action. McGilvery v. Morehead, 2 Cal. 607. If the process, though proper in form, has been issued in an improper case, the party will be discharged. Soule v. Hayward, 1 Cal. 345. On an order to show cause why the arrest of a party, made on an allegation of fraud, should not be vacated, the question of fact involved must be decided, like any other question of fact, upon the preponderance of the evidence. Southworth v. Resing, 3 Cal. 378. The defendant, by putting in bail and neglecting to move his discharge, waives all previous irregularities. Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

§ 504. When the order vacated or bail reduced. If, upon such application, it appears that there was not sufficient cause for the arrest, the order must be vacated; or if it appears that the bail was fixed too high, the amount must be reduced.

Legislation § 504. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 98, which read: "If upon such application it shall satisfactorily appear that there was not sufficient cause for the arrest, the order shall be vacated; or if it satisfactorily appear that the bail was fixed too high, the amount shall be reduced."

Second arrest prohibited. Where a party has once been arrested and discharged, he cannot be arrested again in the same action. McGilvery v. Morehead, 2 Cal. 607.

CHAPTER II.

CLAIM AND DELIVERY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

§ 509. Delivery of personal property, when it may be claimed.
§ 510. Affidavit and its requisites.
§ 511. Requisition to sheriff to take and deliver the property.
§ 512. Security on the part of the plaintiff, and proceedings in serving the order.

Nature and elements of remedy. This chapter provides only an auxiliary remedy, where the plaintiff claims immediate delivery of the property at the time of the commencement of the action: it has no application in the ordinary action to recover personal property, or its value, where the auxiliary remedy is not invoked. Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258; 62 Pac. 463. Claim and delivery is a possessory action: it is the lineal descendant of the common-law action of replevin, with the scope of its application greatly enlarged, but the essential object of the action remains the same, namely, to enforce the plaintiff's right to the present possession of chattels, as against a defendant who unlawfully detains them, and to recover their value if possession cannot be had, together with damages for the detention. Hall v. Susskind, 109 Cal. 203; 41 Pac. 1012. While the proceedings in claim and delivery are in some respects analogous to those in replevin, yet certain features which distinguished the practice in replevin have not survived; thus, in replevin the denial or general issue was non cepit, which simply denied the taking, and admitted title in the plaintiff; so, non detinet put in issue only the detention; a justification was where the defendant was enabled to show that the plaintiff had no property in the goods, and that they were the property of the defendant or some third person; there was a supposed technical necessity to allege property in the defendant or a third person, since the general issue did not question the title of the plaintiff; but, by our system of pleading, the defendant may fully justify under the general denial, and if he cannot deny the plaintiff's property without affirmatively asserting property in himself or some third person, there can be no general denial of the averments of the complaint in this class of cases, although this code expressly provides there may be; and, also under our system, the general denial puts in issue the plaintiff's right to the possession of the property; and if he was not entitled to possession when he commenced his action, but it has been delivered to him by means of an ancillary writ, it should be restored to the defendant, from whom it was taken. Pico v. Pico, 56 Cal. 453. There is no action of "claim and delivery": under our system, there is only one form of action, which has no name; so that an action cannot be here defeated, as it could have been at common law, because not properly named. Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258; 62 Pac. 463. Claim and delivery has two aspects: one is a suit to recover specific personal property; the other is a suit to recover a money demand. J. Dewing Co. v. Thompson, 19 Cal. App. 85; 124 Pac. 1035. The issue and sole question in claim and delivery is the right to the possession at the time of the commencement of the action (Tuohy v. Linder, 144 Cal. 790; 78 Pac. 233), and the suit determines only the right of possession. Liver v. Mills, 155 Cal. 459; 101 Pac. 299. Claim and delivery is a statutory remedy provided to enable one to recover the possession of personal property wrongfully detained, with an alternative remedy if possession cannot be had (Riciotto v. Clement, 94 Cal. 105; 29 Pac. 414); and, considered as a remedy, it is at least commensurate with the action of detinue at common law. McLaughlin v. Piatti, 27 Cal. 451. The right to the immediate and exclusive possession of specific property is the gist of the action, and the plea of another action pending, for the price of the same property, is not a bar (McCormick v. Gross, 135 Cal. 302; 67 Pac. 766; Parke & Lacy Co. v. White River Lumber Co., 101 Cal. 37; 35 Pac. 442; Holt Mfg. Co. v. Ewing, 109 Cal. 353; 42 Pac. 435); and the plaintiff may or may not, at his election, seek the immediate delivery of the property. Wellman v. English, 38 Cal. 583. The investigation is confined to the property mentioned in the complaint; other property cannot be brought into controversy by the answer (Hall v. Susskind, 109 Cal. 203; 41 Pac. 1012); nor can the defendant, in his answer, allege that the plaintiff has taken from him other property than that mentioned in the complaint, and ask or obtain judgment for its return. Lovensohn v. Ward, 45 Cal. 8. In replevin, the property remains in the custody of the law, and all parties must take notice; the unsuccessful party may deliver the property, and discharge himself from so much of the judgment as is made up by the assessed value, because the suit is about that specific property, and because the title is not affected by the replevin bond. Hunt v. Robinson, 11 Cal. 262. Where the plaintiff's claim is based upon the possession and the right to the possession, by the mutual contract of the parties, and a wrongful taking of the property from him by the defendant, the question of the contract, being one in restraint of trade, will not be considered: such question cannot arise in restoring the parties to the position in which they had, by their contract, placed themselves. California Cured Fruit Ass'n v. Stelling, 141 Cal. 713; 75 Pac. 320. Proceedings in claim and delivery cannot be made the means of determining the right to the possession of or to purchase public lands

Page v. Fowler, 28 Cal. 605. The plaintiff cannot treat the defendant as if in possession of property, and then, on the trial, recover judgment against him on the ground that he was not in possession of the property. Hawkins v. Roberts, 45 Cal. 38. A person having an interest in property may intervene in an action already instituted to recover the same. Joshua Hendy Machine Works v. Dillon, 135 Cal. 9; 66 Pac. 960. An answer praying for the return of property replevied seeks affirmative relief, and prevents a dismissal by the plaintiff. Acock v. Halsey, 90 Cal. 215; 27 Pac. 193.

Claim and delivery, and trover, distinguished. The distinction between proceedings in claim and delivery to recover possession of property or the value thereof in case delivery cannot be had, and actions to recover damages for the wrongful conversion of property, is just as broad as that between the common-law actions of detinue and trover: one lies for the recovery of the property itself, with damages for wrongful detention; the other, for the recovery of damages for the wrongful conversion of it. Richards v. Morey, 133 Cal. 437; 65 Pac. 886; Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192. The action for damages for the conversion of property and that for the recovery of specific property are distinct: the relief sought in claim and delivery cannot be had from the defendant, unless he is then possessed of the property, which fact constitutes an essential element in the plaintiff's cause of action. Riciotto v. Clement, 94 Cal. 105; 29 Pac. 414.

Personalty, what is. By the severance and removal of fixtures, they are converted into personalty, and thereby made subject to replevin. McNally v. Connolly, 70 Cal. 3; 11 Pac. 320.

Property severed from freehold. Wood cut from the plaintiff's land, by one in possession without color of title, may be recovered by proceedings in claim and delivery: the title to the property is not affected by severance from the freehold. Kimball v. Lohmas, 31 Cal. 154. The rule that crops cut from land held in adverse possession cannot be recovered in replevin does not apply to a mere trespasser who casually or temporarily enters for the purpose of severing or removing the property attached to and forming a part of the realty: such trespasser does not hold adversely. Page v. Fowler, 28 Cal. 605. Crops raised upon land, by one holding by adverse possession, cannot be recovered in proceedings in claim and delivery by the true owner of the land. Pennybecker v. McDougal, 46 Cal. 661. A trespasser or mere intruder entering the premises and removing the crops cannot raise the question of title with the owner so as to defeat proceedings in replevin for the crops. Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574. An action by a prior possessor will not lie for hay cut from public land by one in possession thereof, claiming title as against all but the United States, and proceeding and endeavoring to perfect his pre-emption claim thereto. Page v. Fowler, 28 Cal. 605. Crops raised by one in possession of realty as surviving partner, under a null and void agreement with the deceased partner that a patent was to be procured and held for the benefit of the copartnership, cannot be recovered in proceedings in claim and delivery by the heirs of the deceased partner. Groome v. Almstead, 101 Cal. 425; 35 Pac. 1021. A plaintiff, out of possession of real property, cannot sue for timber severed from the freehold, when the defendant is in possession of the premises from which the property was severed, holding them adversely, in good faith, under claim and color of title: the personal action cannot be made the means of litigating and determining the title to real property as between conflicting claimants; but this rule does not exclude the proof of title on the part of the plaintiff in other cases, for it is upon such proof that the right of recovery rests; it is because the plaintiff owns the premises, or has the right to their possession, that he is entitled to the chattel which is severed, and that must be, in the first instance, established. Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574. Where the defendant is in the actual possession of land, in good faith claiming title thereto, the plaintiff, claiming to be the true owner thereof, cannot, by proceedings in claim and delivery, secure the possession of property severed by the defendant from the land: title to land cannot be litigated in such proceedings. Hines v. Good, 128 Cal. 38; 79 Am. St. Rep. 22; 60 Pac. 527. Where the property sued for in claim and delivery was severed from the plaintiff's land, he can show his ownership of the property by proving ownership of the land, unless the defendant has, and had when the property was severed from the freehold, adverse possession of the land, claiming title thereto. Martin v. Thompson, 62 Cal. 618; 45 Am. Rep. 663; Hines v. Good, 128 Cal. 38; 79 Am. St. Rep. 22; 60 Pac. 527.

Title or right to possession of plaintiff. The plaintiff, in claim and delivery, cannot recover, if he is not and never has been the owner or entitled to the possession of the property sought to be recovered (Cardinell v. Bennett, 52 Cal. 476; Fredericks v. Tracy, 98 Cal. 658; 33 Pac. 750; Keech v. Beatty, 127 Cal. 177; 59 Pac. 837): he must be entitled, at the time the action is commenced, to the immediate and exclusive possession of the property (People's Sav. Bank v. Jones, 114 Cal. 422; 46 Pac. 278), through some general or special property therein; but actual prior possession is not essential. Garcia v. Gunn, 119 Cal. 315; 51 Pac. 684. Replevin lies for all goods and chattels unlawfully taken or detained, and may be brought whenever one person claims personal property in the possession of another, whether the claimant ever had possession or not, and whether his property in the goods is absolute or qualified, provided he has the right to the possession. Lazard v. Wheeler, 22 Cal. 139. Mere possession is sufficient, as against a trespasser, to give the right of action. Laughlin v. Thompson, 76 Cal. 287; 18 Pac. 330. An after-acquired title is not sufficient. People's Sav. Bank v. Jones, 114 Cal. 422; 46 Pac. 278. Executors can institute proceedings in replevin, to recover property of the estate, under the general authority conferred upon them by statute. Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574. A receiver cannot maintain the action, to recover property, which has not come into his possession, from a party to whom it has been transferred by the debtor, of whose property he takes charge, or from the sheriff holding it under process. Tibbets v. Cohn, 116 Cal. 365; 48 Pac. 372; Bishop v. McKillican, 124 Cal. 321; 71 Am. St. Rep. 68; 57 Pac. 76. An owner of land, who, under a contract with his tenant, is to receive a portion of the crop, and to retain sufficient of the remainder as security for his unpaid claims against the tenant, may recover in claim and delivery against a mortgagee of the tenant, who removes the crop without paying or tendering the amount due the owner. Tuohy v. Linder, 144 Cal. 790; 78 Pac. 233. Crops raised upon land by one in possession of the realty as a surviving partner, under a null and void agreement with the deceased partner, cannot be recovered, in claim and delivery, by the heirs of the deceased partner. Groome v. Almstead, 101 Cal. 425; 35 Pac. 1021. A crop of fruit, delivered to an agent, under a contract for the possession thereof for the purposes of inspection, packing, and sale, may be recovered by the agent in this form of action, where it was wrongfully retaken by the principal. California Cured Fruit Ass'n v. Stelling, 141 Cal. 713; 75 Pac. 320. Upon the abandonment of a building contract, the owner of materials furnished may recover them, or their value. Steiger etc. Pottery Works v. Sonoma, 9 Cal. App. 698; 100 Pac. 714. Where goods are to be paid for upon their delivery by a common carrier, and they are delivered but are not paid for, the carrier has the right at once to remove them, and if prevented, may sue in claim and delivery. Martland v. Bekins Van etc. Co., 19 Cal. App. 283; 125 Pac. 759. The allegation that the plaintiffs were the joint owners of the property sued for is sustained by proof that the plaintiffs owned the property as partners, part-owners, or as tenants in common, and that their respective interests therein were very unequal. Pelberg v. Gorham, 23 Cal. 349. Claim and delivery lies by a purchaser at an execution sale, against one who acquired the property from the plaintiff by fraud, and who therefore took no title. Sargent v. Sturm, 23 Cal. 359; 83 Am. Dec. 118.

Tenants in common. A tenant in common of personal property may recover against his co-tenant, who takes possession of all the common property and converts it to his own use, in an action in the form of replevin, but in which the complaint contains all the allegations essential in trover. Schwartz v. Skinner, 47 Cal. 3. One tenant in common cannot maintain replevin against his co-tenant for part of the common property. Hewlett v. Owens, 50 Cal. 474.

Copartners. One partner cannot maintain claim and delivery against his copartner for partnership property, where the right of possession is equal. Buckley v. Carlisle, 2 Cal. 420; Niroad v. Farnell, 11 Cal. App. 767; 106 Pac. 252.

Allegations of title or right to possession. The allegation of ownership or right to the possession at the time of the commencement of the action is a necessary and essential averment of the complaint in claim and delivery: the mere allegation that the plaintiff was the owner and entitled to the possession of the goods at a time prior to the commencement of the suit, with no averment of the ultimate fact that he was the owner and entitled to the possession when the action was commenced, is insufficient (Vanalstine v. Whelan, 135 Cal. 232; 67 Pac. 125; Afferbach v. McGovern, 79 Cal. 268; 21 Pac. 837; Fredericks v. Tracy, 98 Cal. 658; 33 Pac. 750; Holly v. Heiskell, 112 Cal. 174; 44 Pac. 466; Truman v. Young, 121 Cal. 490; 53 Pac. 1073; Bane v. Peerman, 125 Cal. 220; 57 Pac. 885); but an allegation, that, on a day named, prior to the commencement of the action, the plaintiff was the owner and in the possession of the property, and that the defendant, on that day, without the plaintiff's consent, and against his will, wrongfully and unlawfully, and by force, came into possession of said property, and, in effect, that it was thus taken from his possession, is sufficient: the obligation to restore, created by the wrongful act, continues until it is affirmatively shown to have been extinguished. Harris v. Smith, 132 Cal. 316; 64 Pac. 409. The allegation of ownership and the right to possession is sufficient: an allegation of the means by which possession was had is mere surplusage. Conner v. Bludworth, 54 Cal. 635. An allegation of the particular facts entitling the plaintiff to the possession of the property, is sufficient, although there is no general allegation that the plaintiff is the owner and entitled to the possession of the property. Visher v. Smith, 91 Cal. 260; 27 Pac. 650. The facts constituting the plaintiff's cause of action are those which show that he is entitled to the possession, and that the defendant wrongfully withholds the property from him. Riciotto v. Clement, 94 Cal. 105; 29 Pac. 414.

Surplusage. The allegation of the place where the property was taken is mere surplusage: the issue formed upon it is immaterial. Lay v. Neville, 25 Cal. 545. An allegation of the means by which the plaintiff obtained possession is surplusage. Conner v. Bludworth, 54 Cal. 635. The averment, "unlawful and wrongful," as applied to the entry upon the premises and the taking of the property, may be stricken out as surplusage (Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574); but the allegation that the defendant is in possession of the property is material and essential. Riciotto v. Clement, 94 Cal. 105; 29 Pac. 414. Where the facts alleged in the complaint are sufficient to show conversion, an additional averment, that the defendant "unlawfully withholds and detains the property," does not invalidate the judgment. Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258; 62 Pac. 463; Dennison v. Chapman, 105 Cal. 447; 39 Pac. 61. The return of the sheriff is proper evidence of the possession of the plaintiff, and, being of record, the court may avail itself of it in determining that fact, or if the fact has not been found, in determining the right of the defendant, as a matter of law, to a judgment for its return. Hollenbach v. Schnabel, 101 Cal. 312; 40 Am. St. Rep. 57; 35 Pac. 872.

Necessity for demand. Demand is not necessary, where the plaintiff sets up title or adverse claim to the property sought to be recovered. California Cured Fruit Ass'n v. Stelling, 141 Cal. 713; 75 Pac. 320. Where possession of the property is originally acquired by a tort, no demand, previous to the institution of the suit for its recovery, is necessary: demand is only required where the original possession is lawful, and the action relies upon unlawful detention. Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483; Sargent v. Sturm, 23 Cal. 359; 83 Am. Dec. 118. Thus, no demand is necessary before an action to recover fixtures wrongfully severed and removed (McNally v. Connolly, 70 Cal. 3; 11 Pac. 320); or to recover goods wrongfully levied upon by a sheriff (Ledley v. Hays, 1 Cal. 160; Moore v. Murdock, 26 Cal. 514; Boulware v. Craddock, 30 Cal. 190; Wellman v. English, 38 Cal. 583); or to recover money seized by a sheriff as the property of another. Sharon v. Nunan, 63 Cal. 234.

Pleading demand. Demand and refusal to deliver possession must be averred and proved, where the property came lawfully into the hands of the defendant. Sargent v. Sturm, 23 Cal. 359; 83 Am. Dec. 118; Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 507; Bacon v. Robson, 53 Cal. 399. A general allegation of demand is sufficient, in an action against an officer for wrongfully taking property under process; and if the form of the demand does not comply with § 689, post, the defendant may traverse the allegations in his answer, and object to the proof when offered at the trial: the provisions of that section being intended for the benefit of the officer, a failure to comply therewith is a matter of defense to be pleaded by him. Brenot v. Robinson, 108 Cal. 143; 41 Pac. 37.

Proof of demand. Proof of demand is excused by proof of any circumstance which would satisfy a jury that the demand would have been unavailing; as, a refusal by the defendant to listen to one, or a statement, in advance, that he will not deliver; and where the property has come rightfully into the hands of the defendant, a demand for it, and a refusal to deliver, are evidence of conversion. Wood v. McDonald, 66 Cal. 546; 6 Pac. 452. Demand and refusal to deliver possession must be averred and proved, where the property came lawfully into the hands of the defendant. Sargent v. Sturm, 23 Cal. 359; 83 Am. Dec. 118; Bacon v. Robson, 53 Cal. 399. Want of demand need not be specially pleaded by the defendant: the onus is on the plaintiff to show affirmatively the proper demand, where demand is necessary. Killey v. Scannell, 12 Cal. 73 Proof of a demand is unnecessary, where the defendant avers, in his answer, that had one been made, he would have refused to deliver the possession. Wood v. McDonald, 66 Cal. 546; 6 Pac. 452. An instruction that the plaintiff cannot recover without proving a demand on the defendant, is erroneous, where the demand is admitted by the answer. Jones v. Spears, 47 Cal. 20.

Possession of defendant. The plaintiff cannot, for the purpose of enabling him to sue in replevin, aver that the defendant is in possession of the property, and, on the trial, recover judgment against him on the ground that he was not in possession (Hawkins v. Roberts, 45 Cal. 38); nor can the plaintiff recover, where the defendant did not have possession at the time of the commencement of the action. Keech v. Beatty, 127 Cal. 177; 59 Pac. 837. An action to recover possession of personal property will not lie, where, at the time the action is commenced, the defendant has not the possession, nor the power to deliver it in satisfaction of a judgment for its possession. Richards v. Morey, 133 Cal. 437; 65 Pac. 886. The assignee of an insolvent cannot maintain claim and delivery against his assignor for property which the latter never owned, nor had possession of, nor refused to deliver. Martin v. Porter, 84 Cal. 476; 24 Pac. 109. A bailee is liable in an action of detinue, or claim and delivery, even though he parted with possession of the property before demand and suit for its recovery. Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258; 62 Pac. 463. Claim and delivery does not lie against one in the actual possession of property, having a lien thereon dependent upon possession: the owner must redeem from the lien, or bring an action for that purpose. Sutton v. Stephan, 101 Cal. 545; 36 Pac. 706. Where the defendant has possession of the property at the time the action is commenced, he cannot, by subsequent transfer or destruction of the property, wholly deprive the plaintiff of relief; an alternative judgment for the value of the property will be granted. Richards v. Morey, 133 Cal. 437; 65 Pac. 886. Where the defendant had the right to the possession at the time suit was commenced, but it passed to the plaintiff before the trial, the court should not decree the return of the property to the defendant, merely that it might be again replevied by the plaintiff. Bolander v. Gentry, 36 Cal. 105; 95 Am. Dec. 162; Pico v. Pico, 56 Cal. 453; Flinn v. Ferry, 127 Cal. 648; 60 Pac. 434. The possession of property by the defendant, a warehouseman, is sufficiently shown by setting out the warehouse-receipt issued by him, with the allegation of demand and refusal to deliver the property. Visher v. Smith, 91 Cal. 260; 27 Pac. 650. In replevin, where the plaintiff takes the property at the commencement of the action, and the defendant prays a return of it, and is entitled to the possession at the commencement of the action, but his right has ceased, and vested in the plaintiff before trial, the judgment should leave the property in the plaintiff's possession, but award costs to the defendant. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312. In claim and delivery against an alleged receiver, it may be shown that he wrongfully seized possession under a void order of appointment. Bibby v. Dieter, 15 Cal. App. 45; 113 Pac. 874. Replevin lies against a sheriff for money taken by him from a safe, where the same was segregated from other moneys in the safe at the time of the levy, and then claimed by the plaintiff. Griffith v. Bogardus, 14 Cal. 410. Where the plaintiff in replevin established title by possession, but introduced no bill of sale, nor any evidence tending to establish a sale, it is competent for the defendant, on cross-examination of a witness for the plaintiff, to ask in whose possession the chattels were at a certain period anterior to the possession proved by the plaintiff, in order to draw from him, if possible, the fact that plaintiff's possession was a fraud to hide a debtor's property. Thornburgh v. Hand, 7 Cal. 554.

Disposal of property before suit. The amendment of the complaint, so as to convert an action of replevin into one of conversion, may be allowed, where possession cannot be recovered because the property had been disposed of before the action was commenced, and the plaintiff did not know of such disposal. Henderson v. Hart, 122 Cal. 332; 54 Pac. 1110; Riciotto v. Clement, 94 Cal. 105; 29 Pac. 414.

Rights of vendor under conditional sale. The vendee in a conditional sale can confer no greater rights upon a purchaser or a mortgagee than he himself has; and therefore replevin lies by the vendor, in such sale, against the purchaser or the mortgagee of the vendee. Lundy Furniture Co. v. White, 128 Cal. 170; 79 Am. St. Rep. 41; 60 Pac. 759. An action lies against the second vendee of a conditional sale for a breach of the condition, where possession is given by the vendor to the vendee with the express stipulation that title shall not pass until the conditions are performed. Putnam v. Lamphier, 36 Cal. 151. A vendor may maintain replevin against a sheriff holding property under attachment against the vendee, where the vendor retains title under a conditional sale, and at the time of the attachment was entitled to immediate possession. Kellogg v. Burr, 126 Cal. 38; 58 Pac. 306; Rodgers v. Bachman, 109 Cal. 552; 42 Pac. 448.

Answer. An answer denying that the defendant ever owned or had possession of the property, or even withheld or refused to deliver it, raises material issues, sufficient to defeat a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Martin v. Porter, 84 Cal. 476; 24 Pac. 109. The plaintiff is entitled to a verdict upon the complaint, under the instructions of the court, where the answer makes no issue but by confession and avoidance and the defendant offers no evidence in support of such defense. Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123. Where the complaint avers that the plaintiff was the owner and entitled to the possession of the property at the time of the taking by the defendant, an answer which denies this averment, and avers that at that time the property was owned and possessed by a third person, does not set up new matter; this averment is only a form of denial of the plaintiff's ownership and rights of possession. Woodworth v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 164. A denial that the plaintiff is the owner of the property described in the complaint, and an allegation that the defendant has not sufficient information or belief to enable him to answer the allegation of the plaintiff that he is entitled to the possession of the property, and on that ground he denies the same, are sufficient to put in issue the allegation of the plaintiff. Cunningham v. Skinner, 65 Cal. 385; 4 Pac. 373. An averment in a cross-complaint by a chattel mortgagee, sued in replevin to recover a crop, claiming the ownership thereof, and in another count alleging his rights as a chattel mortgagee, is not a waiver of the mortgage claim: the defendant has the right to plead inconsistent defenses. Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529; 76 Pac. 243. Conjunctive denials of the allegations of a complaint in claim and delivery are insufficient to raise an issue. Richardson v. Smith, 29 Cal. 529. A denial that on the day specified in the complaint the plaintiff was the owner and lawfully in possession of the property is conjunctive, evasive, and raises an immaterial issue as to time, but no issue as to possession, except in conjunction with ownership. Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123. A denial of ownership of property by the plaintiff joins a material issue. Carman v. Ross, 64 Cal. 249; 29 Pac. 510. A denial that the defendant, at any time, unlawfully took and carried away the property, is a mere denial that those acts were wrongfully done (Lay v. Neville, 25 Cal. 545); as is also a denial that the defendant wrongfully and unlawfully seized, took, or carried away the property. Woodworth v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 164. An allegation of ownership and right to possession of chattels is put in issue by an admission in the answer that the defendant is in possession, coupled with an allegation that he is the owner. Miller v. Brigham, 50 Cal. 615.

Justification of officer under writ. Where an officer is sued for seizing or selling property of one under an execution against another, he must, in order to show that the transfer of property by the execution debtor was fraudulent and void as to the execution creditor, prove not only the issuance of the execution, the levy, and that he was a creditor, but also the rendition of a judgment upon his debt, and that the execution was issued upon such judgment. Kane v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 464. An officer who seizes property in the hands of a debtor may justify under the execution or process; but where he takes property from a third person, who claims to be the owner thereof, if on execution, he must show the judgment and execution; if on attachment, the writ of attachment, and the proceedings on which it is based. Thornburgh v. Hand, 7 Cal. 554. Irregularities in the proceedings leading up to the writ of execution, not appearing on the face of the writ, do not prevent the sheriff from justifying under an execution valid on its face. Norcross v. Nunan, 61 Cal. 640. The plea of justification by the sheriff, in claim and delivery, should clearly show that when he took the property from the plaintiff he was armed with an affidavit containing, substantially, the matters required by law to be stated in it, and with a sufficient order and undertaking. Laughlin v. Thompson, 76 Cal. 287; 18 Pac. 330. Where there is no affidavit on which the plaintiff or his attorney might have indorsed the direction to the constable to take the property in question, and the property was not turned over to the plaintiff by the constable, there is not a sufficient showing to connect the plaintiff in a replevin suit, or the defendant in a subsequent suit, with the taking of the property by the officer. Martin v. Barry, 145 Cal. 540; 79 Pac. 66. It is error to strike from a complaint, and from the answer thereto, all reference to a part of the property sued for, where the defendant alleges that the plaintiff has, by ancillary process, taken from him the possession of the property: the court has no power to strike out allegations which will deprive a party of an opportunity to try the question of his right to a portion of the property involved in the action. Howell v. Foster, 65 Cal. 169; 3 Pac. 647. Contempt of court may be committed by using the process of the court, in claim and delivery, in bad faith, to obtain possession of the property of the defendant in an improper manner, without trial, and to fraudulently procure the same after it has been replevied by the sheriff, and while in his custody. Ex parte Acock, 84 Cal. 50; 23 Pac. 1029. A right of action for the wrongful taking and conversion of personal property is assignable, and the assignee can recover upon the same in his own name. Lazard v. Wheeler, 22 Cal. 139.

Waiver of jury. A jury trial is waived, in claim and delivery, by the failure of the defendant to appear at the trial (Waltham v. Carson, 10 Cal. 178); but a jury trial of issues of law presented by the complaint in replevin is not waived, where defendant sets up an equitable defense. Swasey v. Adair, 88 Cal. 179; 25 Pac. 1119.

Judgment, and effect of. Judgment in an action of replevin is, as between the parties, conclusive evidence of the title to the property, in a subsequent action for its conversion; damages for the detention of property may be recovered in the subsequent action, where none were recovered in the replevin suit, and the finding of value is necessary to enable the plaintiff to recover against the sureties on the forthcoming bond, but failure so to find does not affect his right to recover from the defendant for conversion of the property; judgment in replevin, except when it has been satisfied, does not bar an action in trover; and, while the cause of action is in both cases the same, the object is essentially different: in the one case, the plaintiff seeks to recover a specific chattel; in the other, the value of such chattel, when, owing to the acts of the defendant, it was not in his power to procure a return. Nickerson v. California Stage Co., 10 Cal. 520. Where the property in claim and delivery has been destroyed, so that a judgment for its delivery would be necessarily unavailing, the failure to render judgment for its possession would be merely a technical error or an omission, for which the judgment would not be reversed. Brown v. Johnson, 45 Cal. 76; Thomas v. Witherby, 61 Cal. 92; 44 Am. Rep. 542. Where a mortgagor replevies the property from the mortgagee, and the latter was entitled to the possession thereof, but, pending the suit, the mortgagor tenders the full amount of the mortgaged debt, the judgment should be for the defendant for costs, but not for the return of the property. Wildman v. Radenaker, 20 Cal. 615. Judgment against a plaintiff, and in favor of some of the defendants, in another action, to recover the same property, is res adjudicata, and is a good plea in bar, whether erroneous or not. Keech v. Beatty, 127 Cal. 177; 59 Pac. 837. Matters alleged in a special defense, following denials of the allegations of the complaint, cannot be availed of by the plaintiff, on a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Nudd v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 39.

Damages, action for, and measure thereof. When the recovery of the property is the primary object of the suit, and damages will not compensate the plaintiff, the injured party should frame his bill in equity, specifying the reasons for seeking the recovery of the property itself, and the decree can then be so framed as to compel a specific delivery. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568. The measure of damages, where delivery cannot be had, and only detention of property is complained of, is its value at the place of detention when the action was commenced. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641. The dismissal of a suit, after obtaining possession of the goods, is not a bar to the claim of the person from whose custody they were replevied; while plaintiff's acts amount to a breach of condition of his undertaking, and give the defendant a cause of action thereon for such damages as he sustained, yet that remedy is not exclusive, and he is not compelled to sue on the undertaking. Tapscott v. Lyon, 103 Cal. 297; 37 Pac. 225.

Replevin for undivided interest in personal property. See note 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 267.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. The common-law action of replevin is abolished, and the provisions of this chapter take its place. Roberts v. Randel, 3 Sandf. 707; 5 How. Pr. 327; Nichols v. Michael, 23 N. Y. 269; 80 Am. Dec. 259; Rockwell v. Saunders, 19 Barb. 481. The action for the "claim and delivery of personal property," under our code, is commensurate with the action of detinue at common law. McLaughlin v. Piatti, 27 Cal. 464. In that action, the manner of laying the possession of the property has always been held to be inducement. It is usual to aver a bailment or finding. Otero v. Bullard, 3 Cal. 188. In this action, under the code the plaintiff may or may not, at his election, seek its immediate delivery. Wellman v. English, 38 Cal. 583.

2. Right of action may be assigned. Robinson v. Weeks, 6 How. Pr. 161; McKee v. Judd, 12 N. Y. 622; 64 Am. Dec. 515; People v. Tioga Common Pleas, 19 Wend. 75.

3. Bill in equity. If the recovery of the property is the primary object, and damages would not compensate, a bill will lie. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 570.

4. Fixtures. Fixtures wrongfully served from the premises become personal property, and may be recovered in this action. Sands v. Pfeiffer, 10 Cal. 258.

5. When the action can be maintained. The plaintiff must either have the possession, or the immediate right to the possession, of the property. Middlesworth v. Sedgwick, 10 Cal. 392. A safe in the possession of McC., belonging to W. F. & Co., for whom, as also for plaintiff, he was agent, contained six thousand dollars in coin. Of this sum, four hundred dollars belonged to W. F. & Co., the balance to plaintiff. The sheriff, under a writ against McC., seized eighteen hundred dollars of the money in the safe as his property, and put it in a bag. Plaintiff then claimed the money as his, McC. being present and not objecting. It was held that this amounted to a segregation of eighteen hundred dollars from the mass of coin in the safe, so as to sustain the action by plaintiff. Griffith v. Bogardus, 14 Cal. 410. To render the defendant liable, he must have converted the property to his own use, and if not, then any other act, to amount to a conversion, must be done with a wrongful intent, either express or implied. Rogers v. Huie, 2 Cal. 571; 56 Am. Dec. 363. This action lies for all goods and chattels unlawfully taken or detained, and may be brought whenever one person claims personal property in the possession of another, and this whether the claimant had ever had possession or not, and whether his property in the goods be absolute or qualified, provided he has the right to the possession. Lazard v. Wheeler, 22 Cal. 139. Where the defendant is in the adverse possession of land as a trespasser, without color of title, he is not in the position, before the statute of limitations has run, to contest the title of the true owner in such a sense as to defeat a personal action brought by such owner to recover wood cut by him on the land. Kimball v. Lohmas, 31 Cal. 156; Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 579. An agreement between two or more persons to convert the property of another, not followed by acts to that end, does not give a right of action against such persons. Herron v. Hughes, 25 Cal. 555. A bill of sale of a given number of cattle out of a herd running at large, which gives the purchaser the right to select and take at once the number sold, is sufficient to entitle the purchaser, after demand and refusal, to maintain an action for the recovery of the entire herd, out of which he may make his selection, and return the residue to the vendor. McLaughlin v. Piatti, 27 Cal. 464. If a chose in action has been pledged to secure a debt, and payment has been tendered and demand made for its return, this action will lie. Luckey v. Gannon, 37 How. Pr. 134; 6 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 209.

6. When the action cannot be maintained. One partner cannot sustain an action against another partner for the delivery of personal property belonging to the partnership. Buckley v. Carlisle, 2 Cal. 420. If an officer, by his misconduct, induces a sale of property for less than it would otherwise have brought, the remedy must be an action for damages resulting from his acts, and not an action to recover the property. Foster v. Coronel, 1 Cal. Unrep. 402. Replevin for hay cut on public lands cannot be maintained by a prior possessor against one who was in adverse possession, claiming a pre-emption right entered when he cut the hay. Page v. Fowler, 28 Cal. 605. In an action brought against the sheriff, who seized the property by virtue of an attachment, it is a good defense to show that the defendant in the attachment, when insolvent, sold the property to the plaintiff to defraud his creditors; that the plaintiff had knowledge of these facts; and that the defendant has since been declared a bankrupt, and the sheriff has, on the demand of the assignee in bankruptcy, delivered him the goods. Bolander v. Gentry, 36 Cal. 105; 95 Am. Dec. 162. If, during the pendency and before the trial of the action, the defendant has been required to and has delivered the property to another person, entitled to its possession as against both parties to the action, that fact may be set up to defeat the action. Bolander v. Gentry, 36 Cal. 105; 95 Am. Dec. 162. If the property was seized by virtue of a warrant for a tax under an act of Congress, it cannot be replevied. O'Reilly v. Good, 42 Barb. 521; 18 Abb. Pr. 106.

7. Demand. Where personal property is wrongfully detained, a demand is necessary before the action is commenced for its recovery. Sluyter v. Williams, 37 How. Pr. 109; 1 Sweeny, 215. A demand is not necessary before suing a sheriff for property tortiously taken by him. Wellman v. English, 38 Cal. 583; Moore v. Murdock, 26 Cal. 524; Boulware v. Craddock, 30 Cal. 190. The general rule is, that when the possession of property is originally acquired by a tort, no demand previous to the institution of suit for its recovery is necessary. It is only when the original possession is lawful, and the action rests upon the unlawful detention, that a demand is required. Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483; Ledley v. Hays, 1 Cal. 160; Sargent v. Sturm, 23 Cal. 359; 83 Am. Dec. 118. Where the taking is by an officer upon proper legal authority, a demand is necessary, in order to make him liable in damages. Daumiel v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 43; Taylor v. Seymour, 6 Cal. 512; Killey v. Scannell, 12 Cal. 73; but see Wellman v. English, 38 Cal. 583. Where certain personal property owned by plaintiff, but which had been used by A. & G., under a contract of hire, was taken by the officer from the possession of the plaintiff, by virtue of an attachment against G. subsequent to which plaintiff, having made a demand for the property upon the sheriff, but not upon A. & G., commenced this action against the former for its recovery. Held, that the demand, if necessary at all, was properly made upon the defendant in whose possession the property was at the time. Woodworth v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 164.

8. Evidence. Where the vendee replevied the goods from the attaching creditor, and only established title by proving a possession of several months, it was competent for the defendant, on cross-examination of plaintiff's witness, to ask in whose possession the chattels were at a period anterior to the possession proved by plaintiff, to draw from the witness, if possible, the fact that plaintiff's possession was a fraud to hide the debtor's property. Thornburgh v. Hand, 7 Cal. 554. The declarations of a vendor of personal property, after the sale, are not admissible to impeach the title of the vendee. Visher v. Webster, 8 Cal. 109. In an action to recover specific personal property, plaintiff relied exclusively upon his possession at the time of the taking by defendant; and defendant first established a prima facie title sufficient to destroy the presumption of title in plaintiff arising from his possession, and then went further and showed, plaintiff excepting, that plaintiff obtained the property by proceedings under a void judgment. Held, that the introduction of this further evidence by defendant showing the invalidity of the judgment, was of no advantage to him, as he had already rebutted plaintiff's case, based solely on possession, and that it did not prejudice plaintiff, and is no ground of error. Lafontaine v. Green, 17 Cal. 294. When property is taken from the defendant by the officer, it is sufficient to introduce in evidence the writ under which the levy is made; but when the property is taken from the possession of a stranger to the writ, it is necessary to show a judgment or prove the debt. Sexey v. Adkinson, 34 Cal. 346; 91 Am. Dec. 698. Evidence may be admitted of the highest market value of the property between the time of conversion and trial. Tully v. Harloe, 35 Cal. 302; 95 Am. Dec. 102; but see Page v. Fowler, 39 Cal. 412; 2 Am. Rep. 462; cited in the note under subd. 9.

9. Damages. In actions for the recovery of personal property of fluctuating value, the measure of damages is the highest market value within a reasonable time after the property was taken, with interest from the time the value was estimated. Page v. Fowler, 39 Cal. 412; 2 Am. Rep. 462; see also Dorsey v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 553; Phelps v. Owens, 11 Cal. 22; Pelberg v. Gorham, 23 Cal. 349.

10. Judgment. In this action the judgment may be for more than the value as alleged in the complaint, if it be within the ad damnum of the writ. The value of the property is only one predicate of the recovery. Coghill v. Boring, 15 Cal. 215. Where the defendant has required the return of the property, and given an undertaking for such purpose, a judgment for plaintiff, in order to hold the sureties on the undertaking, must be in the alternative, as required by §§ 104, 177, and 210 of the Practice Act (§§ 514, 627, and 682 of this code). Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 569; Dorsey v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 555. Where a partner, in good faith, sells partnership property to satisfy his individual indebtedness, and the purchaser brings replevin against a creditor of the firm who has attached the property, it was held that the court properly rendered a judgment in favor of the purchaser, it being presumed in support of the judgment that the court below found it as fact that the other partner consented to and authorized the sale. Stokes v. Stevens, 40 Cal. 391. The omission to specify in the judgment the property of which restitution is to be made is error. Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 507. A defendant who recovers judgment, the jury failing to find the value of the property to exceed two hundred dollars, is entitled to his costs, where the plaintiff's complaint states its value at a sum exceeding that amount. Edgar v. Gray, 5 Cal. 267. If the action is improperly commenced, the party bringing it, having obtained the benefit, cannot avoid the undertaking he has given by pleading his own misfeasance. Turner v. Billagram, 2 Cal. 522. If the plaintiff take the property at the commencement of the action, and the defendant prays the return of it, and the defendant was entitled to the property at the commencement of the action, but his right has ceased and vested in the plaintiff before trial, the judgment ought to leave the property in plaintiff's possession, but award costs to defendant. O'Conner v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312. In an action by the pledgee against a stranger for the conversion of goods, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the full value of the goods; but if the goods have been converted by the owner, or by any one acting in privity with him, the pledgee can recover only the value of his special interest in the pledge. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770.

11. New matter in answer. Where the action is replevin, it is not competent for the defendant, in his answer, to introduce a new and distinct subject-matter of litigation, claiming of the plaintiff the return of other property. Lovensohn v. Ward, 45 Cal. 8.

§ 510. Affidavit and its requisites. Where a delivery is claimed, an affidavit must be made by the plaintiff, or by some one in his behalf, showing:

1. That the plaintiff is the owner of the property claimed (particularly describing it), or is entitled to the possession thereof;

2. That the property is wrongfully detained by the defendant;

3. The alleged cause of the detention thereof, according to his best knowledge, information, and belief;

4. That it has not been taken for a tax, assessment, or fine, pursuant to a statute; or seized, under an execution or an attachment against the property of the plaintiff; or, if so seized, that it is by statute exempt from such seizure;

5. The actual value of the property.

Subd. 5. Value, incorrectly stated in affidavit. Ante, § 473.

Legislation § 510. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 100 (New York Code, § 207), which had, (1) in the introductory paragraph, the word "shall" instead of "must," (2) in subd. 1, the word "lawfully" before "entitled," (3) in subd. 4, (a) the words "the same" instead of "it," before "has not been," and (b) the word "and" after "seizure."

Necessity of affidavit. A constable is not justified in taking property, in claim and delivery, from the possession of the defendant, upon a direction so to do by the plaintiff, unless he receives from him an affidavit, order, and undertaking substantially complying with this section and §§ 511, 512, post. Laughlin v. Thompson, 76 Cal. 287; 18 Pac. 330.

Description of property. Property sought to be recovered must be described with a reasonable degree of certainty, to enable the defendant to make return thereof. Hawley v. Kocher, 123 Cal. 77; 55 Pac. 696.

Sufficiency of description of property in complaint for replevin. See note 48 Am. Dec. 698.

Necessity and sufficiency of allegation as to ownership or right to possession in complaint in replevin. See note Ann. Cas. 1912A, 333.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Ownership. If the plaintiff claims as owner, his affidavit need not set up facts proving such ownership; his affidavit "that he is the owner" is, in this respect, sufficient. Burns v. Robbins, 1 Code Rep. 62; Vandenburg v. Van Valkenburg, 8 Barb. 217. But if the property is claimed as exempt from execution, the facts constituting the exemption must appear in the affidavit. Spalding v. Spalding, 3 How. Pr. 297; 1 Code Rep. 64; see also Roberts v. Willard, 1 Code Rep. 100. If the property is claimed by virtue of a special property therein, the affidavits must show the facts in respect to such special property, to the end that the court may see upon what facts a special property and right of possession is made out. Depew v. Leal, 2 Abb. Pr. 131.

2. Additional affidavits. The court may allow additional affidavits to be read, or the plaintiff may file a supplemental affidavit to supply a defect. Depew v. Leal, 2 Abb. Pr. 131.

3. Amendments. Where the affidavit is objected to for insufficiency, the court will permit an amendment of course. Spalding v. Spalding, 3 How. Pr. 297; 1 Code Rep. 64.

4. Opposing affidavits. In O'Reilly v. Good, 18 Abb. Pr. 106, 42 Barb. 521, it was held that the affidavit of the defendant and of a collector, that the goods were taken for a tax, was sufficient to set aside proceedings under this section. See also Stockwell v. Vietch, 15 Abb. Pr. 412.

5. Waiver. A general appearance in the action waives all irregularities in the affidavit. Wisconsin M. & F. Ins. Co. Bank v. Hobbs, 22 How. Pr. 494; Hyde v. Patterson, 1 Abb. Pr. 248.

§ 511. Requisition to sheriff to take and deliver the property. The plaintiff or his attorney may, thereupon, by an indorsement in writing upon the affidavit, require the sheriff of the county where the property claimed may be, to take the same from the defendant.

Legislation § 511. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 101 (New York Code, § 208), as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 60, Kerr ed. p. 86.

Sheriff's authority. A mere direction to a sheriff or constable, by the plaintiff in claim and delivery, to take property from the defendant, confers no color of authority upon him, and the defendant may sue the officer to recover its possession. Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574; Laughlin v. Thompson, 76 Cal. 287; 18 Pac. 330.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Rhodes v. Patterson, 3 Cal. 469; Smith v. Orser, 43 Barb. 187; Barry v. Fisher, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 369.

§ 512. Security on the part of the plaintiff, and proceedings in serving the order. Upon a receipt of the affidavit and notice, with a written undertaking, executed by two or more sufficient sureties, approved by the sheriff, to the effect that they are bound to the defendant in double the value of the property as stated in the affidavit for the prosecution of the action, for the return of the property to the defendants, if return thereof be adjudged, and for the payment to him of such sum as may from any cause be recovered against the plaintiff, the sheriff must forthwith take the property described in the affidavit, if it be in the possession of the defendant or his agent, and retain it in his custody. He must, without delay, serve on the defendant a copy of the affidavit, notice, and undertaking, by delivering the same to him personally, if he can be found, or to his agent from whose possession the property is taken; or, if neither can be found, by leaving them at the usual place of abode of either, with some person of suitable age and discretion, or, if neither have any known place of abode, by putting them in the nearest post-office, directed to the defendant.

Sheriff's duties. Pol. Code, §§ 4185, 4188; and, generally, §§ 4175–4193.
Qualifications of sureties. Ante, § 494; post, § 1057.
Return of property to defendant.
1. Verdict for. Post, § 627.
2. Judgment for. Post, § 667.
Dismissal of action. Clerk to hand undertaking to defendant. Post, § 581, subd. 1.
Officer executing process must produce same on request. Pol. Code, § 4169.
Value stated in affidavit is not conclusive evidence against sheriff or sureties. Ante, § 473.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 135; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Effect of bond. The effect of a replevin bond is, simply, to give the party the possession of the property, pending the litigation; the title is not changed; no sale made by the party in possession, and who afterwards turns out to have no right to the property, can convey any title to the purchaser; and if the title would not vest in the unsuccessful party until the judgment in the replevin suit, of course it would not vest in him upon delivery of the replevin bond; and although the title vests upon the rendition of the judgment, yet the property is still subject to be taken by the successful party, until he makes his election to sue upon the undertaking in replevin; he may sue without issuing execution; but, at any time before suit is brought, the successful party may take the property if it can be found, and so, too, the unsuccessful party may return it; and that the effect of the replevin bond, under our statute, is, not to divest either the title or the lien of the other party, is clear: the contest is as to specific personal property; the recovery of the thing itself, and not damages in lieu thereof, is the primary object of the suit; the value is recovered only as an alternative, when delivery of the specific property cannot be had, and if the title could be divested by delivery of the replevin bond, the primary object of the suit could be defeated; the unsuccessful party could always make his election to keep the property or pay its value; but this advantage was never intended to be given by the statute, to the party confessedly in the wrong. Hunt v. Robinson, 11 Cal. 262; Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568.

Liability of sureties. The complaint in an action on a replevin bond must contain an averment that the value was found by the jury or the court: an allegation that neither the property had been delivered, nor the mere value as alleged in the original complaint had been paid, is not sufficient; if judgment is taken in the alternative, and the defendant fails to discharge the judgment, the sureties can only be required to pay the value of the property, and the amount of damages and costs awarded; the plaintiff, in a suit against the sureties, cannot recover damages for detention of his property, his damages being the legal interest upon the amount of judgment; and where a suit against the sureties is not for the recovery of the property, they, not being in possession, cannot be held responsible for its use or usable value; and the plaintiff, having already had judgment for the delivery of the property, upon which he can issue his execution, and under which the sheriff can take the property itself, has no cause to sue the defendants to regain possession of the property, but only for the amount of the judgment. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568. The surety, in an action upon a replevin bond, is liable to pay a judgment, in favor of the defendant against the plaintiff, for the value of the property. Donovan v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 10 Cal. App. 723; 103 Pac. 365.

Alternative judgment. The alternative judgment must be entered in the original action, in order to determine the amount to be recovered from the sureties. Claudius v. Aguirre, 89 Cal. 501; 26 Pac. 1077. The requirement of the alternative judgment for value applies only to cases which have been submitted to and passed upon by the jury, and not to a judgment of nonsuit, or for the defendant upon the sustaining of the demurrer; therefore the defendant may, in such case, recover the value of the property from the sureties on the replevin bond, where a delivery cannot be had, without a finding of value in the original action. Ginaca v. Atwood, 8 Cal. 446. The sureties are only bound for lawful judgment against their principal, and such judgment must be in the alternative, that the successful party may have delivery of the property, or if that cannot be had, that he recover the value as found by the jury and stated in the judgment, with his damages and costs. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568; Ginaca v. Atwood, 8 Cal. 446; Clary v. Rolland, 24 Cal. 147. The judgment in the original case fixes the value of the property, and the amount of damages and costs: these constitute the limit and extent of the liability of the sureties; and where the plaintiff can be compensated in damages, he must take his judgment in the alternative, and if he can find the property, he can take it; if not, he must take its value, and he can only ask the sureties to make good the judgment: they cannot be held to do more than their principal is required to do. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568. Where property taken on the replevin bond from the defendant cannot be returned, a judgment for its value, without the alternative, is proper. Donovan v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 10 Cal. App. 723; 103 Pac. 365. The sureties on the replevin bond are not released from liability, merely because the judgment entered was not in the alternative, and did not direct a return of the property taken on the bond. Donovan v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 10 Cal. App. 723; 103 Pac. 365.

Complaint. Material parts of the undertaking should be alleged in the complaint, either literally or according to their legal effect; and a description of the undertaking, merely that it corresponds with the provisions of a certain statute, is insufficient; but, as the defect is rather of form than of substance, the objection must be taken by demurrer. Mills v. Gleason, 21 Cal. 274. The complaint on an undertaking, where there has been a trial and judgment, must show the value found by the jury, and that an alternative judgment was entered as provided by § 177 of the Practice Act (§ 627, post). Clary v. Rolland, 24 Cal. 147.

Costs. In claim and delivery, the charge of a surety company for a replevin bond is not a proper item in a cost-bill. Williams v. Atchison etc. Ry. Co., 156 Cal. 140; 134 Am. St. Rep. 117; 19 Ann. Cas. 1260; 103 Pac. 885.

Right to recover value of property in action on replevin bond for breach of condition to prosecute action. See note 4 Ann. Cas. 1135.

Recitals in replevin bond as evidence of value in action on bond. See note 18 Ann. Cas. 113.

Plaintiff's undertaking in replevin as inuring to benefit of third person adjudged to be entitled to property. See note Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1106.

Penalty as limit of recovery on replevin bond. See note 55 L. R. A. 390.

Defects or irregularities affecting bond as a defense to action on replevin bond which has served its purpose. See note 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 747.

Effect upon surety on replevin bond of judgment against principal. See note 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 744.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Substantial compliance. A substantial compliance with the provisions of this section is sufficient. Wingate v. Brooks, 3 Cal. 112. The undertaking is not vitiated by a misrecital, in the undertaking, of the date on which the affidavit was filed. Hyde v. Patterson, 1 Abb. Pr. 248.

2. Generally. The fact that defendant brought his action before an incompetent tribunal is no defense to an action upon the undertaking, and the plea that the title of property so replevied is in him, is bad. McDermott v. Isbell, 4 Cal. 113. Where the defendant, in a replevin suit, failed to claim the return of the property in his answer, and on the trial the jury found a verdict for the defendant, on which the court rendered judgment against plaintiffs for costs, which was paid, it was held that the payment of the judgment was a complete discharge of plaintiffs' sureties on the undertaking. Chambers v. Waters, 7 Cal. 390. A recovery cannot be had on a bond purporting to be a joint bond of the principal and sureties, but signed by the latter only; but it is otherwise as to undertakings under our system. They are original and independent contracts on the part of the sureties, and the signature of the principal is not required. Sacramento v. Dunlap, 14 Cal. 421. Where the plaintiff gives the statutory undertaking, and takes possession of the property, and is afterwards nonsuited, and judgment entered against him for the return of the property and for costs, his sureties are liable for damages sustained by defendant by reason of a failure to return the goods, but not for damages for the original taking and detention, the value of the goods not having been found by the jury. Ginaca v. Atwood, 8 Cal. 446. T. commenced an action against J., by attachment; the writ was levied upon certain personal property by the plaintiff, H., as sheriff. M. J., wife of J., claimed the property as sole trader, and brought her action of replevin for the property, and obtained possession of the same by the delivery of an undertaking. The undertaking was executed by defendants R. and S. The replevin suit was decided in February 5, 1855, in favor of H. T. obtained judgment in the attachment suit against J., November 30, 1854. On the 18th of February, 1855, execution in favor of other creditors of J. coming into the hands of H., as sheriff, he levied them on the same property, and subsequently sold the property and paid the proceeds into court. H. then brought this suit against the sureties in the replevin bond. Held, that the lien of T.'s attachment continued after the replevy of the goods by M. J.; that the possession obtained by the plaintiff in replevin is only temporary, and does not divest the title or discharge the lien. Hunt v. Robinson, 11 Cal. 262. In an action upon the undertaking, the defendant's liability is limited to the damage sustained by a failure to return the property; therefore, when the same property comes into the hands of H., as sheriff, the condition of the replevin bond to return the property is fulfilled. Id. Where the action is dismissed before trial, the liability of the sureties on the undertaking for a return of the property is not affected by the fact that before the dismissal an answer had been filed in which no return of the property was claimed. Mills v. Gleason, 21 Cal. 274. The dismissal of the action by the plaintiff before trial leaves the parties to settle in an action upon the undertaking those matters, including the right of defendant to a return of the property, which, had the original suit been prosecuted, must have been determined therein in the first instance. The opportunity to obtain a judgment for the return having been taken away by the failure to prosecute, defendant is entitled to recover in an action on the undertaking. Id.

3. New undertaking. If the undertaking is defective, the court will allow a new one to be given nunc pro tunc. Newland v. Willetts, 1 Barb. 20.

§ 513. Exception to sureties and proceedings thereon, or on failure to except. The defendant may, within two days after the service of a copy of the affidavit and undertaking, give notice to the sheriff that he excepts to the sufficiency of the sureties. If he fails to do so, he is deemed to have waived all objections to them. When the defendant excepts, the sureties must justify on notice in like manner as upon bail on arrest; and the sheriff is responsible for the sufficiency of the sureties until the objection to them is either waived or until they justify. If the defendant except to the sureties, he cannot reclaim the property as provided in the next section.

Justification of sureties. See ante, §§ 494, 495; post, § 1057.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Mere formal defects in an undertaking may be cured upon an exception thereto. De Reguie v. Lewis, 3 Rob. 708.

§ 514. Defendant, when entitled to redelivery. At any time before the delivery of the property to the plaintiff, the defendant may, if he do not except to the sureties of the plaintiff, require the return thereof, upon giving to the sheriff a written undertaking, executed by two or more sufficient sureties, to the effect that they are bound in double the value of the property, as stated in the affidavit of the plaintiff, for the delivery thereof to the plaintiff, if such delivery be adjudged, and for the payment to him of such sum as may, for any cause, be recovered against the defendant. If a return of the property be not so required within five days after the taking and service of notice to the defendant, it must be delivered to the plaintiff, except as provided in section five hundred and nineteen.

Sureties, qualifications of. Ante, §§ 494, 495; post, § 1057.

Legislation § 514. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 104 (New York Code, § 211), which had the words "shall be" instead of "must," before "be delivered."

Redelivery. In an action against the sureties on the replevin bond, it is necessary to prove that the property was delivered to the party requiring it, and for whom the bond was given. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568. A defendant in claim and delivery, after the taking of the property from him by the sheriff, and before the delivery to the plaintiff, sued the sheriff in claim and delivery, and had the property taken from him by an elisor appointed by the court, whereupon the sheriff, as defendant, gave a redelivery bond, and upon obtaining the property thereunder, delivered it to the plaintiff in the original suit, in which nonsuit, and judgment for the defendant for costs, were afterwards granted; under this state of facts, the defendant in the original suit not being able to recover the property from the sheriff, as he had not given the bond provided for in this section, which alone would have authorized him to demand the return of the property taken by the officer, commenced an independent action, but, as the taking by the sheriff was not wrongful or unlawful, but in obedience to the process of the court, no cause of action existed against him when the suit was commenced; and even if the judgment of nonsuit could be construed to be a judgment that the defendant was entitled to a return of the property in the original suit, the judgment against the sheriff could not be upheld, as, prior to the rendition of the judgment of nonsuit, he had, in strict accordance with the law and his duty, delivered the property to the plaintiff in the original suit; hence, the judgment therein should command the plaintiff, and not the sheriff, to return the property or pay its value. Fleming v. Wells, 65 Cal. 336; 4 Pac. 197. Claim and delivery, where the sheriff has taken and is withholding the possession of property, is the proper remedy, as against a threatened sale by a constable, from whose possession it was taken by the sheriff. Richards v. Kirkpatrick, 53 Cal. 433.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This bond may be assigned by the sheriff. Wingate v. Brooks, 3 Cal. 112. In an action on this bond, it must be alleged that the defendant neither redelivered the property nor paid the value thereof. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568; Chambers v. Waters, 7 Cal. 390. In an action on an undertaking, the defendant's liability is limited to the damages sustained by a failure to return the property. Hunt v. Robinson, 11 Cal. 262. The sureties only bind themselves to make good any judgment that plaintiff may lawfully obtain against defendant; and the liability of the sureties cannot be more than the value of the property fixed by the judgment in the original suit. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568. In an action against the sureties on the undertaking, it is necessary to allege and prove that the property was delivered to the party requiring it, and for whom the bond was given. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 570. An undertaking ran to the sheriff, instead of to the party to be protected by it, by mistake, and then corrected; this did not invalidate the bond. Turner v. Billagram, 2 Cal. 522.

§ 515. Justification of defendant's sureties. The defendant's sureties, upon notice to the plaintiff of not less than two or more than five days, must justify before a judge or county clerk, in the same manner as upon bail on arrest; and upon such justification the sheriff must deliver the property to the defendant. The sheriff is responsible for the defendant's sureties until they justify, or until the justification is completed or waived, and may retain the property until that time. If they, or others in their place, fail to justify at the time and place appointed, he must deliver the property to the plaintiff.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Manner of justification. Graham v. Wells, 18 How. Pr. 376. Liability of officer. McKenzie v. Smith, 27 How. Pr. 20; Gallarati v. Orser, 27 N. Y. 324.

§ 516. Qualification of sureties. The qualification of sureties must be such as are prescribed by this code, in respect to bail upon an order of arrest.

Sureties, qualifications of. Post, § 1057; ante, §§ 494, 495.

Legislation § 516. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 106 (New York Code, § 213), which had (1) the words "and their justification shall" instead of "must," after "sureties," this change accounting for "qualification . . . are" of the present section, and (2) the word "act" instead of "code."

§ 517. Property, how taken when concealed in building or inclosure. If the property, or any part thereof, be concealed in a building or inclosure, the sheriff must publicly demand its delivery. If it be not delivered, he must cause the building or inclosure to be broken open, and take the property into his possession; and, if necessary, he may call to his aid the power of his county.

Duties of sheriff. See Pol. Code, §§ 4175 et seq.

Legislation § 517. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 107 (New York Code, § 214), which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in both instances.

§ 518. Property, how kept. When the sheriff has taken property, as in this chapter provided, he must keep it in a secure place, and deliver it to the party entitled thereto, upon receiving his fees for taking and his necessary expenses for keeping the same.

Legislation § 518. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 108 (New York Code, § 215), which had (1) the words "shall have" instead of "has," after "sheriff," (2) the word "shall" instead of "must," before "keep," and (3) the word "lawful" before "fees for taking."

Return as evidence of delivery. An affidavit and undertaking, together with the sheriff's return thereon, being filed and of record, may be treated as evidence, and show conclusive delivery of the property. Hollenbach v. Schnabel, 101 Cal. 312; 40 Am. St. Rep. 57; 35 Pac. 872.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The sheriff must use more than ordinary diligence in the care of property. Moore v. Westervelt, 21 N. Y. 103; 27 N. Y. 239; 9 Bosw. 558; Edwards on Bailments, p. 59.

§ 519. Claim of property by third person. If the property taken be claimed by any other person than the defendant or his agent, and such person make affidavit of his title thereto, or right to the possession thereof, stating the grounds of such title or right, and serve the same upon the sheriff, the sheriff is not bound to keep the property or deliver it to the plaintiff, unless the plaintiff, on demand of him or his agent, indemnify the sheriff against such claim, by an undertaking by two sufficient sureties; and no claim to such property by any other person than the defendant or his agent is valid against the sheriff unless so made.

Legislation § 519. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 109 (New York Code, § 216), which had (1) no "the" before "possession thereof," (2) the words "shall not be" instead of "is not," before "bound to keep," (3) after the words "sufficient sureties," the clause, "accompanied by their affidavits that they are each worth double the value of the property as specified in the affidavit of the plaintiff, over and above their debts and liabilities, exclusive of property exempt from execution, and are freeholders, or householders in the county"; and (4) the words "shall be" instead of "is," before "valid against."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 136; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Plaintiff's bond on third-party claim. A sheriff must first pay the judgment against him, before he can maintain an action on an undertaking given under this section. Lott v. Mitchell, 32 Cal. 23.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section applies only when the property has been taken by the officer in the discharge of his duty. King v. Orser, 4 Duer, 431. If the officer takes the property from the defendant or his agent, the process is a complete justification, and no action lies against him. Shipman v. Clark, 4 Denio, 446; 47 Am. Dec. 264; Foster v. Pettibone, 29 Barb. 350; State v. Jennings, 14 Ohio St. 73; Willard v. Kimball, 10 Allen, 211; 87 Am. Dec. 632. But if he takes the property of a person, not a defendant in the writ, from the true owner, an action lies. King v. Orser, 4 Duer, 431; Stimpson v. Reynolds, 14 Barb. 506. If the officer's proceedings are regular, the mode prescribed by this section is the only mode of making a valid claim by a third person. Edgerton v. Ross, 6 Abb. Pr. 189. If in an undertaking to indemnify a sheriff for replevying property claimed by a person other than defendant in the writ, the obligors undertake to indemnify him from any damage he may sustain by reason of any costs, suits, judgments, and executions that may come or be brought against him, the sheriff cannot maintain an action on the bond because a judgment has been recovered against him, unless he first pay the judgment. Lott v. Mitchell, 32 Cal. 23.

§ 520. Notice and affidavit, when and where to be filed. The sheriff must file the notice, undertaking, and affidavit, with his proceedings thereon, with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending, within twenty days after taking the property mentioned therein.

Legislation § 520. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 110 (New York Code, § 217), as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 61, Kerr ed. p. 87, which had the word "shall" instead of "must," after "sheriff."

Return as evidence. The return of the sheriff is proper evidence of the possession of the plaintiff, and, being of record, the court may avail itself of it in determining that fact; or if the fact has not been found, in determining the right of the defendant, as a question of law, to a judgment for its return. Hollenbach v. Schnabel, 101 Cal. 312; 40 Am. St. Rep. 57; 35 Pac. 872.

§ 521. Protection of plaintiff in possession of property. After the property has been delivered to the plaintiff as in this chapter provided, the court shall, by appropriate order, protect the plaintiff in the possession of said property until the final determination of the action.

Legislation § 521. Added by Stats. 1913, p. 555.

The original code § 521 related to actions on undertakings, and was repealed by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 306.

CHAPTER III.

INJUNCTION.

§ 525. Injunction, what is, and who may grant it.
§ 526. When it may be granted.
§ 526a. Actions by taxpayers to enjoin illegal expenditure or waste by public officers.
§ 527. Injunction. Notice. Party obtaining order must be ready. Defendant entitled to continuance. Precedence.
§ 528. Injunction after answer.
§ 529. Security upon injunction.
§ 530. When injunction for use of water may be refused upon defendant giving bond.
§ 531. Injunction to suspend business of a corporation, how and by whom granted.
§ 532. Motion to vacate or modify injunction. Bond on modification.
§ 533. When to be vacated or modified.

§ 525. Injunction, what is, and who may grant it. An injunction is a writ or order requiring a person to refrain from a particular act. It may be granted by the court in which the action is brought, or by a judge thereof; and when granted by a judge, it may be enforced as an order of the court.

Injunction.
1. Disobedience to, is contempt. Post, §§ 1209, 1210.
2. Limitations, how affected by. Ante, § 356.
3. Proceedings to obtain. Post, §§ 527–531.
4. Vacating or modifying. Ante, §§ 532, 533.
5. Seal necessary to writ of. Ante, § 153, subd. 1.
6. Courts and judges have power to grant, on any day. Ante, §§ 76, 134. At chambers. Ante, § 166.
7. Court commissioners have no power to issue. Ante, § 259, subd. 1.

Legislation § 525. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 111 (New York Code, § 218), which had (1) the words "The order or writ" instead of "It," before "may be granted," and (2) did not have the word "it" before "may be enforced."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 3, (1) omitting the words "or by a county judge" after

"judge thereof," and (2) changing the word "the" to "an," before "order."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 136; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 340, changing the word "made" to "granted," before "by a judge."

Jurisdiction. Superior courts possess the same equity jurisdiction as was possessed by the English chancery courts. Pasadena v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 781; 21 Ann. Cas. 1355; 109 Pac. 620. A state court has concurrent jurisdiction with a Federal court to restrain the removal of a wharf in navigable waters, the action being in personam. Crescent City Wharf etc. Co. v. Simpson, 77 Cal. 286; 19 Pac. 426.

Injunction preventive, not mandatory. The mandatory ingredient found in nearly all the definitions of the term "injunction," by text-writers, is entirely omitted from the definition of that term in this section. Gardner v. Stroever, 81 Cal. 148; 6 L. R. A. 90; 22 Pac. 483. An injunction, though restrictive in form, if it has the effect of compelling the performance of a substantive act, is mandatory, and necessarily contemplates a change in the relative positions or rights of the parties from those existing at the time the injunction is granted or the decree is entered. Stewart v. Superior Court, 100 Cal. 543; 35 Pac. 156. The duty of the court is to protect a party in the enjoyment of his private property, not to license a trespass thereupon, nor to compel the owner to exchange the same for other property to answer private purposes or interests. Gregory v. Nelson, 41 Cal. 278. The court cannot, by mandatory injunction, require of the defendant an act which he could not do without making himself liable to others, not parties to the suit, and over whom it has no jurisdiction: the injunction, in such case, should be prohibitory only. Dewey v. Superior Court, 81 Cal. 64; 22 Pac. 333. The issuance and service of an injunction restraining a party from moving certain fixtures from land, which he had a right to move, even though such injunction was afterwards dissolved, is not, in itself, conversion of such property. Lacey v. Beaudry, 53 Cal. 693.

Distinction between law and equity preserved. The distinction between law and equity is as naked and broad as ever: the provision, that "there should be but one form of civil action," extends only to the form of action; and the plaintiff need only state his cause of action in ordinary and concise language, without regard to ancient forms. De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463; 56 Am. Dec. 352. The writ of injunction belongs to the court of chancery exclusively; and although, in this state, there is no separate forum for the adjudication of chancery cases, yet in our courts, having chancery jurisdiction, the rules and principles of equity practice remain unaltered and the writ of injunction can only be issued where the case is one of equity jurisdiction. Minturn v. Hays, 2 Cal. 590; 56 Am. Dec. 366.

Order by judge act of court. An ex parte order granting an injunction, made by a judge at chambers, is virtually the act of the court, and may be enforced in the same way as if made upon notice. Sullivan v. Triunfo etc. Mining Co., 33 Cal. 385.

Form not essential. No particular form is requisite to a writ of injunction: the substantial thing is an authentic notification to the defendants of the mandate of the judge, which they must obey. Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Form. No particular form required. It is sufficient if the defendant receive authentic notice of the mandate of the judge. Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347.

2. By a judge at chambers. An injunction, granted ex parte by the judge at chambers, becomes the act of the court, and may be enforced in the same way. Sullivan v. Triunfo G. & S. M. Co., 33 Cal. 385.

3. County judge may grant. The constitutionality of the power conferred upon county judges considered and affirmed. Thompson v. Williams, 6 Cal. 88. County judges, in granting injunctions upon bills filed in the district court, act as injunction masters, and are exercising a power auxiliary to the jurisdiction of the district court. The effect of such an order is the same as if made by the district court, and the injunction is subject to be controlled, modified, or dissolved by the district judge, the same as if ordered by him in the first instance. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440; Crandall v. Woods, 6 Cal. 449; see Ward v. Preston, 23 Cal. 468. An injunction granted by a county judge may be dissolved or modified by him. Creanor v. Nelson, 23 Cal. 464.

4. When a court or judge cannot grant an injunction. One district court cannot grant an injunction to restrain the execution of the orders, or decrees, or judgments of another court of coordinate jurisdiction. Rickett v. Johnson, 8 Cal. 34; Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66; 68 Am. Dec. 304; Chipman v. Hibbard, 8 Cal. 268; Phelan v. Smith, 8 Cal. 520; Gorham v. Toomey, 9 Cal. 77; Anthony v. Dunlap, 8 Cal. 26. An exception to the rule is, where the court in which the action or proceeding is pending is unable, by reason of its jurisdiction, to afford the relief sought, as, for instance, where several fraudulent judgments are confessed in several courts, it would not be necessary for a creditor to bring a different suit in each different court. Or, where the provisions of the code require the action to be tried in a particular county, there would be an exception, as the positive provision of the statute must be carried out. Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 697; Anthony v. Dunlap, 8 Cal. 26. The supreme court cannot grant an injunction, pending an appeal. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. A state court cannot enjoin the proceedings of a United States court. Phelan v. Smith, 8 Cal. 520.

5. Generally. It is not necessary that the plaintiff should first establish his title at law before he can obtain an injunction. Tuolumne Water Co. v. Chapman, 8 Cal. 392. Whether a taxpayer can, by injunction to restrain the performance of a ministerial duty cast upon public officers, merely upon the ground that the effect, at some future time, if certain other things be done, might be to subject his property to taxation, was suggested, but not decided, in Pattison v. Board of Supervisors, 13 Cal. 175; Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 375. To authorize a court of equity to enjoin a judgment at law, on the ground of newly discovered facts, the proceeding must be taken by the defendant in the judgment at law. Mulford v. Cohn, 18 Cal. 42. An action on the case will not lie for improperly suing out an injunction, unless it is charged in the complaint as an abuse of the process of court, through malice, and without probable cause. Robinson v. Kellum, 6 Cal. 399. If the act complained of is destitute of these elements, the remedy of the injured party is on the undertaking. Id.

6. Not retroactive. The order is never retroactive: it cannot make an act already performed unlawful, or treat such an act a disobedience of its provisions. People v. Albany etc. R. R. Co., 12 Abb. Pr. 171; 20 How. Pr. 358.

§ 526. When it may be granted. An injunction may be granted in the following cases:

1. When it appears by the complaint that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief demanded, and such relief, or any part thereof, consists in restraining the commission or continuance of the act complained of, either for a limited period or perpetually;

2. When it appears by the complaint or affidavits that the commission or continuance of some act during the litigation would produce waste, or great or irreparable injury, to a party to the action;

3. When it appears, during the litigation, that a party to the action is doing, or threatens, or is about to do, or is procuring or suffering to be done, some act in violation of the rights of another party to the action respecting the subject of the action, and tending to render the judgment ineffectual;

4. When pecuniary compensation would not afford adequate relief;

5. Where it would be extremely difficult to ascertain the amount of compensation which would afford adequate relief;

6. Where the restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings;

7. Where the obligation arises from a trust.

An injunction cannot be granted:

1. To stay a judicial proceeding pending at the commencement of the action in which the injunction is demanded, unless such restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of such proceedings;

2. To stay proceedings in a court of the United States;

3. To stay proceedings in another state upon a judgment of a court of that state;

4. To prevent the execution of a public statute by officers of the law for the public benefit;

5. To prevent the breach of a contract, the performance of which would not be specifically enforced;

6. To prevent the exercise of a public or private office, in a lawful manner, by the person in possession;

7. To prevent a legislative act by a municipal corporation.

When granted, generally. Civ. Code, §§ 3422 et seq.

Where obligation arises from trust. Civ. Code, § 3422.

Illegal payments by county, enjoining. See Pol. Code, § 4005b.

Enjoining nuisance. Post, § 731.

Trade-mark, use of, enjoined. Pol. Code, § 3199.

Mortgage, injunction to restrain party in possession from waste during foreclosure of. Post, § 745.

Disobeying order or process, contempt, etc. Post, §§ 1209, 1210.

Restraining injurious acts of executors, pending proceeding to prove lost or destroyed will. See post, § 1341.

Legislation § 526. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 112 (New York Code, § 219), which read: "An injunction may be granted in the following cases: 1. When it shall appear by the complaint that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief demanded, and such relief, or any part thereof, consists in restraining the commission or continuance of the act complained of, either for a limited period or perpetually; 2. When it shall appear by the complaint or affidavit that the commission or continuance of some act during the litigation would produce great or irreparable injury to the plaintiff; 3. When it shall appear during the litigation that the defendant is doing, or threatens, or is about to do, or is procuring or suffering to be done, some act in violation of the plaintiff's rights, respecting the subject of the action, and tending to render the judgment ineffectual." When enacted in 1872, (1) in subds. 1, 2, 3, the words "shall appear" were changed to "appears," and (2) in subd. 2, the word "waste" was added after "produce."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 136; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 341; the code commissioner saying, "Subdivisions 2 and 3 have been amended so as to permit the application for an injunction to be made by parties to the action other than plaintiff, and the provisions of §§ 3422 and 3423 of the Civil Code have been added to the section."

No strict rule governing granting of injunctions. Courts of equity decline to lay down any rule which will limit their power and discretion as to the particular cases in which injunctions shall be granted or withheld: it is impossible to foresee all the exigencies of society, which may require their aid and assistance to protect rights and redress wrongs. Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 317; 68 Am. Dec. 262. Where an injunction is justifiable, the issuing of the writ is, in a large degree, a matter of discretion, which should be exercised in favor of the party most likely to be injured (Raisch v. Warren, 18 Cal. App. 655; 124 Pac. 95); but rules of law cannot be relaxed, in order to relieve isolated instances of hardship. Collins v. Butler, 14 Cal. 223.

Complainant must have clean hands. A person coming into a court of equity for an injunction must come with clean hands and without any lack of truth in his own case: he cannot be granted relief upon a claim which contains a false representation calculated to deceive. Joseph v. Macowsky, 96 Cal. 518; 19 L. R. A. 53; 31 Pac. 914.

Injunction does not stay time. While the acts of the parties are restrained by the injunction, yet it does not stay the running of time, nor can it extend the time for making a motion for a new trial. Elliott v. Osborne, 1 Cal. 396.

Acquiescence of plaintiff as bar. The statute of limitations is directly applicable to a suit in equity; and a court of chancery may properly refuse to grant relief by injunction, where the plaintiff has assented to the acts complained of, and their consequences; and such assent may be inferred from the plaintiff's acquiescence with full knowledge of all the facts; and further, acquiescence, proving assent, may bar relief in equity, although not accompanied by all the circumstances which would make it an estoppel at law; the acquiescence which will bar a complainant from the exercise, in his favor, of the discretionary jurisdiction by injunction must be such as proves his assent to the acts of the defendant, and to the injuries to himself which have flowed, or can reasonably be expected to flow, from those acts. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255; 4 Pac. 919; 10 Pac. 674.

Distinction between supersedeas and injunction. A writ of supersedeas, or order for the stay of proceedings pending an appeal, is limited to restraining any action upon the judgment appealed from, and cannot be used to perform the functions of an injunction against the parties to the action, restraining them from any act in the assertion of their rights, other than to prevent them from using the process of the trial court to enforce the judgment; nor can the writ be employed for any purpose, upon persons not parties to the judgment. Dulin v. Pacific Wood etc. Co., 98 Cal. 305; 33 Pac. 123.

Effect of appeal on injunction. The distinction between the effect of an appeal from a judgment in staying further proceedings thereon, and its effect in depriving the judgment itself of any efficacy as evidence of the fact determined, is, that the appeal suspends the force of the judgment as a conclusive determination of the rights of the parties, while the stay of proceedings consequent upon the appeal is limited to the enforcement of the judgment, and does not destroy or impair its character. Dulin v. Pacific Wood etc. Co., 98 Cal. 304; 33 Pac. 123. The purpose of the injunction is to hold the subject of litigation in statu quo until a final determination; but the judgment may command or permit some act to be done, in which case a stay of proceedings will be had, although, as a general rule, the injunction is not dissolved or suspended by the appeal. Stewart v. Superior Court, 100 Cal. 543; 35 Pac. 156, 563. An injunction restraining interference with a person's right to act as a director of a corporation, which is but ancillary and incidental to a judgment determining that he had such right, although preventive in form, is in effect mandatory, as it requires the other directors to recognize him as one of their number, and to refuse to recognize a third party, and as that portion of the judgment declaring the party elected is suspended by the appeal, the injunctive portion of the judgment, being merely incidental, is also suspended, and the power of the court to enforce any part of its judgment, by inflicting punishment for its violation, is stayed: an enforcement of this portion of the judgment would operate to carry the decree into effect, and would change the relative position of the parties from those existing at the time the decree was entered, and might render a reversal of the judgment ineffectual. Foster v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 279; 47 Pac. 58; and see Stewart v. Superior Court, 100 Cal. 543; 35 Pac. 156, 563. The office of the writ of injunction is peculiarly preventive, and not remedial; to restrain the wrong-doer, not to punish him after the wrong has been done, or to compel him to undo it; and if the injunction, though restrictive in form, has the effect of compelling the performance of a substantive act, it is mandatory, and necessarily contemplates a change in the relative positions or rights of the parties from those existing at the time the injunction was granted or the decree was entered. Stewart v. Superior Court, 100 Cal. 543; 35 Pac. 156, 563. The appellate court will not suspend the operation of a judgment granting a perpetual injunction, pending an appeal. Swift v. Shepard, 64 Cal. 423; 1 Pac. 493; and see Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 130. Where a board of education was restrained from using certain text-books, and required to use certain others, the board, pending an appeal from the judgment, should merely be required to remain passive and take no action in favor of or against either system of text-books. Mark v. Superior Court, 129 Cal. 1; 61 Pac. 436. Where an injunction was granted, ordering the removal of trade-signs, and prohibiting the use of a trade name thereon, a perfected appeal stays proceedings as to the mandatory portion of the injunction, but has no such effect upon that part of the injunction which is merely prohibitory. Schwarz v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 106; 43 Pac. 580. The court, after judgment for the defendant, denying an injunction, may issue an order restraining him, pending the determination of a motion for a new trial. Pasadena v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 781; 21 Ann. Cas. 1355; 109 Pac. 620; Pierce v. Los Angeles, 159 Cal. 516; 114 Pac. 818. Many judgments are self-executing or have an intrinsic effect, upon which there are no proceedings to be stayed, and which, therefore, would not be affected by an appeal; such as judgments granting or dissolving an injunction, or granting or denying a divorce. Dulin v. Pacific Wood etc. Co., 98 Cal. 304; 33 Pac. 123. Where the plaintiff is entitled to and obtains an injunction before trial in the lower court, he is entitled to retain it upon the cause being remanded for a new trial. Hess v. Winder, 34 Cal. 270. The operation of a restraining order is not extended by an appeal from the order denying the injunction: where the injunction is refused, there is nothing operative, and the appeal cannot operate to create an injunction, under any circumstances. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. A process, once discharged and dead, is gone forever, and it never can be revived, except by a new exertion of judicial power: it cannot be revived by any act of the party, nor by the taking of an appeal. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. The superior court has no jurisdiction to punish for disobedience of a mandatory injunction, pending an appeal, though it may punish for the violation of a prohibitory injunction. Dewey v. Superior Court, 81 Cal. 64; 22 Pac. 333.

Preservation of status quo. The code provisions regulating injunctions do not curtail the general grant of equity power vested in the superior courts by the constitution, nor affect their general chancery power to preserve the status quo of the subject-matter of the litigation, pending an appeal. Pasadena v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 781; 21 Ann. Cas. 1355; 109 Pac. 620. A prohibitory injunction remains in full force, pending an appeal, and the court may enforce obedience thereto; but a mandatory injunction is stayed by the operation of the appeal: the object of the rule, in both cases, is to preserve the status quo; otherwise the result of the final adjudication might often be a barren victory. Dewey v. Superior Court, 81 Cal. 64; 22 Pac. 333. A complaint in an action for a partnership accounting, which shows that a deceased partner was indebted to the partnership, but had caused his shares of stock in a corporation defendant and in another corporation, both of which were used as instrumentalities of the partnership, to be transferred to his heirs as a gift causa mortis, states a ground for relief in equity against the administrator and the heirs, who may be restrained from disposing of such stock, pending the settlement of the partnership accounts. Raisch v. Warren, 18 Cal. App. 655; 124 Pac. 95. The superior court has jurisdiction to issue an injunction in a divorce proceeding, restraining the husband from alienating his property, pending suit. In re White, 113 Cal. 282; 45 Pac. 323. Where the defendant selected public lands under a contract to secure them for the plaintiff, the latter is entitled to a preliminary injunction, in a suit brought by him to restrain the defendant from conveying such lands to another party. Farnum v. Clarke, 148 Cal. 610; 84 Pac. 166.

To prevent waste. A court of equity is always more ready to listen to an application for an injunction on the ground of waste, than on the ground of trespass; the old rule was, that an injunction to prevent waste, or trespasses in the nature of waste, could only be granted when the parties stood in the relation of landlord and tenant, and not where the party doing the act complained of was a mere stranger; but, upon sound principles, this rule has been relaxed; for in many cases irremediable mischief might be done to the inheritance if an injunction were refused. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. The distinction between waste and trespass, so far as regards the power of the court to grant an injunction, has been set aside; and an injunction is now granted in all cases of timber, coal, ores, and quarries, where the party is a mere trespasser, or where he exceeds the limited rights with which he is clothed, on the ground that the acts are or may be irreparable damage to the particular species of property. Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 317; 68 Am. Dec. 262. At common law, a tenant had no redress for acts of admitted waste committed by his co-tenant; but under our statute, a tenant may now recover damages from his co-tenant in every case of waste; but where the acts complained of are not wanton and destructive, no injunction lies. McCord v. Oakland etc. Mining Co., 64 Cal. 134; 49 Am. Rep. 686; 27 Pac. 863. Where the effect of the act complained of would be to impair or destroy the substance of the estate, by taking from it something which cannot be replaced, it may be enjoined, irrespective of the ability of the defendant to respond in damages. Kellogg v. King, 114 Cal. 378; 55 Am. St. Rep. 74; 46 Pac. 166. The remedy for waste is ordinarily at law; but where the relief sought is for the purpose of preserving the security of a mortgage, equity will interpose by injunction to prevent future waste, and, in the same action, an accounting will be decreed and compensation given for past waste. Mitchell v. Amador Canal etc. Co., 75 Cal. 464; 17 Pac. 246. A trespass in the nature of waste, which goes to deprive a party of part of his inheritance, should be restrained by injunction: the defendant might be able to pay for the mischief done, if it could ultimately be proved that his acts were tortious; but if anything is to be abstracted which cannot be restored in specie, no man should be liable to have that taken away which cannot be replaced, merely because he may possibly recover what others may deem an equivalent in money. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. A mortgagee may stay the commission of waste on the mortgaged premises, upon a showing that the commission of the threatened acts will materially impair the value of his security (Robinson v. Russell, 24 Cal. 467; Buckout v. Swift, 27 Cal. 433; 87 Am. Dec. 90; Miller v. Waddingham, 91 Cal. 377; 13 L. R. A. 680; 27 Pac. 750); and he has concurrent remedies, where the mortgagor commits waste upon the mortgaged premises so as to impair the security, by an action at law for damages, or by a suit in equity for an injunction to prevent threatened damages (Lavenson v. Standard Soap Co., 80 Cal. 245; 13 Am. St. Rep. 147; 22 Pac. 184); but he cannot maintain a suit in equity to restrain waste, without a showing that thereby his security will be impaired. Miller v. Waddingham, 91 Cal. 377; 13 L. R. A. 680; 27 Pac. 750; Stowell v. Waddingham, 100 Cal. 7; 34 Pac. 436. An averment of acts which impair the value of the security for the rent, in a suit to restrain such acts, is not sufficient, where the only showing is that the security will be lessened in value: it must be shown that such security will be left inadequate to secure the rent. Perrine v. Marsden, 34 Cal. 14; and see Buckout v. Swift, 27 Cal. 433; 87 Am. Dec. 90. Although not a technical waste, a party is entitled to an injunction against the removal, beyond his reach, of a building on which he has a lien: such removal would destroy his statutory right, and deprive him of his lien. Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 497. An injunction cannot issue to prevent waste, where the waste had already been committed: an injunction cannot issue to restrain the removal of buildings from land, after the buildings have been removed, and are in the middle of a public highway. Stowell v. Waddingham, 100 Cal. 7; 34 Pac. 436. An entry upon land, and the digging up and removal of fruit-trees growing thereon, is waste, and an injury to the inheritance, which a court of equity may enjoin. Silva v. Garcia, 65 Cal. 591; 4 Pac. 628. Where the defendants enter upon the plaintiff's property, and dig up and destroy fruit-trees and ornamental shrubbery, and threaten to continue such trespasses, the mere fact that they are willing to pay for the property is immaterial, in view of the fact that, from the nature of such property, it would be impossible to determine its value in money. Daubenspeck v. Grear, 18 Cal. 443. The removal of pendent fruit and growing nursery stock, by a mortgagor in possession, is not an act from which irreparable injury will result: full and adequate damages can be recovered in an action for trespass; and the doing of such acts does not materially impair the value of the inheritance, the substance of the realty. Robinson v. Russell, 24 Cal. 467.

Prevention of trespass. A naked trespass merely, where no waste is committed, does not present a case for injunction. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 282. An ancient rule in cases of trespass was, that a court of equity would not interfere by injunction, but left the party to his remedy at law; in modern times, this doctrine has been much relaxed, and although the general rule remains, yet there are exceptional cases where equity does and will interpose, but only where a strong case is made; thus, it will interfere to quiet possession or to prevent a multiplicity of actions, or where the value of the inheritance is put in jeopardy, or where irreparable mischief is threatened in relation to mines, quarries, or woodland, whether the same results from the nature of the injury itself or from the insolvency of the party committing it. Leach v. Day, 27 Cal. 643. Equity will not interpose to restrain a trespasser, simply because he is a trespasser and is insolvent: other facts and circumstances must be shown. Mechanics' Foundry v. Ryall, 75 Cal. 601; 17 Pac. 703; California Navigation Co. v. Union Transportation Co., 122 Cal. 641; 55 Pac. 591; California Navigation etc. Co. v. Union Transportation Co., 126 Cal. 433; 46 L. R. A. 825; 58 Pac. 936. A trespass about to be committed by a defendant cannot be restrained by an injunction, unless the injury would be irreparable, which could only be upon a clear showing of the plaintiff's right and of the defendant's insolvency. More v. Ord, 15 Cal. 204. An injunction ought not to be granted in aid of an action of trespass, unless it appears that the injury will be irreparable, and cannot be compensated in damages (Waldron v. Marsh, 5 Cal. 119); it is not sufficient simply to allege the fact that the injury will be irreparable: it must be shown how and why it will be so. Randall v. Freed, 154 Cal. 299; 97 Pac. 669. Where a trespass already committed would probably be repeated indefinitely, an injunction may be granted, to avoid a multiplicity of actions. Smithers v. Fitch, 82 Cal. 153; 22 Pac. 935. A bona fide possession of the invaded premises, under claim and color of right, is sufficient to warrant an injunction against a trespasser. Kellogg v. King, 114 Cal. 378; 55 Am. St. Rep. 74; 46 Pac. 166. An injunction will issue to prevent acts interfering with complainant's ingress to and egress from his dwelling, such as the nailing up and closing of gates, and the cutting and obstructing of water-pipes. Zierath v. McCann, 20 Cal. App. 561; 129 Pac. 808. The owner of a private wharf, in possession thereof, is entitled to a perpetual injunction restraining the construction of another wharf in front of his, which will cut his wharf off from the navigable waters of the bay, unless the person constructing the same shows a lawful right, derived from competent authority, to do so. Cowell v. Martin, 43 Cal. 605. A trespasser on the premises of another, who also assumes control over his business, and intercepts money due to him, and holds himself out to the public as a partner having the right to do these things, may be restrained: bodily ejectment from the premises would not necessarily prevent the continuance of such injuries; nor would an action for damages afford adequate relief, because of the difficulty of ascertaining, in pecuniary terms, the amount of damages, and because of the insolvency of the trespasser. De Groot v. Peters, 124 Cal. 406; 71 Am. St. Rep. 91; 57 Pac. 209. A complaint alleging that the trespass was committed under a pretended claim of right of way over the plaintiff's land, by virtue of a pretended order of a board of supervisors opening and establishing a private road for the defendant's use, and that the defendant threatens to tear down the plaintiff's fences as often as the plaintiff erects the same, is not sufficient to warrant an injunction, where no reasons are given why the plaintiff has not an adequate and complete remedy at law. Leach v. Day, 27 Cal. 643. An injunction will lie against a trespasser to restrain the raising of the level of a street, in the absence of anything to show that the defendant was proceeding under legal authority; and the fact that the defendant is solvent does not defeat the plaintiff's right, as the acts complained of constitute such an obstruction of the plaintiff's easement in the street as to constitute a permanent injury to the inheritance, and would ripen into a right if permitted. Schaufele v. Doyle, 86 Cal. 107; 24 Pac. 834. An injunction will not lie for a trespass committed on land, where the plaintiff is wholly disseised, and the defendant is in adverse possession. Raffetto v. Fiori, 50 Cal. 363; Felton v. Justice, 51 Cal. 529. Although the wild game of the state belongs to the people in their sovereign capacity, and is subject to private dominion only by authority of the legislature, yet, within the provisions of the statute prescribing in what cases individual proprietorship therein may exist, the individual owner is as much to be protected in the enjoyment of his rights in this species of property as in any other, under the law: any person violating such rights is a trespasser, and may be enjoined. Kellogg v. King, 114 Cal. 378; 55 Am. St. Rep. 74; 46 Pac. 166. The payment of damages is a condition precedent to the creation of the right of a city to change a natural watercourse, to the damage of the plaintiff's property: without such payment, the city is a mere trespasser, and injunction is the plain, ordinary, and best remedy. Geurkink v. Petaluma, 112 Cal. 306; 44 Pac. 570. A technical trespass, committed by the business agent of a labor council, in entering upon the premises of the plaintiff, for the purpose of calling the men out on a lawful strike, is, in the absence of any threatened repetition of the act, not a ground for an injunction. Parkinson Co. v. Building Trades Council, 154 Cal. 581; 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 550; 16 Ann. Cas. 1165; 98 Pac. 1027.

Nuisances. An injunction may be granted to prohibit the defendant from permitting his premises to be occupied as a house of prostitution. Farmer v. Behmer, 9 Cal. App. 773; 100 Pac. 901. In order to obtain an injunction to restrain obstructions of public highways, the injury complained of must be special in character, and not merely greater in degree than that of the general public. Bigley v. Nunan, 53 Cal. 403; Payne v. McKinley, 54 Cal. 532; Crowley v. Davis, 63 Cal. 460. Where the court finds that a nuisance exists and is continuous, the issuance of an injunction is justified, although not specifically prayed for in the complaint. Sullivan v. Royer, 72 Cal. 248; 1 Am. St. Rep. 51; 13 Pac. 655.

To prevent irreparable injuries. An injunction is never granted, unless the bill shows some vested right in the plaintiff, which is likely to suffer great or irreparable injury from the act complained of; the mere allegation of such injury is insufficient: the facts stated must satisfy the court that such apprehension is well founded. Branch Turnpike Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 13 Cal. 190. Not every case in which a property-owner deems himself liable to be injured will justify the issuance of an injunction; and courts will not grant a preliminary restraining order or injunction, unless it is made to appear that damages might result. Geurkink v. Petaluma, 112 Cal. 306; 44 Pac. 570. Where the plaintiff has a right of way for a ditch upon the surface and the defendant has a right to mine in the bowels of a mountain, such rights are not necessarily incompatible, and the defendant will not be enjoined from so mining, even though the destruction of the plaintiff's ditch is threatened. Clark v. Willett, 35 Cal. 534. A riparian owner is entitled to have the water of the stream flow over his land in its usual volume, and also in its natural purity; and the pollution of the stream by the defendant so as substantially to impair its value for the ordinary purposes of life, and render it measurably unfit for domestic purposes, is an actionable nuisance; and the fact that the defendant is a municipal corporation does not enhance its rights nor palliate its wrongs in this respect. Peterson v. Santa Rosa, 119 Cal. 387; 51 Pac. 557. An action by the owner of land, in possession thereof, to enjoin the removal of machinery, engines, derricks, and tramways, attached to the soil, will be sustained, upon the presumption of ownership arising from the possession thereof, even if the property be considered as personal property, in the absence of proof of other ownership thereof. Nolan v. Rostler, 135 Cal. 264; 67 Pac. 127. Where a defendant, pending negotiations of his employer for a renewal of the lease of the premises occupied by him for business purposes, uses his knowledge of his employer's business, and secretly, with another, secures a lease of such premises for himself and such other, the plaintiff employer, in an action to compel the transfer of the lease, is entitled to an injunction, pendente lite, to restrain the defendant from proceeding to recover the premises. Gower v. Andrew, 59 Cal. 119; 43 Am. Rep. 242. A creditor holding a certificate of stock as collateral security has no right to enjoin the sale thereof under execution, after attachment and judgment, where he did not have such stock transferred on the books of the company. Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Wilson, 58 Cal. 600. An injunction will issue to prohibit the continuance of a use that obstructs one in the free use and enjoyment of his land, where such use, if continued, will ripen into an easement. Vestal v. Young, 147 Cal. 715; 82 Pac. 381. The plaintiff is entitled to an injunction upon the pleadings, where an alteration in the mode and manner of using an easement is so substantial as to result in the creation and substitution of a different servitude from that which previously existed; and it is immaterial that a benefit to the plaintiff will accrue by reason of the acts complained of. Allen v. San José Land etc. Co., 92 Cal. 138; 15 L. R. A. 93; 28 Pac. 215. Where the injury threatened is irreparable, and goes to the substance of the inheritance, it is a matter of indifference whether the plaintiff is in or out of possession. More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590.

Where remedy at law inadequate. An adequate remedy at law existing by motion, and having been pursued, a court of equity will not grant an injunction to restrain the collection of the judgment. Reagan v. Fitzgerald, 75 Cal. 230; 17 Pac. 198. The assistance of equity cannot be invoked, so long as the remedy by motion exists; but when the time within which a motion may be made has expired, and no laches or want of diligence is imputable to the party asking relief, there is nothing in reason or propriety to prevent the interference of equity. Bibend v. Kreutz, 20 Cal. 109; Ede v. Hazen, 61 Cal. 360. Courts of equity interfere to do justice, only when common-law tribunals are incapable of rendering it, and seldom or never interfere to give effect to a mere technical right: there must be substantial merit. Gregory v. Ford, 14 Cal. 138; 73 Am. Dec. 639. Where the efforts of the defendant to redress the injury complained of were thwarted by the conduct of the plaintiff, and no sufficient reason appears why the remedy offered was not accepted, which was plain, speedy, and adequate, an injunction is properly refused to prevent the wrong, which is otherwise irremediable. Richardson v. Eureka, 110 Cal. 441; 42 Pac. 965. Where the judgment of a justice's court is void on its face for want of jurisdiction, an adequate remedy exists by motion in that court to arrest execution and stay further process on the judgment, and an injunction to restrain an execution on such judgment will be denied. Gates v. Lane, 49 Cal. 266. Only in equity, and by means of an injunction, can relief be had from continuous wrongful acts and consequent infringement of rights; and it is not necessary to prove damages. Moore v. Clear Lake Water-Works, 68 Cal. 146; 8 Pac. 816. A court of law has ample power to afford speedy and adequate relief, where judgment and execution are void on their face; and the court has entire control over process, and can arrest it, and also, upon proper application, has authority to order suspension of the execution of the writ until a motion before the court to recall or quash it can be heard. Sanchez v. Carriaja, 31 Cal. 170. A perpetual injunction against a judgment will not be allowed on grounds which could have been set up as a legal defense in the action at law. Agard v. Valencia, 39 Cal. 292. Plaintiffs, for their laches in not taking advantage of their adequate and speedy legal remedy by motion to recall the execution on judgment, are not entitled to an injunction restraining an execution on the judgment; a formal action is unnecessary, as well as expensive and dilatory, where a motion in court would reach the same end: where the injured party has an adequate and speedy remedy at law, he is not entitled to the assistance of a court of equity. Moulton v. Knapp, 85 Cal. 385; 24 Pac. 803. Where the rights of a lienholder to have the premises sold to satisfy his lien were directly adjudicated against the plaintiff, he cannot avail himself of any matter which he might have pleaded in defense of the action to foreclose the lien, and cannot enjoin the sheriff from making the sale, on the ground that at the time of the commencement of the action the premises were his homestead, to the prejudice of the plaintiff in the former suit, who is not a party to the action for the injunction. Rucker v. Langford, 138 Cal. 611; 71 Pac. 1123. Where no reason is given why a plaintiff could not obtain all the relief to which he is entitled in a pending action, an injunction does not lie. Richards v. Kirkpatrick, 53 Cal. 433; and see Leach v. Day, 27 Cal. 643; Rahm v. Minis, 40 Cal. 421. The remedy by injunction to restrain the enforcement of a satisfied judgment is proper, notwithstanding the court in which the judgment was rendered may have the power to grant the same relief, upon motion to stay the execution. Thompson v. Laughlin, 91 Cal. 313; 27 Pac. 752. The mere fact that one has a right of action at law does not prevent his right to equitable relief by way of injunction against a threatened trespass, if, under the circumstances, the legal remedy would fail of affording adequate relief against the impending wrong: the remedy by injunction may be invoked to restrain acts, or threatened acts, of trespass in any instance, where such acts are or may be an irreparable damage to the particular species of property involved; and in such case, the solvency or insolvency of the wrong-doer is immaterial: the nature of the injury, and not the incapacity of the party to respond in damages, determines the right. Kellogg v. King, 114 Cal. 378; 55 Am. St. Rep. 74; 46 Pac. 166.

Inadequacy of pecuniary relief. In determining the right of a party to an injunction after a verdict in his favor by a court of law, the court will consider the relative loss to either party, the character of the property for which protection is sought, the character of the locality in which the nuisance exists, and whether the injury is properly compensable in damages. Peterson v. Santa Rosa, 119 Cal. 387; 51 Pac. 557. Where a judgment was obtained after a declaration of homestead, and an attachment was levied upon the premises before the filing of the declaration, such judgment, not being founded upon a debt secured by a mortgage or other lien, cannot be enforced, and an injunction lies to restrain a threatened execution sale thereunder. McCracken v. Harris, 54 Cal. 81. A perpetual injunction, issued under a void statute, against the condemnation of property, where no notice was given the owners, or compensation tendered, is not operative when the proper steps are taken and the right is secured. Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427. An injury to a right in land results, where a person wrongfully causes water to flow upon the land, over which it would not flow naturally; and such injury cannot be continued because other persons have a low estimate of the damages which it causes: the right to an injunction, in such case, does not depend upon the extent of the damage, measured by a money standard. Learned v. Castle, 78 Cal. 454; 18 Pac. 872; and see Richards v. Dower, 64 Cal. 62; 28 Pac. 113; Moore v. Clear Lake Water-Works, 68 Cal. 146; 8 Pac. 816; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255; 10 Pac. 674; Walker v. Emerson, 89 Cal. 456; 26 Pac. 968. The owner of lower land is entitled to an injunction restraining the wrongful acts of an upper landowner, in flooding the lower land, notwithstanding the absence of evidence of any specific monetary damage occasioned thereby. Galbreath v. Hopkins, 159 Cal. 297; 113 Pac. 174.

Amount of injury immaterial. Because the injury is incapable of ascertainment, or of being computed in damages, so that only nominal damages can be recovered, it does not follow that such injury is trifling or inconsiderable: that the injury is unascertainable, and in that sense inappreciable, may be a good reason why an injunction should issue. Heilbron v. Fowler Switch Canal Co., 75 Cal. 426; 7 Am. St. Rep. 183; 17 Pac. 535. Where the injury is only occasional and the damage small, and accidental, rather than a probable and necessary consequence of the acts complained of, an injunction will be denied: each case must be governed by the circumstances that surround it, and by relative equities. Peterson v. Santa Rosa, 119 Cal. 387; 51 Pac. 557. Where a city has, at great expense, developed water, a great portion of which it had the right to take, and the plaintiff knew of such expense, and that some of its water might be drained, and the amount so drained is comparatively small, the judgment should, in equity, make that amount good by a restoration of it, either by mandatory injunction or in some equitable manner, rather than prohibitively to enjoin the city from taking any water. Montecito Valley Water Co. v. Santa Barbara, 144 Cal. 578; 77 Pac. 1113. In granting an injunction, the court must consider the amount of injury which may be thereby inflicted on strangers to the suit and third parties. Santa Cruz Fair etc. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034.

Statement of irreparable injury. The simple allegation of irreparable injury is not sufficient to obtain an injunction: it should appear from the facts set forth in the bill (De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463; 56 Am. Dec. 352); nor is the mere allegation that irreparable injury will result sufficient: it must be shown how and why it will be so (Mechanics' Foundry v. Ryall, 75 Cal. 601; 17 Pac. 703); nor is a general averment as to the injury caused or to be caused by the acts of the defendant sufficient, without setting out the facts showing how or why the supposed injury will be irreparable. California Navigation Co.

v. Union Transportation Co., 122 Cal. 641; 55 Pac. 591. An averment that the defendant is doing, and threatening to continue, acts which will destroy the plaintiff's growing crops, and will render valueless ten acres of valuable land, shows a case of irreparable injury, and an injunction should issue. Schneider v. Brown, 85 Cal. 205; 24 Pac. 715. While the rule is, that facts must be stated to justify the conclusion of irreparable injury, yet in the case of mines, timber, and quarries, the statement of the injury is sufficient; in such cases, all the party could well state would be the destruction of the timber or the taking away of the minerals; the taking away of minerals is itself an injury that is irreparable, because it is a taking away of the substance of the estate. Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 317; 68 Am. Dec. 262. The allegations of the complaint must show that the injury to be sustained cannot be adequately compensated by damages, or that it is irremediable, or that it will lead to irremediable injury, to entitle a party to an injunction in a case of nuisance (Middleton v. Franklin, 3 Cal. 238); and the complaint must show special damage to the plaintiff; and facts must be stated to show that the apprehension of injury is well founded (Payne v. McKinley, 54 Cal. 532; Crowley v. Davis, 63 Cal. 460); and some vested right in the plaintiff, which is likely to suffer great or irreparable injury. Branch Turnpike Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 13 Cal. 190. A party seeking to enjoin a public officer from the performance of an official duty should show by distinct averments that the threatened acts of the officer will interfere with his rights to such an extent as to cause him some irreparable injury. Santa Cruz Fair Bldg. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034. An allegation, that the effect of preparing a levee will be to dam up the waters and increase the same in volume, until the levee will break and permit the waters to flow down to and upon plaintiff's land and destroy the fences and trees thereon, is simply an expression of opinion, and affords no reason in law for arresting the work by injunction. Hoke v. Perdue, 62 Cal. 545. A general averment, that the defendant, by its acts, "has caused and does cause to the plaintiff continuous and daily damage," being insufficient to show any irreparable injury whatever, cannot be in any way aided or helped out by a further averment, that to recover the amount of such damages "will require a multiplicity of judicial proceedings." California Navigation Co. v. Union Transportation Co., 122 Cal. 641; 55 Pac. 591. Where the complaint alleged that the defendant dug a mining-ditch above one previously constructed by the plaintiff, and had thereby diverted the water of the stream from the plaintiff's ditch, but did not aver that the injury was continuing, or threatened to be continued, or likely to be continued, sufficient is alleged for the recovery of damages, but not to sustain an injunction: the writ of injunction, though remedial, must be based upon some equitable circumstances. Coker v. Simpson, 7 Cal. 340; and see Ball v. Kehl, 87 Cal. 505; 25 Pac. 679.

Insolvency of defendant. Where there is no averment in the complaint that the defendant is insolvent, and no showing that the wrongs complained of are irreparable, or destructive of the plaintiff's estate in its nature and substance, nor that they are not susceptible of adequate compensation in damages, facts sufficient to warrant the interposition of a court of equity are not stated. Mechanics' Foundry v. Ryall, 62 Cal. 416. Where the case made by the bill for an injunction to restrain the defendant from taking possession of real estate does not show irreparable damages, nor allege insolvency of the defendant, nor any trespass, but only the fear of it, nor show that there was no adequate remedy at law, but averred plaintiff's title to the property and his possession, the remedy of injunction cannot be properly invoked and maintained. Tomlinson v. Rubio, 16 Cal. 202. The fact that the work sought to be enjoined is of a public nature, affecting the public convenience, and that there is no doubt of the defendant's ability to respond in damages, are important matters in determining the right to an injunction. Bigelow v. Los Angeles, 85 Cal. 614; 24 Pac. 778. The rule established under a system which permitted imprisonment for debt, and therefore gave more efficiency to the remedy at law, should be received with some modifications under our system; the reason of the rule being modified, the rule itself should receive corresponding qualification; in practice, it is generally difficult to prove insolvency, except after the return of an officer upon execution; practical men hesitate to rely upon the personal responsibility of the individual for compensation for serious injuries, and it comports more with substantial justice to both parties to restrain the trespass, rather than to leave the plaintiff to pursue his remedy at law. Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 317; 68 Am. Dec. 262. Where the plaintiff alleges and proves that the title to a growing crop is in himself, and that the defendant is insolvent, he is entitled to an injunction to restrain the defendant from harvesting and removing it. West v. Smith, 52 Cal. 322. In order to sustain an injunction to prevent the removal of a crop, it is sufficient to show the inability of the defendant to respond in damages: absolute and complete insolvency need not be shown. Paige v. Akins, 112 Cal. 401; 44 Pac. 666. The rule that trespass upon real estate cannot be enjoined, because a purely legal remedy suffices for the plaintiff's redress, does not apply where the trespasser is insolvent, and takes hay belonging to the plaintiff and feeds the same to live-stock: replevin would be an insufficient remedy, because a portion of the hay would be consumed before the writ could be served, and the insolvency of the defendant would make a judgment for its value worthless. Rohrer v. Babcock, 114 Cal. 124; 45 Pac. 1054. Where it is merely alleged that the plaintiff will be damaged in the sum of five thousand dollars, and there is no allegation that the defendant is not responsible for that sum, nor that there will be any extraordinary impediment in the way of recovering that sum by an action at law, there is no ground stated for an injunction. Gardner v. Stroever, 81 Cal. 148; 6 L. R. A. 90; 22 Pac. 483. The insolvency of the defendant need not be alleged, where the gravamen of the complaint is a threatened trespass upon land, in the nature of waste, which will be committed unless the defendant is restrained, and if permitted, the plaintiff will be deprived of a part of his inheritance, which could not be specifically replaced. More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590. The solvency of the defendant is an immaterial circumstance, where the injury is irreparable; and a finding that the injury would not be irreparable is inconsistent with a finding showing the permanent character of the work. Richards v. Dower, 64 Cal. 62; 28 Pac. 113. Where an injunction is sought to restrain irreparable injury to the inheritance, from a trespass in the nature of waste, the complaint need not allege the insolvency of the defendant. Crescent City Wharf etc. Co. v. Simpson, 77 Cal. 286; 19 Pac. 426. The allegation of insolvency is not necessary to procure an injunction in cases of trespass upon mines, timber, and quarries: the right to the remedy is based upon the nature of the injury, and not upon the incapacity of the party to respond in damages. Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 317; 68 Am. Dec. 262. Where the defendant was removing a crop, with intent to defraud the plaintiff of his share, due for rent, a bill of complaint that does not aver either the insolvency of the defendant or that he is without any tangible property which could be made the subject of execution, is too defective to sustain an order for an injunction. Gregory v. Hay, 3 Cal. 332. Where a judgment creditor brings a bill to reach equitable assets, he must aver insolvency, or, what is equivalent to it, an execution returned nulla bona: insolvency, in such cases, is, per se, a condition of relief, a fact without which a court of equity can have no jurisdiction to act in the given instance, an ultimate fact to be proved; hence the necessity that it be averred. Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 47; and see Harris v. Taylor, 15 Cal. 348.

Interference with water rights. An injunction lies to restrain a threatened permanent interference with water rights, whether percolating or riparian. Bonetti v. Ruiz, 15 Cal. App. 7; 113 Pac. 118. The diversion, by a mere intruder, of the waters of a canal, by means of a ditch constructed across the land of the owner of the canal, may be enjoined by the owner as an injury to his right: the right to an injunction does not depend upon the extent of the damage, measured by a money standard, and is not defeated by a finding that the plaintiff has not been actually damaged by the water taken. Walker v. Emerson, 89 Cal. 456; 26 Pac. 968. The right to the use and enjoyment of property is sufficient to have the right protected against invasion by another, and the ownership of property carries with it the right to any lawful enjoyment thereof, either by using it or by disposing of it to others: it is not necessary to allege in a complaint to enjoin the diversion of water, that the plaintiff is in a position to use the water himself, or that he is in any position which gives him a right to furnish water to others. Moore v. Clear Lake Water-Works, 68 Cal. 146; 8 Pac. 816; Conkling v. Pacific Improvement Co., 87 Cal. 296; 25 Pac. 399. Where the diversion, by the defendant, of the water of a stream is against the superior right of the plaintiff, and to the extent of depriving the latter of all the water to which he is entitled, it is not necessary to prove damages, to entitle him to an injunction. Mott v. Ewing, 90 Cal. 231; 27 Pac. 194. The plaintiff's right to an injunction does not depend upon the amount of injury he has received: being a riparian owner, he has a right to the flow of the entire stream, as against any diminution thereof by one not a riparian owner; and the claim of a defendant, that he has a right to divert a portion of its flow authorizes the plaintiff to invoke the aid of equity, in order that this claim may not ripen into a right. Gould v. Eaton, 117 Cal. 539; 38 L. R. A. 181; 49 Pac. 577; and see Moore v. Clear Lake Water-Works, 68 Cal. 146; 8 Pac. 816; Stanford v. Felt, 71 Cal. 249; 16 Pac. 900. An allegation in the complaint in an action to restrain the defendants from diverting the waters of a stream, that the defendants wrongfully claim some pretended and fictitious right to the use of water, does not prejudice the right of the plaintiff to an injunction. Tuolumne Water Co. v. Chapman, 8 Cal. 392. Where the defendant wrongfully obstructed the flow of water into the plaintiff's ditch, and threatened to continue to do so, the plaintiff was entitled to a perpetual injunction, without proof of damages. Spargur v. Heard, 90 Cal. 221; 27 Pac. 198.

Injunction where right depends on disputed questions of law. Where the right for which protection is sought is dependent upon disputed questions of law which have never been settled by the courts of this state, and concerning which there is an actual and existing dispute, equity will withhold relief until the questions of law have been determined by the proper court. Hughes v. Dunlap, 91 Cal. 385; 27 Pac. 642. The circumstances, the consequences of the action, and the real equity of the case, will be considered by a court of chancery, before interposing by injunction, even after the right has been established at law. Peterson v. Santa Rosa, 119 Cal. 387; 51 Pac. 557. Where the title of the plaintiff is disputed by the answer, courts have frequently held that an injunction cannot be granted until the final hearing of the cause; but there is no case holding that a legal determination of the question of title, or pendency of suit for that purpose, is essential to the equitable jurisdiction of the court; the usual practice has been to ask the assistance of equity in such cases, in aid of an action at law; but there are many cases in which the powers of a court of equity have been invoked in the first instance. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107; San Antonio Water Co. v. Bodenhamer, 133 Cal. 248; 65 Pac. 471. The only object in establishing title at law is to show that the right is in the plaintiff; the suit at law is only a means to accomplish a given end, and when that end is already obtained, there is no reason for doing an idle thing; and if the title of the plaintiff is conceded, there is no need of a trial at law to establish what is already admitted. Tuolumne Water Co. v. Chapman, 8 Cal. 392. Where the title of the plaintiff is disputed, and no action at law has been brought, the practice has generally been to direct an issue to be tried by a court of law and to await the action of such court upon the issue so directed; the jurisdiction in such cases rests upon the ground of irreparable mischief, and the policy of preventing a multiplicity of suits, the remedy at law being entirely inadequate as a means of redress. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. A strong showing must be made before the court will grant or sustain an injunction to stop work; there must be urgent necessity, and the title and right of the plaintiff be clear, well established, and not in dispute; and the application should be made promptly, and not delayed until large expenditures have been made. Real Del Monte etc. Mining Co. v. Pond etc. Mining Co., 23 Cal. 82.

Injury, or threats of injury, must be present and existing. An injunction cannot be granted to allay the fears and apprehensions of individuals: they must show that the acts against which they ask protection are not only threatened, but will in all probability be committed, to their injury; it must also be shown that there is at least a reasonable probability that a real injury will occur if the injunction should not be granted. Lorenz v. Waldron, 96 Cal. 243; 31 Pac. 54. No one may go into a court without having some right to enforce or wrong to redress; mere epithets, however profusely used or vehemently expressed, will not supply the place of facts in a pleading; facts must be stated, showing that a right or wrong exists; hence, a complaint for an injunction is insufficient, which does not allege that the plaintiff has been damaged, nor state facts from which such a conclusion can be drawn. Wolfe v. Titus, 124 Cal. 264; 56 Pac. 1042. An injunction applies only to a threatened injury: it has no application to wrongs that have been completed, and for which the injured party may obtain redress in an action at law. Parkinson Co. v. Building Trades Council, 154 Cal. 581; 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 550; 16 Ann. Cas. 1165; 98 Pac. 1027. The doing of an act that has already been performed will not be restrained. Wright v. Board of Public Works, 163 Cal. 328; 125 Pac. 353. It is not necessary to show that injury is inevitable, to enable the plaintiff to maintain an action for an injunction: such a rule would prevent relief in a large class of cases, where the interposition of a court is absolutely necessary to prevent great and irreparable injury; even in plain cases it would seldom be possible to know that injury was certain to occur; that it is very probable, should be made to appear by the statement of facts, from which the court will be able to conclude the injury probable. Nicholson v. Getchell, 96 Cal. 394; 31 Pac. 265. A prayer for an injunction to prevent a future injury is proper, where a suit is brought to test the question of priority of appropriation of water. Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 217. Where the acts complained of were committed before the commencement of the action, and there was no allegation of threats on the part of the defendant to do any other further act or otherwise injure the plaintiff, there is no foundation for a merely preventive injunction. Gardner v. Stroever, 81 Cal. 148; 6 L. R. A. 90; 22 Pac. 483. A plaintiff, claiming to be the owner of a mining location, is not entitled to an injunction to restrain the defendant from mining thereon, where the defendant has not mined thereon and does not threaten to do so. Champion Mining Co. v. Consolidated Wyoming etc. Mining Co., 75 Cal. 78; 16 Pac. 513. A complaint which alleges that the defendant has agreed to furnish the plaintiff with a certain quantity of water, and is about to enter into similar contracts with others, which, in the aggregate, will be beyond the capacity of his resources, does not show that the plaintiff has been or will be injured, and does not entitle him to an injunction. Bank of California v. Fresno Canal etc. Co., 53 Cal. 201. Evidence as to the intention of a board of supervisors, as a quasi-judicial body, in regard to some act not attempted to be performed, should not put the machinery of the courts in motion, nor invoke a writ of injunction, and if the board proceeds in accordance with law, and lets a contract contrary thereto, the taxpayer is not without remedy, but he cannot come into court upon the supposition or belief that a public officer is going to disregard his oath of office and willfully violate the law. Barto v. Board of Supervisors, 135 Cal. 494; 67 Pac. 758; and see McBride v. Newlin, 129 Cal. 36; 61 Pac. 577. A public officer having control of a trust fund will not be restrained or interfered with in his duty of managing the same, except upon a clear showing that such fund is in danger of being wasted or impaired; and acts which would justify such remedy must be such as to show that liability will be incurred or an injury done by threatened or probable malfeasance for which such agent's bond or personal responsibility would afford no possible or adequate redress. San Francisco v. Tallant, 10 Cal. 585. An injunction cannot properly be granted to restrain the defendant from entering upon land sued for, or from in any manner trespassing thereon: one cannot enter or trespass upon land, of which he is already in possession; nor can he be restrained from working thereon, where he does not commit waste. Williams v. Long, 129 Cal. 229; 61 Pac. 1087. A perpetual injunction, restraining the defendant from conducting his business in unlawful manner, does not restrain him from conducting it in a lawful manner, and he has the right at all times to adopt such means as may be within his power for such purpose. People v. Gold Run Ditch etc. Co., 66 Cal. 155; 4 Pac. 1150. Where a contract in restraint of trade is valid, and the complaint states a breach of it, the plaintiff is entitled to an injunction to prevent its violation, even if only nominal damages can be proven. Brown v. Kling, 101 Cal. 295; 35 Pac. 995. Where the plaintiff has proved his right to an injunction against a nuisance or other injury, it is not the duty of the court to inquire in what way the defendant can best remove it: it is the duty of the defendant to find his own way out of the difficulty; and the plaintiff is entitled to an injunction at once, unless the removal of the injury is physically impossible. People v. Gold Run Ditch etc. Co., 66 Cal. 155; 4 Pac. 1150.

To prevent cloud on title. A court of equity will interfere by injunction to prevent a cloud upon a title; but it is not deemed necessary to exercise that authority to the injury of strangers. Goldstein v. Kelly, 51 Cal. 301. The true test by which the question may be determined, whether a deed casts a cloud upon the title is this: Would the owner of the property, in an action of ejectment brought by the adverse party, founded upon the deed, be required to offer evidence to defeat a recovery? and if such proof is necessary, a cloud exists; if the proof is unnecessary, no shade is cast by the presence of the deed. Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127; and see Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337; Marriner v. Smith, 27 Cal. 649; Ramsdell v. Fuller, 28 Cal. 37; 87 Am. Dec. 103; Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165; Grigsby v. Schwarz, 82 Cal. 278; 22 Pac. 1041; Roth v. Insley, 86 Cal. 134; 24 Pac. 853; Woodruff v. Perry, 103 Cal. 611; 37 Pac. 526; Russ v. Crichton, 117 Cal. 695; 49 Pac. 1043. A married woman is entitled to an injunction to restrain the sale, under execution against her husband, of real property purchased by her during coverture, in her own name and with her separate property: such sale casts a cloud upon her title; for, in an action of ejectment, the burden of proof would rest on her to show that the premises were purchased with her separate property or money. Tibbetts v. Fore, 70 Cal. 242; 11 Pac. 648. Where a husband conveyed property to his wife while indebted to a third person, who secured judgments against the husband, the court may grant the wife an injunction, pending the suit to determine the ownership, to restrain the sale of the property, and thus prevent a cloud on the title and a resort to an independent action to remove the cloud. Einstein v. Bank of California, 137 Cal. 47; 69 Pac. 616. The sale of a homestead under execution casts a cloud on the title, and the owner is entitled to have the sale enjoined, as it would be necessary, in an action of ejectment by the purchaser at the sale, for the owner to offer extrinsic evidence to defeat the action. Roth v. Insley, 86 Cal. 134; 24 Pac 853. The sale, by an administrator, of land sold by an intestate during his lifetime, casts a cloud upon the title of the intestate's grantee, and will be restrained. Thompson v. Lynch, 29 Cal. 189. An order of a board of supervisors, laying out a road, which is null and void on its face, creates no cloud upon the title to the land over which it passes, and an injunction will not lie: the owner of the land will be left to his remedy at law. Leach v. Day, 27 Cal. 643. Where a board of supervisors made an order that a road should be opened across private lands, and the owner thereof was not given notice of the proceedings, he is entitled to an order restraining the opening of such road. Silva v. Garcia, 65 Cal. 591; 4 Pac. 628. The deed of a superintendent of streets, after a void sale of the property to satisfy a void assessment, would itself be void, and cast no cloud upon the title, and an injunction will not be granted to restrain the sale. Byrne v. Drain, 127 Cal. 663; 60 Pac. 433. The execution of a sheriff's deed can only be enjoined in a case where the facts alleged by the plaintiff show that, in an action of ejectment founded on the deed, he would be required to offer evidence to overcome the effect of the deed. Schuyler v. Broughton, 65 Cal. 252; 3 Pac. 870. A tax deed, void on its face, cannot cast a cloud upon the title of the owner of the land, and a court of equity will not enjoin the issuance of such void deed. Russ v. Crichton, 117 Cal. 695; 49 Pac. 1043; Bucknall v. Story, 36 Cal. 67. A tax sale for an amount greater than that authorized by law, is void, and an injunction will lie to enjoin the execution of a deed thereon. Axtell v. Gerlach, 67 Cal. 483; 8 Pac. 34. A plaintiff holding a valid certificate of sale for non-payment of taxes may have a sale of the premises, under execution, enjoined, on the ground that such subsequent sale would be a cloud upon his title, or his right to have title; but he must show that everything has occurred which is necessary to occur in order to vest in him the right claimed: an allegation that the property was only sold to satisfy the aforesaid taxes, at public auction, by the tax-collector, to the one to whom the certificate of sale was delivered by the tax-collector, is insufficient, there being no allegation that the certificate stated either of the matters required by the Political Code. Hall v. Theisen, 61 Cal. 524. A court of equity will not interfere to restrain the issuance of a patent for lands, which would not be a cloud upon the plaintiff's title, and does not include any portion of his land, although the patent would be invalid. Taylor v. Underhill, 40 Cal. 471. The allegation, that a deed, if executed, will be a cloud upon the plaintiff's title, is a mere conclusion of law. Schuyler v. Broughton, 65 Cal. 252; 3 Pac. 870.

To prevent a multiplicity of actions. The necessity of preventing a multiplicity of suits warrants the interposition of equity, even though there is a remedy at law; and trespass of a continuing nature, whose constant recurrence renders the remedy at law inadequate, unless by a multiplicity of suits, affords sufficient ground for relief by injunction. Kellogg v. King, 114 Cal. 378; 55 Am. St. Rep. 74; 46 Pac. 166. An averment in the complaint, that the granting of an injunction will prevent a multiplicity of suits, is not sufficient to justify the issuance of the writ, unless it fairly appears from the nature of the subject-matter that a multiplicity of suits would follow if the writ should not be granted: the mere fact that the owner of the land might be compelled to defend his title, or to prosecute an action against a possible asserted claim based upon a void deed, is not sufficient. Byrne v. Drain, 127 Cal. 663; 60 Pac. 433.

Tax proceedings. In all cases involving merely the question of taxation, the issue is strictly one at common law: equity can take no cognizance thereof, and injunctions cannot issue. Minturn v. Hays, 2 Cal. 590; 56 Am. Dec. 366. Where taxes have been illegally imposed, or a valid objection appears on the face of the proceedings, the plaintiff has a perfect remedy at law. Robinson v. Gaar, 6 Cal. 273. The collection of taxes on personal property cannot be restrained by injunction, except where the injury would be irreparable, and this must appear in the bill by some issuable averment, and be sustained if denied; the bill should also show that the tax-collector would not be liable to respond in damages. Ritter v. Patch, 12 Cal. 298. It does not necessarily follow, if a tax is conceded to be illegal, that, for that reason alone, an injunction will lie: a court of equity will not restrain the action of public officers, except where it is necessary to protect the rights of a citizen whose property is taxed, and where he has no adequate remedy at law; it must appear that the enforcement of the tax would lead to a multiplicity of suits, or produce irreparable injury, or, where the property is real estate, would throw a cloud upon the title of the complainant. Savings and Loan Society v. Austin, 46 Cal. 415; Crocker v. Scott, 149 Cal. 575; 87 Pac. 102. A court of equity will not enjoin the issuance of a void tax deed (Russ v. Crichton, 117 Cal. 695; 49 Pac. 1043), nor restrain a sale for taxes, where it is apparent upon the face of the proceedings, upon which the purchaser must necessarily rely to make out a prima facie case to enable him to recover under the sale, that the sale would be void. Bucknall v. Story, 36 Cal. 67. The allegation, that if a sale shall be allowed to proceed the plaintiff will be involved in litigation with the purchasers, is a mere speculation as to probabilities; but non constat that a purchaser will be found, or that there will be more than one, or that, if found, such purchaser would claim the benefit of purchase, or that he would accept, or that the collector would ever execute a deed for the property. Savings and Loan Society v. Austin, 46 Cal. 415. A taxpayer cannot enjoin the collection of taxes due the county, on the ground that he had, in former years, paid taxes assessed on his property, which were illegally assessed and collected. Fremont v. Mariposa County, 11 Cal. 361. Goods stored in a warehouse cannot be assessed to the owner of the warehouse, and an injunction lies to prevent the sale of the warehouse for delinquent taxes upon such goods. Weyse v. Crawford, 83 Cal. 196; 24 Pac. 735. A city has no right to assess and tax a Federal franchise granted to a telegraph company: an assessment by a city upon such franchise is void, and an attempt by the city to levy upon property of the company to satisfy such assessment may properly be restrained by an injunction. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Visalia, 149 Cal. 744; 87 Pac. 1023. Where the board of directors of an irrigation district levies an assessment to pay the interest on bonds, and the disparity between the amount of the assessment and the annual interest is so great as to make it appear that the action of the board is improper, and not in the exercise of any discretion, so that the assessment is excessive, courts are authorized to prevent its enforcement by injunction. Hughson v. Crane, 115 Cal. 404; 47 Pac. 120. The date of the sale for taxes should be alleged, so that the court may know whether or not the action can be tried and determined before such date, and therefore determine the necessity for a temporary injunction. Santa Cruz Fair Bldg. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034.

Street-assessment proceedings. This section does not prevent the issuance of an injunction to restrain city officers from enforcing a street assessment, until it can be determined whether the proceedings preliminary to the assessment deprive the plaintiffs of their property without due process of law. Pierce v. Los Angeles, 159 Cal. 516; 114 Pac. 818. Where a city council has no jurisdiction to authorize the extension of a street, an assessment therefor would create no lien upon the property of the plaintiff, and a purchaser at a sale of the property to satisfy the assessment would acquire no title; such facts would be determined by decree in the action, and the rights of the plaintiff could be thereby fully protected. Santa Cruz Fair Bldg. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034. An injunction will not be granted to restrain a street superintendent from selling real property, under a void sale, to satisfy a void street assessment. Byrne v. Drain, 127 Cal. 663; 60 Pac. 433. A preliminary injunction against a sale of land in satisfaction of a street assessment should be denied, where, if the allegations of the complaint should not be sustained, damages might result to the public and to others than the defendant, while, if the assessment was without jurisdiction, it would create no lien upon the land of plaintiff and a purchaser at the sale would acquire no title. Santa Cruz Fair Bldg. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034. Where the contract between a city and a contractor was legally entered into, and it is not alleged that the work to be done thereunder will injuriously affect the plaintiff, an injunction will not be granted on the ground that by reason of the acceptance of the street the cost of the improvement should be borne at the public expense, as the question as to who shall bear the expense will be determined on completion of the work. Flickinger v. Fay, 119 Cal. 590; 51 Pac. 855.

Change of street grade, where damage not ascertained. Under the constitution, the ascertainment and payment of damages caused by a change of the grade of a street, is a condition precedent to the right of the city to make such change; hence, a property-owner can enjoin such work until his damages have been lawfully ascertained and paid. Wilcox v. Engebretsen, 160 Cal. 288; 116 Pac. 750. A defendant may be properly enjoined from erecting or maintaining any fence more than ten feet high on the division line, and may be required to remove all that portion of the division-fence which is more than ten feet high, and be enjoined from obstructing the light and air coming from his premises into the windows upon the adjoining land by any division fence or wall more than ten feet high; but such judgment has no effect upon the right of the defendant to erect any structure of greater height upon his own land. Western Granite etc. Co. v. Knickerbocker, 103 Cal. 111; 37 Pac. 192. A fence erected wholly upon the land of the defendant, is not a division-fence, within the meaning of the act of March 9, 1885, limiting the height of division-fences and partition-walls in cities and towns; and an adjoining proprietor cannot enjoin such fence as a nuisance, merely because it obstructs the passage of light and air to his building. Ingwersen v. Barry, 118 Cal. 342; 50 Pac. 536.

To prevent enforcement of judgment. Courts of equity interfere with judgments at law, and resort to their high and extraordinary power of interference by injunction, only for the prevention of fraud, or to relieve from substantial injury or gross injustice: for the correction of informalities or irregularities in legal or judicial proceedings, a complainant must prosecute his remedies at law, as from a court of equity he can receive no countenance. Gregory v. Ford, 14 Cal. 138; 73 Am. Dec. 639. A court of equity does not sit for the correction of errors in actions at law: it never grants relief upon the ground of error or mistake in the judgment of a court of law, or because, in deciding a question passed upon by a court of law, it would reach a different conclusion. Reagan v. Fitzgerald, 75 Cal. 230; 17 Pac. 198. Equity may interfere in favor of parties to a judgment, to stop the execution thereof, where it was obtained by imposition upon the court, or by fraud practiced upon the parties; and it will interfere in favor of one who was not a party to the judgment, where its enforcement would work irreparable injury to land of which he is owner and in possession, or deprive him of its use and enjoyment, or create a legal cloud upon his title. Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Shipman, 69 Cal. 586; 11 Pac. 343. Equity interferes with judgments and proceedings at law, only in peculiar cases. Gregory v. Ford, 14 Cal. 138; 73 Am. Dec. 639. Injunctions are granted to restrain proceedings at law, where the facts show that it would be against good conscience to enforce such proceedings, and also show that the injured party could not have availed himself of such facts in a court of law, or of which he might have availed himself at law, but was prevented by fraud or accident, unmixed with any fraud or accident on his part. Reagan v. Fitzgerald, 75 Cal. 230; 17 Pac. 198. Relief in equity against a judgment on the ground of fraud will not be granted, unless the fraud was practiced under such circumstances as to leave a reasonable inference that the injured party was deceived; and if the circumstances attending the deception are such as to put a reasonable person upon inquiry, there can be no presumption of deceit. Champion v. Woods, 79 Cal. 17; 12 Am. St. Rep. 126; 21 Pac. 534. Courts of equity will interfere to enjoin a judgment at law, rendered against a party by reason of fraud or accident, only when unmixed with any fault or negligence of himself or his agents. Phelps v. Peabody, 7 Cal. 50. Ignorance as to the truth of the matters misrepresented, believing the same to be true, is not sufficient, under any circumstances, to warrant relief against the judgment; the situation of the party may be such that he will be deemed in law to have knowledge of the facts, and barred from making complaint, though actually ignorant of the true state of facts; and if the means of knowledge is at hand, and equally available to both parties, and there is no fiduciary or confidential relation, the injured party must show that he availed himself of the means of information existing at the time of the transaction, before he will be heard to say that he was deceived by the misrepresentations of the other party. Champion v. Woods, 79 Cal. 17; 12 Am. St. Rep. 126; 21 Pac. 534. A judgment at law will be enjoined only where the case presents facts not only showing the equitable rights of the complainant, but also that he could not have availed himself of such facts in a legal forum: the tendency of modern legislation and practice is to abridge the necessity for this class of bills, by providing remedies in courts of law for many of the exigencies which called them into existence. Reagan v. Fitzgerald, 75 Cal. 230; 17 Pac. 198. A court of equity will not entertain jurisdiction of a suit for relief against a judgment, merely on the ground that the demand may be unconscionable and that injustice may have been done, provided it was competent for the party to place the matter before the court in the original action, either upon issue joined or upon motion to set aside the verdict or judgment. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440; Ede v. Hazen, 61 Cal. 360. Although a party may set up an equitable defense to an action at law, yet he is not confined to that proceeding: he may let the judgment go at law, and file his bill in equity for relief; and the practice in this state, while it enlarges the field of remedy, does not take away pre-existing remedies by implication. Lorraine v. Long, 6 Cal. 452; Hough v. Waters, 30 Cal. 309; Hills v. Sherwood, 48 Cal. 386; Golson v. Dunlap, 73 Cal. 157; 14 Pac. 576. The plaintiff is not entitled to an injunction to restrain the sale of property levied upon under execution, and to compel the carrying out of a verbal agreement to stay execution for a year, in consideration of a confession of judgment, where he was guilty of laches in not taking advantage of his adequate and speedy legal remedy by motion to set aside the execution, and to stay all legal process until the expiration of the year agreed upon. Moulton v. Knapp, 85 Cal. 385; 24 Pac. 803. Where a verdict was obtained at law against a defendant, and he neglected to apply for a new trial within the time appointed, a court of equity will not entertain a bill for an injunction on the ground that the original demand was unconscionable. Phelps v. Peabody, 7 Cal. 50. A judgment will not be enjoined on matter on which the party relied for a new trial, and which was held insufficient: equity will not give relief, by way of appeal, upon the same facts passed upon in the judgment by the law side of same court. Collins v. Butler, 14 Cal. 223. Fraudulent conduct and deceitful representations, upon the part of a plaintiff in an action at law, by means of which the defendant, who has a meritorious defense, is prevented from interposing it, or has lost the right to move for a new trial, is ground to restrain the enforcement of the judgment. Thompson v. Laughlin, 91 Cal. 313; 27 Pac. 752. A judgment debtor is entitled to an injunction restraining the execution of a judgment at law, where the grounds upon which the injunction is sought could not have been made a defense to the former action, or he was prevented from making the defense by reason of the fraudulent conduct of the judgment creditor. Kelley v. Kriess, 68 Cal. 210; 9 Pac. 129. Where no valid defense was interposed in the original action, and judgment passed in favor of the plaintiff, the defendant cannot afterwards obtain an injunction restraining the collection of the judgment, for reasons which were known, and which should have been interposed as a defense in the original action. Beaudry v. Felch, 47 Cal. 183; Aldrich v. Stephens, 49 Cal. 676; Kelley v. Kriess, 68 Cal. 210; 9 Pac. 129. Deception as to matters of law generally affords no ground of redress or relief; but this rule does not apply to transactions between parties holding fiduciary or confidential relations; and where one, who has had superior means of information, possesses a knowledge of the law, and thereby obtains an unconscionable advantage of another, who is ignorant, and was not in a situation to be informed, the injured party is entitled to relief, as well as if the matters represented were matters of fact. Champion v. Woods, 79 Cal. 17; 12 Am. St. Rep. 126; 21 Pac. 534. Where, after judgment at law, such facts come to light as would authorize the interposition of a court of equity to enjoin the judgment, the bill, which would be in the nature of a bill in equity for a new trial, must distinctly show that such facts are of controlling force; that they were not known to the defendant at the time of trial; that defendant used all proper diligence to prepare his case for trial, and to procure the evidence, but was unable, without fault or negligence on his part, to procure it; that such testimony is now within his control, and that he will be able to procure it on another trial; and the bill should state particularly the facts to be proved, the names of witnesses, and show the bearing and relevancy of the proposed proof, and should also show when and how the facts discovered came to his knowledge, and why no motion for a new trial was made in the trial court. Mulford v. Cohn, 18 Cal. 42. In an action to restrain the enforcement of a voidable judgment, the complaint must show that the plaintiff had a good defense to the action in which the judgment was rendered; such a defense is sufficiently shown, in the absence of a special demurrer, by an allegation that at the time of the entry of the judgment the defendant had no cause of action against the plaintiff. Harnish v. Bramer, 71 Cal. 155; 11 Pac. 888. The enforcement of a judgment, obtained in violation of a written stipulation on file dismissing the action, may be restrained by the court in which the judgment was obtained. McLeran v. McNamara, 55 Cal. 508. Courts of equity will not interfere to enjoin a judgment not manifestly wrong, simply because of a defect in the evidence. Pico v. Suñol, 6 Cal. 294. An execution issued on a judgment will not be restrained on the ground that the judgment has been discharged by a decree in insolvency: the party has a sufficient remedy by motion. Green v. Thomas, 17 Cal. 86; and see Imlay v. Carpentier, 14 Cal. 173. Where the judgment was absolutely void, the party has a perfect remedy, by application to the court, to quash the execution: the court can, at any time, arrest all process issued by its clerk on void judgments; and if the judgment is not absolutely void, but merely irregular, the remedy is by motion before judgment or on appeal, and an injunction to restrain the enforcement thereof does not lie. Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200; Comstock v. Clemens, 19 Cal. 77; Gates v. Lane, 49 Cal. 266; Luco v. Brown, 73 Cal. 3; 2 Am. St. Rep. 772; 14 Pac. 366. Where, in an action to enforce a lien on land for delinquent taxes, there was no service of summons upon nor appearance by the defendant, and the court commissioner drafted a decree, inserting a clause therein that summons had been served, and the judge, deceived by the false recital, signed the decree and ordered it entered, and the court commissioner became the purchaser and obtained a sheriff's deed at the sale of the land, a court of equity will give relief to the owner of the property, by restraining the purchaser from setting up the judgment as an estoppel, or from using it to perpetuate the advantage he has gained. Martin v. Parsons, 49 Cal. 94. Where a party moves for a new trial and fails, and the action of the court was affirmed on appeal, he cannot go into equity to enjoin the judgment on the matters relied upon for relief in the action at law. Collins v. Butler, 14 Cal. 223.

Enjoining default judgments. A defendant, who has no defense to the action, cannot enjoin a judgment by default, on the ground that the sheriff's return of service on him is false, and that he had no notice of the proceeding. Gregory v. Ford, 14 Cal. 138; 73 Am. Dec. 639. An injunction will not lie to enjoin a judgment by default, on the ground that the sheriff's return on the summons does not show the place in which service was made on the defendant, where it was proved, on the hearing of the application for the injunction, that the defendant was served in a certain county in this state, more than forty days before the entry of his default. Pico v. Suñol, 6 Cal. 294. A judgment by default upon a claim cannot be restrained, where the complaint does not allege that the plaintiff ever paid the claim for the recovery of which such action was brought, or that he had any valid defense to the same. Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200. Where a judgment by default is rendered upon an illegal contract, a court of equity will not enjoin the enforcement of the judgment. Pacific Debenture Co. v. Caldwell, 147 Cal. 106; 81 Pac. 314.

Equitable jurisdiction over judgments. See note, ante, § 473.

Enjoining execution sales. An execution sale of personal property cannot be restrained, unless the injury would be irreparable, and this must appear by a clear showing of the plaintiff's right to the property and of the defendant's insolvency. More v. Ord, 15 Cal. 204. A court of equity will entertain an attaching creditor's bill to enjoin an execution sale of the same property, under a judgment recovered in an action where there was a prior attachment, on the ground that such judgment was fraudulent as to such creditor, without requiring him to obtain judgment, execution, and return of nulla bona, where the answer admits the defendant's debt and insolvency, and all other material allegations of the bill, except fraud. Heyneman v. Dannenberg, 6 Cal. 376; 65

Am. Dec. 519. Where a sheriff has notice of the injunction restraining an execution sale, he is bound by the order, although he was not a party to the suit. Buffandeau v. Edmondson, 17 Cal. 436; 79 Am. Dec. 139. In an action to enjoin a sale under an execution issued upon a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace, the complaint must allege that the plaintiff was not served with summons, and that he did not appear in the action in which the judgment was rendered: an allegation that he had no knowledge of the judgment for more than thirty days after its rendition is not sufficient. Farrington v. Brown, 65 Cal. 320; 4 Pac. 26.

Strikes and boycotts. Equity has no jurisdiction to enjoin workmen from not working; their threat not to work for any patrons or customers dealing with the plaintiff, affords no ground for equitable relief. Parkinson Co. v. Building Trades Council, 154 Cal. 581; 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 550; 16 Ann. Cas. 1165; 98 Pac. 1027. Inferences, generalities, presumptions, and conclusions have no place in a pleading for an injunction; therefore an allegation that the defendants are printing and circulating false and malicious publications upon the premises of the plaintiffs, and in the vicinity of their place of business, for the purpose of preventing them from carrying on such business, and to prevent persons from dealing with them, as well as to intimidate both plaintiffs and their employees in the conduct of their business, is insufficient. Davitt v. American Bakers' Union, 124 Cal. 99; 56 Pac. 775. Union men have the right to notify contractors employing union men, having dealings with their employer, whom they have declared unfair for employing non-union men, that their employer has been so declared, and to withdraw patronage from such contractors as continue to deal with such employer; such notice and withdrawal of patronage afford no ground for equitable relief. Parkinson Co. v. Building Trades Council, 154 Cal. 581; 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 550; 16 Ann. Cas. 1165; 98 Pac. 1027.

To stay acts of public officers. There is a marked distinction between a proceeding to stay the acts of an officer, not authorized by the process under which he assumes to act, and a proceeding to stay or suspend the vital force and the direct commands of such process: the former seeks to confine the officer within the limits of the authority conferred by his writ; the latter, to stay and nullify its direct commands. Crowley v. Davis, 37 Cal. 268; and see Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127. The complaint to restrain the levy of a writ of attachment upon improvements to mines, made by the vendee under a contract of sale thereof, is sufficient, where it alleges that, by the terms of the contract, all improvements erected by the vendee are to be the property of the vendor until the mines are paid for. Conde v. Sweeney, 14 Cal. App. 20; 110 Pac. 973. It is error to dissolve an injunction to restrain a sheriff, acting under a writ of attachment, from totally destroying the business of the plaintiff. Dingley v. Buckner, 11 Cal. App. 181; 104 Pac. 478. Where an order for the payment of money is made by a board of supervisors, "without authority of law," as where an effort is made to pay the indebtedness of one fiscal year out of the revenues of another fiscal year, the district attorney may, without an order of the board, bring an action to restrain the payment of such warrant. Tehama County v. Sisson, 152 Cal. 167; 92 Pac. 64. Where a permit from a board of supervisors is necessary before poles may be erected in the streets of a city, and such a permit is issued to one company and denied to another, an injunction cannot be granted to restrain the superintendent of streets from interfering with the erection of poles by the company denied a permit. Mutual Electric Light Co. v. Ashworth, 118 Cal. 1; 50 Pac. 10.

To prevent the enforcement of criminal laws. Evil resorts, devoted exclusively to the persistent violation of the law, can claim no immunity from interference by the police, whose duty it is to take all proper means to suppress them; and where a person establishes a lawful business upon a public passageway, merely as an incident to and dependent for its support upon the patronage of such resorts, and his premises are used as the sole public entrance thereto, he is not entitled to an injunction to restrain the action of the police in their acts of suppression (Pon v. Wittman, 147 Cal. 280; 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 683; 81 Pac. 984); but the inattention of parties in a court of law can scarcely be made a subject for the interference of a court of equity. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440. An injunction will not issue to prevent the suppression of places maintained in violation of law. Asiatic Club v. Biggy, 160 Cal. 713; 117 Pac. 912.

To enjoin proceedings in court of concurrent jurisdiction. The comity which one court owes to another, of concurrent jurisdiction, should always prevent one court from lending itself as an instrument to permit a contempt of the process of the other: the one should regard a party attempting to proceed in defiance of the authority of the other as laboring under the same disability to ask for the action of the court as if he were an alien enemy, or under the ban of a decree of outlawry at common law. Engels v. Lubeck, 4 Cal. 31. One court has no power to enjoin the execution of a judgment or decree of another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction, unless the court rendering such judgment or decree is unable, by reason of its jurisdiction, to afford the relief sought; and the fact that the parties to the injunction proceeding are not the same as the parties to such judgment or decree, does not relieve the case from the operation of the rule, nor can the consent of the parties change the rule or relax its binding force: it is not established and enforced so much to protect the rights of the parties as to protect the rights of courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction, to avoid conflict of jurisdiction, and confusion and delay, in the administration of justice. Crowley v. Davis, 37 Cal. 268; Anthony v. Dunlap, 8 Cal. 26; Rickett v. Johnson, 8 Cal. 34; Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66; 68 Am. Dec. 304; Chipman v. Hibbard, 8 Cal. 268; Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607; Hockstacker v. Levy, 11 Cal. 76; Flaherty v. Kelly, 51 Cal. 145; Judson v. Porter, 51 Cal. 562; Waymire v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 646; 44 Pac. 1086. An injunction does not lie to restrain the execution of the orders or the carrying into effect of the decrees of another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction, where the latter court can afford ample relief; the only ground upon which a court of chancery formerly acted in granting injunctions, under such circumstances, was the inability of a court of law to grant the necessary relief; but as, since the adoption of our codes, the jurisdiction of all our courts is equitable as well as legal, the reason for the exercise of the power has ceased to exist. Rickett v. Johnson, 8 Cal. 34; Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66; 68 Am. Dec. 304; Chipman v. Hibbard, 8 Cal. 268; Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127. The courts of this state, under § 3423 of the Civil Code, cannot restrain persons within the state from prosecuting an action already pending in a domestic or in a foreign jurisdiction, except to prevent a multiplicity of suits. Spreckels v. Hawaiian Commercial etc. Co., 117 Cal. 377; 49 Pac. 353. The superior court of one county has no jurisdiction, upon a bill of discovery filed therein, to enjoin the parties from proceeding with the trial of a prior action pending between them in the superior court of another county, and prohibition will lie to prevent the enforcement of such injunction. Wright v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 469; 73 Pac. 145. The prosecution of a suit in one court cannot be enjoined by another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction, except where the court in which the proceedings sought to be enjoined are pending cannot afford adequate relief (Wilson v. Baker, 64 Cal. 475; 2 Pac. 253); and where the same fraudulent debtor confesses different fraudulent judgments in different jurisdictions, there is also an exception, for it would not then be necessary for the creditors to bring a different suit in each different court; and in cases where the code requires the action to be tried in a particular county, there is also an exception, for the provisions of the statute must be carried out. Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607.

Enjoining mandate of supreme court. The superior court cannot enjoin the execution of a mandate of the supreme court: the order of the supreme court must control, and any conflicting order from the superior court must be disregarded. Quan Wo Chung & Co. v. Laumeister, 83 Cal. 384; 17 Am. St. Rep. 261; 23 Pac. 320.

Prevention of breach of contract not specifically enforceable. An injunction does not lie to prevent the breach of a contract that cannot be specifically enforced. Peterson v. McDonald, 13 Cal. App. 644; 110 Pac. 465.

Justice's court action, where counterclaim exceeds jurisdiction. An action in a justice's court may be enjoined, where the defendant sets up a counterclaim in excess of three hundred dollars. Gregory v. Diggs, 113 Cal. 196; 45 Pac. 261.

Title to public office not triable. The title to public office cannot be tried in a suit for an injunction. Barendt v. McCarthy, 160 Cal. 680; 118 Pac. 228.

Legislative action. The legislature has the actual power to pass any act it pleases, and the supreme court will not interfere by injunction, or otherwise, to prevent the passage of such acts: the constitution has provided other and more appropriate remedies. Nougues v. Douglass, 7 Cal. 65.

Preventing publication of libel. Equity has no jurisdiction to restrain any publication of a literary work, upon the mere ground that it is of a libelous character, and tends to the degradation or injury of the reputation or business of the plaintiff. Bailey v. Superior Court, 112 Cal. 94; 53 Am. St. Rep. 160; 32 L. R. A. 273; 44 Pac. 458.

Joinder of other causes of action. A claim for damages done to the possession of the plaintiff cannot be joined to a bill for an injunction. McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 121. In a complaint in ejectment, the parties may seek, in addition to a recovery of the premises, an injunction restraining the commission of trespass in the nature of waste, pending the action, but the grounds of equity interposition should be stated subsequently to and distinct from those upon which the judgment at law is sought. Natoma etc. Mining Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544. Trespass upon land is a legal injury; to threaten to enter upon and waste it is an equitable injury; but both may be joined in the same complaint, for the statutory reason that both are injuries to property. More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590. The statute of limitations, against the right of an adjoining proprietor to maintain an action for wrongfully removing and disposing of surface water, does not commence to run until actual injury has been occasioned to the adjoining proprietor. Galbreath v. Hopkins, 159 Cal. 297; 113 Pac. 174.

Parties to action. Several abutting property-owners damaged, or threatened to be damaged, in the same manner, may properly join as plaintiffs in a suit to restrain such injury; but, in order to recover damages, they must sue separately. Geurkink v. Petaluma, 112 Cal. 306; 44 Pac. 570. There is a very plain distinction between holding one defendant liable for the past wrongful acts of all the other defendants, and simply enjoining them all from committing wrong in the future. Miller v. Highland Ditch Co., 87 Cal. 430; 22 Am. St. Rep. 254; 25 Pac. 550. Parties to whom municipal bonds are to be issued must be made parties to an action for an injunction to restrain the issuance of the bonds, and without their presence no binding determination of the questions can be had: it is not enough to sustain judgment, that none of the persons entitled to the bonds are made parties. Hutchinson v. Burr, 12 Cal. 103; Patterson v. Board of Supervisors, 12 Cal. 105. Where the plaintiff is entitled to a certain specific amount of the water of a stream, and the defendants severally diverted water therefrom, so that, in the aggregate, the volume is reduced below the amount to which the plaintiff is entitled, it is proper to join the defendants in an action to recover damages for the diversion and to restrain its continuance. Hillman v. Newington, 57 Cal. 56. In an action to abate a public or private nuisance, all persons engaged in the commission of the wrongful acts which constitute the nuisance may be enjoined, jointly or severally: it is the nuisance itself, which, if destructive of public rights, may be enjoined. People v. Gold Run Ditch etc. Co., 66 Cal. 138; 56 Am. Rep. 80; 4 Pac. 1152; and see Miller v. Highland Ditch Co., 87 Cal. 430; 22 Am. St. Rep. 254; 25 Pac. 550. Where an injunction is sought to enjoin several separate and distinct parties, joined as defendants, from so depositing the tailings and débris from their mining claims that they will, from natural causes, flow upon the plaintiff's land, and there is no allegation that the defendants are acting in collusion or in combination with one another, there is a misjoinder of parties defendant. Keyes v. Little York Gold Washing etc. Co., 53 Cal. 724. In an action for an injunction, where the plaintiff claims an appropriative right to take water from a stream, against several defendants, who are alleged to be diverting water therefrom, to the injury of the plaintiff, with no claim for joint damages against them as joint tort-feasors, it is not necessary that the defendants shall be acting in concert, or by unity of design, in order to be joined. Montecito Valley Water Co. v. Santa Barbara, 144 Cal. 578; 77 Pac. 1113.

Injunction against corporation binds officers. An injunction restraining a corporation, its officers, agents, and employees, from continuing or maintaining a dam, is binding upon all persons acting as the agents of the corporation; and an officer of such corporation cannot be permitted to exercise the right of severing his connection therewith, and to acquire property from others, for the mere purpose of treating with contempt the orders and decrees of the court. Morton v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 496; 4 Pac. 489.

Jury trial, and conclusiveness of verdict. The court, sitting in equity, may direct, whenever in its judgment it is proper, an issue to be framed upon the pleadings and submitted to the jury; and upon the verdict of the jury, if a new trial is not granted, the court will then act, either by dismissing the bill or by granting the decree. Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096; Newman v. Duane, 89 Cal. 597; 27 Pac. 66. The defendant is not entitled to a jury trial of all the issues in an injunction suit: where a jury trial is permitted in such suit, the verdict, whatever its form, is merely advisory as to the equity features of the case, if not so as to the damages; if the verdict is general, and is adopted by the court as to the damages, the defendant cannot complain; and the court properly makes full findings upon the question of the right to the injunction which are supported by the evidence. Churchill v. Louie, 135 Cal. 608; 67 Pac. 1052. Where special issues in an equity case are submitted to a jury, the verdict is only advisory to and not binding upon the court; and erroneous instructions to the jury will not be reviewed on appeal, where the court disregards the verdict and finds the facts for itself. Sweetser v. Dobbins, 65 Cal. 529; 4 Pac. 540; Schneider v. Brown, 85 Cal. 205; 24 Pac. 715; Richardson v. Eureka, 110 Cal. 441; 42 Pac. 965; Scheerer v. Goodwin, 125 Cal. 154; 57 Pac. 789. The verdict of the jury in a suit for an injunction, is merely advisory to the court, and erroneous instructions to the jury are not ground for reversing the judgment: the correctness of the decision, and not the correctness of the propositions of law laid down for the guidance of the jury, is the question for determination upon appeal. Richardson v. Eureka, 110 Cal. 441; 42 Pac. 965. With respect to controverted facts arising in suits in equity, the verdict of the jury is not conclusive upon the questions submitted, but is merely advisory: the judge may, when truth and justice require it, set aside the verdict and order a new trial, or may qualify or alter any special findings, or disregard them in whole or in part, and find the facts for himself, or he may approve them in whole or in part, and if approved, they become the findings of court. Sweetser v. Dobbins, 65 Cal. 529; 4 Pac. 540; Sullivan v. Royer, 72 Cal. 248; 1 Am. St. Rep. 51; 13 Pac. 655. The fact that an injunction is prayed for in an action of trespass does not take away any right to have the real issues of fact tried by the jury: the right to a jury trial is not determined by the form of the action, but by the nature of the rights involved; and when the asserted rights upon which any remedy must rest are legal rights, and cognizable in a court of law, such rights must be determined according to the methods of a common-law court. Hughes v. Dunlap, 91 Cal. 385; 27 Pac. 642. The action for trespass upon real property, with a prayer for an injunction, was very common in the early history of this state: it was frequently used to determine mining and water rights, and it was generally conceded that either party had the right to a jury trial. Hughes v. Dunlap, 91 Cal. 385; 27 Pac. 642. An action to restrain the continuance or repetition of a trespass, of such a character as to produce irreparable injury, and for damages already suffered, is an equitable action, and the issues of fact raised by the pleadings should be tried by the court, unless submitted by it to a jury: a judgment, in such a case, based upon a general verdict of a jury, cannot stand. McLaughlin v. Del Re, 64 Cal. 472; 2 Pac. 244. In a suit for an injunction to restrain a threatened trespass upon land, and to recover damages for past trespasses, where certain issues of fact were tried by the jury, and they returned a verdict on all such issues favorable to the defendant, it is error for the court to set aside the verdict of the jury and make findings contrary thereto, and render judgment in favor of the plaintiff. Hughes v. Dunlap, 91 Cal. 385; 27 Pac. 642.

Findings and judgment. Findings showing the construction of a work of a permanent character, disturbing the plaintiff's possession, and which, if permitted to continue, will ripen into an easement, are sufficient to entitle a party to an injunction. Richards v. Dower, 64 Cal. 62; 28 Pac. 113. A finding that "Said levee is upon the line dividing the lands of plaintiff and defendant, and is built partly upon the lands of each," is a sufficient finding that such levee was built upon the land of the plaintiff, to sustain a judgment enjoining the defendant from destroying such levee, alleged by the plaintiff to have been constructed by him on his lands. Belcher v. Murphy, 81 Cal. 39; 22 Pac. 264. Where all the issues made by the pleadings are found for the defendant, an order granting an injunction to the plaintiff is erroneous; and findings on issues outside of the pleadings, in favor of the plaintiff, cannot change the effect: Van Horn v. Decrow, 136 Cal. 117; 68 Pac. 473. Where an injunction is sought to prevent interference with the possession of a dwelling, occupied by a tenant, an omission to find title in the plaintiff's lessor is immaterial, that not being a proper subject of litigation on such application. Zierath v. McCann, 20 Cal. App. 561; 129 Pac. 808. The right of the plaintiff to a final judgment is absolute, where the court adjudicates that he is entitled to a perpetual injunction: such adjudication definitely settles the rights of the parties as to matters litigated; and it is error to insert in the final decree, that the defendant might apply to the court to have the decree and restraining order modified, vacated, and set aside, on the performance of certain acts. People v. Gold Run Ditch etc. Co., 66 Cal. 155; 4 Pac. 1150. Findings by the court are necessary, unless waived; but the absence of such findings from the record is not a fatal defect, unless it affirmatively appears that they were not waived; and where the plaintiff merely moves the court to disregard the verdict of the jury, and to render its findings and decision in favor of the plaintiff, there is no request for findings generally, but for findings of special import; nor is such motion one which counsel is authorized to make. Richardson v. Eureka, 110 Cal. 441; 42 Pac. 965. The final injunction is a matter of strict right in many cases, and is granted as a necessary consequence of the decree; but the preliminary injunction before answer is not a matter of strict right: it is a matter resting altogether in the discretion of the court, and should not be granted, unless the injury is pressing and the delay dangerous. Santa Cruz Fair Bldg. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034. In an action for an injunction, the court may give complete relief, if possible, whether by mandamus or injunction, or both (Fellows v. Los Angeles, 151 Cal. 52; 90 Pac. 137); and under a general prayer for relief, the court may not only quiet the plaintiff's title, but may also enjoin the doing of certain acts, where the facts alleged warrant an injunction. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles Farming etc. Co., 152 Cal. 645; 93 Pac. 869. Where the plaintiff prevails in an action to quiet title, a decree inserted in the judgment, enjoining the defendant from making any further contest on the plaintiff's title, even if not strictly correct, does not injure the defendant: he is not precluded thereby from availing himself of an after-acquired title. Reed v. Calderwood, 32 Cal. 109. After a decree granting a perpetual injunction, there is no existing order of injunction from which an appeal can be taken: the preliminary order of injunction is a provisional remedy, which is merged in the perpetual injunction granted in the final decree, and its functions and operative effect are thereby terminated. Sheward v. Citizens' Water Co., 90 Cal. 635; 27 Pac. 439. An injunction is merely a remedial process; and where the party obtaining the injunction has also obtained judgment upon his cause, thus establishing his right to the main relief applied for, the propriety of granting the right will not be revised on appeal. Hicks v. Davis, 4 Cal.

67. Voluntary fraternal organizations are not recognized as legal bodies, or as entitled to recognition in courts for the enforcement of their rules, unless there is also involved the determination of some civil right, or some right of property; and in these cases, courts are limited to inquiring whether the rules prescribed by the organization for the determination of the right have been followed; and in all matters of policy, or of the internal economy of the organization, the rules by which the members have agreed to be governed constitute the charter of their rights, and courts will not take cognizance of any matter arising under these rules. CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. When injunction will be granted. Where one has an outstanding deed which clouds the title of the true owner, on the application of the latter, equity will order such deed to be canceled, and so, on like application, will interfere and prevent a sale, and the consequent execution of an improper deed. Shattuck v. Carson, 2 Cal. 589. If the complaint sets forth a lease and contract to pay in kind, a refusal to pay rent, and contains an allegation that the crop is being removed, with intent to defraud the plaintiff of his rent, and a prayer for an injunction. Held, that the injunction could not issue, because the plaintiff did not aver the insolvency of defendant, and an inability to make the rent on attachment or execution. Gregory v. Hay, 3 Cal. 334. A sheriff may be enjoined from selling the real property of the wife under an execution against the husband. Alverson v. Jones, 10 Cal. 9; 70 Am. Dec. 689. Such a sale would cloud the wife's title to the property, as the deed of the sheriff would convey to the purchaser a prima facie title, which she would have to overcome by proof. Id. That part of the act which prescribes that no injunction shall be issued against the commissioners appointed for the sale of the state interest within the water line, is invalid. Guy v. Hermance, 5 Cal. 73; 63 Am. Dec. 85; Stone v. Elkins, 24 Cal. 127. Equity will take jurisdiction of an action by attaching creditors of an insolvent to restrain proceedings on execution against the property attached under a judgment against the debtor, in favor of another, alleged to have been obtained by fraud, where all the material allegations of the complaint, except fraud, are admitted. Heyneman v. Dannenberg, 6 Cal. 376; 65 Am. Dec. 519. A ferry-owner, prevented from obtaining a renewal of his license, either by the incompetency or refusal of the supervisors to act in the premises, may, by injunction, restrain another party from running a ferry under an illegal license, granted by the county judge, within a mile of the first established ferry. Chard v. Stone, 7 Cal. 117.

The right of a party to enjoin a sale of his property for another's debt, affirmed in Hickman v. O'Neal, 10 Cal. 294; Ford v. Rigby, 10 Cal. 449. The right of homestead existing, a deed from the sheriff, under an execution against the husband, would be a cloud upon the title. Dunn v. Tozer, 10 Cal. 167. A. leased furniture to B.; during the lease, F. bought the furniture of A., B. remaining in possession and acknowledging F.'s title. J., sheriff, having an execution in favor of R. and against A., levied on the furniture as the property of A. F. thereupon filed his bill to enjoin the sale. Held, that the remedy by injunction is the only speedy, adequate, and unembarrassed remedy the lessor has to vindicate his rights. Ford v. Rigby, 10 Cal. 449. The jurisdiction of a court to enjoin a sale of real estate is coextensive with its jurisdiction to set aside, and order to be canceled, a deed of such estate. It is not necessary for its assertion in the latter case, that the deed should be operative, if suffered to remain uncanceled, to pass the title, or that the defense to the deed should rest in extrinsic evidence, liable to loss, or be available only in equity. It is sufficient to call into exercise the jurisdiction of the court that the deed clouds the title of the plaintiff. As in such case the court will remove the cloud, by directing the cancellation of the deed, so it will interfere to prevent a sale from which a conveyance creating such a cloud would result. Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127. The true test by which the question whether a deed would cloud the title of the plaintiff may be determined is this: Would the owner of the property, in an action of ejectment brought by the adverse party, founded upon the deed, be required to offer evidence to defeat a recovery? If such proof would be necessary, the cloud would exist, otherwise not. Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127; Ramsdell v. Fuller, 28 Cal. 37; 87 Am. Dec. 103; Thompson v. Lynch, 29 Cal. 189. A complaint alleging that plaintiffs had, for a long time, conveyed water from a stream, for mining purposes, by means of a ditch, and had thus acquired a prior right to the enjoyment and use of the water, and were in the peaceable possession thereof when defendants wrongfully diverted the same, and deprived plaintiffs thereof, and were continuing so to do, is sufficient to entitle the party to an injunction. Tuolumne Water Co. v. Chapman, 8 Cal. 392. Where a party has given a promissory note, and the payee has assigned the note, without recourse, after maturity, and suit is brought upon it by the assignee, the maker then files his bill against the assignor and assignee, alleging fraud in obtaining the note, and praying for an injunction, and that the note be canceled, it was held that the case was a proper one for equitable relief, and the maker had the right to have the note canceled. Domingo v. Getman, 9 Cal. 97.

Where the statute for the condemnation of land for road purposes is unconstitutional, or its provisions are not strictly pursued, or the compensation is not tendered to the owner, a perpetual injunction against opening the road will be granted. Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 431. An injunction will be granted, at the suit of the mortgagee of real property, to restrain the commission of waste upon the premises; but, before it can be granted, it must appear that the commission of the threatened waste will materially impair the value of the mortgaged property, so as to render it inadequate security for the mortgaged debt, and that the defendants are insolvent, or unable to respond in damages for the threatened injury. Robinson v. Russell, 24 Cal. 473. A sale by a sheriff, of real estate, upon an execution, against the grantor, will, even if not effectual to pass the title to the purchaser, create a doubt as to the validity of the grantee's title, and cast a cloud upon it, and the grantee can maintain an action to enjoin the sale. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. In an action by the state to procure the cancellation of a patent for land sold without authority of law, where the person claiming under the patent is engaged in removing mineral from the land, the state is entitled to an injunction to restrain the defendant from removing the same. People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 352. Courts of equity may restrain the commission of a trespass about to be committed, by taking down fences and opening a road through the plaintiff's land, in pursuance of an order of the board of supervisors, illegally made. Grigsby v. Burtnett, 31 Cal. 406; More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590. Where the plaintiffs are owners of mining claims located in the bed of a creek, and defendants own claims situated on a hill in the vicinity, the refuse matter from which is deposited on plaintiffs' claims to such an extent as to render the working of them impracticable, plaintiffs' claims being first located, and valuable only for the gold they contain. Held, that plaintiffs are entitled to damages for the injuries done their claims by such deposit, and to an injunction against the same in future. Logan v. Driscoll, 19 Cal. 623; 81 Am. Dec. 90. Injunction will lie to stay a threatened injury to a right of way. Kittle v. Pfeiffer, 22 Cal. 485. The construction of a reservoir across the bed of a ravine, for the purpose of collecting the water flowing down the same, for use in irrigating a garden of fruit-trees, gives the party constructing the same a right of property in the reservoir, and the right to have the water flow into the same, of which he cannot be divested by persons subsequently entering for mining purposes, and a court of equity will enjoin miners thus entering from injuring the reservoir, or diverting the water therefrom. Rupley v. Welch, 23 Cal. 452.

2. When an injunction will not be granted. Persons performing labor upon or furnishing materials for a building erected by the lessee upon a leased lot, and who have a lien for the value thereof, are entitled to an injunction restraining a judgment creditor of the lessee, whose judgment is younger than the lien, from removing the building from the lot when the security is insufficient without such building. Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 497. If the title to a mining claim is in dispute, an injunction may be granted to preserve the property pending the litigation. Hess v. Winder, 34 Cal. 270. Where the complaint alleges that the plaintiffs are the owners and in possession of a tract of land; that defendants are insolvent, and threaten to, and will, enter upon said land, and by excavations, embankments, and diverting valuable springs and streams thereon, despoil it of the substance of the inheritance, and create a cloud upon plaintiff's title, injunction lies. Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 306; 73 Am. Dec. 575. Where premises containing deposits of gold are held under a patent from the United States, an injunction lies to prevent persons from excavating ditches, digging up the soil, and flooding a portion of the premises, for the purpose of extracting the gold. Henshaw v. Clark, 14 Cal. 460; Boggs v. Merced Mining Co., 14 Cal. 279. An injunction lies to restrain trespass in entering upon a mining claim, and removing auriferous quartz from it, where the injury threatens to be continuous and irreparable. It comports more with justice to restrain the trespass, than to leave the plaintiff to his remedy at law. Merced

Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 317; 68 Am. Dec. 262. Plaintiff took 212 acres of land under the possessory act of this state, inclosed it, and planted it with fruit and ornamental trees and shrubbery. The defendants entered upon a portion of the tract for mining purposes, dug up and destroyed the trees and shrubbery, and threatened to continue such trespass, claiming the right so to do by paying to plaintiff the money value of the trees, etc. Plaintiff sued for damages for the trespasses committed, and asks a perpetual injunction against future trespasses. Verdict: "We, the jury, award the plaintiff forty-two dollars damages." Judgment accordingly, the court refusing to perpetuate the injunction. Plaintiff had recovered a similar verdict in a previous suit. Held, that the verdict is conclusive of the rights of the parties, and that perpetual injunction against the trespasses should issue; that the nature of the property, destroyed and threatened to be destroyed, is such that the injury is irreparable; that plaintiff is not bound to take the mere money value of the trees, as they may possess a peculiar value to him. Daubenspeck v. Grear, 18 Cal. 443. A threatened trespass on land, where the trespass, if committed, would destroy the substance of the land, which could not be specifically replaced, will be enjoined, even if the plaintiff is in possession of the land. More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590. Cutting, destroying, or removing growing timber, is ground for an injunction, without an allegation of insolvency. Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544. In cases of waste, if anything is about to be taken from the land, which cannot be restored in specie, it is no objection to the injunction that the party making it may possibly recover what others may deem as equivalent in money. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. Against the cutting of timber the owner of real property is entitled to an injunction. Whilst the timber is growing, it is part of the realty, and its destruction constitutes that kind of waste, the commission of which a court of equity will restrain. When once cut, the character of the property is changed; it has ceased to be a part of the realty, and has become personalty, but its title is not changed. It belongs to the owner of the land as much after as previously, and he may pursue into whosesoever hands it goes, and is entitled to all the remedies for its recovery which the law affords for the recovery of any other personal property wrongfully taken or detained from its owner. And if he cannot find the property to enforce its specific return, he may waive the wrong committed in its removal and use, and sue for the value as upon an implied contract of sale. Halleck v. Mixer, 16 Cal. 574. After a decree foreclosing a mortgage, the mortgagor in possession may be restrained from the commission of waste. Whitney v. Allen, 21 Cal. 233; Robinson v. Russell, 24 Cal. 473. In an action for a trespass upon a mining claim, where the complaint avers that defendants are working upon and extracting the mineral from the claim, and prays for perpetual injunction, and the answer admits the entry and work, and takes issues upon the titles; if the jury to whom the issue of title is submitted finds in favor of the plaintiffs, it is the duty of the court to grant the equitable relief sought, and perpetually enjoin defendants from future trespasses. McLaughlin v. Kelly, 22 Cal. 211. Equity will restrain a sale of property for illegal taxes, since a tax deed is made prima facie evidence of title. Palmer v. Boling, 8 Cal. 388, and Fremont v. Boling, 11 Cal. 387, overruling De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463, 56 Am. Dec. 352, and Robinson v. Gaar, 6 Cal. 275. Where an assessment and sale for taxes would be void, and the matters making them void do not appear on the face of the tax-collector's deed, but must be shown by intrinsic proof, and the deed upon its face would be prima facie valid, injunction may be granted to restrain the sale. Burr v. Hunt, 18 Cal. 303. An injunction will not be granted at the suit of the landlord against a tenant to restrain the removal of buildings erected by the tenant, if it appears that the landlord is not entitled to the reversion, it not appearing that the security for the rent will be impaired by the removal. Perrine v. Marsden, 34 Cal. 14. A court will not enjoin a tax sale, when it is apparent upon the face of the proceedings upon which the purchaser must rely to make out a case to enable him to recover under the sale, that the sale would be void. Bucknall v. Story, 36 Cal. 67. Equity will not restrain by injunction the diversion of water until the party complaining is in a condition to use it. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 282. Equity will not interfere by injunction to restrain naked trespasses, where there is no waste committed. Id. Equity will not restrain the execution of a judgment in forcible entry and detainer against a husband for land claimed by the wife as her separate estate, upon the ground that she was not made a party to the proceedings, or that she was a sole trader. Saunders v. Webber, 39 Cal. 287. Equity will not restrain the issuance of a patent which does not include any part of plaintiff's land, nor cloud his title, though it be admitted that the patent would not be void on its face, but would require evidence dehors to show its invalidity. Taylor v. Underhill, 40 Cal. 471. In an action by an individual to restrain the sale of tide-lands by the state, it is not sufficient to allege in the complaint that the state has no title, but it must be shown in what manner the title was lost. Farish v. Coon, 40 Cal. 33. It is not an abuse of discretion to deny the prayer for a temporary injunction when all the equities of the complaint are denied by affidavits. Kohler v. Mayor and Common Council, 39 Cal. 510. A judgment in ejectment will not be enjoined on grounds which could have been set up as a legal defense in the action at law. Agard v. Valencia, 39 Cal. 292. An injunction should not be granted, unless equitable circumstances, beyond the allegation of irreparable injury, be shown, as insolvency, impediments to a judgment at law, or to adequate legal relief, or a threatened destruction of the property, or the like. Burnett v. Whitesides, 13 Cal. 156. Nor will an injunction be granted in aid of an action of trespass, unless it appear that the injury will be irreparable and cannot be compensated in damages. Waldron v. March, 5 Cal. 119. Where the plaintiff pretends no right to the soil, but only to a franchise, sale of the realty cannot work irreparable damage, nor cloud the title. De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463; 56 Am. Dec. 352. An injunction will not be granted to restrain the commission of a trespass, where the party complaining has a complete and adequate remedy at law. Leach v. Day, 27 Cal. 643. The trustees of a mining corporation will not be enjoined from selling stock for assessments, in cases where the assessment was levied for the purpose of paying the proper and legal expenses of the company, if the assessment does not exceed the amount allowed by law. Sullivan v. Triunfo Gold etc. Min. Co., 29 Cal. 585. When the court is satisfied that a wharf erected in tide-waters, and upon soil thereunder, belonging to the state, is not a public nuisance, an injunction will be refused, or dissolved, if one has been granted. People v. Davidson, 30 Cal. 379. When there is no pretense that any injury was occasioned willfully, and there is no finding of unskillfulness, an injunction will not issue to prevent the exercise of a party's right to irrigate his crops, although an annoyance or injury may thereby be occasioned to the plaintiffs. Gibson v. Puchta, 33 Cal. 310. If a judgment by default is void, because of the absence of the seal of the district court to the summons, or because of a defect in the certificate of the sheriff of the service of the summons, or because of irregularities of the clerk in entering the judgment, an injunction to restrain the enforcement thereof does not lie. The remedy is by application to the district court to quash the execution. Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200. In a case where the board of supervisors of San Joaquin, under the act of 1860 (Stats. 1860, p. 317), authorizing them to levy a special tax for the construction and repair of seven public highways leading from the city of Stockton, the fourth of which was "a road running from the limits of Stockton via Hamilton's Ranch, known as the Sonora Road," levied and collected the tax, and then, July 10, 1860, passed an order locating the route of this fourth road, along which plaintiffs lived, and afterwards assessed the damages to the owners of land, etc., but before they had obtained the right of way for the road, passed another order in March, 1861, annulling the first order and changing the location of the road, which rendered the lands of plaintiffs of less value. It was held that the first order was unexecuted; that no rights of plaintiffs had vested; and that the board had power to make the second order; that the first order was not in the nature of a power exercised and exhausted, but was, at most, a proposed mode of executing a power, which could be changed at any time before rights had vested under it. Burkett v. Supervisors of San Joaquin, 18 Cal. 702. The mortgagee of a lot on which there is a house cannot enjoin the mortgagor or his assigns from removing the house from the lot, except upon proof that the lot, without the house, will be an inadequate security for the mortgage debt. Buckout v. Swift, 27 Cal. 433; 87 Am. Dec. 90. If an order of a board of supervisors laying out a road is unconstitutional, and null and void upon its face, it does not affect or cloud the title to the land over which it passes, and an injunction will not be granted to restrain the carrying of the order into effect, but the party will be left to his remedy at law. Leach v. Day, 27 Cal. 643. An order whereby the bringing of an action is restrained will be reversed, notwithstanding an undertaking on injunction has been given. King v. Hall, 5 Cal. 82. Where the complaint and evidence show that a defendant is in possession of a tract of land, claiming and holding under an adverse title, and the weight of evidence is in favor of his title, an injunction will not be granted on the application of a party claiming title to the land, to prevent the defendant from cutting timber. Smith v. Wilson, 10 Cal. 528. Plaintiffs file their complaint to enjoin defendants from diverting a certain quantity of the water of Bear River, alleging that their right to one thousand inches of the water of that stream, as against defendants, was adjudicated in a former action. In that action, which was trespass for the diversion of the water, it was alleged that this quantity of the water of the stream had been appropriated by the plaintiffs for mill purposes; that such quantity was necessary for their use, and that defendants had diverted the same to their damage, etc. Plaintiffs had verdict and judgment for twenty-one thousand eight hundred dollars damages. It was held that the averments are insufficient to entitle plaintiff to an injunction, the scope of the bill being simply to enforce in equity plaintiff's alleged right to one thousand inches of water, on the sole ground that it was adjudged as their right in the former suit. McDonald v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 15 Cal. 148. A vendor of real estate made a conveyance of it to the vendee, leaving a balance of the purchase-money unpaid. The vendee afterwards mortgaged the same property to a third person, who had knowledge of the vendor's claim for unpaid purchase-money. The vendor brought an action against the vendee, obtained judgment for the balance due, issued execution, and sold the interest of the vendee in the property. The mortgagee afterwards foreclosed his mortgage, and was about to sell the property. The purchaser at the previous sale obtained an injunction to stay the sale, which was afterwards dissolved by the court, on the ground that he had purchased merely the vendee's equity of redemption, as the sale was subject to the rights of the mortgagee. It was held that the judgment of the court below was correct, and that the claim of the purchaser to be subrogated to the equitable lien of the vendor, if available at all, must be asserted in a separate equitable action. Allen v. Phelps, 4 Cal. 256. An injunction will not lie to restrain the collection of a judgment, on the ground that the judgment was for a balance of purchase-money of land under covenant for a good title, while in fact the grantor had no title, as long as the purchaser against whom the judgment was taken, and who seeks to enjoin it, remains in possession of the land. Jackson v. Norton, 6 Cal. 187. Courts of equity will not interfere to enjoin a judgment not manifestly wrong, because of a defect in the evidence. Pico v. Sunol, 6 Cal. 294. A stranger to the title of real property, though in possession, cannot enjoin the purchasers and owners thereof from setting up and enforcing their title, on the ground that it was fraudulently and illegally acquired by them of a third person, who does not complain. Treadwell v. Payne, 15 Cal. 496. Defendants claiming title under a Mexican grant, and a patent issued upon its confirmation by the United States, bring an action against plaintiffs for certain premises in their occupation; plaintiffs, claiming as United States pre-emptioners, then file their complaint in the same court to enjoin defendants from introducing in evidence the survey, plat, or patent, on the trial of the ejectment, until the determination of an action, averred to be pending in the United States circuit court, by the United States against defendants and others claiming with them, to annul the survey, plat, and patent, on the ground of fraud in the survey, and in procuring the patent, the complaint also averring such fraud. Held, that injunction does not lie; that the patent, until set aside, is conclusive evidence of the validity of the grant, of its recognition and confirmation, and also of the regularity of the survey, and of its conformity with the decree of confirmation; and that defendants, claiming to be pre-emptioners upon land of the United States, have no standing in court to resist the patent. Ely v. Frisbie, 17 Cal. 250. Where the board of supervisors of a county allowed an account presented for services as tax-collector, and the auditor drew his warrant in favor of E. for the amount, and he assigned it to defendant M., a purchaser in good faith without notice. Held, that the county cannot enjoin its collection as against M., on the ground that the account was false and fraudulent as to some of its items, and was allowed by the board, through ignorance of the facts and mistake; that the supervisors were acting within the scope of their authority, and the county cannot visit upon an innocent party the consequences of their negligence. El Dorado County v. Elstner, 18 Cal. 144. If the judgment and execution are void upon their face, an injunction will not be granted to restrain a sale of property levied under the execution, or the issuing of any other execution on the judgment. Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170. When an assessment is made upon land in the city of San Francisco, it is not within the province of a court to interfere and order a sale of the land by a decree rendered in an injunction suit, instituted by the owner of the land for the purpose of preventing a sale under an ordinance of the city. Weber v. San Francisco, 1 Cal. 455. In all cases involving simply the question of taxation, the issue is strictly one at common law, and equity cannot grant an injunction. Minturn v. Hays, 2 Cal. 590; 56 Am. Dec. 366. That the assessment for state and county taxes for 1855–56, in San Francisco County, was not based on the valuation of the city assessor, as required by the act creating the board of supervisors, passed in 1851, is not ground for an injunction upon the collection of the taxes, as the party could have appealed to the board of equalization if aggrieved. Merrill v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 41. An injunction will not lie to restrain the collection of taxes due on property unless it be shown that the injury resulting from the collection would be irreparable. An averment of this character must appear in the complaint, and, if denied, it must be sustained at the hearing. Ritter v. Patch, 12 Cal. 298. Courts of equity are always ready to grant relief from sales made upon their decrees, where there has been irregularity in the proceedings, rendering the title defective, as well when the purchaser or parties interested have been misled by a mistake of law as to the operation of the decree as when they have been misled by a mistake of fact as to the condition of the property, or the estate sold, if application be made to them in suits in which such decrees are entered, within a reasonable time, and the relief sought will not operate to the prejudice of the just rights of others. Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 470; 76 Am. Dec. 540. The extent of the relief in such cases is matter resting very much in the sound discretion of the court. The general rule is, that the purchaser will be released and a resale ordered, or such new or additional proceedings directed as may obviate the objections arising from those originally taken, when the consequences of the mistake are such that it would be inequitable, either to the purchaser or the parties, to allow the sale to stand. But when the relief is sought in one action from a purchase made upon a mistake of law to the effect of a decree rendered in another action, it seems that the ordinary rules as to mistakes of law should apply, and, from such, courts of equity seldom relieve. Id. Where, in a suit before a justice of the peace, defendant answers, disputing plaintiff's claim, and afterwards, on a day set for trial, plaintiff being present, but defendant absent, and no one appearing for him, the justice renders judgment for plaintiff, without evidence and "by default," as the docket reads, it was held that if the justice erred in his judgment the remedy is by appeal, and that such error cannot be corrected by equity. Hunter v. Hoole, 17 Cal. 418; Comstock v. Clemens, 19 Cal. 77. Plaintiff has a deed of property from H. & P. Subsequently N., execution creditor of H. & P., causes the sheriff to levy on the property. Plaintiff files his complaint to restrain the sale, as casting a cloud on his title. Court below found plaintiff's deed to be, in effect, a mortgage. Held, that the bill must be dismissed; that the purchaser at the sheriff's sale would only acquire the interest of the judgment debtors, H. & P.; that plaintiff's right as mortgagee would be unaffected by the sale, and hence there was no necessity for equity to interfere in his behalf. Purdy v. Irwin, 18 Cal. 350. Where a party moves for a new trial and fails, he cannot, on the same facts, enjoin the judgment rendered. Collins v. Butler, 14 Cal. 223. Defendant, as coroner, levied on and advertised for sale the interest of T. in certain property in the hands of a receiver appointed in a suit between J. & T., as partners. It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to an injunction restraining the sale, unless the injury would be irreparable, and this must appear by a clear showing of plaintiff's right to the property and defendant's insolvency. More v. Ord, 15 Cal. 206. Plaintiff purchased certain property under a foreclosure sale, made a mortgage executed by one Pender, to which decree all persons in interest were parties, among them defendants here. The interest of defendants Wemple and Pender was foreclosed in the usual form. Plaintiff seeks to enjoin a sale of the premises under a decree in favor of Wemple against Pender, to enforce a mechanic's lien. Plaintiff was not a party to the suit of Wemple v. Pender, and has not yet got a sheriff's deed. It was held that injunction does not lie; that plaintiff is but the purchaser of an equity, the decree of foreclosure not cutting off the rights of the mortgagor, Pender; that he, being entitled to possession under the sheriff's deed, and also having the equity of redemption, could dispose of this right, and it might, under our statute, be sold for his debts; and if he chose to recognize the validity of Wemple's lien, or its enforcement, or sale under judgment, plaintiff cannot complain, his rights not being affected by the proceedings, as he was not a party. Macovich v. Wemple, 16 Cal. 104. If a judgment by default is void because of the absence of the seal of the district court to the summons, or because of a defect in the certificate of the sheriff of the service of summons, or because of irregularities of the clerk in entering the judgment, an injunction to restrain the enforcement thereof does not lie. Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200. Where a party, relying on the verbal assurance of the attorney on the other side that he would agree to a statement, did not obtain the certificate of the referee, such party cannot be considered free from fault and negligence, and he is not in a position to invoke the aid of equity to enjoin a judgment obtained against him. Phelps v. Peabody, 7 Cal. 50. If a party enters judgment for too much, or before the whole amount is due, it is not conclusive, but only primary evidence of fraud to avoid the judgment. Patrick v. Montader, 13 Cal. 442, overruling Taaffe v. Josephson, 7 Cal. 356. An injunction to stay proceedings under a judgment obtained by neglect of a party or counsel, cannot be sustained, where, if the neglect were excusable, full relief might have been had on motion in the original action. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440. For, to obtain the aid of equity, a party must show that he has exhausted all proper diligence to defend in the suit in which judgment was rendered. Riddle v. Baker, 13 Cal. 304; Sparks v. De la Guerra, 14 Cal. 108. Nor can defendant, having no defense to an action, go into equity and enjoin a judgment by default, on the ground that the sheriff's return of service on him is false, and that he had no notice of the proceeding. Gregory v. Ford, 14 Cal. 141; 73 Am. Dec. 639; Gibbons v. Scott, 15 Cal. 286; Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 202. If a judgment by default is void for the reason that it was entered by the clerk, without authority, that fact constitutes no ground for equity to interfere. Chipman v. Bowman, 14 Cal. 157.

3. Doubtful cases. A purchaser of standing timber is not entitled to an injunction to stay waste committed by the cutting of the timber. An injunction to restrain an injury in the nature of waste should not be granted before hearing on the merits, except in cases of urgent necessity, etc. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. Whether ditch property, situated in the mineral regions of the state, is to be regarded by courts of equity with the same measure of favor which is bestowed by them upon land which is cherished by the owner for itself, is doubted, but not decided, in Clark v. Willett, 35 Cal. 534.

4. Granting and continuing injunctions. How far discretionary. Granting and continuing an injunction rest, in a great degree, in the discretion of the court or judge. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. Abuse should be guarded against, and the discretion ought to be exercised in favor of the party most liable to be injured. Hicks v. Compton, 18 Cal. 206; De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463; 56 Am. Dec. 352; Real del Monte etc. Min. Co. v. Pond etc. Min. Co., 23 Cal. 82; Slade v. Sullivan, 17 Cal. 102. In Hess v. Winder, 34 Cal. 270, a preliminary injunction had been granted. Upon appeal to the supreme court, a judgment in favor of plaintiff was reversed, and a new trial ordered. Held, that granting a new trial did not entitle the defendants to a modification or dissolution of the injunction, but that it should be retained.

5. Effect of injunction. An injunction restrains not only the party, but other courts, on grounds of comity. Engels v. Lubeck, 4 Cal. 31. It cannot be granted to affect the rights of parties who cannot be heard, and who are not secured by the undertaking. Patterson v. Board of Supervisors, 12 Cal. 105. A violation of an injunction order, by the defendant's agents, servants, or employees, is, in law, a violation by the defendant himself, so as to render him liable for contempt. Field v. Chapman, 13 Abb. Pr. 320; Field v. Hunt, 22 How. Pr. 329; Field v. Hunt, 24 How. Pr. 463; Field v. Chapman, 15 Abb. Pr. 434; People v. Albany etc. R. R. Co., 12 Abb. Pr. 171; 20 How. Pr. 358; Neale v. Osborne, 15 How. Pr. 81.

6. Revival of injunction. The court, when the matter has been once disposed of, may, on proper showing, revive an injunction once dissolved, or grant an injunction previously denied, and this is the extent of its power. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. When a preliminary injunction is dissolved upon granting a nonsuit, and the judgment is afterwards reversed on appeal, the plaintiff, upon a proper application, is entitled to a renewal of the injunction. Harris v. McGregor, 29 Cal. 124; see also Hess v. Winder, 34 Cal. 270, cited in subd. 4 of this note.

§ 526a. Actions by taxpayers to enjoin illegal expenditure or waste by public. An action to obtain a judgment, restraining and preventing any illegal expenditure of, waste of, or injury to, the estate, funds, or other property of a county, town, city or city and county of the state, may be maintained against any officer thereof, or any agent, or other person, acting in its behalf, either by a citizen resident therein, or by a corporation, who is assessed for and is liable to pay, or, within one year before the commencement of the action, has paid, a tax therein. This section does not affect any right of action in favor of a county, city, town, or city and county, or any public officer; provided, that no injunction shall be granted restraining the offering for sale, sale, or issuance of any municipal bonds for public improvements or public utilities.

2. Amended by Stats. 1913, adding the proviso at end of section.

Taxpayer's action to enjoin illegal public expenditures. A board of supervisors before the adoption of this section could not, at the suit of a taxpayer, be restrained from incurring liabilities which could not be a legal charge against the county (Linden v. Case, 46 Cal. 171), nor from allowing an alleged illegal claim; nor could the county auditor be enjoined from drawing the same, nor the county treasurer from paying it. McBride v. Newlin, 129 Cal. 36; 61 Pac. 577. Every taxpayer is interested in the amount of the taxes to be collected on his property, and he may properly commence proceedings to enjoin a city council from doing an act which may result in an addition to the burdens of taxation. Schumacker v. Toberman, 56 Cal. 508. A taxpayer of a county has such an interest in the proper application of funds belonging to the county, that he may maintain an action to prevent their withdrawal from the treasury in payment or satisfaction of demands which have no validity against the county; and he may sue to enjoin the county auditor from drawing his warrant in payment for the purchase of land, of which no notice has been published (Winn v. Shaw, 87 Cal. 631; 25 Pac. 968); under this section, the right to sue to prevent illegal payments by a county treasurer is limited to a resident citizen or corporation, who is liable to pay a tax in the county, or who has paid a tax therein one year before the commencement of the action. Thomas v. Joplin, 14 Cal. App. 662; 112 Pac. 729. A complaint to enjoin the allowance and payment of an illegal claim, which does not allege that any claim therefor has been made out or filed with the board of supervisors, or that any such claim will be presented, is fatally defective. McBride v. Newlin, 129 Cal. 36; 61 Pac. 577; and see Barto v. Board of Supervisors, 135 Cal. 494; 67 Pac. 758. And he may sue to enjoin the consummation of an illegal contract, where it is proposed to take all the public moneys of the municipality out of the hands of the legal custodian, and place them in the possession and control of a private corporation (Yarnell v. Los Angeles, 87 Cal. 603; 25 Pac. 767); and he may sue to prevent an untrue official declaration of the result of an election on a proposition to issue bonds, and to have the true declaration made, whether the result of the election be for or against the issuance of the bonds (Gibson v. Board of Supervisors, 80 Cal. 359; 22 Pac. 225); and he may maintain an action to restrain a board of education from drawing drafts for compensation for services rendered and to be rendered under an appointment from the board, which is unauthorized by law; and an objection, that the plaintiff cannot maintain the action because he does not show that he will sustain any special injury, different from that of the public at large, is untenable (Barry v. Goad, 89 Cal. 215; 26 Pac. 785); and a taxpayer can restrain any illegal act which will increase the burden of taxation; but it is not so clear when he can compel affirmative action, although he can, by mandamus, compel an assessor to assess property subject to assessment. Gibson v. Board of Supervisors, 80 Cal. 359; 22 Pac. 225. A complaint, under this section, is insufficient, which does not allege the plaintiff's citizenship. Thomas v. Joplin, 14 Cal. App. 662; 112 Pac. 729.

Circulation of void bonds. Bonds of a municipal corporation, void in the hands of an innocent holder, are not a charge against the city, and their circulation cannot be enjoined. McCoy v. Briant, 53 Cal. 247.

Right of county to maintain action to restrain expenditure of state funds. See note Ann. Cas. 1913C, 669.

Right of taxpayer in absence of statute to enjoin unlawful expenditures by municipality. See note 36 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1.

§ 527. Injunction. Notice. Party obtaining order must be ready. Defendant entitled to continuance. Precedence. An injunction may be granted at any time before judgment upon a verified complaint, or upon affidavits if the complaint in the one case, or the affidavits in the other, show satisfactorily that sufficient grounds exist therefor. A copy of the complaint or of the affidavits, upon which the injunction was granted, must, if not previously served, be served therewith. No preliminary injunction shall be granted without notice to the opposite party; nor shall any temporary restraining order be granted without notice to the opposite party, unless it shall appear from facts shown by affidavit or by the verified complaint that great or irreparable injury would result to the applicant before the matter can be heard on notice. In case a temporary restraining order shall be granted without notice, in the contingency above specified, the matter shall be made returnable on an order requiring cause to be shown why the injunction should not be granted, on the earliest day that the business of the court will admit of, but not later than ten days from the date of such order. When the matter first comes up for hearing the party who obtained the temporary restraining order must be ready to proceed and must have served upon the opposite party at least two days prior to such hearing, a copy of the complaint and of all affidavits to be used in such application and a copy of his points and authorities in support of such application; if he be not ready, or if he shall fail to serve a copy of his complaint, affidavits and points and authorities, as herein required, the court shall dissolve the temporary restraining order. The defendant, however, shall be entitled, as of course, to one continuance for a reasonable period, if he desire it, to enable him to meet the application for the preliminary injunction. The defendant may, in response to such order to show cause, present affidavits relating to the granting of the preliminary injunction, and if such affidavits are served on the applicant at least two days prior to the hearing, the applicant shall not be entitled to any continuance on account thereof. On the day upon which such order is made returnable, such hearing shall take precedence of all other matters on the calendar of said day, except older matters of the same character, and matters to which special precedence may be given by law. When the cause is at issue it shall be set for trial at the earliest possible date and shall take precedence of all other cases, except older matters of the same character, and matters to which special precedence may be given by law.

Complaint, verification of. Ante, § 446.

Service by sheriff. See Sheriff's Duties, Pol. Code, §§ 4157 et seq.

Legislation § 527. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 113 (New York Code, § 220), the only change being in the third sentence, which read: "No injunction shall be granted on the complaint, unless it be verified by the oath of the plaintiff, or some one in his behalf, that he the person making the oath has read the complaint, or heard the complaint read, and knows the contents thereof, and the same is true of his own knowledge, except the matters therein stated on information and belief, and that as to those matters he believes it to be true." When enacted in 1872, the section read: "§ 527. The injunction may be granted at the time of issuing the summons, upon the complaint, and at any time afterwards, before judgment, upon affidavits. The complaint in the one case, and the affidavits in the other, must show satisfactorily that sufficient grounds exist therefor. No injunction can be granted on the complaint unless it is verified. When granted on the complaint, a copy of the complaint and verification attached must be served with the injunction; when granted upon affidavit, a copy of the affidavit must be served with the injunction."

2. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 51, adding, at the end of the section, the sentence, "No injunction granted prior to the actual trial of the cause wherein it is granted shall continue in force for a longer period than twelve months from the time such injunction was granted, except by consent of the parties, or unless the cause be set for trial upon its merits."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 137; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 341, to read: "§ 527. An injunction may be granted at any time before judgment upon a verified complaint, or upon affidavits, if the complaint in the one case, or the affidavits in the other, show satisfactorily that sufficient grounds exist therefor. A copy of the complaint or of the affidavits, upon which the injunction was granted, must, if not previously served, be served therewith. No injunction granted prior to the trial of the cause shall continue in force longer than twelve months, after answer filed, except by consent of the parties, unless the cause has been set for trial upon its merits, or unless the party in whose favor it was granted has sought to have the cause so set for trial, and the failure to set it has not been due to his fault." The code commissioner said: "The amendment permits the issuing of the injunction upon a verified complaint at any time before judgment, instead of restricting the time to the issuing of the summons, and also permits the injunction to remain in force for a longer period than twelve months, if, within that time, the party in whose favor it is granted seeks to have the cause set for trial, and the failure to set it was not due to his fault."

5. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 59.

Application before complaint filed. It is not necessary to wait until the complaint is filed, before making application to the judge for a restraining order or a temporary injunction, either of which takes effect only upon the filing of the complaint and the bond or undertaking required; the usual practice of presenting the complaint in advance of the filing, and obtaining the order or the allowance of the writ, is regular, and not in conflict with the statute; the order or writ can then be issued with the summons. Heyman v. Landers, 12 Cal. 107.

Sufficiency of verified complaint. Where a verified complaint is the basis for the relief sought, it takes the place of an affidavit, and must be treated as such; and the facts so stated must stand the test to which oral testimony would be subjected. Willis v. Lauridson, 161 Cal. 106; 118 Pac. 530. Where the verified complaint shows the plaintiff's right to an injunction, pendente lite, restraining the defendant from committing a breach of contract, and to have the same continued in force until judgment, to prevent the relief sought from being abortive, and a temporary injunction was granted, it is error for the court to dissolve it. Farnum v. Clarke, 148 Cal. 610; 84 Pac. 166. A complaint for an injunction, otherwise unsupported, which is open to attack on general demurrer, is insufficient. Willis v. Lauridson, 161 Cal. 106; 118 Pac. 530. Where the ultimate facts pleaded warrant the temporary injunction applied for, it is the duty of the court to grant such relief upon a verified complaint, in the absence of such a counter-showing as would fully overcome or impeach the averments of the complaint. Porters Bar Dredging Co. v. Beaudry, 15 Cal. App. 751; 115 Pac. 951.

Amended complaint as affidavit. An amended complaint is a sufficient affidavit; and the court has jurisdiction to grant an injunction, after summons issued, upon such complaint alone. Smith v. Stearns Rancho Co., 129 Cal. 58; 61 Pac. 662.

Effect of amended bill. The court has discretion to permit the filing of an amended bill to support a preliminary injunction already issued; and where the amended bill shows good ground for the injunction, it is not error to refuse to dissolve the writ, merely because the original bill is defective. Tehama County v. Sisson, 152 Cal. 167; 92 Pac. 64. An amended complaint, by leave of the court or judge, may be filed without prejudice to an injunction previously granted, and, when thus filed, the injunction will not be dissolved by reason thereof. Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 497.

Mode of service of injunction. The code does not provide how or by whom an injunction shall be served; but the important matter is, that the party enjoined shall have notice; and the statute being silent, it is sufficient if service is made in conformity with the mode prescribed with reference to service of summons. Golden Gate etc. Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 187; 3 Pac. 628; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Clarke, 110 Cal. 27; 42 Pac. 425.

Sufficiency of service on attorney. An order to show cause why a corporation should not be punished for contempt in violating an injunction, may be served on the attorney for the corporation in the injunction suit, when its managing agents conceal themselves for the purpose of avoiding service. Eureka Lake etc. Canal Co. v. Superior Court, 66 Cal. 311; 5 Pac. 490.

Actual knowledge of injunction. Personal knowledge of an order of injunction, obtained by a party through being present in court at the time the order was made, would probably be sufficient to bind such party, without service; but information given to the attorney of such party, by the attorney of the adverse party, cannot be considered as binding either the attorney or his client. Elliott v. Osborne, 1 Cal. 396. Where the officers and agents of a corporation have actual notice of an injunction against the corporation, they are bound by it, although it was not served. Golden Gate etc. Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 187; 3 Pac. 628; and see Ex parte Cottrell, 59 Cal. 417. Disobedience of any lawful order or process of the court is a contempt of its authority, and persons guilty of such disobedience may be proceeded against. Service of such order or process, or a demand that it be complied with, is not a condition precedent to the issuance of an attachment for disobedience thereof. Ex parte Cottrell, 59 Cal. 420.

Duration of preliminary injunction. The twelve months' limit of this section, beyond which a preliminary injunction ceases to operate, if certain conditions do not exist, applies equally, whether the injunction is granted after notice or ex parte; and it is proper for the court to ascertain the facts, and to declare by its order that an injunction is no longer in force, if the facts warrant such deduction. German Sav. & L. Soc., 5 Cal. App. 215; 89 Pac. 1063.

Preliminary injunction not adjudication of rights. The granting or denying of a preliminary injunction does not amount to an adjudication of the ultimate rights in controversy. Miller & Lux v. Madera Canal etc. Co., 155 Cal. 59; 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 391; 99 Pac. 502.

Mandatory preliminary injunction. Mandatory preliminary injunctions are seldom granted, and only in a peculiar class of extreme cases; the code definition of an injunction omits the mandatory ingredient, and there is nothing in our code more favorable to mandatory injunctions than is to be found in the general current of English and American authority. Gardner v. Stroever, 81 Cal. 148; 6 L. R. A. 90; 22 Pac. 483. A very strong and urgent case is required to justify a mandatory preliminary injunction: a clear case of prospective injury, for which the plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law, is indispensable. Gardner v. Stroever, 84 Cal. 148; 6 L. R. A. 90; 22 Pac. 483; 89 Cal. 26; 26 Pac. 618; Hagen v. Beth, 118 Cal. 330; 50 Pac. 425.

Appeal from ex parte injunction. An appeal lies from an ex parte order granting or dissolving an injunction, the same as from an order made upon notice, or upon order to show cause. Sullivan v. Triunfo etc. Mining Co., 33 Cal. 385.

Remedy for improper preliminary injunction. The only remedy for improperly granting an injunction pendente lite, is a motion to dissolve the writ, or an appeal from the order granting it. Lange v. Superior Court, 11 Cal. App. 1; 103 Pac. 908.

Discretion of court. The discretion of the court in granting and dissolving injunctions must be regulated by sound and just rules; as, for a court of chancery to interfere in some cases might lead to the very hardships and irreparable injury which is the ground of the claim of the plaintiff for its interference; and the court should not interpose when long delays have intervened since the alleged injury, or cause of it, existed, nor unless some equitable circumstances beyond the general allegation of irreparable injury is shown, such as insolvency, or impediments to a judgment at law or to adequate legal relief, or a threatened destruction of the property, or the like. Burnett v. Whitesides, 13 Cal. 156. A preliminary injunction is not a matter of right: an application therefor is addressed to the discretion of the court (Lagunitas Water Co. v. Marin County Water Co., 163 Cal. 332; 125 Pac. 351; Marre v. Union Oil Co., 17 Cal. App. 209; 119 Pac. 104), to be governed by the nature of the case (Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107); and its action thereon will not be reviewed on appeal, except for abuse of discretion (Santa Cruz Fair Bldg. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034; Porter v. Jennings, 89 Cal. 440; 26 Pac. 965); and where the court refused to grant a motion for an injunction pendente lite, the appellate court will not interfere, unless the right clearly appears to exist. Gower v. Andrew, 59 Cal. 119; 43 Am. Rep. 242. The question of granting or refusing a preliminary injunction, after answer denying the equities, is one calling for the exercise of the sound discretion of the court, and its decision will not be disturbed on appeal. Godey v. Godey, 39 Cal. 157; Beaudry v. Felch, 47 Cal. 183. It is not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to refuse to grant a preliminary injunction, at the instance of a riparian proprietor, where no substantial injury is shown (Lagunitas Water Co. v. Marin County Water Co., 163 Cal. 332; 125 Pac. 351); nor where it is not shown that the defendant is insolvent, or that any judgment which the court might finally make in favor of the plaintiff would be rendered ineffectual because of such refusal. Marre v. Union Oil Co., 17 Cal. App. 209; 119 Pac. 104. A temporary injunction may sometimes be properly refused upon such facts as would entitle the party, of right, to an injunction on final hearing. Santa Cruz Fair Bldg. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034. It is within the discretion of the court to grant an injunction to restrain a sheriff's sale, where it will cast a cloud on the title; but, after the sale is made, and the delivery of a deed is threatened, an injunction may be properly granted. Goldstein v. Kelly, 51 Cal. 301. The dissolution or continuance of a preliminary injunction is a matter largely within the discretion of the trial court, and unless that discretion has been abused, the action of the court will not be disturbed on appeal. Godey v. Godey, 39 Cal. 157; McCreery v. Brown, 42 Cal. 457; Rogers v. Tennant, 45 Cal. 184; Patterson v. Board of Supervisors, 50 Cal. 344; Coolot v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 52 Cal. 65; Efford v. South Pacific Coast R. R. Co., 52 Cal. 277; Parrott v. Floyd, 54 Cal. 534; White v. Nunan, 60 Cal. 406; Grannis v. Lorden, 103 Cal. 472; 37 Pac. 375; Marks v. Weinstock, 121 Cal. 53; 53 Pac. 362; Christopher v. Condogeorge, 128 Cal. 581; 61 Pac. 174.

Injunction on final hearing. The rule, that the granting or refusing of injunctions involves the exercise of discretion, which cannot be reviewed on appeal except for the correction of abuses, has no application to a judgment granting or refusing an injunction after a final hearing on the merits: such rule applies more especially, if not exclusively, to preliminary injunctions. Richards v. Dower, 64 Cal. 62; 28 Pac. 113. The complainant may be entitled to a perpetual injunction on the hearing, in many cases, where it would be manifestly improper to grant a temporary injunction; the final injunction is, in many cases, a matter of strict right, and granted as a necessary consequence of the decree made in the case; the preliminary injunction, on the contrary, before the answer, is a matter resting altogether in the discretion of the court, and ought not to be granted, unless the injury is pressing and the delay dangerous. Santa Cruz Fair Bldg. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034. Injunctions to restrain injuries in the nature of waste should not be issued before the hearing on the merits, except in cases of urgent necessity, or when the subject-matter of the complaint is free from controversy, or irreparable mischief will be produced by its continuance; but where the right is doubtful, the court should direct a trial at law, and in the mean time grant a temporary injunction to restrain all injurious proceedings if there is danger of irreparable mischief. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107.

When preliminary injunction will be granted. The court must consider, in granting a preliminary injunction, the amount of injury which may thereby be inflicted on strangers to the suit, and to third parties; and it will consider whether a greater injury will result to the defendant from granting the injunction, than to the plaintiff in refusing it; and if it is satisfied that a greater injury will so result to the defendant, and that the rights of the plaintiff will be fully conserved by granting the injunction, after a hearing upon the merits, a wise discretion would dictate a refusal. Santa Cruz Fair Bldg. Ass'n v. Grant, 104 Cal. 306; 37 Pac. 1034. As a general rule, courts of equity will not interfere by preliminary injunction to change the possession of real property, the title being in dispute; nor is it the proper remedy for recovering possession of personal property. San Antonio Water Co. v. Bodenhamer, 133 Cal. 248; 65 Pac. 471.

Right to preliminary injunction which would have effect of transferring possession of property from defendant to plaintiff. See note 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 31.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The original section contained a provision prescribing the form of the verification. This was useless, for the form is prescribed in the part of this code relating to pleadings.

1. Time when the order will issue. If sought upon the complaint, the usual practice is to present the complaint to the judge in advance of the filing, and obtain an order, which order takes effect when the complaint is filed. Heyman v. Landers, 12 Cal. 107. The plaintiff, at the time of issuing summons, is entitled to an injunction upon the complaint alone, if it make a proper case, etc.; but if he ask for an injunction thereafter, he must do it upon affidavits. Falkinburg v. Lucy, 35 Cal. 52; 95 Am. Dec. 76.

2. Service. A party against whom an injunction has been issued is not bound to obey it until after due service thereof on him, giving him verbal notice that it has been granted. But if a party is in court at the time an injunction order is made, and thus has personal knowledge of the order, it may be that he would be bound thereby. Elliott v. Osborn, 1 Cal. 396. The statute points out no mode for service; but, in conformity with the provisions relative to the summons, delivery of a copy is essential to personal service, where that is required; but whether it would be necessary to exhibit the original, unless specially requested by the party served, is questioned. Edmondson v. Mason, 16 Cal. 386. A writ placed in the sheriff's hands on Sunday cannot be officially received on that day. Such writ can only be considered officially in his hands when Sunday has expired. Whitney v. Butterfield, 13 Cal. 335; 73 Am. Dec. 584. A copy of the papers upon which the injunction is granted must be served with the injunction, otherwise the service will be set aside as irregular. Penfield v. White, 8 How. Pr. 87; Johnson v. Casey, 28 How. Pr. 492; 3 Rob. 710.

§ 528. Injunction after answer. An injunction cannot be allowed after the defendant has answered, unless upon notice, or upon an order to show cause; but in such case the defendant may be restrained until the decision of the court or judge granting or refusing the injunction.

Legislation § 528. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 114 (New York Code, § 221), which had, in the first line, the words "shall not" instead of "cannot."

No ex parte injunction after answer. An injunction cannot be granted after the defendant has answered, except by order to show cause. Newmann v. Moretti, 146 Cal. 31; 79 Pac. 512.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. When the answer denies all the equity, if any, of the complaint, a preliminary injunction should not be granted. Crandall v. Woods, 6 Cal. 449. When the equities of a complaint are fully denied by affidavits on the part of defendant, an injunction, pendente lite, should not be granted. Gagliardo v. Crippen, 22 Cal. 362.

§ 529. Security upon injunction. On granting an injunction, the court or judge must require, except when it is granted on the application of the people of the state, a county, or a municipal corporation, or a wife against her husband, a written undertaking on the part of the applicant, with sufficient sureties, to the effect that he will pay to the party enjoined such damages, not exceeding an amount to be specified, as such party may sustain by reason of the injunction, if the court finally decides that the applicant was not entitled thereto. Within five days after the service of the injunction, the person enjoined may except to the sufficiency of the sureties, and unless within five days thereafter, upon notice of not less than two days to the person enjoined, such sureties, or others in their place, justify before a judge of the court or county clerk at a time and place designated in such notice, the order granting the injunction must be dissolved.

1. Qualifications of. Ante, § 494; post, § 1057.

2. Justification of. Ante, § 495.

Court commissioners. Power to take bonds and undertakings, examine sureties, etc. Ante, § 259, subd. 3.

Legislation § 529. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 115 (New York Code, § 222), which read: "On granting an injunction, the court or judge shall require, except where the people of the state are a party plaintiff, a written undertaking, on the part of the plaintiff, with sufficient sureties, to the effect that the plaintiff will pay to the party enjoined such damages, not exceeding an amount to be specified, as such party may sustain by reason of the injunction, if the court finally decide that the plaintiff was not entitled thereto." When enacted in 1872, the word "shall" was changed to "must," in first line.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 405, (1) changing, in first line, the word "where" to "when," and (2) adding at end of section, after "entitled thereto," two sentences, which read: "Within five days after the filing of the undertaking required the defendant may except to the sufficiency of the sureties; if he fails to do so he is deemed to have waived all objections to them. When excepted to, the plaintiff's sureties, upon notice to the defendant of not less than two nor more than five days, must justify before a judge or county clerk in the same manner as upon bail on arrest; and upon failure to justify, or if others in their place fail to justify at the time and place appointed, the order granting an injunction shall be dissolved."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 62, (1) omitting the word "are" after "people of the state," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "a county, or municipal corporation, or a married woman in a suit against her husband is"; and (2) substituting the words "service of the injunction" for "filing of the undertaking required," in sentence beginning "Within five days."

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 137; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 342; the code commissioner saying, "The amendments to this section were rendered necessary by the amendments made to subds. 2 and 3 of § 526."

Necessity for undertaking. The injunction will be dissolved, where there is a failure to give the undertaking required by this section. Neumann v. Moretti, 146 Cal. 31; 79 Pac. 512. Even if a chancellor has no power to require an undertaking upon the issuance of a temporary restraining order, yet an objection on this ground cannot be sustained; for, having taken jurisdiction of the general subject of litigation, he has power, aside from the statute, to order such undertaking, or to make any other order in the progress of the case, for the furtherance of the objects of the litigation and the protection of its subject-matter. Prader v. Purkett, 13 Cal. 588. A writ of injunction is invalid, where it was issued and served prior to the time the bond was given. Carter v. Mulrein, 82 Cal. 167; 16 Am. St. Rep. 98; 22 Pac. 1086; Alaska Improvement Co. v. Hirsch, 119 Cal. 249; 51 Pac. 340. During a temporary restraining order, the better practice, as it is certainly the general practice, is to require an undertaking; but in all cases, where a preliminary injunction is granted in the first instance, or after an order to show cause, an undertaking must be required. Neumann v. Moretti, 146 Cal. 31; 79 Pac. 512. An order for an injunction is not operative until the statutory undertaking is given. Elliott v. Osborne, 1 Cal. 396. The provision of this section, that the court, on granting an injunction, shall require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff, is applicable, whether the injunction is granted upon an ex parte application, or upon an order to show cause. McCracken v. Harris, 54 Cal. 81. Where a temporary restraining order is made upon an application for a temporary injunction, and the restraining order is limited to the pendency of the motion for a temporary injunction, upon condition that a bond be filed to pay all damages resulting from the restraining order, a bond given in consideration of a writ of injunction, pending the hearing of the action, is not such a bond as was contemplated by the restraining order, and imposes no liability, if the action is dismissed for want of jurisdiction, without the preliminary injunction prayed for in the bill. Byam v. Cashman, 78 Cal. 525; 21 Pac. 113.

Court may order additional undertaking. Where a preliminary injunction was issued on an insufficient undertaking, the court has power, upon a motion to dissolve, to order that the injunction be dissolved unless a proper undertaking is given; and where, thereupon, an undertaking is given, the phrase therein, "in case said injunction shall issue," does not, of itself, conclusively show that the undertaking was not upon the injunction continued in force: the circumstances may be such as to show that it was so given. Lambert v. Haskell, 80 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 327.

Justification of sureties. Notice of justification must be given the defendant, not less than two nor more than five days after the filing and serving of the notice of exception to the sufficiency of the sureties; and the plaintiff's sureties must justify within five days after the notice of exception is given, or the injunction will, upon notice, be dissolved: this construction must be given this section, in view of the damages that may result from the improper issuance of an injunction. McSherry v. Pennsylvania etc. Mining Co., 97 Cal. 637; 32 Pac. 711.

When cause of action accrues on undertaking. A cause of action upon an undertaking for an injunction does not accrue until the final determination of the action in which the injunction was obtained. Dougherty v. Dore, 63 Cal. 170. An action upon an undertaking for an injunction is prematurely brought, where the action has not been finally disposed of, although the injunction has been permanently dissolved; the condition of the obligation being that the sureties should be liable if the court should decide that the plaintiff was not entitled to the injunction. Clark v. Clayton, 61 Cal. 634. An action on an undertaking, given as security for a restraining order, is prematurely brought, though the order was vacated and the application for the injunction denied, where the plaintiff appealed from the order and executed an undertaking on appeal, and the appeal is still pending. Adams v. Andross, 77 Cal. 483; 20 Pac. 26. An undertaking, the condition of which is in pursuance of the provisions of this section, is broken by a judgment of the court totally dissolving the injunction; and the defendant is entitled to maintain an action on the bond after such dissolution. Rice v. Cook, 92 Cal. 144; 28 Pac. 219. An action may be maintained against the sureties on a bond given to secure a temporary injunction, after the temporary injunction has been dissolved at the final hearing of the injunction suit. Lippitt v. Smallman, 20 Cal. App. 595; 129 Pac. 956. Where the order dissolving an injunction was granted, and a demurrer to the complaint was sustained, on the ground that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, and the complaint was not amended within the proper time after notice, and nothing further was done in the case, an action on the undertaking is not prematurely brought. Bennett v. Pardini, 63 Cal. 154.

Who may sue. The plaintiff may sue alone on an injunction bond given to him and others, as obligees, where the property on which the injunction operated was his sole property, and the injury his alone, and the complaint averred these facts. Browner v. Davis, 15 Cal. 9.

Demand on principal unnecessary. The demand for payment of unliquidated damages, not upon the obligors, but on the principals, for whom, as sureties, such obligors stipulated, is not necessary before bringing action on the undertaking given for the injunction. Browner v. Davis, 15 Cal. 9.

Several liability, where there are several defendants. A several liability is created by an undertaking on an injunction, though given to all the obligees by name, and using no words directly expressing a several obligation; the design being to secure each and all of the obligees from damage and injuries; the practice of requiring only one bond, though several defendants are enjoined, is the most convenient method for both plaintiff and defendant; but it would operate harshly, and in most cases would amount to no security at all, if recoveries could be had only for a joint injury, and to the extent of the joint damage: the mode of construction in such cases is, not to look merely at the language of the instrument, but to the statute under which the instrument is given. Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347.

Pleading in action on undertaking. In an action upon an undertaking, the complaint must allege the non-payment of the money claimed under the contract, in order to state a cause of action. Curtiss v. Bachman, 84 Cal. 216; 24 Pac. 379. Where the condition of the undertaking was, that the plaintiff would pay all damages and costs that should be awarded against him by virtue of the issuing of the injunction, a complaint, in an action against the sureties, which did not allege that any damages had been so awarded, is fatally defective. Tarpey v. Shillenberger, 10 Cal. 390.

Malice and want of probable cause not essential to this action. An action on the case will not lie for improperly suing out an injunction, unless it is charged in the declaration as an abuse of the process of the court, through malice, and without probable cause; and if the action complained of is destitute of these ingredients, then only remedy of the injured party is an action upon the injunction bond, which is specially provided by statute as protection against injury, even without malice. Robinson v. Kellum, 6 Cal. 399.

Defenses. In an action on an undertaking, the defense, that the business enjoined was a public nuisance, cannot be successfully interposed: a legitimate occupation is sometimes a public nuisance, yet a party is entitled to the fruits of his labor until an abatement takes place, in some proper form. Cunningham v. Breed, 4 Cal. 384.

Effect of voluntary dismissal. The voluntary dismissal of the action, by the plaintiff, is an admission that he is unable to maintain the action, and therefore that he is not entitled to the injunction; and the defendants are entitled to recover from the sureties whatever damages they sustain by reason of the injunction (Frahm v. Walton, 130 Cal. 396; 62 Pac. 618); and such dismissal has the same effect as a decision of the court that the plaintiff is not entitled to the injunction, and makes the sureties on the undertaking liable. Asevado v. Orr, 100 Cal. 293; 32 Pac. 777; Frahm v. Walton, 130 Cal. 396; 62 Pac. 618. Where an injunction is dissolved by the court, the judgment is conclusive, and in a suit upon the undertaking the only question is the amount of damages sustained; but where the injunction is dissolved through a dismissal of the action by the party who obtained it, there is no admission that the injunction was improperly sued out: it evinces but an unwillingness further to prosecute the writ; and when in such a case, a suit is brought on the undertaking, it is necessary, in order to maintain the action, to show that there was no proper cause for the injunction. Gelston v. Whitesides, 3 Cal. 309; Asevado v. Orr, 100 Cal. 293; 34 Pac. 777; and see Frahm v. Walton, 130 Cal. 396, 62 Pac. 618, overruling Dowling v. Polack, 18 Cal. 625, the opinion in the latter case being to the effect, that, where the plaintiff fails to prosecute his suit, the issues are not actually examined and passed upon; and by his failure to appear and prosecute, he virtually confesses that the result of a trial of the issues would be against him. Under such circumstances, a dismissal must be understood as proceeding upon this idea, and as a determination of everything involved in the case. The dismissal, in effect, is a final judgment in favor of the defendant, and, although it may not preclude the plaintiff from bringing a new suit, yet the rights of the parties are affected by it in the same manner as if there had been an adjudication upon the merits: it terminates the proceedings, and, by its legal operation, and effect, the injunction is set aside and discharged.

Damages recoverable. Where an injunction is wrongfully issued as to any part of the plaintiff's demand, and it is dissolved to that extent, the defendant is entitled to such damages, within the limit of the penalty of the bond, as he may sustain by reason of the issuing of the injunction. Rice v. Cook, 92 Cal. 144; 28 Pac. 219. Where a party is injured in consequence of the injunction, he is entitled to whatever damages he sustains; thus, destruction of the property involved, or its deterioration, and all matters whereby the party suffers loss or is injured may be taken into consideration in assessing damages. Dougherty v. Dore, 63 Cal. 170. The rule at common law was, that, on a bond to indemnify against the damage the obligee might sustain, he could recover only upon evidence that he had sustained actual damage; that compensation would be awarded only for actual loss: evidence showing that he was subject to liability, without showing payment, was not enough. Willson v. McEvoy, 25 Cal. 169. Where a contractor was prevented, by the injunction, from prosecuting work, and materials were left unprotected, and were washed away without his fault, damages are properly assessed for the loss thereof, in an action on the undertaking. Dougherty v. Dore, 63 Cal. 170. Nominal damages are presumed to follow, as a conclusion of law, from proof of breach of contract. Browner v. Davis, 15 Cal. 9. The sureties on an undertaking given for the issuance of a temporary restraining order, in connection with an order to show cause, are liable only for the damages arising between the time of issuance of the order and the date of the hearing thereof. Prader v. Grim, 13 Cal. 585. As a general rule, no undertaking can be required upon a final decree; and the functions of a preliminary injunction cease when the final decree is made; consequently, damages subsequently accruing cannot be recovered from the sureties, although the final decree is reversed on appeal. Lambert v. Haskell, 80 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 327. The sureties on an injunction bond are entitled to stand upon the precise terms of their contract; and where a bond is given in pursuance of an order that an injunction issue upon the filing of the bond, the sureties are not liable for damages arising to the defendant from his obedience to a writ of injunction issued several days prior to the date of the bond, no writ having been issued after the filing of the undertaking. Carter v. Mulrein, 82 Cal. 167; 16 Am. St. Rep. 98; 22 Pac. 1086; and see People v. Buster, 11 Cal. 215; McDonald v. Fett, 49 Cal. 354; Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538; Alaska Improvement Co. v. Hirsch, 119 Cal. 249; 51 Pac. 340.

Recovery of counsel fees. The fees of an attorney employed to resist an injunction under the Practice Act could not be recovered as damages, in an action on the undertaking, unless they had been paid: the fact that the plaintiff was subject to a liability to his attorney was insufficient, without showing actual payment to him. Willson v. McEvoy, 25 Cal. 169; Prader v. Grimm, 28 Cal. 11. The amount of counsel fees recoverable is limited to fees paid counsel for procuring the dissolution of the injunction, and does not extend to fees paid for defending the entire case (Bustamente v. Stewart, 55 Cal. 115; Porter v. Hopkins, 63 Cal. 53); but, under the code, whether counsel fees are paid in advance of the services, or are not paid until after the action is dismissed, is immaterial. Frahm v. Walton, 130 Cal. 396; 62 Pac. 618. Counsel fees incurred by the defendant by reason of a preliminary injunction are a part of the damages for which he has a right to indemnity, and are within the undertaking required to be given as a condition for procuring the injunction; but only such counsel fees as are incurred after the injunction is issued, and prior to the determination of the action, can be considered as within the rule. Curtiss v. Bachman, 110 Cal. 433; 52 Am. St. Rep. 111; 42 Pac. 910. Counsel fees incurred by the defendant in securing the dissolution of an injunction being recognized as a portion of the damages covered by the undertaking, the plaintiff cannot, by a voluntary dismissal of his action, deprive the defendant of his right to recover for them, once they are incurred, any more than, in that manner, he can deprive the defendant of his right to recover whatever other damages he may sustain by reason of the injunction. Frahm v. Walton, 130 Cal. 396; 62 Pac. 618. Where the defendant seeks to prevent the issuance of a permanent injunction, instead of attempting to remove the temporary injunction, or directs his efforts to defeating the action of the plaintiff, counsel fees are an incident of the suit, and are not recoverable as damages. Curtiss v. Bachman, 110 Cal. 433; 52 Am. St. Rep. 111; 42 Pac. 910. Counsel fees are not allowed as damages against the sureties on an undertaking given for a preliminary injunction, although the court finally decides that the plaintiff is not entitled to the injunction; no effort being made to dissolve the preliminary injunction, counsel is simply employed to try the case, and is paid for that service, and no other, and the cost is no greater than it would be, were no preliminary injunction issued. San Diego Water Co. v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 101 Cal. 216; 35 Pac. 651. Counsel fees incurred in resisting a motion for a preliminary injunction are not within the terms of the undertaking: they are not expenses made necessary "by reason of the injunction," but are expenses incurred in the action, as much as are fees incurred in attempting to prevent the issuance of a permanent injunction. Curtiss v. Bachman, 110 Cal. 433; 52 Am. St. Rep. 111; 42 Pac. 910; and see Mitchell v. Hawley, 79 Cal. 301; 21 Pac. 833. Counsel fees, upon appeal from an order refusing to dissolve an injunction, taken before the final decree is made, are recoverable, where the evidence segregates the amount of such fees from those paid generally in the cause: the counsel fees for which sureties may be held are not those expended solely or principally in procuring a dissolution of the injunction, and it is not sufficient to show the value of service rendered in the case generally. Lambert v. Haskell, 80 Cal. 611; 22 Pac. 327. An unsuccessful motion to dissolve an injunction does not authorize the recovery of counsel fees in making the motion, unless the court suspends its decision on the motion until the hearing of the case. Curtiss v. Bachman, 110 Cal. 433; 52 Am. St. Rep. 111; 42 Pac. 910.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Form of security. A substantial compliance with the requirements of the code, in this respect, is sufficient. Guilford v. Cornell, 4 Abb. Pr. 220.

2. Defects in undertaking. A defect in the undertaking will not usually be a ground for dissolution of the injunction. Williams v. Hall, 1 Bland. 194.

3. Scope of the undertaking. The undertaking is for the benefit of all the defendants; and although one of them is not served, yet, if he obeys the order, he will be entitled to damages. Cumberland Coal etc. Co. v. Hoffman Steam Coal Co., 39 Barb. 16; 15 Abb. Pr. 78.

4. Action on the undertaking. A judgment of dismissal in an action in which a temporary injunction had been granted, amounts to a determination by the court that the injunction was improperly granted; and, after judgment, suit lies upon the undertaking. Dowling v. Polack, 18 Cal. 625. The grounds of the injunction cannot be inquired into in an action upon the undertaking. Id. But see Gelston v. Whitesides, 3 Cal. 309. An undertaking, though given to all the obligees by name, and using no words expressing a several obligation, creates a several liability, the design of it being to secure each of all of the obligees from damages or injury. Summers v. Farish, 10 Cal. 347. The usual undertaking being given, an order was made to show cause (August 29th) why an injunction should not be granted. A restraining order, in the "mean time," was issued. The case was continued until October 10th, when, on hearing, the order was dissolved, injunction denied, and suit dismissed. Action on the undertaking. It was held that the restraining order embraces the time between its issuance and the hearing, and that damages may be had beyond August 29th. Prader v. Grim, 13 Cal. 585. No recovery can be had on a bond purporting to be the joint bond of the principals and sureties, but signed by the sureties only. But it is otherwise as to undertakings, under our system. They are original and independent contracts on the part of sureties, and do not require the signature of the principal. Sacramento v. Dunlap, 14 Cal. 421.

5. Damages. See subd. 4 of this note. In an action for damages on an undertaking, the defendants cannot object that they ought not to pay the damages which they contracted to pay, because the business which they enjoined, and for the stoppage of which damages are claimed, was a public nuisance. Cunningham v. Breed, 4 Cal. 384. If an officer is enjoined from paying over money in his hands, legal interest can only be recovered as damages for its detention in an action on the undertaking. Lally v. Wise, 28 Cal. 539.

6. Counsel fees as part of the damages. In an action upon an undertaking, it was held that the amount paid to counsel as a fee to procure the dissolution of the injunction was properly allowed as a part of the damages; and that, generally, the recovery of counsel fees as a part of the damages is not allowed as where the loss is consequential, but where the loss is direct, as in the case of an improper commencement and prosecution of a suit, or other process in a suit, it should be allowed. Ah Thaie v. Quan Wan, 3 Cal. 216. In an action on an undertaking, the fees of an attorney employed to resist injunction cannot be recovered as damages, unless they have been paid. The fact that the plaintiff is liable to his attorney, without showing actual payment to him, is sufficient. Willson v. McEvoy, 25 Cal. 170; Prader v. Grimm, 28 Cal. 11; Fowler v. Frisbie, 37 Cal. 34.

7. Generally. See Fowler v. Frisbie, 37 Cal. 34.

§ 530. When injunction for use of water may be refused upon defendant giving bond. In all actions which may be hereafter brought when an injunction or restraining order may be applied for to prevent the diversion, diminution or increase of the flow of water in its natural channels, to the ordinary flow of which the plaintiff claims to be entitled, the court shall first require due notice of the application to be served upon the defendant, unless it shall appear from the verified complaint or affidavits upon which the application therefor is made, that, within ten days prior to the time of such application, the plaintiff has been in the peaceable possession of the flow of such water, and that, within such time, said plaintiff has been deprived of the flow thereof by the wrongful diversion of such flow by the defendant, or that the plaintiff, at the time of such application, is, and for ten days prior thereto, has been, in possession of the flow of said water, and that the defendant threatens to divert the flow of such water; and if such notice of such application be given and upon the hearing thereof, it be made to appear to the court that plaintiff is entitled to the injunction, but that the issuance thereof pending the litigation will entail great damage upon defendant, and that plaintiff will not be greatly damaged by the acts complained of pending the litigation, and can be fully compensated for such damage as he may suffer, the court may refuse the injunction upon the defendant giving a bond such as is provided for in section five hundred and thirty-two; and upon the trial the same proceedings shall be had, and with the same effect as in said section provided.

Legislation § 530. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; being a re-enactment of Practice Act, § 116 (New York Code, § 223), and then read: "§ 530. If the court or judge deem it proper that the defendant, or any of several defendants, should be heard before granting the injunction, an order may be made requiring cause to be shown, at a specified time and place, why the injunction should not be granted; and the defendant may, in the mean time, be restrained."

2. Amended by Stats. 1887, p. 240, adding at the end of the section, "In all actions pending or which may be hereafter brought, when an injunction or restraining order has been or may be granted, or applied for, to prevent the diversion pending the litigation, of water used or to be used for irrigation or domestic purposes only, if it be made to appear to the court that the plaintiff is entitled to the injunction, but that the issuance thereof pending the litigation will entail great damage upon the defendant, and that plaintiff can be fully compensated for such damages as he may suffer, the court may refuse the injunction upon the defendant giving a bond, such as is provided for in section five hundred and thirty-two; and upon the trial the same proceedings shall be had, and with the same effect, as in said section provided."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 137; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 342, to read: "§ 530. If the court or judge deem it proper that the person, sought to be enjoined, should be heard before granting the injunction, an order may be made requiring cause to be shown, at a specified time and place, why the injunction should not be granted, and the defendant may, in the mean time, be restrained. In all actions which may be hereafter brought when an injunction or restraining order may be applied for to prevent the diversion, diminution or increase of the flow of water in its natural channels, to the ordinary flow to which the plaintiff claims to be entitled, the court shall first require due notice of the application to be served upon the defendant, and upon the hearing thereof, if it be made to appear to the court that plaintiff is entitled to the injunction, but that the issuance thereof pending the litigation will entail great damage upon defendant, and that plaintiff will not be greatly damaged by the acts complained of pending the litigation and can be fully compensated for such damages as he may suffer, the court may refuse the injunction upon the defendant giving a bond such as is provided for in section five hundred and thirty-two; and upon the trial the same proceedings shall be had, and with the same effect as in said section provided." The code commissioner said: "The section is amended to conform to the amendments made to subds. 2 and 3 of § 526. Also, the words 'diversion, diminution or increase of the flow of water in its natural channels, to the ordinary flow to which the plaintiff claims to be entitled, the court shall first require due notice of the application to be served upon the defendant, and upon the hearing thereof,' have been substituted for the words 'diversion[,] pending the litigation, of water used or to be used for irrigation or domestic purposes only.' The latter amendment was offered and adopted upon the floor of the assembly on March 4, 1907, and was a member's amendment."

5. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 1421.

Nature of restraining order. A temporary restraining order is an order which applies to the time intervening between the application for the injunction and the day fixed in the order to show cause. Neumann v. Moretti, 146 Cal. 31; 79 Pac. 512; and see Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107; Cohen v. Gray, 70 Cal. 85; 11 Pac. 508. It is a restraint of the same nature as an injunction, but the statute not only does not designate it as an injunction, but discriminates between it and an injunction: it is a restraint, pending the consideration of the court as to whether the party is entitled to a preliminary injunction (San Diego Water Co. v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 101 Cal. 216; 35 Pac. 651; Neumann v. Moretti, 146 Cal. 31; 79 Pac. 512); and it loses its force upon the granting of the injunction pendente lite. Cohen v. Gray, 70 Cal. 85; 11 Pac. 508. The restraining order is an injunction, when it requires the defendant to refrain from doing particular acts. Neumann v. Moretti, 146 Cal. 31; 79 Pac. 512.

Effect of answer denying equities. Where the defendant filed his answer, controverting the allegations of the complaint, and set up new matter in defense of the action, on an order made by the court requiring him to show cause why an injunction should not issue, the plaintiff has a right to read affidavits in support of his complaint, as the object of such order could only have been to enable the parties to present the case on the merits; and upon such order the awarding or refusing of an injunction must be regarded as adjudicated by the decision at the hearing. The former rule was, that affidavits could not be read in any case for the purpose of contradicting the answer; but the policy of preventing irreparable mischief has introduced an exception to this rule, in cases of waste, or of mischief analogous to waste, and affidavits may now be read against the answer in such cases, in respect to all matters of controversy, including questions of title. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. Where all the equities of the complaint are denied by the affidavits filed by the defendant, there is no abuse of discretion in denying the plaintiff's motion for a temporary injunction. Kohler v. Los Angeles, 39 Cal. 510. The determination of the court, in the exercise of its discretion, to continue an injunction in force until the hearing of the cause, in so far as it rests upon the effect of the denial of the equities of the bill merely, is entitled to great consideration on appeal, and should not be disturbed, except under peculiar circumstances, or unless an abuse of discretion is shown. Godey v. Godey, 39 Cal. 157.

Duration of restraining order. The phrase, in a restraining order, "until the further order of the court," has not the effect of prolonging the restraining order beyond the pendency of the motion for an injunction; otherwise it would convert the restraining order into a preliminary injunction, which could not be operative until a bond was given; and where no bond is required for the restraining order, by making an order to show cause the court adjudges that a preliminary injunction shall not be made until the defendant is heard. San Diego Water Co. v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 101 Cal. 216; 35 Pac. 651. This phrase, "until the further order of the court," has no other meaning than "in the mean time," or "until the decision upon the order to show cause," and a restraining order, made at the commencement of the action, expires, by its own terms, at the hearing of the motion, and, although it may be continued until the termination of the suit, yet an order so continuing it is, in fact, a new and distinct restraint, which, in itself, is a preliminary injunction. Curtiss v. Bachman, 110 Cal. 433; 52 Am. St. Rep. 111; 42 Pac. 910. Where there is no appearance at the time the order to show cause is returnable, and the motion for the injunction is not continued nor kept alive in any mode, the restraining order falls, for it is only authorized to be made pending the motion. San Diego Water Co. v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 101 Cal. 216; 35 Pac. 651.

Effect of refusal of injunction on restraining order. Where an order is made to show cause why an injunction should not be granted, and to restrain the defendant until the hearing, and on the hearing the injunction is refused, the restraining order expires by limitation. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. Where the ultimate rights of the parties cannot be determined in advance of the trial of the action, a preliminary mandatory injunction should not be granted, unless irreparable injury will result from its refusal. Hagen v. Beth, 118 Cal. 330; 50 Pac. 425.

Undertaking required when. An undertaking, as a condition for a restraining order, is not expressly required by statute, although the supreme court has said one should be required; but it is expressly required as a condition for a preliminary injunction, which does not become operative until the bond is given. San Diego Water Co. v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 101 Cal. 216; 35 Pac. 651.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Notice of motion. Notice of an application by plaintiff must be given for the length of time prescribed by § 517 of the Practice Act (§ 1005 of this code). If given for a shorter time, and defendant does not appear, he may treat an injunction thus obtained as granted without notice, and move to dissolve, under § 118 (§ 532 of this code). Johnson v. Wide West M. Co., 22 Cal. 479. See also Androvette v. Bowne, 15 How. Pr. 75; 4 Abb. Pr. 440.

2. Security upon restraining order. The temporary restraint is part of the injunctive relief which the code provides, and before the order issues should be required, as provided in the preceding section. Per Comstock, J., in Methodist Churches v. Barker, 18 N. Y. 463; Prader v. Purkett, 13 Cal. 588.

3. Object of the order. The object of the practice of issuing an order to show cause before granting the injunction, is to enable parties to present the case on the merits. Id.; Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107.

4. When the order should or should not be granted. Injunctions to restrain injuries in the nature of waste should not be granted before hearing on the merits, except in cases of urgent necessity, or when the subject-matter of the complaint is free from controversy, or irreparable mischief will be produced by its continuance. But in all cases where the right is doubtful, the court should direct a trial at law, and in the mean time grant a temporary injunction to restrain injurious proceedings, if there be danger of irreparable mischief. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107.

5. When the order expires. Where, under § 116 of the Practice Act (§ 530 of this code), an order is made restraining defendants until the hearing, and on the hearing upon the order the injunction is refused, the restraining order expires. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107.

6. Effect of an appeal. An appeal from an order refusing an injunction, upon such hearing, or from an order dissolving an injunction, does not create an injunction or prolong the restraining order in the former case, nor revive it in the latter, pending the appeal. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107.

§ 531. Injunction to suspend business of a corporation, how and by whom granted. An injunction to suspend the general and ordinary business of a corporation cannot be granted without due notice of the application therefor to the proper officers or managing agent of the corporation, except when the people of this state are a party to the proceeding.

Legislation § 531. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 117 (New York Code, § 224), as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 703, which read: "An injunction to suspend the general and ordinary business of a corporation shall not be granted except by the court or a judge thereof; nor shall it be granted without due notice of the application therefor to the proper officers or managing agent of the corporation, except when the people of this state are a party to the proceeding." When enacted in 1872, (1) the words "shall not" were changed to "cannot," after "corporation," and (2) the word "shall" was changed to "can," before the words "it be granted."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 138; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 342, the code commissioner saying, "The words 'except by the court or a judge thereof; nor can it be granted' are omitted, as entirely superfluous."

Injunction against unlawful acts. The commission of unlawful acts by a corporation is not a part of its general and ordinary business, within the meaning of this section, and a temporary injunction may issue to restrain such acts, when they are injurious to another, without notice to the corporation; and such acts are none the less unlawful, although they are necessary to the carrying on of the business of the corporation, which must so conduct its business as that it shall not be derogatory to the private rights of others. Hobbs v. Amador etc. Canal Co., 66 Cal. 161; 4 Pac. 1147.

As to manner of operation. An injunction restraining a corporation from operating its business in a particular manner, alleged to be to the injury of others, does not suspend the general and ordinary business of the corporation, "in buying and selling mining claims, or in working them." Golden Gate etc. Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 187; 3 Pac. 628. A corporation, whose general, ordinary, and only business is that of mining by the hydraulic process, and of selling water to others to be used for a like purpose, may be temporarily enjoined, upon an ex parte application, without notice to it, from depositing or discharging its mining débris in certain streams, or from selling its water to others to be used for a purpose producing a like result. Eureka Lake etc. Canal Co. v. Superior Court, 66 Cal. 311; 5 Pac. 490. An injunction restraining a mining corporation from withdrawing moneys from a certain bank, or from selling its property, has not the effect of suspending the general and ordinary business of such corporation; therefore a preliminary injunction to such effect, issued without notice, is not invalid, and a writ of prohibition will not lie to dissolve such injunction. Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561.

Upon whom binding. The effect of an injunction restraining the acts of a corporation, and addressed to it and its agents, etc., is to bind not only the tangible artificial being, but also all the individuals who act for it in the transaction of its business, to whose knowledge the decree comes; otherwise it would be necessary, in order effectually to bind a corporation by an injunction, to make every person a party to the suit, who could by any possibility be its agents in doing the prohibited act. Morton v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 496; 4 Pac. 489.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Law of the place. As to its effect on injunctions against corporations, see O'Brien v. Chicago etc. R. R. Co., 36 How. Pr. 24; 4 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 381.

2. Equity jurisdiction over corporations. Equity has no jurisdiction over corporations for the purpose of restraining their operations or winding up their concerns, but it may compel the officers of the corporation to account for any breach of trust; but the jurisdiction for this purpose is over the officers personally. Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145; 76 Am. Dec. 508; see also Parrott v. Byers, 40 Cal. 614.

§ 532. Motion to vacate or modify injunction. Bond on modification. If an injunction is granted without notice to the person enjoined, he may apply, upon reasonable notice to the judge who granted the injunction, or to the court in which the action was brought, to dissolve or modify the same. The application may be made upon the complaint or the affidavit on which the injunction was granted, or upon affidavit on the part of the person enjoined, with or without the answer. If the application is made upon affidavits on the part of the person enjoined, but not otherwise, the person against whom the application is made may oppose the same by affidavits or other evidence in addition to that on which the injunction was granted. In all actions pending, or which may hereafter be brought, wherein an injunction or restraining order has been or may be granted or applied for, to prevent the diversion, pending the litigation, of water used, or to be used, for irrigation or domestic purposes only, if it be made to appear to the court that great damage will be suffered by the person enjoined, in case the injunction is continued, and that the person in whose behalf it is issued can be fully compensated for any damages he may suffer by reason of the continuance of the acts enjoined during the pendency of the litigation, the court in its discretion, may dissolve or modify the injunction, upon the person enjoined giving a bond with sureties to be approved by the judge, and in such amount as may be fixed by the court or judge, conditioned that such enjoined person will pay all damages which the person in whose behalf the injunction issued may suffer by reason of the continuance, during the litigation, of the acts complained of. Upon the trial the amount of such damages must be ascertained, and in case judgment is rendered for the person in whose behalf the injunction was granted, the amount fixed as such damages must be included in the judgment, together with reasonable attorney's fees. In any suit brought on the bond, the amount of such damages as fixed in said judgment is conclusive on the sureties.

Vacating orders made out of court. Post, § 937.

Legislation § 532. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 118 (New York Code, § 225), which read: "If an injunction be granted without notice, the defendant at any time before the trial may apply upon reasonable notice to the judge who granted the injunction, or to the court in which the action is brought, to dissolve or modify the same. The application may be made upon the complaint and the affidavit on which the injunction was granted, or upon affidavit on the part of the defendant, with or without the answer. If the application be made upon affidavits on the part of the defendant, but not otherwise, the plaintiff may oppose the same by affidavits, or other evidence, in addition to those on which the injunction was granted."

2. Amended by Stats. 1887, p. 241, (1) adding a comma after the word "notice," before "to the judge," and (2) adding, at the end of the section, the following: "In all actions pending, or which may be hereafter brought, when an injunction or restraining order has been or may be granted or applied for, to prevent the diversion, pending the litigation, of water used or to be used for irrigation or domestic purposes only, if it be made to appear to the court that great damage will be suffered by the defendant in case the injunction is continued, and that the plaintiff can be fully compensated for any damages he may suffer by reason of the continuance of the acts of the defendant during the pendency of the litigation, the court, in its discretion, may dissolve or modify the injunction, upon the defendant giving a bond, with sureties to be approved by the judge, and in such amount as may be fixed by the court or judge, conditioned that the defendant will pay all damages which the plaintiff may suffer by reason of the continuance during the litigation of the acts complained of. Upon the trial the amount of such damages shall be ascertained, and in case judgment is rendered for the plaintiff, the amount fixed as such damages shall be included in the judgment, together with reasonable attorneys' fees. Upon a suit brought on the bond the amount of damages as fixed in said judgment shall be conclusive upon the sureties."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 138; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 342; the code commissioner, in a note, saying, "See first portion of note to § 530."

Power of court to modify or dissolve. Under this section, an injunction issued under § 527, ante, can be vacated or modified. Morton v. Morton, 148 Cal. 142; 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 660; 82 Pac. 664. An ex parte order, not in its nature permanent, may be dissolved or modified by the court, on its own motion, whenever it is satisfied that the order was improvidently or erroneously made. Wolf v. Board of Supervisors, 150 Cal. 285; 89 Pac. 85. The court granting a preliminary injunction may, in the exercise of its judicial discretion, modify the same at any time before final judgment. Hobbs v. Amador etc. Canal Co., 66 Cal. 161; 4 Pac. 1147. The right to move for the dissolution of an injunction before final hearing exists, only where it was granted without notice according to this section. Natoma etc. Mining Co. v. Parker, 16 Cal. 83. This section expressly limits the power of the court to modify or dissolve injunctions to those granted without notice. Ots v. Superior Court, 10 Cal. App. 168; 101 Pac. 431. Where the notice of a motion for an injunction was given only a few hours before the hearing, and the defendant did not appear, the order granting the injunction is to be deemed to have been made without notice, and the defendant may move to dissolve it. Johnson v. Wide West Mining Co., 22 Cal. 479. An injunction granted after notice cannot be dissolved until after or upon the trial of the case upon its merits. Humphry v. Buena Vista Water Co., 2 Cal. App. 540; 84 Pac. 296. When a temporary injunction was granted upon notice and a hearing, and no appeal was taken, it cannot be modified or dissolved until the trial of the case upon its merits. Ots v. Superior Court, 10 Cal. App. 168; 101 Pac. 431. An order dissolving an injunction, not stating the grounds therefor, is prima facie an adjudication that there was no foundation for the issuance thereof, and that it should not have been issued; otherwise it was incumbent on the defendant to see to it that the order contained the proper recitals, showing that the injunction was dissolved for other reasons, or to make the facts appear in some other proper way. Fowler v. Frisbie, 37 Cal. 34. A mere declaratory order, that the injunction is no longer in force, which is not filed with the clerk nor intended to be entered in the minutes of the court, is not a "direction" of the court nor an appealable order. Devlin v. Rydberg, 132 Cal. 324; 64 Pac. 396. The right to a temporary injunction is considered as adjudicated by the decision at the hearing upon the order to show cause; the injunction being issued, the remedy of the defendant is by appeal, if the right to apply for a dissolution upon the filing of the answer is not expressly reserved; and the privilege of moving for a dissolution upon the filing of the answer is limited to cases where the injunction is originally granted without notice. Natoma etc. Mining Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544.

Necessity for notice of application. A preliminary injunction cannot be dissolved or modified, except upon notice to the plaintiff: to modify it in important particulars, ex parte, is error. Cherry Hill Gold Mining Co. v. Baker, 147 Cal. 724; 82 Pac. 370. Although an injunction has been granted without notice to the defendant, yet, under this section, he must serve upon the plaintiff notice of his motion to dissolve it. Page v. Vaughn, 133 Cal. 335; 65 Pac. 740; and see Hefflon v. Bowers, 72 Cal. 270; 13 Pac. 690. The manner of procuring the revocation of an order granting an injunction is prescribed by this section: it is not regulated by § 937, post, which refers to the modification of ex parte orders. Hefflon v. Bowers, 72 Cal. 270; 13 Pac. 690.

Further showing by plaintiff. Under the old chancery practice, where the defendant moved upon bill and answer, the plaintiff could make no further showing, but the plaintiff could anticipate the defendant's case, and annex to his bill affidavits designed to meet it; but this put the plaintiff to possibly useless labor, and was neither an orderly nor a logical method. Falkinburg v. Lucy, 35 Cal. 52; 95 Am. Dec. 76. So long as the defendant rests his right to have the order granting the injunction modified or vacated upon the matters considered by the court in granting it, there is no good reason for allowing the plaintiff to be heard; but where the defendant goes further, and offers evidence to overcome the plaintiff's prima facie case, it becomes necessary, by virtue of both the reason and the letter of the rule, to permit the plaintiff to support with additional evidence his prima facie case, which is all that was required of him in the first instance. Hefflon v. Bowers, 72 Cal. 270; 13 Pac. 690. Where an injunction has been granted without notice to the defendant, he may move to dissolve upon the papers upon which the injunction was granted, or upon such papers, and affidavits on his part, with or without the answer: should he pursue the first course, the plaintiff can make no further showing, but must stand upon his complaint, or complaint and affidavits, as the case may be; but should he pursue the second course, the plaintiff may meet it with a further showing. Falkinburg v. Lucy, 35 Cal. 52; 95 Am. Dec. 76. The plaintiff is not required to serve upon the defendant copies of the affidavits used in reply to the answer, on a motion to dissolve the injunction. Delger v. Johnson, 44 Cal. 182.

Effect of insufficiency of complaint. Where the complaint does not state a cause of action, an order refusing to dissolve the injunction is erroneous (Yuba County v. Cloke, 79 Cal. 239; 21 Pac. 740); but that two causes of action are improperly joined, without separately stating them, is no ground for dissolving the injunction. Fuhn v. Weber, 38 Cal. 636.

Effect of amending complaint. An amended complaint, by leave of the court or judge, may be filed without prejudice to an injunction previously granted, and, when thus filed, the injunction will not be dissolved by reason thereof. Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 497. Where, upon appeal, the complaint was held insufficient to sustain the judgment, the injunction should be dissolved upon the case being remanded, unless the complaint was so amended, prior to or contemporaneous with the motion to dissolve, as to set forth a cause of action which would uphold the decree. Pfister v. Wade, 59 Cal. 273.

Effect of answer denying equities. Where an injunction was granted, without notice, upon the filing of a complaint, and an answer is afterwards filed, denying all the equities of the complaint, the injunction will be dissolved on motion. Real Del Monte etc. Mining Co. v. Pond etc. Mining Co., 23 Cal. 82; Gardner v. Perkins, 9 Cal. 553; Burnett v. Whitesides, 13 Cal. 156; Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259; Johnson v. Wide West Mining Co., 22 Cal. 479. Where the answer denies all the material allegations of the complaint on which the injunction was granted, and the complaint is unsupported by affidavits or other proof, the injunction should be dissolved. Johnson v. Wide West Mining Co., 22 Cal. 479. The general rule in England, that, if the answer positively denies the exclusive right of the plaintiff, the injunction will be dissolved, is based upon the practice of not permitting affidavits to be read to contradict the answer as to the question of title. Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 317; 68 Am. Dec. 262. However, under our practice, where the defendant moves to dissolve the injunction upon what he has prepared as his verified answer, he makes it an affidavit, in the sense of the statute, for all the purposes of his motion, and he cannot deprive the plaintiff of his right to reply by way of affidavits on his part. Falkinburg v. Lucy, 35 Cal. 52; 95 Am. Dec. 76; Hiller v. Collins, 63 Cal. 235. A verified answer is entitled to be read and considered, the same as is a verified complaint, in a motion to dissolve the injunction. Christopher v. Condogeorge, 128 Cal. 581; 61 Pac. 174. The defendant is not allowed to move to dissolve the injunction upon the answer with or without affidavits, but upon affidavits with or without the answer; hence, if he moves upon what he has prepared as his verified answer, he makes it an affidavit, and he cannot, by calling it an answer, deprive the plaintiff of his right to reply. Falkinburg v. Lucy, 35 Cal. 52; 95 Am. Dec. 76; Hiller v. Collins, 63 Cal. 235. The general rule, that, where the answer fully denies the equities of the bill, the injunction should be dissolved, or that the dissolution of the injunction must follow the filing of the answer as a mere legal conclusion, is not one of universal application, or without exception (Godey v. Godey, 39 Cal. 157); but where the allegations of the complaint as to the cause of action for an injunction were upon information and belief, and the answer positively denied such allegations under oath, the injunction should be dissolved. Yuba County v. Cloke, 79 Cal. 239; 21 Pac. 740. While denials upon information and belief, in the answer, are authorized as a matter of pleading, and are sufficient to raise an issue, yet they are not such denials as will serve as the basis of a motion to dissolve the injunction on the ground that the equities of the bill are fully denied by the answer. Porter v. Jennings, 89 Cal. 440; 26 Pac. 965; Dingley v. Buckner, 11 Cal. App. 181; 104 Pac. 478. The affidavit upon a motion to dissolve the injunction, to be sufficient, must constitute written proof and state probative facts; and it is insufficient, where it assumes merely to take the place of the answer to the complaint, by admitting or denying its allegations, and stating only ultimate facts or conclusions. Marks v. Weinstock, 121 Cal. 53; 53 Pac. 362. Where there is no allegation of the insolvency of the defendant, nor that he would not be able to answer all damages recoverable at law, nor any peculiar grounds shown why a recovery could not be had at law for these damages, but there was presented the mere naked case of a claim to property and for damages, which claim is denied, and no showing of irreparable damage or equitable circumstances calling for the interposition of equity, and the entire equity of the bill is denied in the answer, the injunction should be dissolved. Burnett v. Whitesides, 13 Cal. 156.

When injunction will be dissolved. Where, although absolute insolvency is not charged, yet it appears that a judgment for damages would be worthless; that the rights of the defendant are protected by a bond, and no injury could result to him from the continuance of the injunction; that the plaintiff has no security whatever, and a dissolution of the injunction would leave him at the mercy of the defendant,—a motion to dissolve a temporary injunction should be denied. Hicks v. Compton, 18 Cal. 206. A preliminary injunction should be allowed to stand until the trial, a dissolution being improper, as practically equivalent to a dismissal of the action before a trial upon the merits, where the injunction sought is not ancillary to other relief, but is the gist of the action. Bullard v. Kempff, 119 Cal. 9; 50 Pac. 780; Porter v. Jennings, 89 Cal. 440; 26 Pac. 965. An injunction granted upon an order to show cause, after a full hearing of the case upon the merits, cannot be dissolved, upon motion, before the final hearing: the remedy is by appeal from the order granting the injunction. Natoma etc. Mining Co. v. Parker, 16 Cal. 83; and see Natoma etc. Mining Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544. Where the acts, the performance of which is sought to be restrained, were performed before the order for the injunction was made or served, the injunction will be dissolved. Delger v. Johnson, 44 Cal. 182; and see Gardner v. Stroever, 81 Cal. 148; 6 L. R. A. 90; 22 Pac. 483. An order refusing to dissolve the injunction is an appealable order, and where no bond was given thereupon, the order must be reversed, whether the injunction was served upon the defendant or not. Neumann v. Moretti, 146 Cal. 31; 79 Pac. 512. A nonsuit should be followed by an order dissolving the injunction, as a matter of course. Harris v. McGregor, 29 Cal. 124. A verdict for the defendant dissolves an injunction granted as an ancillary remedy to a legal action. Brennan v. Gaston, 17 Cal. 372.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. When the right exists. The right to move to dissolve before final hearing exists only where the injunction was granted without notice. Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Parker, 16 Cal. 83; Henshaw v. Clark, 14 Cal. 460.

2. Permissive nature of proceedings under this section. This section, so far as it authorizes an application to a judge out of court, is permissive, and does not abridge the general power of the court conferred by § 937 of this code. The special provision made by this section is not intended as a substitute for the power conferred by § 937, but is in addition to such power. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440; Woodruff v. Fisher, 17 Barb. 224, 230; Bruce v. Delaware etc. Canal Co., 8 How. Pr. 440; Peck v. Yorks, 41 Barb. 547.

3. Motion by party in contempt. A party in contempt for disobedience may move to dissolve. Field v. Chapman, 13 Abb. Pr. 320; 14 Abb. Pr. 133; Field v. Hunt, 23 How. Pr. 80; Field v. Hunt, 22 How. Pr. 329; Smith v. Reno, 6 How. Pr. 124. But see dictum in Krom v. Hogan, 4 How. Pr. 225; and Evans v. Van Hall, Moak's Clarke Ch. 17, 24.

4. Motion, on what made. Where an injunction is granted without notice, the defendant may move to dissolve it, either: 1. Upon the papers, whatever they may have been, upon which it was granted; or 2. Upon the papers upon which it was granted, and affidavits on the part of the defendant, with or without answer. In the first case the plaintiff can make no further showing, but must stand upon the papers upon which the injunction was granted; in the second case, he may meet the defendant with a counter-showing. The use of a verified answer is the use of an affidavit in the sense of § 118 of the Practice Act. Falkinburg v. Lucy, 35 Cal. 52; 95 Am. Dec. 76.

5. When made on complaint and answer. The general rule, that when an answer fully denies the equities of the complaint the injunction should be dissolved, is not of universal application; therefore, when the court below, upon such pleadings, continues the injunction in force, its order to that effect will not be reversed on appeal, except under peculiar circumstances. De Godey v. Godey, 39 Cal. 157; see also Gardner v. Perkins, 9 Cal. 553; Burnett v. Whitesides, 13 Cal. 156; Johnson v. Wide West Min. Co., 22 Cal. 479; Real Del Monte etc. Min. Co. v. Pond etc. Min. Co., 23 Cal. 82. A temporary injunction ought to be dissolved upon an answer which does not present a full denial of the equities in the complaint. De Godey v. Godey, 39 Cal. 157; Fuhn v. Weber, 38 Cal. 636. That two causes of action have been joined, but not separately stated, is no ground for the dissolution of an injunction. Fuhn v. Weber, 38 Cal. 636. An amended complaint may be filed without prejudice to an injunction previously granted. Barber v. Reynolds, 33 Cal. 497.

6. When made on affidavits. See Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107; and subd. 4 of this note.

7. Special cases of dissolution. Where an assessment was made for the purpose of improving a street, by which the property of the plaintiff, in common with the property of other persons owning lots on the same street, was benefited, and the improvement was completed without the plaintiff interposing, in the outset, to prevent it, and he then filed a complaint to stay the sale of his land, by virtue of an ordinance of the city, for the purpose of avoiding the payment of the assessment. It was held, that the injunction ought to be dissolved, on the ground that he who asks equity must do equity; that the city should be permitted to proceed and sell the plaintiff's land for the purpose of satisfying the assessment, leaving him, after the sale, to the technical rights which he set up by reason, as he claimed, of some irregularity in the mode of making the assessment. Weber v. San Francisco, 1 Cal. 455. Plaintiffs sue defendants for damages for alleged trespass upon a portion of quartz-mining claims, alleged in the complaint to be the property and in the possession of plaintiffs, asking an injunction against further trespasses, which was granted, the complaint averring the insolvency of defendants. The defendants denied all the allegations of the complaint, and averred ownership. The jury found, generally, "for defendants." Then the defendants moved to amend the judgment by adding thereto the words, "and that the injunction heretofore granted be, and the same is, hereby dissolved," which was refused; but the judgment was so modified as to permit defendants to work the surface diggings described in their answer. Held, that the action amounted to an action of trespass, with an injunction as auxiliary thereto; and that the action itself, having failed by the verdict for defendants, the injunction fell with it, and should have been dissolved. Brennan v. Gaston, 17 Cal. 372. A reversal of a judgment, which judgment awards the plaintiff possession of land, and enjoins the defendant from committing waste on the land, also reverses the injunction decree, even if the decree is not included in the record sent to the appellate court. McGarrahan v. Maxwell, 28 Cal. 84. When a preliminary injunction is granted on plaintiff's application, the injunction must be dissolved, if a nonsuit is granted. Harris v. McGregor, 29 Cal. 124.

8. Jurisdiction law of the place. The acts of a foreign corporation ultra vires, according to the law of this state, but infra vires according to the law of its own state, cannot be restrained by our courts. O'Brien v. Chicago etc. R. R. Co., 36 How. Pr. 24; 4 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 381; 53 Barb. 568.

9. Effect of a motion for new trial. The pendency of such a motion does not suspend the injunction. Ortman v. Dixon, 9 Cal. 23.

10. Effect of an appeal. An appeal from an order dissolving a restraining order does not continue the order. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107. Nor is an injunction dissolved or superseded by an appeal. Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 130.

§ 533. When to be vacated or modified. If upon such application it satisfactorily appear that there is not sufficient ground for the injunction, it must be dissolved; or if it satisfactorily appear that the extent of the injunction is too great, it must be modified.

Legislation § 533. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 119, which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in both instances.

ATTACHMENT.

§ 537. Attachment, when and in what cases may issue.
§ 538. Affidavit for attachment, what to contain.
§ 539. Undertaking on attachment. Exceptions to sureties.
§ 540. Writ, to whom directed and what to state.
§ 541. Shares of stock and debts due defendant, how attached and disposed of.
§ 542. How real and personal property shall be attached.
§ 542a. Lien of attachment.
§ 543. Attorney to give written instructions to sheriff what to attach.
§ 544. Garnishment, when garnishee liable to plaintiff.
§ 545. Citation to garnishee to appear before a court or judge.
§ 546. Inventory, how made. Party refusing to give memorandum may be compelled to pay costs.
§ 547. Perishable property, how sold. Accounts without suit to be collected.
§ 548. Property attached may be sold as under execution, if the interests of the parties require.
§ 549. When property claimed by a third party, how tried.
§ 550. If plaintiff obtains judgment, how satisfied.
§ 551. When there remains a balance due, how collected.
§ 552. When suits may be commenced on the undertaking.
§ 553. If defendant recovers judgment, what the sheriff is to deliver.
§ 554. Proceedings to release attachments.
§ 555. Attachment, in what cases it may be released and upon what terms.
§ 556. When a motion to discharge attachment may be made, and upon what grounds.
§ 557. When motion made on affidavit, it may be opposed by affidavit.
§ 558. When writ must be discharged.
§ 559. When writ to be returned.
§ 560. Release of real property from attachment.

§ 537. Attachment, when and in what cases may issue. The plaintiff, at the time of issuing the summons, or at any time afterward, may have the property of the defendant attached, as security for the satisfaction of any judgment that may be recovered, unless the defendant give security to pay such judgment, as in this chapter provided, in the following cases:

1. In an action upon a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money, where the contract is made or is payable in this state, and is not secured by any mortgage or lien upon real or personal property, or any pledge of personal property, or, if originally so secured, such security has, without any act of the plaintiff, or the person to whom the security was given, become valueless.

2. In an action upon a contract, express or implied, against a defendant not residing in this state.

3. In an action against a defendant, not residing in this state, to recover a sum of money as damages, arising from an injury to property in this state, in consequence of negligence, fraud, or other wrongful act.

Garnishment. Post, §§ 542, 543–545.
Preventing levy by counter-bond. See post, § 540.
Residence. See Pol. Code, § 52.

Legislation § 537. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 120, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 300, which read: "The plaintiff, at the time of issuing his summons, or at any time afterwards, may have the property of the defendant attached as security for the satisfaction of any judgment that may be recovered, unless the defendant give security to pay such judgment, as hereinafter provided, in the following cases: 1. In an action upon a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money, which contract is made or is payable in this state, and is not secured by a mortgage, lien, or pledge, upon real or personal property, or, if so secured, that such security has been rendered nugatory by the act of the defendant. 2. In an action upon a contract, express or implied, against a defendant not residing in this state." When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "his," before "summons," was changed to "the," (2) the word "the" was omitted before "defendant give," and (3) the word "hereinafter" was changed to the words "in this chapter."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 306, (1) in the introductory paragraph, (a) adding a comma after the word "attached," and (b) adding the word "the" before "defendant give"; (2) changing subd. 1 to read: "In an action upon a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money, where the contract is made or is payable in this state, and is not secured by any mortgage or lien upon real or personal property, or any pledge of personal property, or, if originally so secured, such security has, without any act of the plaintiff, or the person to whom the security was given, become [sic] valueless."

3. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 433, (1) in the introductory paragraph, changing "afterwards" to "afterward," (2) in subd. 1, changing "becomes" to "become," and (3) adding subd. 3.

Construction of statutes relating to attachment. All legislation bearing upon the question should be considered, and particularly that portion bearing upon attachments as the subject-matter; the sections relating to this subject are all in pari materia, and are to be construed together, in order to ascertain the intention of the legislature; and where the question stands upon implication, the court will imply that which will uphold, rather than that which must defeat, the principal purpose of the statute. Lick v. Madden, 25 Cal. 202. Where both the original statute and an amendment thereof contain a provision limiting the right of attachment to actions on contracts "made after the passage of this act," such words do not limit the right to debts contracted after the passage of the amendment. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312. To acquire any rights under attachment proceedings, a strict compliance with the law is required. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. The right to an attachment, and the mode of procedure for obtaining it, are creatures of the statute, upon the terms of which they depend for their existence and regularity. Merchants' Nat. Union v. Buisseret, 15 Cal. App. 444; 115 Pac. 58. Proceedings by attachment are statutory and special, and the provisions of the statute must be strictly followed, in order to acquire any rights thereunder (Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17; Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262; Low v. Henry, 9 Cal. 538; Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641; Mudge v. Steinhart, 78 Cal. 34; 12 Am. St. Rep. 17; 20 Pac. 147; Gow v. Marshall, 90 Cal. 565; 27 Pac. 422; Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93; 33 Am. St. Rep. 163; 31 Pac. 846; Rudolph v. Saunders, 111 Cal. 233; 43 Pac. 619; Beltaire v. Rosenberg, 129 Cal. 164; 61 Pac. 916; Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36); but the statutory provisions should be fairly interpreted, so as to give them a consistent and efficient operation in proper cases (Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262; Ayres v. Burr, 132 Cal. 125; 64 Pac. 120); and the remedy cannot be extended to cases not named in the statute. Clymer v. Willis, 3 Cal. 363; 58 Am. Dec. 414; Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93; 33 Am. St. Rep. 163; 31 Pac. 846.

Nature of remedy. The legislature may determine in what cases an attachment may issue. Dennis v. First Nat. Bank, 127 Cal. 453; 78 Am. St. Rep. 79; 59 Pac. 777. The remedy by attachment is not a distinct proceeding, in the nature of an action in rem, but is a proceeding auxiliary to an action at law, designed to secure the payment of any judgment the plaintiff may obtain (Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277; Allender v. Fritts, 24 Cal. 447; Rosenthal v. Perkins, 123 Cal. 240; 55 Pac. 804); it is not a part of the main action, but is a provisional, independent proceeding, initiated by affidavit, which is the basis for the writ (Nail v. Superior Court, 11 Cal. App. 27; 103 Pac. 902); and is a remedy given only in cases of indebtedness arising upon contract. Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17; Mudge v. Steinhart, 78 Cal. 34; 12 Am. St. Rep. 17; 20 Pac. 147. The right to an attachment, and the mode of procedure for obtaining it, are the creatures of statute, depending for their existence and regularity upon the terms of the code (Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9; 33 Pac. 741); and being merely a creature of statute, the existence and operation of the attachment in any case can continue no longer than the statute provides. Loveland v. Alvord etc. Mining Co., 76 Cal. 562; 18 Pac. 682; Hamilton v. Bell, 123 Cal. 93; 55 Pac. 758. The plaintiff cannot claim, as matter of right, the benefit of the attachment as something growing out of or necessarily connected with the contract, as he may have the benefit of an action to recover his debt; the attachment is merely auxiliary to the action, and the legislature may give, withhold, or limit it, at its pleasure, without impairing any substantial right of either party. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49.

Time of issuing writ. The writ may be issued at the time of issuing summons, or at any time afterwards. Allender v. Fritts, 24 Cal. 447; Johnson v. Miner, 144 Cal. 785; 78 Pac. 240. An attachment, issued before the summons, is a nullity. Low v. Henry, 9 Cal. 538; Henrietta Mining etc. Co. v. Gardner, 173 U. S. 123; 43 L. Ed. 637; 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327.

Effect of second summons. An attachment, regularly issued at the time of the issuance of the first summons, is not vitiated by the failure to serve the first summons and the issuance of a second one; nor is the validity of the attachment in any way affected by the proceedings. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85.

Effect of void summons. An unauthorized and void summons will not support the writ. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641.

Sufficiency of the complaint. The plaintiff must show affirmatively that the contract falls within the provisions of this section (Drake v. De Witt, 1 Cal. App. 617; 82 Pac. 982); and that the claim or debt is due. Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378; 79 Am. Dec. 184; Kinsey v. Wallace, 36 Cal. 462. It is not necessary that either the complaint or the contract itself shall show the amount due. Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9; 33 Pac. 741; De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407; 52 Pac. 718. A general allegation in the complaint, that the plaintiff has, on his part, performed the contract, for the breach of which the action was prosecuted, does not imply that the plaintiff, by such performance, intended to discharge such contract or the defendant's liability thereunder. Hale Bros. v. Milliken, 142 Cal. 134; 75 Pac. 653. Where the complaint shows that the action is upon contract and not in tort, it is immaterial that the prayer is for an accounting. Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9; 33 Pac. 741; De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407; 52 Pac. 718. Where a complaint joins two causes of action upon contract, and the plaintiff is entitled to an attachment on only one of them, the provision of § 540, post, that the amount of the plaintiff's demand must be stated in conformity to the complaint, is to be construed as limited to the cause of action for which the attachment is authorized. Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732. The attachment of property of a corporation, in a suit against certain named persons and others, designated as composing the corporation, is invalid as an attachment of corporation property, although after the levy of the writ the complaint was amended so as to substitute the corporation as defendant in the place of individuals originally served. Collins v. Montgomery, 16 Cal. 398.

Action upon a contract. An action against a stockholder to recover his proportion of a debt of the corporation is one founded upon a contract, for which an attachment may issue (Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93; 33 Am. St. Rep. 163; 31 Pac. 846; Dennis v. Superior Court, 91 Cal. 548; 27 Pac. 1031); as is also an action by the assignee of a corporation in insolvency, to recover money due from its stockholders, upon their subscriptions to the capital stock. Agassiz v. Superior Court, 90 Cal. 101; 27 Pac. 49; Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9; 33 Pac. 741. An assessment by a board of directors is not a necessary element of an attachable cause of action upon a stockholder's contract of subscription. Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9; 33 Pac. 741. An action for a failure to receive and pay for goods according to the terms of a contract between the parties is an action founded in contract, and not in tort, and the plaintiff is entitled to an attachment. Donnelly v. Strueven, 63 Cal. 182. An undertaking on appeal is an express contract for the payment of money, in the sense of the statute in relation to attachments, for which an attachment may issue (Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161); as is also a bail bond in a criminal case. San Francisco v. Brader, 50 Cal. 506. Where a defendant agreed, in consideration of the plaintiff making a subscription to stock at a specified price, to repurchase same on notice, there is an express contract for the direct payment of money, upon which an attachment may be issued. Flagg v. Dare, 107 Cal. 482; 40 Pac. 804. The relation between principal and agent is founded upon contract, and the law implies a promise by the latter that he will pay over moneys received by him to the principal on demand; and in an action to recover moneys so collected, an attachment may issue (De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407; 52 Pac. 718); and the law implies a promise to refund money paid on a consideration which has entirely failed: such implied promise is a contract for the direct payment of money, and an attachment may issue. Santa Clara Valley etc. Co. v. Tuck, 53 Cal. 304. A license tax is in the nature of a debt due from the licensee to the county, precisely as though he had contracted with the county, and an attachment may issue. San Luis Obispo County v. Hendricks, 71 Cal. 242; 11 Pac. 682; El Dorado County v. Meiss, 100 Cal. 268; 34 Pac. 716; Sacramento v. Dillman, 102 Cal. 107; 36 Pac. 385; San Luis Obispo County v. Greenberg, 120 Cal. 300; 52 Pac. 797. The beneficiary of a fraternal order, after the death of the member, is a creditor who has the right of attachment. Lackmann v. Supreme Council, 142 Cal. 22; 75 Pac. 583. Indorsers, guarantors, sureties, and all others who undertake to pay or become responsible for the debts of another, are liable to attachment. Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161. Moneys received under the terms of a contract, and due the plaintiff as a specific, definite debt, are liable to attachment. Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203. An action to recover money intrusted by the plaintiff to an employee, and which the defendant won from him in gambling, is not upon a contract, and a writ of attachment does not lie. Babcock v. Briggs, 52 Cal. 502.

Attachment in action for damages for breach of contract. In an action for damages for the breach of a contract, an attachment may issue, even where proof is necessary at the trial to show the amount of damages; but there must exist a basis upon which the damages can be determined by proof (Dunn v. Mackey, 80 Cal. 104; 22 Pac. 64; De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407; 52 Pac. 718); and an attachment lies upon a cause of action for damages for a breach of contract, where the damages are readily ascertainable by reference to the contract and proof of what was done under it, and the basis of computation of damages appears to be reasonable and definite (Hale Bros. v. Milliken, 142 Cal. 134; 75 Pac. 653); but where the contract does not furnish the measure of the liability of the defendant, and the damages are unliquidated, an attachment does not lie. De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407; 52 Pac. 718; Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732. Damages for breach of a contract to furnish building material, resulting in loss of rents, are such as can be readily ascertained, and entitle the plaintiff to a writ of attachment. Hale Bros. v. Milliken, 142 Cal. 134; 75 Pac. 653. Where an agent expressly contracts to sell property within a certain time, at a specified price, an attachment may issue in an action for a breach of such contract; and the measure of damages is the difference between the actual value at the end of the time specified and the price contracted to be realized. Dunn v. Mackey, 80 Cal. 104; 22 Pac. 64.

Contracts for direct payment of money. The legislature, in the use of the words "direct payment," in the first subdivision of this section, has expressed its will in language not a little obscure, and the adjective "direct" is used in an unnatural or strained sense; but, in the opinion of the supreme court, a clew to its meaning is afforded in § 538, post, where the plaintiff must swear that the defendant is indebted to him in a certain sum, specifying the amount, this language excluding all causes of action for unliquidated sums of money. Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161; and see Dunn v. Mackay, 80 Cal. 104; 22 Pac. 64. The official bond of a county treasurer is an obligation for the direct payment of money, upon which an attachment may issue. Monterey County v. McKee, 51 Cal. 255. The liability of a tenant in possession, to the purchaser at foreclosure sale, for rents or use and occupation from the day of sale to the expiration of the time for redemption, is not a liability founded on a contract express or implied, and a writ of attachment will not lie. Walker v. McCusker, 65 Cal. 360; 4 Pac. 206; McCusker v. Walker, 77 Cal. 208; 19 Pac. 382. The amount due on the contract need not necessarily appear from the contract itself; but it must be shown by the affidavit. Dunn v. Mackey, 80 Cal. 104; 22 Pac. 64; De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407; 52 Pac. 718.

Contract payable in this state. In an action on a contract not made in this state, an attachment cannot issue, unless it is expressly stipulated that it shall be paid in this state. Eck v. Hoffman, 55 Cal. 501. Such a contract is presumptively to be performed in the state where made (Tuller v. Arnold, 93 Cal. 166; 28 Pac. 863); and the right of attachment does not extend to such cases, unless express provision is made in the contract for payment in this state (Drake v. De Witt, 1 Cal. App. 617; 82 Pac. 982; Atwood v. Little Bonanza Quicksilver Co., 13 Cal. App. 594; 110 Pac. 344); and a subsequent promise to pay in this state cannot affect the question in any way, where suit is brought on the original contract. Dulton v. Shelton, 3 Cal. 206. To authorize an attachment in this state upon a contract not made in the state, it must appear by the contract itself that the money is payable in this state. Atwood v. Little Bonanza Quicksilver Co., 13 Cal. App. 594; 110 Pac. 344. A contract for the payment of money, made in another state, is presumptively to be performed there; and an attachment will not lie, if the money is not payable in this state by the contract itself. Tuller v. Arnold, 93 Cal. 166; 28 Pac. 863. A contract to pay commissions on sales to be made by plaintiff in another state, executed and to be performed there, cannot be construed as a contract for the payment of money in this state, and will not support an attachment. Drake v. De Witt, 1 Cal. App. 617; 82 Pac. 982. A contract, made and payable in another state, cannot be changed into a new and independent contract, payable in this state, by the creditor sending a statement of the indebtedness to the debtor in this state, if such statement and the actions of the parties relating thereto, do not constitute an account stated. Beltaire v. Rosenberg, 129 Cal. 164; 61 Pac. 916. The issuance of an attachment, in a transitory action, does not affect the jurisdiction of the court. Hodgkins v. Dunham, 10 Cal. App. 690; 103 Pac. 351.

Security of mortgage, lien, or pledge. The statute has made no specification of the character of the liens necessary to fill the requirements of this section, and the court is not authorized to make any discrimination in favor of or against any particular kind of lien. Hill v. Grigsby, 32 Cal. 55. The lien must be of a fixed, determinate character, capable of being enforced with certainty, and depending on no conditions. Porter v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 199. The policy that seems to have dictated this section is, that a creditor having a security for his debt by way of mortgage, lien, or pledge, shall not be entitled to the lien afforded by attachment, until he has exhausted his security. Hill v. Grigsby, 32 Cal. 55; Porter v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 199. A lien is none the less a security because the property covered by it is without the jurisdiction of the courts of this state; its value there may be equal, or more than equal, to the creditor, to its value in this state. Hill v. Grigsby, 32 Cal. 55. A trust fund, created by the will of a deceased indorser of a note upon which the plaintiff sues, to be devoted to the payment of his debts, while it may be a security, is not a lien of the character contemplated by this section (Bank of California v. Boyd, 86 Cal. 386; 25 Pac. 20); nor is a bond executed by a defendant, and two others as sureties, to secure the plaintiff's debt, security by mortgage of real or personal property, or pledge of personal property, and it does not deprive the plaintiff of the right of attachment. Slosson v. Glosser, 5 Cal. Unrep. 460; 46 Pac. 276. An attachment lies upon unpaid installments due upon a subscription to the stock of a corporation, where no lien exists by contract, and a transferable certificate has been issued by the corporation, setting forth the terms of the subscription and the amount paid thereon; such a certificate gives as complete possession of the shares evidenced by it as if it were for paid-up stock; and the corporation, having no possession, has no seller's lien thereon, and can have no general lien, except for assessments, in the absence of a contract between the corporation and its stockholders, creating a lien not dependent upon possession of the certificate of stock to secure the indebtedness of the stockholders to the corporation. Lankershim Ranch etc. Co. v. Herberger, 82 Cal. 600; 23 Pac. 134. A landlord has no general lien upon the property of his lessee, in the possession of the lessee, on leased property, and he is entitled to a writ of attachment in an action to recover rent. Shea v. Johnson, 101 Cal. 455; 35 Pac. 1023. The lien of a landowner distraining trespassing animals is limited to two days by the act of March 7, 1878 (Stats. 1877–78, p. 179); and having no continuing relief by distraint, the act in no way conflicts with the code provision limiting the right of attachment to cases where there is no security. Wigmore v. Buell, 122 Cal. 144; 54 Pac. 600. A party, by securing a mechanic's lien, does not forfeit or waive it by causing an attachment to be issued and levied upon property of the debtor to secure the same demand: the two remedies are cumulative, and both may be pursued at the same time. Brennan v. Swasey, 16 Cal. 140; 76 Am. Dec. 507. An attachment issued and levied on a debt secured by mortgage is invalid. Kinsey v. Wallace, 36 Cal. 462. A pledge of personal property is a "mortgage" thereof, within the attachment act, the word being used therein in a general sense, meaning security; and by receiving such pledge as security for a debt, the creditor forfeits his right to enforce his debt by attachment. Payne v. Bensley, 8 Cal. 260; 68 Am. Dec. 318. Stock of a corporation, held by one as collateral security for an indebtedness of the defendant, is such security as will deprive the holder of his right of attachment; the value of such holder's lien, or its sufficiency to cover the amount of claim it was intended to secure, or whether or not the certificates had been actually indorsed, are matters not to be inquired into on a motion to dissolve the attachment. Beaudry v. Vache, 45 Cal. 3. A vendor's lien constitutes a lien, within the meaning of this section. Hill v. Grigsby, 32 Cal. 55. An attachment may issue in an action to recover purchase-money due under an executory contract for the sale of a patent right: the claim therefor is not secured by a vendor's lien upon the property sold, as no such lien exists under an executory contract for the sale of personal property, where title has not passed. Eads v. Kessler, 121 Cal. 244; 53 Pac. 656. The plaintiff cannot waive the security of a mortgage, and bring an attachment suit on the indebtedness. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 154; 23 Pac. 1086. The lien of a common carrier is abandoned by his election to attach the property. Wingard v. Banning, 39 Cal. 543.

Attaching property waives lien thereon. A lien-holder, who levies a writ of attachment against property upon which he has a lien, thereby abandons and forfeits such lien. Wingard v. Banning, 39 Cal. 543. Unpaid purchase-money in the hands of the purchaser of mortgaged personal property, under a sale authorized by the mortgagee, is liable to attachment, in an action by a creditor of the mortgagor, to the exclusion of any claim of the mortgagee, whose lien is extinguished by such sale. Maier v. Freeman, 112 Cal. 8; 53 Am. St. Rep. 151; 44 Pac. 357. A pledgee who voluntarily parts with the possession of pledged goods and transfers them to a third party, who guarantees payment of his debt, thereby severs the debt from the pledge, and the lien is extinguished as to him. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770.

Where security has become valueless. The provision of this section, that the security must have become valueless, means that the property pledged must have ceased to have any value as a security, not that the property pledged must itself have become valueless, before the plaintiff can have an attachment; and where a pledgor authorized the pledgee to sell the pledged property at private sale only, without notice to the pledgor, any notice of such sale is thereby expressly waived, and, under the maxim, Conventio vincit legem, the agreement of the parties overcomes the provision of the law requiring a sale at public auction upon usual notice. Williams v. Hahn, 113 Cal. 475; 45 Pac. 815. An attachment may issue, under this section, though the debt was originally secured by mortgage, if such security, without any act of the plaintiff or the person to whom it was given, has depreciated in value so as to become valueless; but this section has no application to a case where the security was originally valueless or inadequate, and has not changed in value. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 154; 23 Pac. 1086. Mortgage bonds, valueless at the time of their delivery as security, are not, in fact, security; and such bonds do not deprive the creditor of his right to an attachment. McPhee v. Townsend, 139 Cal. 638; 73 Pac. 584. Where land has been alienated by the vendee, the vendor is not required to litigate with the purchaser to ascertain whether he is a purchaser for value, without notice, before resorting to his attachment: the vendee, by alienating the land, has not only interposed an obstacle in the way of enforcing the lien, but has rendered it doubtful whether the lien is not wholly defeated; and he cannot compel the vendor to solve this doubt by proceeding against the purchaser before suing out his attachment. Porter v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 199; Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. Although the lien implied by law in favor of a vendor who has parted with the legal title and taken no security for the purchase-money is not a specific, absolute charge upon the property, but is personal to the vendor, and does not pass by a transfer of his claim for the purchase-money, yet where the vendor retains the legal title under an executory contract for the conveyance of the land upon payment of the purchase-money, he holds it as security for the purchase-money, in the nature of a mortgage, and the assignee of notes given for the purchase-money is entitled to the security, as an incident to the debt, and cannot attach property thereupon, without showing that the security has become valueless. Gessner v. Palmateer, 89 Cal. 89; 13 L. R. A. 187; 24 Pac. 608.

Non-resident defendants. The residence referred to in the attachment law is an actual as contradistinguished from a constructive or legal residence or domicile; and where a person has a settled abode for the time being, for purposes of business or pleasure, that is his residence, within the meaning of the attachment law, notwithstanding an intention to return to the place of his constructive residence or domicile. Hanson v. Graham, 82 Cal. 631; 7 L. R. A. 127; 23 Pac. 56; Egener v. Juch, 101 Cal. 105; 35 Pac. 432. The determination of the question of the residence of a person is not affected by his honesty or dishonesty; hence, where absconding foreign debtors, under an assumed name, purchased property in this state, and lived thereon until the commencement of an action against them upon their indebtedness, the fact of their residence here is established, although most of the time they seemed desirous of disposing of the property, saying that in the event of selling they would leave the country. Eck v. Hoffman, 55 Cal. 501. To procure an attachment against the property of a non-resident, it is only necessary that the complaint shall show that the action is founded upon a contract, express or implied, and that the affidavit shall state the facts pointed out in the second and fourth subdivisions of § 538, post. Hale Bros. v. Milliken, 142 Cal. 134; 75 Pac. 653. The service of summons and the issuance and levy of an attachment are both requisite to confer jurisdiction in the case of a non-resident defendant; but the proceeding for the publication of summons is distinct and separate from the proceeding in attachment. Smith v. Supreme Lodge, 12 Cal. App. 189; 106 Pac. 1102. The seizure of the property of a non-resident defendant will authorize constructive service by publication on him, and justify a judgment subjecting the property attached to the satisfaction of such judgment; but it will not authorize a personal judgment against such defendant. Belcher v. Chambers, 53 Cal. 635; Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73; Mudge v. Steinhart, 78 Cal. 34; 12 Am. St. Rep. 17; 20 Pac. 147; Blanc v. Paymaster Mining Co., 95 Cal. 524; 29 Am. St. Rep. 149; 30 Pac. 765. The issuance and levy of an attachment upon the property of a non-resident within this state is essential, before jurisdiction can be acquired to render any judgment at all, and then it can only be enforced against the property attached. Smith v. Supreme Lodge, 12 Cal. App. 189; 106 Pac. 1102. A writ of attachment, issued in an action sounding in tort, does not confer jurisdiction in rem over the property of a non-resident defendant who is served with summons by publication. Mudge v. Steinhart, 78 Cal. 34; 12 Am. St. Rep. 17; 20 Pac. 147. In an action against a non-resident for the recovery of money, where there has been no personal service of process on the defendant within the state, and no appearance therein by him, no judgment can be given, other than one in the nature of or having the effect of a judgment in rem against such property of the non-resident as may have been specifically attached in the action. Brown v. Campbell, 100 Cal. 635; 38 Am. St. Rep. 314; 35 Pac. 433. Where property belonging to non-residents is attached, prohibition will not lie to restrain the plaintiff from proceeding with the action, upon the ground that it is one in which no attachment will lie, there being a remedy by appeal from an order refusing to dissolve the attachment. Agassiz v. Superior Court, 90 Cal. 101; 27 Pac. 49.

Attachment by partner, against firm. No attachment can be sued out by one partner against another for any matter touching the partnership affairs (Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203); but funds in the hands of a receiver, appointed in a suit by one partner for dissolution, may be attached by a creditor of the partnership, at any time before the decree of dissolution, and priority gained over other creditors. Adams v. Woods, 9 Cal. 24.

Attachment against vessel. An attachment proceeding against a vessel is distinct from an ordinary attachment under this section. Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320.

Attachments against banks. Under the National Banking Act, an attachment cannot issue against a national bank from a state court (Dennis v. First Nat. Bank, 127 Cal. 453; 78 Am. St. Rep. 79; 59 Pac. 777); nor, where a commercial bank has suspended and closed its doors, owing to insolvency in fact, does the right of attachment by a depositor or creditor of the bank exist. Crane v. Pacific Bank, 106 Cal. 64; 27 L. R. A. 562; 39 Pac. 215. The attachment of a draft will excuse a collecting agent for failure to collect, or to return it to the payee. Davis v. First Nat. Bank, 118 Cal. 600; 50 Pac. 666.

Priority of attachment liens as between creditors. A prior lien gives a prior claim, which is entitled to prior satisfaction out of the subject it binds. Scrivener v. Dietz, 68 Cal. 1; 8 Pac. 609. All the equities are in favor of the most diligent, in a contest between attaching creditors. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570. The rights acquired by the attachment creditor, through the levy of the writ, are precisely those which his debtor had at the time of the levy. Handley v. Pfister, 39 Cal. 283; 2 Am. Rep. 449; Bank of Ukiah v. Petaluma Sav. Bank, 100 Cal. 590; 35 Pac. 170. An attachment issued before the maturity of the debt is prima facie void as against a subsequent attachment; but where goods were fraudulently purchased by an insolvent, the creditor may attach before the maturity of the debt, and other creditors, subsequently attaching, cannot complain. Patrick v. Montader, 13 Cal. 434; and see Taaffe v. Josephson, 7 Cal. 352. A collusive attachment confers no right as against subsequent bona fide attachments. Briody v. Conro, 42 Cal. 135. A subsequent attaching creditor cannot question the regularity of the affidavit and undertaking in the suit of the prior attaching creditor. Fridenberg v. Pierson, 18 Cal. 152; 79 Am. Dec. 162. Where a subsequent attaching creditor procures the first attachment against the debtor to be set aside as fraudulent, he cannot, on that ground, claim priority over the attachment preceding his. Patrick v. Montader, 13 Cal. 434.

Intervention by subsequent attaching creditor. An attachment creditor may intervene in prior attachment suit, and, upon a proper showing, defeat the lien of a prior attaching creditor. Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157; McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115; McEldowney v. Madden, 124 Cal. 108; 56 Pac. 783; Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111. Where an attachment is issued on a fraudulent demand, or on one which has in fact no existence, a subsequent attachment creditor may make himself a party to the proceedings, in order to defeat them. Fridenberg v. Pierson, 18 Cal. 152; 79 Am. Dec. 162. A subsequent attaching creditor, whose writ was served by way of garnishment after the maturity of the indebtedness of the garnishee to the defendant, may intervene in the suit of a prior attaching creditor of the same defendant, whose garnishment was served before the maturity of such debt, to prevent the payment of the attached debt to the prior attaching creditor. Gregory v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 339. A creditor of an insolvent corporation, who has obtained a lien by attachment, has an equitable right of intervention in a prior attachment suit brought by an insolvent holder of unpaid stock in the corporation, whose liability to the corporation is largely in excess of his claim against it, in order to prevent the sole assets of the corporation from going to such stockholder, to the exclusion of creditors who have an equitable right to have the entire property and assets, including plaintiff's liability to the corporation, appropriated to the satisfaction of their demands; and the prior attachment lien of such insolvent stockholder is properly postponed to that of the intervener, and the equitable rights of the parties can as well be adjusted in the proceeding in intervention as by a separate direct action for that purpose. Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111. An attaching creditor may intervene in a suit against the garnishee by the latter's creditor, an assignee of the attachment debtor, to determine his lien upon the fund. Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522. The judgment of an intervener against the defendant is admissible to prove his right to intervene. Coghill v. Marks, 29 Cal. 673. The burden of proof, after the intervener has proved the facts alleged to show his right to intervene, is upon the plaintiff to prove his cause of action. Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157. A lien by garnishment gives the same rights to interveners as a lien by direct attachment. Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111.

Priority as to attachment and other liens. The right of stoppage in transitu is paramount to any lien of attachment levied upon the goods, before delivery, by a creditor of the vendee. Blackman v. Pierce, 23 Cal. 508. The lien of the attachment of an interest of a beneficiary under a trust is subject to the equities of the parties to the trust agreement. Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 488; 24 Pac. 930. Where certain creditors agree to a transfer of property, in trust, to another creditor, the surplus, after sale, to be returned to the debtor, the lien of the transferee and those he represents is superior to that which other creditors could acquire by a subsequent attachment. Handley v. Pfister, 39 Cal. 283; 2 Am. Rep. 449. Laborers having preferred claims cannot maintain an injunction to prevent an attaching creditor from dismissing his attachment suit, after notice given to such creditor of their preferred claims according to law; nor can they enforce a lien in equity as against such creditor, and the debtor, and the sheriff who levied the attachment. Winrod v. Wolters, 141 Cal. 399; 74 Pac. 1037. An antedated note, upon which an attachment suit is based, is not fraudulent as against a subsequent attaching creditor, merely because, when the plaintiff discovered the insolvency of the debtor, he procured the latter to execute such note, payable on demand, as a substitute for other notes not yet due, if it also appears that the latter notes had been accepted by him upon giving the defendant an extension of time for the payment of pre-existing debt, without notice of the defendant's insolvency. Brewster v. Bours, 8 Cal. 501. The lien of the attachment is not affected by the appointment of a receiver; and the delivery of the attached property to the receiver, appointed subsequently to the levying of the attachment, does not release any valid lien thereon. Von Roun v. Superior Court, 58 Cal. 358; Bories v. Union Building etc. Ass'n, 141 Cal. 74; 74 Pac. 552. The receiver of an insolvent foreign corporation, claiming under the laws of another state, has no rights as against those of a domestic attaching creditor. Lackmann v. Supreme Council, 142 Cal. 22; 75 Pac. 583. The property of a building and loan association is subject to attachment at any time prior to the commencement of an action by the attorney-general to enjoin it from doing business; and the lien of an attachment is not affected by a prior adverse report of a state board of commissioners to the attorney-general as to the hazardous business methods of such association. Bories v. Union Building etc. Ass'n, 141 Cal. 74; 74 Pac. 552.

Priority as to mortgage and attachment. A chattel mortgage, recorded without any verification by the mortgagee, is void as against subsequent attaching creditors; and a subsequent verification, without recording the instrument so verified, can give it no validity. Alferitz v. Scott, 130 Cal. 474; 62 Pac. 735. An unrecorded chattel mortgage is void as against subsequent attaching creditors of the mortgagor (Beamer v. Freeman, 84 Cal. 554; 24 Pac. 169), regardless of their actual notice thereof; and knowledge of its existence will not protect the holder of the chattel mortgage against an attachment by a creditor of the mortgagor. Cardenas v. Miller, 108 Cal. 250; 49 Am. St. Rep. 84; 39 Pac. 783; Rudolph v. Saunders, 111 Cal. 233; 43 Pac. 619. A chattel mortgage, defectively acknowledged, is void as against an attaching creditor of the mortgagor, unless the property was reduced to possession by the mortgagee, prior to the attachment. Adlard v. Rodgers, 105 Cal. 327; 38 Pac. 889. Where a mortgage of personal property was recorded in the county where it was executed, but, after the removal of the property to another county, a subsequent recordation of the mortgage in the latter county, after an attachment had been levied on the property in such county, cannot avail as against the attaching creditor. Fassett v. Wise, 115 Cal. 316; 36 L. R. A. 505; 47 Pac. 47. An attachment levied prior to the date of a mortgage, by the attachment debtor, takes precedence of the mortgage, and the sale under the execution in the attachment suit concludes the rights of the mortgagee as effectually as it does those of the mortgagor. Reilly v. Wright, 117 Cal. 77; 48 Pac. 970. The lien of an unrecorded mortgage of real estate takes priority over the lien of an attachment levied after the execution of the mortgage. Bank of Ukiah v. Petaluma Sav. Bank, 100 Cal. 590; 35 Pac. 170. A mortgage of real and personal property, executed only in the manner that a mortgage of real property is required to be executed, is void as to the personal property, as against subsequent attaching creditors of the mortgagor. Bishop v. McKillican, 124 Cal. 321; 71 Am. St. Rep. 68; 57 Pac. 76. A secret lien cannot stand as against an attachment levied on a growing crop as the property of a tenant by his creditor. Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Purvis, 112 Cal. 236; 53 Am. St. Rep. 210; 44 Pac. 561. In an action to foreclose a mortgage, defendants claiming under an attachment lien accruing after the mortgage was given are entitled to prove the existence of their lien, and to show that, in consequence of certain acts of the plaintiff, it is superior to the lien of the mortgage. Scrivener v. Dietz, 68 Cal. 1; 8 Pac. 609.

Priority as to deed and attachment. An unrecorded deed is effective as against a subsequent attachment of the land as the property of the grantor, who has conveyed, in fraud of his creditors, to a purchaser for value and without notice. Morrow v. Graves, 77 Cal. 218; 19 Pac. 489. A writ of attachment is not an "instrument," within the sense of that term as used in § 1107 of the Civil Code; therefore an unrecorded deed will prevail over an attachment lien; and the question of actual notice of the conveyance is immaterial. Hoag v. Howard, 55 Cal. 564; Plant v. Smythe, 45 Cal. 161; Foorman v. Wallace, 75 Cal. 552; 17 Pac. 680; Morrow v. Graves, 77 Cal. 218; 19 Pac. 489; Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 488; 24 Pac. 930. A conveyance made after an attachment is subject to the lien of the attachment. Kinder v. Macy, 7 Cal. 206.

Priority as to individual and firm creditors. Partnership property can be seized upon attachment against one of the partners for his individual debt, and sold; but the interest which passes by the sale is only the interest of the debtor partner in the residuum of the partnership property after the settlement of the partnership debts. Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611. A creditor attaching partnership property, in a suit against an individual partner, does not acquire any lien upon such property as against the superior equity of a subsequently attaching creditor of the partnership. Burkee v. Bunn, 22 Cal. 194; Commercial Bank v. Mitchell, 58 Cal. 42; Whelan v. Shain, 115 Cal. 326; 47 Pac. 57. Where one partner purchases the interest of his copartners in the firm, agreeing to pay the firm debts, the property of the firm remains bound for such debts, just as before the sale; and a creditor obtaining a lien by attachment is entitled to file a creditor's bill, without waiting for judgment and execution. Conroy v. Woods, 13 Cal. 626; 73 Am. Dec. 605. Where two persons, as a partnership, are also members of two other firms, and all the firms fail, and their property is attached by creditors, the creditors of the first-named partnership are entitled to priority of payment out of the proceeds of the property of such partnership, over the creditors of the other two firms, notwithstanding their priority in time to the other attachments. Bullock v. Hubbard, 23 Cal. 495; 83 Am. Dec. 130. The creditor of an individual partner, who has merely an attachment upon his interest in the partnership, has no such interest in an action to wind up the affairs of the partnership as to entitle him to intervene. Isaacs v. Jones, 121 Cal. 257; 53 Pac. 793.

Proceedings to determine priority of liens. A subsequent attaching creditor may maintain a bill in equity against a prior attaching creditor, to show that the debt alleged by the latter was fraudulent, and to subject the lien of such creditor to his own. Wright v. Levy, 12 Cal. 257. A complaint in an action to determine the invalidity of a prior attachment lien, which fails to aver facts from which the court can see that some particular kind of lien existed, is insufficient (Shea v. Johnson, 101 Cal. 455; 35 Pac. 1023); as is also a creditor's bill in equity, filed by an attachment creditor, to reach equitable assets fraudulently conveyed, or fraudulently subjected to a prior attachment, which simply avers that the conveyance was fraudulent, or that the defendant was not indebted to the prior attaching creditor: the facts and circumstances which will reasonably sustain the theory of the bill must be set forth. Kinder v. Macy, 7 Cal. 206; Castle v. Bader, 23 Cal. 75. The priority of attachment liens may be determined in an injunction suit brought by a purchaser under the first attachment to prevent the sale of the property under a subsequent attachment. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165. Where the claim of the prior attaching creditor is for a bona fide debt without tinge of fraud, an objection to the attachment proceedings, on the ground of the impropriety of the affidavit for the attachment, can be successfully made only by the defendant in the attachment suit. Shea v. Johnson, 101 Cal. 455; 35 Pac. 1023.

Discharge or release of attachment. Attachment is not of the nature of a common-law distress of the defendant's property, to be held until he pays the plaintiff's demand; but it is held in order that it may be subject to execution; and when that purpose is impossible of accomplishment, the right to hold the property for that purpose ceases. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49. An attaching creditor may voluntarily release the property attached, and such release may be made without the sanction of the court: a mere direction to the sheriff is sufficient (Smith v. Robinson, 64 Cal. 387; 1 Pac. 353); and the sheriff may exact the execution of an undertaking as a condition of such release, and the release will be a sufficient consideration for the undertaking; or the attaching creditor may ratify the act of the sheriff, after a release, and thereby validate his act. Hesser v. Rowley, 139 Cal. 410; 73 Pac. 156. The death of the defendant releases the lien of the attachment, if the case is such that execution cannot issue legally after his death. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49; Hensley v. Morgan, 47 Cal. 622; Ham v. Cunningham, 50 Cal. 365; Ham v. Henderson, 50 Cal. 367; Day v. Superior Court, 61 Cal. 489. A collateral attack on an attachment can be maintained, only for causes which render the writ absolutely void, and not merely voidable. Mudge v. Steinhart, 78 Cal. 34; 12 Am. St. Rep. 17; 20 Pac. 147.

Discharge of attachment by insolvency or bankruptcy proceedings. The dissolution of an attachment may be effected by voluntary proceedings in insolvency. Baum v. Raphael, 57 Cal. 361. The discharge of the lien by insolvency proceedings, wherein the defendant is adjudicated an insolvent debtor, takes place only where the express statutory provision declares that the proceeding in insolvency shall have that effect. Vermont Marble Co. v. Superior Court, 99 Cal. 579; 34 Pac. 326; Hefner v. Herron, 117 Cal. 473; 49 Pac. 586; Elliott v. Warfield, 122 Cal. 632; 55 Pac. 409. Under the insolvency act of 1852 and the supplementary act of 1876, an attachment levied within two months prior to the commencement of the insolvency proceedings was dissolved thereby. Cerf v. Oaks, 59 Cal. 132. Under the insolvency act of 1880, an adjudication of insolvency dissolved, by operation of law, any attachment made within one month next preceding the commencement of the insolvency proceedings (Vermont Marble Co. v. Superior Court, 99 Cal. 579; 34 Pac. 326; Elliott v. Warfield, 122 Cal. 632; 55 Pac. 409); and no order of release of the attachment was necessary. Wilhoit v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 453; 25 Pac. 675. The insolvency act of 1895 also provided for the dissolution of an attachment levied within one month prior to the commencement of insolvency proceedings. Hefner v. Herron, 117 Cal. 473; 49 Pac. 586. The property acquired by a bankrupt after the commencement of insolvency proceedings forms no part of the estate in bankruptcy; and the assignee acquires title only to such property as the insolvent owned at the time of the commencement of the insolvency proceedings. Day v. Superior Court, 61 Cal. 489. The dismissal of insolvency proceedings does not revive the lien of a dissolved attachment. Wilhoit v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 453; 25 Pac. 675. Notice of an order staying proceedings against an insolvent debtor need not be served on the creditor or officer, to give it effect and prevent the attachment. Taffts v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 47; 73 Am. Dec. 610. An adjudication of bankruptcy, under the act of Congress of 1898, dissolves an attachment levied within four months prior to the filing of the petition, if the creditor causing the levy had reasonable cause to believe the debtor insolvent. Alexander v. Wilson, 144 Cal. 5; 77 Pac. 706. Bankruptcy proceedings, instituted more than four months after the levy of an attachment, do not deprive the attaching creditor of the right to subject the attached property to the satisfaction of his debt. Holladay v. Hare, 69 Cal. 515; 11 Pac. 28.

Judgment in attachment suits. The court, in rendering judgment in an action in which an attachment has been procured and served, has no duty to perform in reference to the attachment proceedings; nor does the sheriff act in obedience to the judgment, but to the behests of the statute, in enforcing the lien of the attachment by a sale of the property attached. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 259; 89 Am. Dec. 49; Allender v. Fritts, 24 Cal. 447. Where the defendant in an attachment suit dies after the levy of the writ, but before judgment, and his administrator is substituted, and the case continued against him, judgment cannot be rendered enforcing the attachment lien by ordering the sale of the attached property to satisfy the demand. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49; Bank of Stockton v. Howland, 42 Cal. 129.

Merger in judgment lien. The lien of the attachment becomes merged in that of the judgment, and has no effect thereafter, except to confer a priority in the lien of the judgment; and where there are several attachments, this priority is maintained and enforced under the judgments; the attachment lien, as to its amount, depends upon the ex parte statement of the plaintiff, while that of the judgment is certain; the lien of the latter is of a higher order, if it is possible that there can be different ranks among the liens; the law does not contemplate the existence, at the same time, of two distinct liens, arising by operation of law in one action, for the security of one demand. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; Scrivener v. Dietz, 68 Cal. 1; 8 Pac. 609; Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. But the lien of the attachment is not merged in the judgment until the latter becomes a lien; and if the judgment is not docketed so as to become a lien, the lien of the attachment still remains upon the property. Weinreich v. Hensley, 121 Cal. 647; 54 Pac. 254. Though merged in the judgment, the attachment lien still exists so as to confer a priority in the lien of the judgment, and this result is attained, in an indirect way, by applying the doctrine of relation to the series of acts necessary to be done to transfer title to the property attached; and a sheriff's deed, executed in pursuance of an execution sale, under a judgment rendered in an attachment suit, takes effect from the levy of the attachment. Porter

v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165. The mere recovery of judgment and issuance of execution will not, in case of a garnishment in an attachment suit, without a receipt by the sheriff of the property, or an actual levy of the execution, create any additional lien upon the fund garnished, nor convert the attachment lien into a lien under final process. Howe v. Union Ins. Co., 42 Cal. 528; Fed. Cas. No. 6776. The lien of the attachment does not revive upon the expiration of the two years' lien of the judgment. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256. The purpose of the attachment is to hold the property of the defendant as security for such judgment as may be rendered in the action (Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56); and the lien can be enforced only by sale under execution. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49.

Action for maliciously suing out writ. An action may be maintained for the malicious prosecution of the writ, or for the taking and detention of the property; and greater damages may be recovered in the former form of action than in the latter. McCusker v. Walker, 77 Cal. 208; 19 Pac. 382. Where the writ was a mere incident in an action for the prosecution of an unfounded claim, the use made of the writ aggravates the damages resulting from the prosecution of such action. Berson v. Ewing, 84 Cal. 89; 23 Pac. 1112. An attachment for damages resulting from negligence is a gross abuse of the process. Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17. An attachment for a debt secured by mortgage subjects the plaintiff, who has knowledge of such security, to liability for malicious prosecution. Kinsey v. Wallace, 36 Cal. 462. But the issue of an attachment, and a levy of the same on goods, where there is a legal cause of action existing, is not such a duress of goods as to give a cause of action for damages in favor of the one whose goods are seized. Kohler v. Wells Fargo & Co., 26 Cal. 606. Where the plaintiff commenced suit and attached before the debt became due, and thus prevented the defendant from fulfilling his part of the contract, damages for abuse of the process may be claimed by cross-complaint. Wangenheim v. Graham, 39 Cal. 169. Actual and exemplary damages may be awarded, but they should not be unreasonably or disproportionately large. Kinsey v. Wallace, 36 Cal. 462. Where a person, having a good cause of action against another, willfully sues for a greater amount than is due, and attaches the property of the other, and puts him to charges, he is liable. Weaver v. Page, 6 Cal. 681; Clark v. Nordholt, 121 Cal. 26; 53 Pac. 400. A nominal plaintiff is liable, where he gives his confederate unconditional permission to use his name in bringing suits, and the evidence shows the prosecution to have been malicious on the part of his confederate: ignorance of the facts in a particular suit cannot excuse such nominal plaintiff. Kinsey v. Wallace, 36 Cal. 462.

Pleadings in action for maliciously suing out writ. Apt words, used to describe a cause of action for malicious prosecution, rather than an action for the unlawful taking and detention of property, must be presumed to have been used by design, upon the election of the plaintiff to maintain his suit. McCusker v. Walker, 77 Cal. 208; 19 Pac. 382. The complaint must allege that the writ was sued out and prosecuted without probable cause. King v. Montgomery, 50 Cal. 115. Where, in an action for the malicious prosecution of an attachment against the plaintiff by the defendant, in the name of another, the complaint alleges, in stating what the defendant did in the issuing and levying of the writ, that the defendant and another filed their undertaking, conditioned to pay all the costs and damages that the plaintiff might sustain, the gravamen of the complaint is the malicious prosecution, and the allegations with regard to the undertaking cannot be construed as constituting a separate cause of action. Sharp v. Miller, 54 Cal. 329. In order to entitle a plaintiff to recover in an action for the malicious prosecution of the writ, he must allege and prove that the writ was executed by attaching the property: the mere malicious suing out of such a writ without probable cause, without levying it upon the property of the party against whom it is issued, does not authorize a recovery. Maskell v. Barker, 99 Cal. 642; 34 Pac. 340. An allegation that the judgment in an attachment suit was rendered and entered in favor of the defendant, is sufficient, without alleging further, that the judgment was in full force and effect, and not vacated, set aside, reversed, or appealed from. Carter v. Paige, 80 Cal. 390; 22 Pac. 188.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations begins to run against a claim for damages for maliciously procuring the levy of an attachment, at the time of the levy; the period of limitation being two years (Sharp v. Miller, 54 Cal. 329; 57 Cal. 431; McCusker v. Walker, 77 Cal. 208; 19 Pac. 382; and see Wood v. Currey, 57 Cal. 208; Taylor v. Bidwell, 65 Cal. 489; 4 Pac. 491); but the statute does not begin to run against a claim for damages for the malicious prosecution of a civil action upon an unfounded claim, until the action is terminated, although an attachment may have issued in the action. Berson v. Ewing, 84 Cal. 89; 23 Pac. 1112.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. The proceedings by attachment are statutory and special, and must be strictly pursued. When a party relies upon his attachment lien as a remedy, he must strictly follow the provisions of the statute. Roberts & Co. v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262. The remedy is given only in cases of indebtedness arising upon contract. Griswold v. Sharp, 2 Cal. 17; Dulton v. Shelton, 3 Cal. 206. The remedy is not a distinct proceeding in the nature of an action in rem, but is auxiliary to an action at law, designed to secure the payment of any judgment the plaintiff may obtain. Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277. An attachment issued on a complaint which was a printed form, with the blanks filled up by the clerk at the request of plaintiff, but no name was signed to the complaint till next day, and after other attachment on the same property, when it was signed by the clerk, with the name of plaintiff's attorney. It was held, that the action of the clerk, though not correct, was only an irregularity, and the complaint was not void. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570. An attachment, regular upon its face, is not void because the complaint does not state a cause of action warranting the issuance of an attachment. McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115. An attachment issued before the issuance of the summons is void. Low v. Henry, 9 Cal. 538. Where G. & Co., concealing their insolvency, obtained an extension from their creditor B., and, before the maturity of the notes B., apprehending that G. & Co. would fail, and that the other creditors of G. & Co. would exhaust their assets by attachment, obtained, by an arrangement with G. & Co., an antedated note for the amount due him at the date thereof by G. & Co., on which suit was commenced by attachment, and a levy made upon the property of G. & Co. Held, that B.'s attachment and claim was valid against the subsequent attaching creditors, the case not being one of fraud. Brewster v. Bours, 8 Cal. 501. Where goods were fraudulently purchased by an insolvent, the creditor may attach before the maturity of the debt. Patrick v. Montader, 13 Cal. 434. An attachment issued upon a debt not due is void as against creditors whose rights are affected by it. Patrick v. Montader, 13 Cal. 434, cited supra, goes upon the ground that the debt upon which the attachment issued was equitably due, and hence does not conflict with this rule. Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378; 79 Am. Dec. 184. A creditor having a lien by attachment only, may file a creditor's bill. Conroy v. Woods, 13 Cal. 626; 73 Am. Dec. 605.

2. When an attachment cannot issue. If the debt is secured by a vendor's lien, an attachment cannot issue. Hill v. Grigsby, 32 Cal. 55. But a vendor's lien for the unpaid purchase-money of a tract of land, where the land has been conveyed by the vendee to a third party, is not a lien securing the debt within the meaning of the terms used in § 120 of the Practice Act (Code, § 537). Porter v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 199. An attachment will not lie when the debt is secured by mortgage. Kinsey v. Wallace, 36 Cal. 463. The term "mortgage" is used in its most general signification, and iucludes a pledge of personal property. Payne v. Bensley, 8 Cal. 260; 68 Am. Dec. 318.

3. Partnership, attachment affected by. An attachment cannot be sued out by one partner against another for any matter touching the partnership affairs. Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203. The commencement of an action by one partner, against his copartners, for a dissolution and account, and for an injunction and receiver, and an appointment of a receiver by the court, does not prevent a creditor from proceeding by attachment and gaining a priority over other creditors, until a final decree of dissolution and order of distribution. Adams v. Woods, 9 Cal. 24. Where one partner buys out his copartners, agreeing to pay the debts of the firm, the partnership remains bound for firm debts, and the lien of firm creditors attaching is perferred to the lien of an individual creditor of the remaining creditor attaching first. Conroy v. Woods, 13 Cal. 626; 73 Am. Dec. 605.

Where two shareholders in a joint-stock company sold to the company goods to a large amount, and afterwards, during the existence of the company, sold their stock to A., and assigned their account for such goods to B., who sued such company on said account by attachment, it was held, that the action could not be maintained, there having been no final settlement, no balance struck, and no express promise on the part of the individual members to pay their ascertained portion. Bullard v. Kinney, 10 Cal. 60. The creditor of an individual partner obtains, by an attachment of the partner's interest, no lien but what is subject to the general lien of partners and creditors. Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611. An attachment against V. may be levied on his interest in grain, and to effect this the sheriff may take possession of the entire quantity of grain; but he can sell, under the execution on the judgment that may be recovered in the action, only the undivided interest of V., the purchaser at the sale becoming tenant in common with the other part-owners. Bernal v. Hovious, 17 Cal. 541; 79 Am. Dec. 147.

4. Stoppage in transitu. Attachment as affected by. The right of stoppage in transitu is paramount to any lien by attachment, and may be exercised to defeat such lien by the creditor of the vendee. Blackman v. Pierce, 23 Cal. 508.

5. Priority of attachments. Patrick v. Montader, 13 Cal. 434; Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157. The writ affects personal property from the time of the levy only. Taffts v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 47; 73 Am. Dec. 610. In McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281, 87 Dec. 115, where two attachments had been levied on the same property, it was questioned whether a junior attaching creditor could successfully attack the validity of the first attachment, on the ground that the complaint did not contain a cause of action upon a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money. A junior attaching creditor cannot avail himself, in the affidavit or undertaking, of a prior attaching creditor. Fridenberg v. Pierson, 18 Cal. 152; 79 Am. Dec. 162.

6. The judgment in an attachment suit need not direct the sale of the property held under the attachment: it is the duty of the sheriff to sell it. Low v. Henry, 9 Cal. 538.

§ 538. Affidavit for attachment, what to contain. The clerk of the court must issue the writ of attachment, upon receiving an affidavit by or on behalf of plaintiff, showing:

1. That the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff (specifying the amount of such indebtedness over and above all legal set-offs or counterclaims) upon a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money, and that such contract was made or is payable in this state, and that the payment of the same has not been secured by any mortgage or lien upon real or personal property, or any pledge of personal property, or, if originally so secured, that such security has, without any act of the plaintiff, or the person to whom the security was given, become valueless; or,

2. That the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff (specifying the amount of such indebtedness over and above all legal set-offs or counterclaims) and that the defendant is a non-resident of the state; or,

3. That plaintiff's cause of action against defendant is one to recover a sum of money as damages (specifying the amount thereof) arising from an injury to property in this state in consequence of the negligence, fraud, or other wrongful act of defendant, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the state; and

4. That the attachment is not sought, and the action is not prosecuted, to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the defendant.

Levy without process, a misdemeanor. See Pen. Code, § 146.

Fact of issuing attachment not to be made public. See Pol. Code, § 1032.

Affidavit. Post, § 557.

Legislation § 538. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 121, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 301, which read: "The clerk of the court shall issue the writ of attachment upon receiving an affidavit by, or on behalf of, the plaintiff, which shall be filed, showing: 1. That the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff (specifying the amount of such indebtedness, over and above all legal set-offs and counterclaims), upon a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money, and that such contract was made or is payable in this state, and that the payment of the same has not been secured by any mortgage, lien, or pledge, upon real or personal property; or, 2. That the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff (specifying the amount of such indebtedness as near as may be, over and above all legal set-offs or counterclaims), and that the defendant is a non-resident of the state; and, 3. That the sum for which the attachment is asked is an actual, bona fide existing debt, due and owing from the defendant to the plaintiff, and that the attachment is not sought and the action is not prosecuted to hinder, delay, or defraud, any creditor or creditors of the defendant." When enacted in 1872, (1) in the introductory paragraph, (a) the word "shall" was changed to "must," (b) the word "the" was omitted before "plaintiff," and (c) the words "which shall be filed," after "plaintiff," were omitted; (2) in subd. 1, the word "and," after "set-offs," was changed to "or"; (3) in subd. 3, the comma was omitted after the word "actual."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 307, (1) in the introductory paragraph, adding a comma after the word "attachment"; (2) in subd. 1, (a) omitting the comma after the word "indebtedness," (b) adding, before the word "lien," the word "or," and omitting, after "lien," the words "or pledge," (c) changing the word "and," before "personal property," to "or," and adding, after these words, the clauses, "or any pledge of personal property, or, if originally so secured, that such security has, without any act of the plaintiff, or the person to whom the security was given, become valueless; or"; (3) in subd. 2, striking out the words "as near as may be," after "indebtedness"; (4) changing subd. 3 to read as subd. 4 now reads.

4. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 434.

Issuance of the writ. The issuance of the writ is not a judicial proceeding, but a ministerial act upon the part of the clerk, which he is bound to perform upon the filing of the statutory affidavit and undertaking (McCusker v. Walker, 77 Cal. 208; 19 Pac. 382); but he is not authorized to issue the writ, where there is no statement in the affidavit of the facts plainly required by the statute to be set forth therein. Merchants' Nat. Union v. Buisseret, 15 Cal. App. 444; 115 Pac. 58. The clerk must proceed with reasonable diligence to make up and deliver to the plaintiff the process applied for, on proper presentation of the papers; and he must issue the attachments in the order in which they are demanded, and his failure to do so is actionable; but he is not bound to delay the issuing of other writs against the same party, if the party making the prior demand is not in attendance to receive his writs when ready for delivery, who thus, through his own negligence or misfortune, loses his priority. Lick v. Madden, 36 Cal. 208; 95 Am. Dec. 175. Several writs may be issued upon a single affidavit and undertaking to different counties. Martinovich v. Marsicano, 150 Cal. 597; 119 Am. St. Rep. 254; 89 Pac. 333. The affidavit and all the papers requisite to a writ of attachment may be prepared at the same time the complaint is prepared, so long as the affidavit and the undertaking in the attachment are not filed in advance of the original complaint, and the writ not issued in advance of the summons, to which it is incident. Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203. The prepayment of fees is not necessary upon the issuance of the writ, unless they are demanded by the clerk. Lick v. Madden, 25 Cal. 202. A defendant, who files a cross-complaint, may have an attachment against the money and property in controversy, still held by the plaintiff. Interlocking Stone Co. v. Scribner, 19 Cal. App. 344; 126 Pac. 178.

The affidavit. It is not necessary that the required affidavit be signed by the party making it; but the oath may not be taken out of the county, over the telephone: such an affidavit is a nullity, and the attachment issued thereon is void.

Fairbanks v. Getchell, 13 Cal. App. 458; 110 Pac. 331.

Allegations of facts in affidavit. The facts required by the statute must be truly stated in the affidavit; and it is immaterial that the omitted facts are stated in the complaint (Fisk v. French, 114 Cal. 400; 46 Pac. 161); but the affidavit need not necessarily have all the facts set out in respect to the contract, which are necessary to be stated in the complaint. Weaver v. Hayward, 41 Cal. 117. It is not necessary for the affidavit to state the probative facts requisite to establish the ultimate facts required by the statute to be shown as the basis of the writ (Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203); nor is the same particularity of statement required in the affidavit for the issuance of the writ as is required in the complaint. Bank of California v. Boyd, 86 Cal. 386; 25 Pac. 20; O'Conor v. Roark, 108 Cal. 173; 41 Pac. 465; O'Conor v. Witherby, 112 Cal. 38; 44 Pac. 340. The affidavit is fatally defective unless it states that the attachment is not sought and the action is not prosecuted to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the defendant, or either of them, when there are more than one. Pajaro Valley Bank v. Scurich, 7 Cal. App. 732; 95 Pac. 911. The falsity of the affidavit can be raised only by the defendant in the attachment suit (Shea v. Johnson, 101 Cal. 455; 35 Pac. 1023); and its regularity cannot be attached collaterally by a stranger to the suit. Scrivener v. Dietz, 68 Cal. 1; 8 Pac. 609.

Affidavit, by whom made. An affidavit, made by a business agent of the plaintiff, need not aver that he is an agent for the collection of the debt, that he makes it in behalf of the plaintiff, or that the facts are peculiarly within his knowledge or that there is any reason why the plaintiff does not make it. Simpson v. McCarty, 78 Cal. 175; 12 Am. St. Rep. 37; 20 Pac. 406. Where the plaintiff sets out his representative capacity in the title of the action at the head of the affidavit, but in the body thereof he refers to himself as "the plaintiff in the above-entitled action," and also states that "the defendant in said action is indebted to him," the pronoun "him" referring to himself, there is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the section: and the use of the conjunction "and," instead of the statutory disjunctive "or," in the phrase, "over and above all legal set-offs or counterclaims," does not constitute insufficiency. O'Conor v. Roark, 108 Cal. 173; 41 Pac. 465; O'Conor v. Witherby, 112 Cal. 38; 44 Pac. 340. Where the facts are stated positively and without qualification in the affidavit, it will be presumed that they are within the knowledge of the affiant. Simpson v. McCarty, 78 Cal. 175; 12 Am. St. Rep. 37; 20 Pac. 406.

Contract for direct payment of money. It is not necessary that the affidavit shall state whether the contract is express or implied: it is sufficient if it appears therefrom that there is an indebtedness arising on contract for the direct payment of money. Flagg v. Dare, 107 Cal. 482; 40 Pac. 804; Norcross v. Nunan, 61 Cal. 640; Simpson v. McCarty, 78 Cal. 175; 12 Am. St. Rep. 37; 20 Pac. 406. An affidavit in the alternative form, that the indebtedness is upon an express or implied contract, is insufficient. Hawley v. Delmas, 4 Cal. 195. The indebtedness is the principal element required in the affidavit, and when that appears by a direct statement, the affidavit is sufficient, when there is nothing therein inconsistent with the statement. Bank of California v. Boyd, 86 Cal. 386; 25 Pac. 20; Flagg v. Dare, 107 Cal. 482; 40 Pac. 804; O'Conor v. Roark, 108 Cal. 173; 41 Pac. 465; O'Conor v. Witherby, 112 Cal. 38; 44 Pac. 340.

Amount of indebtedness. The amount of the indebtedness to the plaintiff is the principal and all-important element in the affidavit (Finch v. McVean, 6 Cal. App. 272; 91 Pac. 1019); and it must be shown by the affidavit; and it may be so shown, although it does not appear from the contract itself, and is not specially stated in the complaint. Dunn v. Mackey, 80 Cal. 104; 22 Pac. 64. The amount of the demand, in the statement, need not be identically the same as the sum stated in the complaint; set-offs and counterclaims must be stated in the affidavit, but they need not be stated in the complaint. De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407; 52 Pac. 718. An affidavit directly alleging a specific indebtedness in a principal sum is not vitiated by referring to interest and attorneys' fees, without further specification, but is sufficient to sustain the attachment, at least to the extent of the principal sum. Tibbet v. Tom Sue, 122 Cal. 206; 54 Pac. 741. Where the principal and legal interest were demanded in the complaint, and the nature of the indebtedness is so sufficiently stated in the affidavit as to show that it draws legal interest from the date of its maturity, there is no substantial difference between the affidavit and complaint in respect to interest. O'Conor v. Roark, 108 Cal. 173; 41 Pac. 465; O'Conor v. Witherby, 112 Cal. 38; 44 Pac. 340. The affidavit may be for any definite sum alleged in the complaint to be due, notwithstanding the prayer also demands a further sum (De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407; 52 Pac. 718); and it may be for such portion of the amount claimed in the complaint as the plaintiff is able to specify as indebtedness for which the law authorizes an attachment. Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732.

Claim must be unsecured. An affidavit as to a resident, which fails to state that the payment of the claim has not been secured as required by the first subdivision of this section, is insufficient (Sparks v.

Bell, 137 Cal. 415; 70 Pac. 281; Scrivener v. Dietz, 68 Cal. 1; 8 Pac. 609); as is also an affidavit in the alternative, stating, in substance, that the payment of the indebtedness has not been secured, or if secured, that such security has become valueless, as it does not state that no security was ever given, but merely that the same had become valueless. Wilke v. Cohn, 54 Cal. 212; Merced Bank v. Morton, 58 Cal. 360; Harvey v. Foster, 64 Cal. 296; 30 Pac. 849; Winters v. Pearson, 72 Cal. 553; 14 Pac. 304. An affidavit stating the general conclusion that the mortgage given to secure the indebtedness has become valueless, is sufficient to justify the clerk in issuing the writ. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 174; 24 Pac. 113. The use, in the affidavit, of the word "upon," instead of "of," in the statutory phrase, "pledge of personal property," is immaterial. O'Conor v. Witherby, 112 Cal. 38; 44 Pac. 340.

Against a non-resident. An affidavit for attachment against a non-resident need not state that the payment of the claim is not secured by mortgage, lien, or pledge, or that the claim is upon a contract: that the action is upon a contract, express or implied, need only appear from the complaint in the action (Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9; 33 Pac. 741); and where it is stated that the indebtedness is upon an express contract, the affidavit is sufficient in that respect (Hale Bros. v. Milliken, 142 Cal. 134; 75 Pac. 653); but an averment in the affidavit, respecting the residence of the defendant, is not conclusive: the fact may be inquired into. Sparks v. Bell, 137 Cal. 415; 70 Pac. 281.

Discharge of the writ. The court must, upon proper application, discharge a writ of attachment wrongfully issued under this section. Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320. Before the amendment in 1909 of § 558, the affidavit was not amendable at the time of the hearing of the motion to discharge the attachment because of a defect in the affidavit. Winters v. Pearson, 72 Cal. 553; 14 Pac. 304.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Order in which clerk must issue. The clerk of the district court must issue the writs in the order in which they are demanded; but if the party who makes the first demand is not in attendance to receive his writ when completed, the clerk is not bound in the mean time to delay the issuing of other writs against the same party. When he has prepared for delivery the writ first demanded, he is bound to issue the writ of the next comer; and if in such case the next comer is not there to receive his writ, and for that reason the next comer first delivers his writ to the sheriff, and by that means acquires a priority, and the first comer loses his debt, the clerk is not liable. Lick v. Madden, 36 Cal. 208; 95 Am. Dec. 175; see also Lick v. Madden, 25 Cal. 205.

2. Form of affidavit. The omission from the affidavit to a statement that the sum for which the writ is asked is "an actual bona fide existing debt, due and owing from the defendant to the plaintiff, and that the attachment is not sought and the action is not prosecuted to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor or creditors of the debtor," does not render the attachment issued a nullity against subsequent attaching creditors. Fridenberg v. Pierson, 18 Cal. 152; 79 Am. Dec. 162. An affidavit for attachment is insufficient which states that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff upon an "express or implied contract." Hawley v. Delmas, 4 Cal. 195.

3. Who may take advantage of defects in affidavit. See subd. 2 of note to the preceding section.

4. Express contract. An undertaking on appeal is an express contract. Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161.

§ 539. Undertaking on attachment. Exceptions to sureties. Before issuing the writ, the clerk must require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff, in the sum not less than two hundred dollars and not exceeding the amount claimed by the plaintiff, with sufficient sureties, to the effect that if the defendant recovers judgment, the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking, and that if the attachment is discharged on the ground that the plaintiff was not entitled thereto under section five hundred and thirty-seven, the plaintiff will pay all damages which the defendant may have sustained by reason of the attachment, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking. At any time after the issuing of the attachment, but not later than five days after actual notice of the levy thereof, the defendant may except to the sufficiency of the sureties. If he fails to do so, he is deemed to have waived all objections to them. When excepted to, the plaintiff's sureties, upon notice to the defendant of not less than two nor more than five days, must justify before a judge or county clerk in the same manner as upon bail on arrest; and upon failure to justify, or if others in their place fail to justify, at the time and place appointed, the judge or clerk must issue an order vacating the writ of attachment.

Legislation § 539. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 122, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 301, which read: "Before issuing the writ, the clerk shall require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff, in a sum not less than two hundred dollars, not exceeding the amount claimed by the plaintiff, with sufficient sureties, to the effect that if the defendant recover judgment, the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking." When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "shall" was changed to "must," and (2) the word "and" was added before "not exceeding."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 308 (approved March 24, 1874), (1) changing the words "a sum" to "an amount," (2) changing the word "two" to "three," before "hundred dollars," (3) omitting the words "if the defendant recover judgment," after "effect that," (4) adding the words "including reasonable attorneys' fees," after "all costs," (5) changing the word "awarded" to "adjudged," and (6) adding the words "if the attachment be wrongfully issued" at the end of the section.

3. Amended again by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 406 (approved March 30, 1874), to read: "Before issuing the writ, the clerk must require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff, in a sum not less than two hundred dollars, and not exceeding the amount claimed by the plaintiff, with sufficient sureties, to the effect that if the defendant recover judgment, the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking. Within five days after service of the summons in the action, the defendant may except to the sufficiency of the sureties. If he fails to do so he is deemed to have waived all objections to them. When excepted to, the plaintiff's sureties, upon notice to the defendant of not less than two nor more than five days, must justify before a judge or county clerk, in the same manner as upon bail on arrest; and upon failure to justify, or if others in their place fail to justify at the time and place appointed, the clerk or judge shall issue an order vacating the writ of attachment."

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 139; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 708; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment makes the sureties answerable if the attachment is discharged on the ground that the plaintiff was not entitled thereto under § 537, and permits the defendant to except to the sufficiency of the sureties at any time after the issuing of the attachment not later than five days after actual notice of the levy."

The undertaking. A writ of attachment is improperly issued, and void, unless it is supported by an undertaking conforming substantially to the requirements of the statute. Kern Valley Bank v. Koehn, 157 Cal. 237; 107 Pac. 111. The undertaking is an original, independent contract on the part of the sureties, and must be construed in connection with the statute authorizing it (Frankel v. Stern, 44 Cal. 168); and it is the antecedent of the attachment, and accompanies the affidavit, which must be made before the writ is issued; and if no writ is issued, the undertaking is null and void. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251; 56 Am. Dec. 332. The code does not require the undertaking to be executed, in form, to the defendant, but specifies the conditions it shall contain; and an undertaking executed to the state of California may be sued upon by the defendants, who are the real parties in interest. Taaffe v. Rosenthal, 7 Cal. 514. The amount of the undertaking is based upon the amount specified in the affidavit, and not upon the amount demanded in the complaint (Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732); and where it is in a larger sum than that required, it is not objectionable. Wigmore v. Buell, 122 Cal. 144; 54 Pac. 600. The question presented on a motion to increase the amount of the undertaking is one of fact, calling for the exercise of judicial discretion, which cannot be controlled by mandamus. American Well etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 19 Cal. App. 497; 126 Pac. 497. An undertaking is fatally defective, where it fails to contain the required stipulation concerning the discharge of the attachment. Kern Valley Bank v. Koehn, 157 Cal. 237; 107 Pac. 111. The undertaking must show that the sureties are either householders or freeholders; and a writ issued upon an undertaking, unaccompanied by the required affidavit, is irregularly and improperly issued, and should be discharged upon application. Tibbet v. Tom Sue, 122 Cal. 206; 54 Pac. 741. An undertaking executed after the levy of the writ, and the dismissal of the attachment by the plaintiff, is void. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251; 56 Am. Dec. 332. Where, in an undertaking, the word "thousand" was omitted from the words "two thousand two hundred and twenty-five dollars," and it was apparent from the whole undertaking and the statute that the omitted word was intended to be inserted, it will be supplied at the trial, without reforming the bond. Frankel v. Stern, 44 Cal. 168. A bond exacted by an officer having no authority to require it, is void. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251; 56 Am. Dec. 332.

State, county, or city, not required to give undertaking. An undertaking given to procure an attachment upon the suit of the state, or any county or city, is in contravention of the policy of law, without consideration, and void, both as a statutory undertaking and a common-law bond (Morgan v. Menzies, 60 Cal. 341); and an attachment for a license tax due to a county may be issued without an undertaking, in an action by the county to collect the same. San Luis Obispo County v. Greenberg, 120 Cal. 300; 52 Pac. 797.

Amendment of undertaking. Before the amendment in 1909 of § 558, neither an undertaking nor an affidavit was amendable, if not sufficient to sustain the writ. Tibbet v. Tom Sue, 122 Cal. 206; 54 Pac. 741.

Liability of sureties for wrongful attachment. The liability of the sureties is limited by the terms and conditions of their contract, and cannot be extended by implication beyond its terms (Elder v. Kutner, 97 Cal. 490; 32 Pac. 563; Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641); and though they are not liable for damages caused by the carelessness of the sheriff, yet they are liable for the amount of the depreciation in value of the property by reason of the attachment, exclusive of any damage caused by the willful and negligent acts of the sheriff (Witherspoon v. Cross, 135 Cal. 96; 67 Pac. 18); but they are not liable as trespassers for seizure or detention of property attached by a sheriff, merely because of their act in signing the bond. McDonald v. Fett, 49 Cal. 354. The measure of damages in an action upon an undertaking is the amount which will compensate for all detriment caused proximately thereby, or which would be liable to result therefrom; but sureties do not undertake to become liable for remote and possible consequences, which, in some contingencies, might follow. Elder v. Kutner, 97 Cal. 490; 32 Pac. 563. The measure of damages for the wrongful seizure and detention of personal property by attachment is the market value of the use of the property during the time of the detention, not its value to the plaintiff. Hurd v. Barnhart, 53 Cal. 97. Damages may be awarded for the depreciation in the value of goods during the time they are held under attachment, estimated upon a showing of their value when taken and their value when returned. Frankel v. Stern, 44 Cal. 168; Witherspoon v. Cross, 135 Cal. 96; 67 Pac. 18. The measure of damages, in case of attachment of personal property, is the difference in value of the property when seized and its value when restored, with the loss of its use meanwhile; and there is more reason for applying such rule respecting the measure of damages in the case of an attachment of stock, whose principal value consists in its selling value, than in the case of personal property generally: not only is the selling value destroyed by the attachment, but all of the profits and dividends to accrue from it are impounded equally with the stock itself. McCarthy Co. v. Boothe, 2 Cal. App. 170; 83 Pac. 175. The impairment of the plaintiff's credit, his inability to sell the land levied upon, or to contract a loan upon the security of the land, are not proximate, but remote, consequences of the attachment. Heath v. Lent, 1 Cal. 410; Elder v. Kutner, 97 Cal. 490; 32 Pac. 563. Damages accruing from a wrongful attachment of real estate, where the owner's possession was not disturbed, cannot be more than nominal. Heath v. Lent, 1 Cal. 410. The questions of motive and probable cause are immaterial in an action against the sureties on an undertaking; and the fact that the attachment was malicious does not affect their liability. Elder v. Kutner, 97 Cal. 490; 32 Pac. 563. Counsel fees paid in defending an attachment suit constitute part of the damages, where the writ is improperly prosecuted (Ah Thaie v. Quan Wan, 3 Cal. 216); but the sureties are not liable for attorneys' fees in an attachment suit, if such fees have not been actually paid: the damage accrues from the payment, and not from incurring the liability to pay. Elder v. Kutner, 97 Cal. 490; 32 Pac. 563. Fees paid to a sheriff to procure the release of a lien of attachment are included in the damages covered by the undertaking. Perrin v. McMann, 97 Cal. 52; 31 Pac. 837.

Action on undertaking. The defendant whose property has been seized is the only one who can sue upon the bond: a co-defendant whose property was not seized should not be joined as plaintiff. Heath v. Lent, 1 Cal. 410. The right of the attachment defendant to give a bond and secure the possession of the property, and thereby avoid damages consequent upon detention thereof, is no defense to the sureties on the attachment bond. McCarthy v. Boothe, 2 Cal. App. 170; 83 Pac. 175.

Exception to sufficiency of sureties. Excepting to the sufficiency of sureties upon an undertaking is not an appearance in the action wherein the attachment is issued. Salmonson v. Streiffer, 13 Cal. App. 395; 110 Pac. 144.

Justification of sureties. A defendant waives the justification of sureties upon an undertaking, where he fails to examine them as to their sufficiency. La Dow v. National Bldg. etc. Co., 11 Cal. App. 308; 104 Pac. 838.

Effect of void levy. A void levy of an attachment does not create a lien, nor does it bar a subsequent attachment. Kern Valley Bank v. Koehn, 157 Cal. 237; 107 Pac. 111.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. The undertaking. The undertaking should precede the writ. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251; 56 Am. Dec. 332. It is good if made payable to the people of the state of California, instead of to the defendant. Taaffe v. Rosenthal, 7 Cal. 514. A mistake in the recital of the amount for which the attachment is to be issued may be explained and corrected by parol. Palmer v. Vance, 13 Cal. 556. In Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641, it was held that an undertaking given on issuing an attachment from a justice's court, to the effect that plaintiff would pay all costs, etc., and damages that the defendant might sustain by reason of the attachment, "not exceeding one hundred dollars," was bad, and rendered the attachment void; but the code changes the rule. See § 867 of this code.

2. Who may take advantage of defects in undertaking. See subd. 2 of note to § 537 of this code.

3. Amendments to undertakings. The undertaking may be amended and made sufficient after suit commenced, or after a motion to vacate attachment, made upon the ground that it is defective. Kissam v. Marshall, 10 Abb. Pr. 424.

4. Action on the undertaking. The "recovery of judgment" means a final judgment. Bennett v. Brown, 20 N. Y. 99; 31 Barb. 158. If the undertaking is void, there can be no recovery on it. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251; 56 Am. Dec. 332. No recovery can be had on a bond purporting to be the joint bond of the principal and sureties, but signed by the sureties only; but it is otherwise as to undertakings, under our system. They are original and independent contracts on the part of the sureties, and do not require the signature of the principal. So, also, as to joint and several bonds; each surety is bound without the signatures of the others named as obligors, unless, at the time of executing the bond, he declared he would not be bound without such signatures were obtained. Sacramento v. Dunlap, 14 Cal. 421. The recitals in statutory undertakings are conclusive of the facts stated. McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339. In an action on an undertaking on attachment against the property of a debtor, who was a merchant, where the sheriff had levied on no property except real estate, it was held that evidence as to the general effect of an attachment upon the credit and reputation of merchants was inadmissible, on the ground that damages resulting therefrom are too remote and contingent. And it was held, further, that counsel fees paid by the attachment debtor in the defense of the attachment suit were not recoverable, and that the district judge erred in refusing, when requested, to instruct the jury to that effect, after having admitted evidence of the amount of such counsel fees. Heath v. Lent, 1 Cal. 410.

§ 540. Writ, to whom directed and what to state. The writ must be directed to the sheriff of any county in which property of such defendant may be, and must require him to attach and safely keep all the property of such defendant within his county, not exempt from execution, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's demand, the amount of which must be stated in conformity with the complaint, unless the defendant give him security by the undertaking of at least two sufficient sureties, in an amount sufficient to satisfy such demand, besides costs, or in an amount equal to the value of the property which has been, or is about to be, attached; in which case, to take such undertaking. Several writs may be issued at the same time to the sheriffs of different counties.

Legislation § 540. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 123, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 315, which (1) had the word "shall" instead of "must," before "be directed," (2) did not have the word "must" before "require him," and (3) had the word "shall" instead of "must," before "be stated."

The demand stated in the writ. The demand referred to in this section is that stated in the affidavit upon which the writ is sought, not the amount in the complaint for which the plaintiff asks judgment; the basis for the writ is the affidavit, and the clerk must look to that alone to determine the amount for which the sheriff is to levy under the writ, as well as the amount for which the undertaking is to be given. Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732; Finch v. McVean, 6 Cal. App. 272; 91 Pac. 1019. The plaintiff may file an unverified complaint in a larger amount than he would be willing to support upon oath; but he is entitled to a writ for only the amount in which he can "specify" in the affidavit that the defendant is "indebted" to him. Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732. The provision of this section, that the amount of the demand must be stated in the writ in conformity with the complaint, is so plain that there is no room left for construction or speculation (Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93; 33 Am. St. Rep. 163; 31 Pac. 846); but it does not follow, because an attachment cannot rightfully issue for more than is demanded in the complaint, that it may not properly issue for less. De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407; 52 Pac. 718; Tibbet v. Tom Sue, 122 Cal. 206; 54 Pac. 741; Hale Bros. v. Milliken, 142 Cal. 134; 75 Pac. 653. The provision that the amount of the demand must be stated in conformity with the complaint, is to be construed as limited to a complaint upon a cause of action for which a writ of attachment is authorized: this section does not declare that the amount of the demand shall be the same as the amount asked for by the plaintiff in the prayer of his complaint; and by holding that the demand stated in the writ must be in conformity with the complaint, so far as its allegations authorize the writ of attachment, full effect is given to all the provisions of the several sections upon this subject. Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732. A writ, in an action against a corporation and its stockholders, which merely states the amount of the indebtedness claimed to be due from the corporation, without specifying the amount for which each of the stockholders is claimed to be liable, is irregular as to such stockholders, and should be discharged on motion. Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93; 33 Am. St. Rep. 163; 31 Pac. 846. Where the complaint demands certain specific sums which the allegations show to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff, and also certain other sums which are properly part of the sheriff's costs in keeping the attached property, the writ is in sufficient conformity with the complaint if it states the demand to be the amount which is properly due to the plaintiff. Wigmore v. Buell, 122 Cal. 144; 54 Pac. 600. An attachment that requires the taking of more of a defendant's property than is required to secure the indebtedness stated in the affidavit cannot be sustained. Finch v. McVean, 6 Cal. App. 272; 91 Pac. 1019. If the value of the property was uncertain at the time of attachment, it does not necessarily follow that the attachment was excessive because its value was subsequently ascertained to be greatly in excess of the demand sued for. Sexey v. Adkison, 40 Cal. 408. The words "or thereabouts," in the writ, following the specific statement of the amount of the demand, do not render the attachment proceedings void upon a collateral attack. Davis v. Baker, 88 Cal. 106; 25 Pac. 1108. Damage caused by an excessive levy cannot be set up by the defendant by way of cross-complaint in the attachment suit. Jeffreys v. Hancock, 57 Cal. 646. The validity of a writ, regular on its face, cannot be collaterally attacked for irregularities in the proceedings upon which it is based. Scrivener v. Dietz, 68 Cal. 1; 8 Pac. 609.

Writs to different counties. Writs of attachment to different counties may be issued at different times on the same affidavit and bond, provided they are issued within a reasonable time after the making and filing of the affidavit. Martinovich v. Marsicano, 150 Cal. 597; 119 Am. St. Rep. 254; 89 Pac. 333. What is meant by delay for an "unreasonable time," is such delay as would, under the circumstances, cast suspicion on the verity of the affidavit, or lead to the supposition that the grounds stated for the attachment had ceased to exist. Id.

Undertaking to prevent attachment. The provision of this section, that the plaintiff may have the defendant's property attached unless he gives security to pay the judgment, means that the plaintiff cannot have the property attached if the required security is given by a bond to prevent the attachment: the bond is not given alone for the personal protection of the sheriff, but also to the defendant to protect his property from attachment, and to the plaintiff to secure the payment of any judgment that may be rendered. Ayres v. Burr, 132 Cal. 125; 64 Pac. 120. The act of a sheriff in refraining from enforcing the writ, or from attempting to make the levy, is a sufficient consideration for the giving of the bond to him to prevent the levy. Fresno Home Packing Co. v. Hannon, 16 Cal. App. 284; 116 Pac. 687. The undertaking is in favor of the plaintiff in the action, although it runs in the name of the sheriff: the plaintiff is the real party in interest, and he may sue upon it as such. Curiae v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194. A succeeding sheriff, having the custody of the bond given to his predecessor to prevent the levy, is justified in refusing to execute a second writ, issued by the clerk after reversal of the judgment upon appeal. Ayres v. Burr, 132 Cal. 125; 64 Pac. 120. If the sheriff takes a sufficient statutory undertaking, his duty in the premises is discharged, and he is not further responsible in the matter. Curiae v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194. It is not necessary, in an action upon the bond given to the sheriff to prevent the levy, that the complaint should aver that the defendant in the attachment suit had property within the county which was subject to be levied upon under the writ. Fresno Home Packing Co. v. Hannon, 16 Cal. App. 284; 116 Pac. 687. Where, by the terms of an undertaking to prevent the levy of an attachment, the parties thereto undertook to pay, on demand, any judgment which the attaching creditor might recover against the attachment debtor, they are not, as between themselves and the attaching creditor, released from liability by reason of the sheriff having attached the property prior to the giving of the undertaking and subsequently releasing it, nor because the judgment in the attachment suit was entered by consent, and execution stayed for sixty days by stipulation of the parties. Preston v. Hood, 64 Cal. 405; 1 Pac. 487. Where a bond, given to prevent the levy of an attachment, is, in terms, joint and several, a dismissal of the action, as against one of the sureties, does not impair or affect the maintenance of the action upon the several obligation of the other surety. Fresno Home Packing Co. v. Hannon, 16 Cal. App. 284; 116 Pac. 687.

Undertaking to release attachment. A bond taken by the sheriff, in consideration of the release of the attachment, is not void for want of conformity to the requirements of the statute, which, while prescribing one form, does not prohibit another, which may be good at common law. Smith v. Fargo, 57 Cal. 157; Palmer v. Vance, 13 Cal. 553. Where a common-law bond is given for the release of attached property, the issuance of execution against the judgment debtor and return thereof unsatisfied are not necessary prerequisites to the maintenance of suit thereon. Kanouse v. Brand, 11 Cal. App. 669; 106 Pac. 120. The recitals, in a bond for the release of an attachment, of the plaintiff's claim, of the levy of the attachment, and of the desire of the defendant to release the same by bond, are conclusive against the obligor, whether it be a statutory or a common-law bond. Bailey v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 5 Cal. App. 740; 91 Pac. 416. A bond given for the release of a vessel seized under the act of April 10, 1850, but which was not liable to seizure thereunder, is void. McQueen v. Ship Russell, 1 Cal. 165; and see McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339; Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538. A bond for the release of an attachment does not operate as a stay bond. Bailey v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 5 Cal. App. 740; 91 Pac. 416. The sheriff is required to release the attachment when the defendant gives an undertaking sufficient to satisfy the demand, or an undertaking in an amount equal to the value of the property attached (Curtin v. Harvey, 120 Cal. 620; 52 Pac. 1077); but he has no authority to release an attachment, other than that given him by statute; and he can release the property before the return of the writ, only upon giving the prescribed undertaking, and after the return he has no authority at all in that behalf; an attempt to release the property without the plaintiff's consent, is a breach of duty, and, if he does so with the plaintiff's consent, he obtains his authority from the plaintiff, and not from the statute; and if the defendant, after the return of the writ, desires the release of the property, he must apply to the plaintiff, or he may enter his appearance in the action, and apply to the court for the order of release, as provided in §§ 554, 555, post. Hesser v. Rowley, 139 Cal. 410; 73 Pac. 156; Maskey v. Lackmann, 146 Cal. 777; 81 Pac. 115.

Liability of the sureties. The liability of a surety, where he gives an undertaking sufficient to satisfy the demand, is the amount of the plaintiff's demand; but if he gives an undertaking in an amount equal to the value of the property attached, his liability is the value of such property. Curtin v. Harvey, 120 Cal. 620; 52 Pac. 1077. In the case of a statutory bond, a return of execution, unsatisfied in whole or in part, against the debtor, is essential to fix the liability of the sureties thereon. Kanouse v. Brand, 11 Cal. App. 669; 106 Pac. 120. A stay bond given by the defendant on appeal does not discharge the obligation of an undertaking given under this section to prevent the attachment. Ayres v. Burr, 132 Cal. 125; 64 Pac. 120. Tender to the plaintiff and refusal by him, of the full amount of the debt and costs, discharges the sureties from their obligation on the bond; and for the purpose of discharging the sureties, it is not necessary that such tender shall be paid into court or kept good. Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194; Hayes v. Josephi, 26 Cal. 535. An action upon an undertaking, conditioned to pay the amount of any judgment that should be recovered in an attachment suit, will be sustained, although judgment was rendered against only one of several defendants. McCutcheon v. Weston, 65 Cal. 37; 2 Pac. 727. Where the property of the maker of a note is attached in an action against him and his indorser, and an undertaking is thereupon given for the release of such property, conditioned that the sureties will pay any judgment which may be recovered against such maker, they cannot, on paying the judgment, be subrogated to any right not possessed by their principal; hence, they cannot take an assignment of the judgment and enforce it against such indorser. March v. Barnet, 121 Cal. 419; 66 Am. St. Rep. 44; 53 Pac. 933. The adjudication of the bankruptcy of the defendant, after the levy of the attachment, does not discharge the sureties on a bond conditioned for the payment of any judgment the plaintiff might recover against the defendant, if the defendant does not, in the attachment suit, plead the discharge in bankruptcy, and the plaintiff recovers judgment. Goodhue v. King, 55 Cal. 377; and see Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73.

Duties and liabilities of the sheriff. Under this section, the sheriff may release property from attachment at any time prior to his return on the writ (San Francisco Sulphur Co. v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 11 Cal. App. 695; 106 Pac. 111); but, by making his return, he divests himself of any statutory power or authority to release the attached property. Kanouse v. Brand, 11 Cal. App. 669; 106 Pac. 120. It is the duty of the sheriff, instead of levying the writ of attachment, to accept the undertaking in lieu of such levy; or, if he has made the levy and taken the property into custody, to accept the prescribed undertaking, when tendered prior to the return of the writ, and release the property. Kanouse v. Brand, 11 Cal. App. 669; 106 Pac. 120. The sheriff has no authority, under instructions from the creditor's attorney, to keep open and conduct a business seized on attachment, and charge the expenses to the attaching creditor: the attorney cannot bind his client for such expenditures. Alexander v. Denaveaux, 53 Cal. 663. The sheriff has no right to sell property, or to permit it to be sold, pending suit, in the absence of an order of court: the act of a warehouseman, with whom he stored the property, in making a sale thereof for storage, is the act of his principal, the sheriff, who is liable as for the conversion of property, whether or not he ever had a lien on it for his fees, and the only liability of the sureties is on their contract, not being joint tort-feasors. Aigeltinger v. Whelan, 133 Cal. 110; 65 Pac. 125. The administrator of the defendant may bring an action to recover the value of property tortiously taken after dissolution of the attachment by the death of the defendant. Ham v. Henderson, 50 Cal. 367. The judgment for the defendant in an attachment suit is admissible in evidence to establish the dissolution of the attachment and to show the defendant's right to the return of the property, in an action against the officer for damages for failure to return the property. Aigeltinger v. Whelan, 133 Cal. 110; 65 Pac. 125. On appeal, the release must be presumed to have been made before the return of the writ, in a collateral action, where the pleadings do not allege the contrary. Maskey v. Lackmann, 146 Cal. 777; 81 Pac. 115.

Effect of unrecorded deed on subsequent attachment. An unrecorded deed takes precedence over a subsequent attachment or judgment against the grantor. Wolfe v. Langford, 14 Cal. App. 359; 112 Pac. 203.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Return-day. No return-day need be inserted in the writ. Genin v. Tompkins, 12 Barb. 265–287; 1 Code Rep. (N. S.) 415; Camman v. Tompkins, 1 Code Rep. (N. S.) 12–16.

2. Omissions. The attachment is not void if it omits to state that "it was issued in an action then pending." Lawton v. Reil, 34 How. Pr. 465; Lawton v. Kiel, 51 Barb. 30.

3. Form and effect of undertaking on release of attachment. See Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194.

§ 541. Shares of stock and debts due defendant, how attached and disposed of. The rights or shares which the defendant may have in the stock of any corporation or company, together with the interest and profit thereon, and all debts due such defendant, and all other property in this state of such defendant not exempt from execution, may be attached, and if judgment be recovered, be sold to satisfy the judgment and execution.

Attachment.

1. Building material, when not subject to. See post, § 1196.

2. Co-operative business association, property of subject to. See Civ. Code, § 653f.

3. Debts and credits, etc., how. Post, § 542, subd. 5.

4. Moneys arising from mutual-assessment contract, exemptions from. See Civ. Code, § 453k.

5. Stocks or shares, how. Post, § 542, subd. 4.

6. Vessel, tackle, furniture, etc. See post, §§ 817 et seq.

Garnishment, generally. Post, §§ 543–545.

Legislation § 541. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 124, which had the word "profit" instead of "profits."

Shares of stock in corporation. The attachment of corporate stock impounds all profits and dividends thereon. McCarthy Co. v. Boothe, 2 Cal. App. 170; 83 Pac. 175. A transfer of unregistered corporate stock takes precedence over a subsequent attachment or execution levied on the stock for the debt of the vendor, in whose name it stands upon the books of the corporation. National Bank v. Western Pacific Ry. Co., 157 Cal. 573; 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 987; 21 Ann. Cas. 1391; 108 Pac. 676. Pledged stock, standing on the books of the corporation in the name of the pledgor, is attachable as his property. Strout v. Natoma etc. Mining Co., 9 Cal. 78. Stock-certificates pledged as collateral security, but not transferred on the books of the company, and the possession of which the pledgee does not retain, may be attached as against the pledgor: such pledge is void as to attaching creditors. McFall v. Buckeye etc. Ass'n, 122 Cal. 468; 68 Am. St. Rep. 47; 55 Pac. 253. The assignee or pledgee of stock-certificates, in order to protect his rights as against attachments levied thereon as the property of his assignor or pledgor, must have the certificates reissued to himself, or serve notice on the corporation that he holds them as such assignee or pledgee: one purchasing, at execution sale, shares of a corporation, standing on the books of the corporation in the name of the judgment debtor, is entitled to have the certificate of such shares reissued to him, if, at the time of the purchase, he acts in good faith, and without notice that an outstanding certificate has been assigned or pledged to some person other than the judgment debtor. West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315; 85 Am. St. Rep. 171; 65 Pac. 622. An execution purchaser of stock, with notice that it has been assigned as security, takes it subject to the rights of the assignee. Weston v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 6 Cal. 425; Naglee v. Pacific Wharf Co., 20 Cal. 529; People v. Elmore, 35 Cal. 655; Winter v. Belmont Mining Co., 53 Cal. 428; Farmers' Nat. Gold Bank v. Wilson, 58 Cal. 600; West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315; 85 Am. St. Rep. 171; 65 Pac. 622.

Interests in real property. Land conveyed in trust to pay certain creditors, reserving the right to surplus profits, where not made in fraud of creditors, is not subject to attachment in an action against the grantor. Heath v. Wilson, 139 Cal. 362; 73 Pac. 182. The vendor's equitable lien on real estate, after absolute conveyance thereof, is not subject to levy and sale on execution: the indebtedness for the purchase price of real estate may be levied upon, but the vendor's equitable lien, attaching by virtue of indebtedness, is extinguished by the transfer of the indebtedness. Ross v. Heintzen, 36 Cal. 313; Baum v. Grigsby, 21 Cal. 172; 81 Am. Dec. 153; Lewis v. Covillaud, 21 Cal. 178; Williams v. Young, 21 Cal. 227.

Property not subject to attachment. Public buildings are not subject to attachment. Dennis v. First Nat. Bank, 127 Cal. 453; 78 Am. St. Rep. 79; 59 Pac. 777.

A license or privilege, personal in character, is not subject to attachment. Lowenberg v. Greenebaum, 99 Cal. 162; 37 Am. St. Rep. 42; 21 L. R. A. 399; 33 Pac. 794.

A patent right, not being tangible property, but an incorporeal right, is not subject to attachment (Peterson v. Sheriff, 115 Cal. 211; 46 Pac. 1060); but in proceedings supplementary to execution the execution debtor may be compelled to make an assignment, to a receiver, of his patent right. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Pac. 120.

Money deposited in bank, the proceeds of life-insurance policies payable to a widow as beneficiary, is not subject to execution. Holmes v. Marshall, 145 Cal. 777; 104 Am. St. Rep. 86; 69 L. R. A. 67; 2 Ann. Cas. 88; 79 Pac. 534.

A broker's seat in a stock and exchange board is not subject to attachment. Lowenberg v. Greenebaum, 99 Cal. 162; 37 Am. St. Rep. 42; 21 L. R. A. 399; 33 Pac. 794.

Salaries of public officials, whether state, county, or municipal, are not subject to attachment. Ruperick v. Baehr, 142 Cal. 190; 75 Pac. 782.

A franchise, held by an individual, to collect toll on a toll-road is not subject to attachment (Gregory v. Blanchard, 98 Cal. 311; 33 Pac. 199); nor is the franchise of a street-railroad, except when otherwise provided by statute. Risdon Iron etc. Works v. Citizens' Traction Co., 122 Cal. 94; 68 Am. St. Rep. 25; 54 Pac. 529.

An assigned chose of action is not subject to attachment. Walling v. Miller, 15 Cal. 38; McIntyre v. Hauser, 131 Cal. 11; 63 Pac. 69.

Judgments cannot be levied upon and sold under execution as personal property capable of manual delivery; it is only the debt itself that may be attached: there is no provision for attaching or levying on evidences of debt. McBride v. Fallon, 65 Cal. 301; 4 Pac. 17; Dove v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232; 1 Am. St. Rep. 48; 13 Pac. 621; Latham v. Blake, 77 Cal. 646; 18 Pac. 150; 20 Pac. 417; Hoxie v. Bryant, 131 Cal. 85; 63 Pac. 153; Fore v. Manlove, 18 Cal. 436.

Homestead. Where property impressed with the character of a homestead is worth more than the homestead exemption, a levy can only be made for the purpose of inaugurating proceedings for the admeasurement of the excess in value. Lubbock v. McMann, 82 Cal. 226; 16 Am. St. Rep. 108; 22 Pac. 1145; and see Ackley v. Chamberlain, 16 Cal. 181; 76 Am. Dec. 516; Bowman v. Norton, 16 Cal. 213; Barrett v. Sims, 59 Cal. 615; Sanders v. Russel, 86 Cal. 119; 21 Am. St. Rep. 26; 24 Pac. 852; Dam v. Zink, 112 Cal. 91; 44 Pac. 331; Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128.

Property, after sale on execution, left in the possession of the execution debtor, is not thereafter liable to attachment by other creditors; nor, after the execution sale, is change of possession required to make valid the transfer as against his creditors. Matteucci v. Whelan, 123 Cal. 312; 69 Am. St. Rep. 60; 55 Pac. 990.

Debts not due; negotiable instruments. Debts not due are not subject to garnishment (Early v. Redwood City, 57 Cal. 193); nor can property be taken in attachment, that is not liable to seizure under the execution when issued. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49. Credit must exist at the time of levy of attachment, or no lien is created; hence, although a defendant may have earned a portion of the amount payable upon the conclusion of his contract with the garnishee, if the amount thereof is not payable until the conclusion of the contract, there is no credit which may be attached. Early v. Redwood City, 57 Cal. 193. Where payment is to be made when property is delivered at a specified place, no debt is created until delivery is made: an attachment served at the place of delivery, before the property is delivered, is premature and invalid. Maier v. Freeman, 112 Cal. 8; 53 Am. St. Rep. 151; 44 Pac. 357. If, at the time the attachment is served upon the garnishee, the defendant in the attachment can maintain against him an action of debt or indebitatus assumpsit, the liability of the garnishee is transferred from the defendant to the plaintiff in the attachment suit, and not otherwise. Hassie v. G. I. W. U. Congregation, 35 Cal. 378. Before the maturity of a promissory note, the indebtedness of the maker thereon is not the subject of attachment: the obligation of the maker is not to the payee named in the note, but to the holder, whoever he may be. Gregory v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 339. Money on deposit in a bank, upon which negotiable certificates have been paid for the full amount, is not subject to attachment. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655. The garnishee is not liable to any creditor of the defendant by virtue of an attachment levied after the debt has become barred as to such defendant by the statute of limitations. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36.

Contingent contracts and interests. Contracts, contingent and complicated, which cannot be taken into the possession of the sheriff, cannot be levied upon and sold under execution, and, apparently, are not subject to attachment (Crandall v. Blen, 13 Cal. 15); neither are contingent interests subject to attachment. Tuohy v. Wingfield, 52 Cal. 319; Howell v. Foster, 65 Cal. 169; 3 Pac. 647; Farnum v. Hefner, 79 Cal. 575; 12 Am. St. Rep. 174; 21 Pac. 955; Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 488; 24 Pac. 930. An assignment may be legally made of money to become due upon the completion of work according to the terms of a contract; and upon the completion of such work the assignor has no attachable interest therein. Early v. Redwood City, 57 Cal. 193. The equitable interest of a subcontractor in a portion of a building contract assigned to him by the contractor, which is to be paid in installments upon certain contingencies is not subject to attachment (Hassie v. G. I. W. U. Congregation, 35 Cal. 378); nor is the equitable right of the assignee of a vendee under an executory contract for the conveyance of land, upon the breach of a contract, to recover the amount paid on the purchase price. Redondo Beach Co. v. Brewer, 101 Cal. 322; 35 Pac. 896. A mortgagee's interest in mortgaged land is not an estate, either before or after condition broken, and is not subject to attachment. McGurren v. Garrity, 68 Cal. 566; 9 Pac. 839. The purchaser of mortgaged premises does not, by his purchase, become indebted to the mortgagee, nor does he become a debtor by virtue of an agreement with his vendor to pay the mortgage debt; hence, he cannot be garnished by a creditor of the mortgagee. Hartman v. Olvera, 54 Cal. 61.

Property in the custody of the law. Property in the custody of the law is not subject to attachment. Yuba County v. Adams, 7 Cal. 35; Clymer v. Willis, 3 Cal. 363; 58 Am. Dec. 414. Thus, money in the hands of an administrator, before decree of distribution, is not subject to garnishment. Estate of Nerac, 35 Cal. 392; 95 Am. Dec. 111. Funds in the hands of a receiver, master in chancery, trustee of court, assignee in bankruptcy or insolvency, executor or administrator, are not subject to garnishment before the order of distribution is made by the court. Dunsmoor v. Furstenfeldt, 88 Cal. 522; 23 Am. St. Rep. 331; 12 L. R. A. 508; 26 Pac. 518; Adams v. Haskell, 6 Cal. 113; 65 Am. Dec. 491. Money collected by a sheriff on execution is not a debt due the plaintiff in execution, but is in the custody of the law until finally and properly disposed of, and is not the subject of attachment. Clymer v. Willis, 3 Cal. 363; 58 Am. Dec. 414. Money deposited with a sheriff to procure the release of an attachment is in the custody of the law, and is not the subject of attachment; but where the parties, by a mutual agreement, and without any order of the court, take the money out of the hands of the sheriff and lend it to third parties, the latter are not bailees of the sheriff, and the money is no longer in the custody of the law. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581. Money deposited with the clerk of the court, for the benefit of creditors, by order of the court, is in the custody of the law until the determination of the suit by a decree fixing the share of each creditor, and is not subject to attachment. Dunsmoor v. Furstenfeldt, 88 Cal. 522; 22 Am. St. Rep. 331; 12 L. R. A. 508; 26 Pac. 518. The assets of a bank in liquidation under the Bank Commissioners' Act are not subject to attachment. Crane v. Pacific Bank, 106 Cal. 64; 27 L. R. A. 562; 39 Pac. 215. Under the National Banking Act, no attachment can issue against a national bank from a state court. Dennis v. First Nat. Bank, 127 Cal. 453; 78 Am. St. Rep. 79; 59 Pac. 777. The claim of a Federal court, that money in the possession of its clerk is held by him as an officer of the court, precludes an effective garnishment thereof in a court of this state; there being no common arbiter between state and Federal courts, comity between them becomes a necessity, and is a law not to be disregarded; and the Federal court, when first in possession of the subject of litigation, must be left to determine when its possession and control thereof has ended. Swinnerton v. Oregon Pacific R. R. Co., 123 Cal. 417; 56 Pac. 40. Property taken from a prisoner, on his arrest by an officer charged with that duty, is not subject to garnishment. Coffee v. Haynes, 124 Cal. 561; 71 Am. St. Rep. 99; 57 Pac. 482.

Attachment of shares of corporate stock. See note 52 Am. St. Rep. 474.

Garnishment of stock in foreign corporation. See note 55 L. R. A. 797.

Right of creditor who is also a stockholder of an insolvent corporation to attach property of corporation as affected by his own statutory liability. See note 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 987.

Garnishment of money due on negotiable instrument. See note 55 Am. Dec. 68.

Liability of promissory note to seizure and sale under attachment. See note 15 Ann. Cas. 980.

Whether money in officer's hands is subject to attachment. See note 55 Am. Dec. 264.

Liability of cars of foreign railroad to attachment. See notes 104 Am. St. Rep. 663; 2 Ann. Cas. 349; 11 Ann. Cas. 910.

Liability to attachment at suit of contractor's creditors, of materials furnished to be used in construction of building. See note Ann. Cas. 1913A, 876.

Equitable interest in personal property as subject to attachment. See note 11 Ann. Cas. 669.

Garnishment of husband's interest in wife's legacy or distributive share in decedent's estate. See note 47 L. R. A. 360.

Garnishment of unliquidated claims. See note 59 L. R. A. 353.

Garnishment of distributive shares in decedent's estate before settlement. See note 59 L. R. A. 387.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. What may or may not be attached. The interest of a pledgor is subject to execution, and is reached by serving and enforcing a garnishment on the pledgee, not by a seizure of the pledge. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770. Money in the hands of an administrator, after decree made, distributing it to an heir or devisee, may be garnished by a creditor of the distributee. Estate of Nerac, 35 Cal. 392; 95 Am. Dec. 111. An equitable demand is not the subject of garnishment; it reaches only legal debts,—debts upon which the defendant, at the time of garnishment, could have maintained, under the common-law practice, an action of debt or assumpsit. Hassie v. G. I. W. U. Congregation, 35 Cal. 378. Funds in the hands of a receiver are not subject to attachment. Adams v. Haskell, 6 Cal. 113; 65 Am. Dec. 491; Yuba County v. Adams, 7 Cal. 35. The indebtedness of a maker upon a promissory note, before its maturity, is not the subject of attachment. His obligation is not to the payee named in the note, but to the holder. Nor can such indebtedness, after maturity, be attached, unless the note is, at the time, in the possession of the defendant, from whom its delivery can be enforced on its payment upon the attachment. Gregory v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 339.

2. Extent of the seizure. Fitzgerald v. Blake, 42 Barb. 513; 28 How. Pr. 110. If, at the time of the levy, there is great uncertainty as to the value of the property attached, and it subsequently appears that its value was greatly in excess of the demand sued for, it does not follow that the levy was excessive. Sexey v. Adkison, 40 Cal. 408.

3. Letters and correspondence. The officer is not authorized to seize letters; and where he did, and took copies of business letters, and looked into the correspondence of a firm, it was held a gross abuse of his powers. Hergman v. Dettlebach, 11 How. Pr. 46.

§ 542. How real and personal property shall be attached. The sheriff to whom the writ is directed and delivered, must execute the same without delay, and if the undertaking mentioned in section five hundred and forty be not given, as follows:

1. Real property, standing upon the records of the county in the name of the defendant, must be attached, by filing with the recorder of the county a copy of the writ, together with a description of the property attached, and a notice that it is attached; and by leaving a similar copy of the writ, description, and notice with an occupant of the property, if there is one; if not, then by posting the same in a conspicuous place on the property attached.

2. Real property, or an interest therein, belonging to the defendant, and held by any other person, or standing on the records of the county in the name of any other person, must be attached, by filing with the recorder of the county a copy of the writ, together with a description of the property, and a notice that such real property, and any interest of the defendant therein, held by or standing in the name of such other person (naming him), are attached; and by leaving with the occupant, if any, and with such other person, or his agent, if known and within the county, or at the residence of either, if within the county, a copy of the writ, with a similar description and notice. If there is no occupant of the property, a copy of the writ, together with such description and notice, must be posted in a conspicuous place upon the property. The recorder must index such attachment when filed, in the names, both of the defendant and of the person by whom the property is held or in whose name it stands on the records.

3. Personal property, capable of manual delivery, must be attached by taking it into custody.

4. Stocks or shares, or interest in stocks or shares, of any corporation or company, must be attached by leaving with the president, or other head of the same, or the secretary, cashier, or other managing agent thereof, a copy of the writ, and a notice stating that the stock or interest of the defendant is attached, in pursuance of such writ.

5. Debts and credits and other personal property, not capable of manual delivery, must be attached by leaving with the person owing such debts, or having in his possession, or under his control, such credits and other personal property, or with his agent, a copy of the writ, and a notice that the debts owing by him to the defendant, or the credits and other personal property in his possession, or under his control, belonging to the defendant, are attached in pursuance of such writ, except in the case of attachment of growing crops, a copy of the writ, together with a description of the property attached, and a notice that it is attached, shall be recorded the same as in the attachment of real property.

Attachment lien, officers. Civ. Code, § 3057.
Leviable interest in mortgaged property. Civ. Code, §§ 2968–2970.
Fraudulent transfers. Civ. Code, §§ 1227, 3431, 3439–3442.

Legislation § 542. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 125, as amended by Stats. 1862, p. 568, and (1) in the introductory paragraph, the word "shall" was printed "must"; (2) subd. 1 read, "Real property standing upon the records of the county, in the name of the defendant, shall be attached, by leaving a copy of the writ with an occupant thereof; or, if there be no occupant, by posting a copy in a conspicuous place thereon, and filing a copy, together with a description of the property attached, with the recorder of the county"; (3) subd. 2 read, "Real property, or any interest therein, belonging to the defendant, and held by any other person, or standing on the records of the county in the name of any other person, shall be attached, by leaving with such person, or his agent, a copy of the writ, and a notice that such real property, (giving a description thereof,) and any interest therein, belonging to the defendant, are attached pursuant to such writ, and filing a copy of such writ and notice with the recorder of the county, and leaving a copy of such writ and notice with an occupant of such property, or, if there be no occupant, by posting a copy thereof in a conspicuous place thereon"; (4) in subd. 3, the word "must" was printed "shall"; (5) in subd. 4, (a) the word "stocks" was printed "stock," in both instances, and (b) the word "must" was printed "shall"; (6) in subd. 5, (a) the words "Debts" and "must" were printed, respectively, "Debits" and "shall," (b) the word "owing," before "such debts," was printed "owning," and (c) the word "or," before "the credits and," was printed "on." When enacted in 1872, § 542 read as at present, except that, in subd. 5, (1) the word "owning," before "such debts," was not changed to "owing," and (2) it did not contain the exception at the end of that subdivision, beginning "except in the case."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 139; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 167, in subd. 5, (1) changing the word "owing" from "owning," and (2) adding the exception at the end, after "pursuance of such writ."

Power of legislature. The legislature may provide not only in what cases an attachment may issue, but also the classes of property upon which it may be levied. Dennis v. First Nat. Bank, 127 Cal. 453; 78 Am. St. Rep. 79; 59 Pac. 777.

Execution of writ. A writ of attachment is not wholly executed by the seizure of the attached property, so far as the officer is concerned, although it is so as to the owner of the property; the writ also, by its terms, requires the sheriff to keep safely the attached property; and where the duty of safe-keeping is not completely executed at the expiration of the term of office of the sheriff, that duty devolves, by the County Government Act, upon his successor in office. Wood v. Lowden, 117 Cal. 232; 49 Pac. 132. A writ under which nothing whatever has been done is to be turned over by the sheriff, at the expiration of his term of office, to his successor; but if it has been executed, or if the outgoing officer has already begun its execution, it is not to be turned over; neither is property held under a levy of the writ to be surrendered to the new sheriff. Sagely v. Livermore, 45 Cal. 613 (but this case arose under the law in force prior to 1883); and see Perrin v. McMann, 97 Cal. 52; 31 Pac. 837. The lien of an attachment is not affected by any irregularities in the attachment, but such irregularities are waived by the defendant, where he appears and answers without taking advantage of them by motion or otherwise. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165. The lien of an attachment, properly levied, is not divested by the failure of the officer to make a proper return of the writ. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 239; 70 Am. Dec. 775. Where one writ of attachment was placed in the hands of the sheriff between nine and ten o'clock Sunday evening, and another writ, against the same defendant, was placed in the hands of a deputy a few minutes after midnight, the sheriff not knowing the fact; and the first levy was made on the last writ at one o'clock Monday morning, and the second levy, under the first writ, was made by the sheriff at eight o'clock of the same morning, the sheriff was held not guilty of negligence in executing the first writ, no special circumstances being shown. Whitney v. Butterfield, 13 Cal. 335; 73 Am. Dec. 584. It is the duty of the officer, after he has once entered upon the execution of the writ, to complete its execution with diligence. Wheaton v. Neville, 19 Cal. 41. The sheriff must execute the writ with all reasonable celerity; but he is not held to the duty of starting to execute it on the instant he receives it, without regard to anything else than its instant execution; unless some special reasons of urgency exist; reasonable diligence is all that is required; but this reasonable diligence depends upon the particular facts in connection with the duty. Whitney v. Butterfield, 13 Cal. 335; 73 Am. Dec. 584. The sheriff has no right to sell attached property at private sale, or to authorize another to do so, and for such default he and his sureties are liable on his official bond; and it makes no difference that the property was sold for its highest market value; and the proceeds of such sale can go merely in reduction of damages in an action by the attaching creditor against the officer. Sheehy v. Graves, 58 Cal. 449. The decision of the trial court as to the sufficiency of the levy will not be reversed on appeal, where the evidence is conflicting. Rudolph v. Saunders, 111 Cal. 233; 43 Pac. 619. Matters relied on as operating to dissolve the writ must be specially pleaded by the sheriff, in an action against him for a violation of his duty in the service thereof. McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115.

Liability for wrongful seizure. A third party, seizing the goods of the defendant in attachment proceedings, which are pledged to the plaintiff, is a trespasser, and liable to the pledgee for the entire value of the goods. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770. Where, under a writ of attachment against one person, an officer seizes the goods of another, which at the time are in the custody either of the owner or of a person other than the defendant in the writ, he is a trespasser ab initio. Black v. Clasby, 97 Cal. 482; 32 Pac. 564.

Protection of officer by writ. When property is in the possession of the defendant to the action, the writ of attachment alone, if it is issued by competent authority and is regular on its face, protects the sheriff or constable. Laughlin v. Thompson, 76 Cal. 287; 18 Pac. 330; Horn v. Corvarubias, 51 Cal. 524. Where the affidavit is defective the writ does not protect the constable. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641. A sheriff makes out a prima facie case of justification of the seizure of property by the production of the writ and the affidavit on which it was issued, notwithstanding the affidavit was originally insufficient and was amended subsequently to the seizure, if the property was in the possession of the defendant, and attached as his property. Babe v. Coyne, 53 Cal. 261. The sheriff cannot go behind a writ, regular on its face, and adjudge the question of its validity on pleadings, affidavit, or proceedings in the action in which it is issued (McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115; Harvey v. Foster, 64 Cal. 296; 30 Pac. 849); but he may limit his inquiries as to the validity of the writ; and if it is regular on its face, it will protect him in the performance of his ministerial duties in serving it. Norcross v. Nunan, 61 Cal. 640.

Real property standing in name of defendant. In executing a writ of attachment, the failure of the officer to post upon the land, where it is not occupied, a copy of the description of the land, in connection with a copy of the writ of attachment, and of the notice that the land had been attached, is fatal to the validity of the levy, and no lien is created thereon. Main v. Tappener, 3 Cal. 206; Sharp v. Baird, 43 Cal. 577; Watt v. Wright, 66 Cal. 202; 5 Pac. 91. Where the land attached is a lot, vacant except for a small building used as an office, posting the notice on such building is sufficient. Davis v. Baker, 72 Cal. 494; 14 Pac. 102. The statute does not require that the papers shall be posted in the most conspicuous place, but in a conspicuous place: posting on a house, within five or six feet from the street, where it could be seen, is sufficient. Davis v. Baker, 88 Cal. 106; 25 Pac. 1108. An attempted levy of an attachment on real property of a judgment debtor does not create a lien thereon to which the right of a purchaser at the execution sale can relate, unless a copy of the writ, together with a description of the property attached, and a notice that it is attached, is left with an occupant of the property, or posted upon it. Schwartz v. Cowell, 71 Cal. 306; 12 Pac. 252; Maskell v. Barker, 99 Cal. 644; 34 Pac. 340. The two acts prescribed—the delivery to the occupant of a copy of the writ, or the posting of a copy on the premises, if there is no occupant, and the filing of a copy with the recorder, together with a description of the property attached—must be done, before the lien of attachment is perfected: the omission of either act is fatal to the creation of the lien. Wheaton v. Neville, 19 Cal. 41; Main v. Tappener, 43 Cal. 206. As used in this section, the word "occupant" means some one visibly occupying the property, so that when the officer visits the property to complete the levy, he can determine, from what he can see, whether he shall serve the copies by leaving them with an occupant or by posting; under this interpretation of the word, the writ may be served with the promptness essential to the beneficial use of the writ. Davis v. Baker, 72 Cal. 494; 14 Pac. 102. The property stands in the defendant's name, notwithstanding he has executed a conveyance which has been placed of record, if such conveyance appears upon its face to be void as being a trust deed to convey; in such case the levy of attachment against the defendant is to be made as prescribed in the first subdivision, and not as prescribed in the second subdivision, of this section. Johnson v. Miner, 144 Cal. 785; 78 Pac. 240. The deposit in the recorder's office of a copy of the writ, with a description of the property attached, is sufficient to operate as notice of the lien to third parties. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 239; 70 Am. Dec. 775. After the return of the writ to the clerk's office, the sheriff has no authority to take any proceedings, previously omitted, for the completion of the attachment: the writ is authority to him only for acts performed while it remains in his possession. Wheaton v. Neville, 19 Cal. 41. The decision of the appellate court as to the insufficiency of the testimony to prove the service of notice of attachment on the occupant of land becomes the law of the case upon a retrial, and production of same testimony. Brusie v. Gates, 96 Cal. 265; 31 Pac. 111.

Real property, or interest therein, held by others. Any interest in land, legal or equitable, is subject to attachment or execution. Fish v. Fowlie, 58 Cal. 373; Godfrey v. Monroe, 101 Cal. 224; 35 Pac. 761; and see Logan v. Hale, 42 Cal. 645. A leasehold interest, unless the lease contains a provision against the assignment thereof, and specifically provides against involuntary assignment by operation of law, is attachable (Farnum v. Hefner, 79 Cal. 575; 12 Am. St. Rep. 174; 21 Pac.

955); as is also the interest of a defendant in land held in trust (De Celis v. Porter, 59 Cal. 464); and the equitable interest of the grantor of a trust deed to a reconveyance of the land upon the payment of the debt, or to the surplus proceeds after sale (Brown v. Campbell, 100 Cal. 635; 38 Am. St. Rep. 314; 35 Pac. 433); and the right of redemption in real estate, after sale on foreclosure. Brown v. Campbell, 100 Cal. 635; 38 Am. St. Rep. 314; 35 Pac. 433; and see Knight v. Fair, 9 Cal. 117; McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655; Halsey v. Martin, 22 Cal. 645; Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120. The interest of a tenant in common is attached by taking possession of the entire property of the tenants in common for the purpose of subjecting to the sale the interest of the attachment defendant. Veach v. Adams, 51 Cal. 609; and see Waldman v. Broder, 10 Cal. 379; Bernal v. Hovious, 17 Cal. 541; 79 Am. Dec. 147. The distributive share of an heir in real estate is liable to attachment, although, prior to distribution, such heir had conveyed his interest therein, in good faith and for value, where the assignee did not assert his right before the probate court and have the heir's share distributed directly to himself. Freeman v. Rahm, 58 Cal. 111. Lands conveyed in fraud of creditors, without consideration, to one not a bona fide purchaser, may be levied upon and sold as if no conveyance had been made. Bull v. Ford, 66 Cal. 176; 4 Pac. 1175; Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. The interest of a miner in his mining claim is property, and may be taken and sold under execution. McKeon v. Bisbee, 9 Cal. 137; 70 Am. Dec. 642. A homestead selected by a wife out of the separate property of her husband, without his assent, loses its character as a homestead upon his death, and is subject to attachment. Weinreich v. Hensley, 121 Cal. 647; 54 Pac. 254.

Conveyance before completion of levy. Where, after the sheriff has entered upon the execution of a writ, and before he has completed the levy, another creditor purchases the property from the attachment debtor, such creditor takes the property free from any lien of the attachment; and the fact that such purchasing creditor and the debtor knew at the time of the sale that the attachment had issued does not render the purchase a fraud upon the attaching creditor; nor is a conveyance giving a preference to one creditor fraudulent, simply because the debtor is insolvent, and the purchasing creditor is aware at the time of the conveyance that it will have the effect of defeating the collection of other debts. Wheaton v. Neville, 19 Cal. 41; Main v. Tappener, 43 Cal. 206; Sharp v. Baird, 43 Cal. 577.

Effect of the levy. The lien of the attachment creditor takes effect immediately upon the levy of the attachment, and the deposit of a copy of the writ, together with a description of the property attached, with the county recorder. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 239; 70 Am. Dec. 775. The writ is effectual to change the title of the property, only from the time of the levy. Taffts v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 48; 73 Am. Dec. 610. If the writ is not legally served, there is no lien. Main v. Tappener, 43 Cal. 206; Sharp v. Baird, 43 Cal. 577. The lien of the attaching creditor does not depend upon the return of the officer, but upon the levy made by him, and where he makes a proper levy, but fails to make a proper or any return, the attaching creditor cannot be deprived of his rights, but may show that a valid levy was made; and the same is true of a purchaser under an execution, whose title depends upon the validity of the attachment levy; but where such proof is allowed, the evidence must be clear and satisfactory. Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462; 22 Pac. 284.

Personal property capable of manual delivery. Levy upon personal property is the act of taking possession of it, or seizing or attaching it, by the sheriff or other officer. Taffts v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 48; 73 Am. Dec. 610. A levy upon property already in the possession of the officer by virtue of a former attachment, does not require seizure under a second attachment: all that is required to be done is to make a return on the back of the attachment. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312. Personal property capable of manual delivery must be taken into the custody of the sheriff, and sold after judgment, as required by law. Herron v. Hughes, 25 Cal. 556; Sheehy v. Graves, 58 Cal. 449. Goods stored in a warehouse are sufficiently levied upon by the officer taking them into actual possession and placing them in charge of a keeper. Sinsheimer v. Whitely, 111 Cal. 378; 52 Am. St. Rep. 192; 43 Pac. 1109. Where a sheriff levies on portable machinery and fittings by delivering a copy of the writ to the defendant, making a memorandum of the property attached, and takes steps to have persons meddling therewith notified that it is attached, pending the sending of a keeper, there is a sufficient taking into custody as against the defendant and persons purchasing from him with notice; but it might not be sufficient as against a purchaser in good faith, or another attaching creditor. Rogers v. Gilmore, 51 Cal. 309. The mere watching and guarding of a storehouse does not amount to a levy upon the property within: the levy dates from the entry of the officer into the house, and his levy on the property there; and, if, prior to gaining admission, other parties succeed in acquiring a valid lien upon the property, the officer loses his right to levy. Taffts v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 48; 73 Am. Dec. 610. The property of tenants in common must all be taken into possession, in a suit against one co-tenant, for the purpose of subjecting the undivided interest of such co-tenant to the sale on execution. Veach v. Adams, 51 Cal. 609. Property subject to a lien cannot be seized by the sheriff, except upon the payment of the amount of the lien. Johnson v. Perry, 53 Cal. 351. A promissory note, the property of the defendant in an attachment and execution, is liable to seizure and sale thereunder. Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81; Donohoe v. Gamble, 38 Cal. 340; 99 Am. Dec. 399; Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611; Hoxie v. Bryant, 131 Cal. 85; 63 Pac. 153; and see Crandall v. Blen, 13 Cal. 15. The property of a street railroad company, such as cars, tracks, electrical supplies, is liable to attachment (Risdon Iron etc. Works v. Citizens' Traction Co., 122 Cal. 94; 68 Am. St. Rep. 25; 54 Pac. 529); as is also the property of a solvent partnership, in the hands of a receiver appointed in a suit for dissolution. Adams v. Woods, 9 Cal. 24. Property in the hands of a foreign receiver, brought by him into this state, is attachable while in his possession, upon the suit of a creditor who is a citizen of this state. Humphreys v. Hopkins, 81 Cal. 555; 15 Am. St. Rep. 76; 6 L. R. A. 792; 22 Pac. 892. Where one of several partners sells his undivided interest in the partnership property, the purchase-money stands in the place of the property, and is liable for the partnership debts, the same as the property for which it was paid. Burpee v. Bunn, 22 Cal. 194. The attaching creditor can acquire no greater right in attached property than the defendant had at the time of attachment. Howell v. Foster, 65 Cal. 169; 3 Pac. 647; Smith v. Cunningham, 67 Cal. 262; 7 Pac. 679; Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 488; 24 Pac. 930.

Shares of stocks. The word "cashier," as used in the fourth subdivision of this section, refers to an executive officer of a corporation, as the cashier of a bank, and not to a simple employee who is not a managing agent, as a clerk employed in a store belonging to a mining corporation, although he may have exclusive duties in relation to the custody of moneys, keeping accounts, and paying employees; and a corporation is not bound by a writ delivered to any of its agents or employees other than those named in this section. Blanc v. Paymaster Mining Co., 95 Cal. 524; 29 Am. St. Rep. 149; 30 Pac. 765. Where shares of stock have been regularly transferred on the books of the corporation as security for a loan, the mortgagee is the only proper garnishee. Edwards v. Beugnot, 7 Cal. 162.

Debts, credits, and personal property, not capable of manual delivery. The mode of attaching debts and credits, and other personal property not capable of manual delivery, as provided by the code, is exclusive. McBride v. Fallon, 65 Cal. 301; 4 Pac. 17; Latham v. Blake, 77 Cal. 646; 18 Pac. 150; 20 Pac. 417. A notice of garnishment of "all moneys, credits, and effects of defendant," is not effective as an attachment of a "debt" due from the garnishee to the defendant. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. Promissory notes, the property of the defendant in an attachment and execution, are liable to seizure and sale thereunder. Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81; Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611; Gow v. Marshall, 90 Cal. 565; 27 Pac. 422; Deering v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 109 Cal. 73; 41 Pac. 801. Property acquired by an insolvent after the date of the filing of his petition in insolvency, is subject to attachment upon his subsequent adjudication in insolvency. Day v. Superior Court, 61 Cal. 489. Service of process of attachment upon the teller of a banking corporation, whose only duty is to receive and pay out moneys, does not bind the corporation. Kennedy v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 38 Cal. 151. The interest of a pledgor may be attached, but the pledgee cannot be disturbed in his possession, unless by an order of the court, made after examination, on such terms as may be just, having reference to any liens thereon or claims against the same. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 691; 94 Am. Dec. 770; and see Deering v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 109 Cal. 73; 41 Pac. 801; Lilienthal v. Ballou, 125 Cal. 183; 57 Pac. 897; Salinas City Bank v. Graves, 79 Cal. 192; 21 Pac. 732. Mortgaged personal property is attachable at the suit of a creditor of the mortgagor; but, before the property is taken, the officer must pay or tender to the mortgagee the amount of the mortgage. Wood v. Franks, 56 Cal. 217; Berson v. Nunan, 63 Cal. 550; Wood v. Franks, 67 Cal. 32; 7 Pac. 50; Meherin v. Oaks, 67 Cal. 57; 7 Pac. 47; Irwin v. McDowell, 91 Cal. 119; 27 Pac. 601. The interest of a mortgagor is liable to attachment, whether the instrument evidencing the security be ordinary mortgage or deed of trust and defeasance. Halsey v. Martin, 22 Cal. 645; Godfrey v. Monroe, 101 Cal. 224; 35 Pac. 761. The attachment of the interest of a mortgagor after foreclosure of the mortgage, and before the execution of the deed, reaches only the right of redemption of the mortgagor, and the lien of the attachment is extinguished by the deed. Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120. The interest of a partner in the partnership property is attachable. Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611; Isaacs v. Jones, 121 Cal. 257; 53 Pac. 793. Partnership effects, in the hands of a receiver appointed in a suit for dissolution, may be attached in a suit of the creditor of the partnership at any time before the decree of dissolution and order for pro rata distribution are made, and such creditor may thereby secure a preference or lien upon the partnership assets. Adams v. Woods, 9 Cal. 24; Adams v. Woods, 8 Cal. 152; 68 Am. Dec. 313; and see Adams v. Haskell, 6 Cal. 113; 65 Am. Dec. 491. Where a receiver of a partnership property was appointed prior to a levy of attachment on the interest of an individual partner, the sheriff is not entitled to take possession of the partnership property from the receiver; but if the attaching creditor obtains judgment against such partner, and sells his interest in the partnership, the purchaser is entitled to receive whatever may be found to belong to such partner. Isaacs v. Jones, 121 Cal. 257; 53 Pac. 793. Where a partner conveyed partnership property to a trustee, for his wife, in fraud of the creditors of the partnership, the proceeds of the sale of such property are liable to garnishment. Burpee v. Bunn, 22 Cal. 194. Crops grown by the adverse possessor of lands cannot be attached as the property of the legal owner of the land. Smith v. Cunningham, 67 Cal. 262; 7 Pac. 679. A crop abandoned by a lessee, and harvested by the lessor at an expense exceeding the value thereof, is not attachable by the creditors of the lessee. Charles v. Davis, 59 Cal. 479. A crop raised by a tenant of land, who holds under a lease containing a covenant that the entire crop shall be the property of the landlord until all advances made by him to the tenant shall be paid, is not subject to attachment by a creditor of the tenant while such advances remain unpaid. Howell v. Foster, 65 Cal. 169; 3 Pac. 647. A growing crop is personal property not capable of manual delivery, and is liable to attachment; and service upon the person in possession, by leaving with him a copy of the writ and statutory notice, is sufficient until the crop matures, when the officer may take it into his custody. Raventas v. Green, 57 Cal. 254; Cardenas v. Miller, 108 Cal. 250; 49 Am. St. Rep. 84; 39 Pac. 783; Rudolph v. Saunders, 111 Cal. 233; 43 Pac. 619; and see Davis v. McFarlane, 37 Cal. 634; 99 Am. Dec. 340. A cropper's interest in a growing crop, under a contract to work the land on shares, is liable to attachment; and to effect this, possession of the entire quantity of the crop may be taken, and the purchaser at the execution sale becomes a tenant in common with the owner of the other undivided interest. Bernal v. Hovious, 17 Cal. 541; 79 Am. Dec. 147. Where, by the terms of a contract, the entire crop was to belong to the owner of the land until division, and to be security for any indebtedness to such owner, the interest of the cropper becomes liable to attachment, when, upon division, he delivers to such owner his due proportion, and the remainder is in possession of the cropper, although still on the land of such owner, who still claims a lien for indebtedness, but who cannot maintain a secret lien upon the share of the cropper. Crocker v. Cunningham, 122 Cal. 547; 55 Pac. 404. Where a growing crop was, by the terms of a lease, to remain the property of the lessor until the harvesting and division thereof, and the lessee had no right to dispose of or to encumber the same or any portion thereof, but was to receive a certain portion upon delivery of the whole to the lessor, the lessee has an interest in the grain subject to attachment, notwithstanding the specific provision in the lease that title to crop should remain in the lessor until the division thereof. Farnum v. Hefner, 79 Cal. 575; 12 Am. St. Rep. 174; 21 Pac. 955; Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Purvis, 112 Cal. 226; 53 Am. St. Rep. 210; 44 Pac. 561. An attachment upon a growing crop in the possession of the defendant is sufficiently levied by serving upon him copies of the writ and statutory notice; and there is no abandonment, where the sheriff, when the crop matures, harvests and takes it into his custody. Raventas v. Green, 57 Cal. 254; Cardenas v. Miller, 108 Cal. 250; 49 Am. St. Rep. 84; 39 Pac. 783. The estate of a prisoner may be attached, where he is imprisoned for a term less than his natural life. Estate of Nerac, 35 Cal. 392; 95 Am. Dec. 111. The property of a prisoner under sentence of life imprisonment, taken and held, upon his request, by a chief of police as bailee, and not in his official capacity, is attachable; and the court has jurisdiction to enforce execution against such property, although the judgment in the civil action was not entered against the prisoner until after his civil death. Coffee v. Haynes, 124 Cal. 561; 71 Am. St. Rep. 99; 57 Pac. 482.

Costs, expenses, and fees of officer. Where the levy is properly made, the officer is entitled to his legal fees, and the attaching creditor must pay them, and notice from the sheriff that the levy has been made is not required (Alexander v. Denaveaux, 59 Cal. 476); and where an attachment is levied upon several pieces of real estate, the sheriff is entitled to fees for each levy. Young v. Miller, 63 Cal. 302. The sheriff is the agent of the plaintiff in levying an attachment, and the plaintiff cannot relieve himself from liability for expenses incurred in such agency by the dismissal of the action, or the mere direction to release the property; neither can the parties to the action, by an agreement between themselves for its dismissal, deprive the sheriff of his fees, nor compel him to look to the solvency or caprice of the plaintiff therefor: for the purpose of protecting the sheriff against such contingencies, it is provided by statute that he may retain the property levied on under the attachment until his fees and expenses are paid. Perrin v. McMann, 97 Cal. 52; 31 Pac. 837. Where the property attached is portable, though some of it may be classed as fixtures, the sheriff is entitled to necessary costs for safely keeping the same. Nisbet v. Clio Mining Co., 2 Cal. App. 436; 83 Pac. 1077. Keeper's fees, and expenses of keeping and preserving the property held under attachment, cannot be collected by the sheriff, unless the court from which the writ issues certifies that the charges are just and reasonable. Geil v. Stevens, 48 Cal. 590; Lane v. McElhany, 49 Cal. 421; Bower v. Rankin, 61 Cal. 108; Shumway v. Leakey, 73 Cal. 260; 14 Pac. 841. Expenditures made by the sheriff for fire-insurance premiums on property attached are not proper items of cost. Galindo v. Roach, 130 Cal. 389; 62 Pac. 597. A deputy sheriff is not authorized to bind the sheriff by contract for the payment of the keeper's fees. Krum v. King, 12 Cal. 412.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Duty of sheriff, generally. The presumptions are that the officer faithfully performs his duty. Turner v. Billagram, 2 Cal. 520; Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 238; 70 Am. Dec. 775. An officer, after entering upon the execution of an attachment, must complete its execution with diligence. Wheaton v. Neville, 19 Cal. 41. An officer who levies a writ of attachment upon personal property, in obedience to the commands of the writ, has no right to let the property go out of his hands, except in the course of law, and if he does, and the debt is lost, he is responsible to the plaintiff for the amount of the debt. Nor will the oral instruction of the plaintiff in an attachment or execution, respecting property seized by the sheriff under either writ, discharge such sheriff from liability. The statute is express that such instruction must be in writing. Sandford v. Boring, 12 Cal. 539. Where one writ was placed in the sheriff's hands on Sunday, and another against the same defendant was placed in the hands of a deputy at a quarter past twelve on Monday morning, the sheriff not knowing the fact, and the first levy was made under the writ at one o'clock Monday morning, it was held that the sheriff was not guilty of negligence in executing the first, no special circumstances being shown. Whitney v. Butterfield, 13 Cal. 335; 73 Am. Dec. 584. Where an officer, by virtue of a second attachment, levies on property in his possession by virtue of a former attachment, it is only necessary for him to return that he has attached the interest of the defendant in the property then in his possession. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312. If the sheriff take property which does not belong to the defendant, the taking is tortious, whether the property was in the possession of defendant or not. Wellman v. English, 38 Cal. 583. Where the complaint contains no allegation that the levy was excessive, in an action against a sheriff for the recovery of personal property alleged to have been improperly attached, the plaintiff cannot avail himself of the fact that the evidence showed the levy was excessive. Sexey v. Adkison, 40 Cal. 408.

2. Levy upon real property. The presumptions are in favor of the regularity of the acts of the officer, and a return which simply states that the property was attached is sufficient, prima facie, to show a due and proper execution of the writ. Our statute prescribes the manner in which real estate may be attached, but contains no provision requiring that all the acts necessary to a levy should be set out in the return. Nor is it necessary, when the levy is made by posting a copy of the writ on the premises, that the return of the sheriff should show that the premises were at the time unoccupied. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 248; 70 Am. Dec. 775. An attachment of real property is not perfected until both the acts prescribed by statute, to wit, delivery to the occupant of a copy of the writ, or posting a copy upon the premises, if there be no occupant, and the filing of a copy with the recorder, together with a description of the property attached, are performed. The omission of either act is fatal to the creation of a lien. Thus, where a writ of attachment was issued on the 26th of August, and a copy delivered to the occupant of the premises, or posted upon them, on the 29th of that month, and on the same day the writ was returned, and filed in the clerk's office, but no copy of the writ, with a description of the property, was filed with the recorder, until the 9th of September following, it was held, that, after the return of the writ to the clerk's office on the 29th of August, the sheriff had no authority to take any proceedings for the completion of the attachment, previously omitted; that the writ was authority to him, only for acts performed while it remained in his possession, and hence, that another creditor of the debtor, purchasing the property from the latter on the 6th of September, took it free from any lien of the attachment. Wheaton v. Neville, 19 Cal. 41.

3. Lien of attachment attaches on personal property, only from the time of levy. Taffts v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 47; 73 Am. Dec. 610. On real estate, immediately upon the levy of the attachment and the deposit of a copy of the writ, together with a description of the land attached, with the county recorder. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 238; 70 Am. Dec. 775. If, after the levy of an attachment and before judgment, the defendant dies, his death destroys the lien of the attachment, and the property passes into the hands of the administrator, to be administered, or in due course of administration. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49. Where the first attachment against an insolvent is set aside as fraudulent, in a suit brought by a subsequent creditor, to which various other attaching creditors, prior and subsequent, are parties, the plaintiff in the suit cannot claim priority over the attachments preceding his, on the ground that by his superior diligence the fraud was discovered. The prior attachments became liens in the nature of a legal estate vested in the sheriff for the benefit of the creditors. Patrick v. Montader, 13 Cal. 444. The lien of firm creditors is preferred to the lien of an individual creditor of the remaining partner attaching first. Conroy v. Woods, 13 Cal. 631; 73 Am. Dec. 605. A lien by attachment enables a creditor to file a creditor's bill, without judgment and execution. Conroy v. Woods, 13 Cal. 626; 73 Am. Dec. 605. Plaintiff, January 10, 1858, in a suit entitled C. and M. and others, composing the Wisconsin Quartz Mining Co. (a corporation), attached a quartz mill and ledge belonging to the corporation. June 28, 1858, the complaint was amended so as to make the corporation, as such, the party defendant, and judgment was rendered against the company August 14, 1858, the property sold, the plaintiff becoming the purchaser. October 7, 1857, W. received from the corporation a chattel mortgage on this property, had decree of foreclosure August 9, 1858, followed by a sale in October following, W. becoming the purchaser. Defendants here are in possession under sheriff's sale on the decree. Plaintiff claims title under his judgment and sale. It was held, that he could not recover; that he acquired no lien by the attachment, because the property attached belonged to the corporation, which was not a party to the suit until after the levy and return of the writ; that plaintiff's rights attach only from the date of his judgment, August 14, 1858, and his lien being subsequent to the lien of W.'s judgment, August 9, 1858, under which defendants claim, the latter have the better right. Collins v. Montgomery, 16 Cal. 398. T. commenced suit against J.; a writ of attachment was levied upon certain personal property by the plaintiff H., as sheriff. M. J., wife of J., claimed the property as a sole trader, and brought her action of replevin for the property, and obtained possession of the same, by the delivery of an undertaking as required by law. The undertaking was executed by defendants R. and S. The replevin suit was decided February 5, 1855, in favor of H. T. obtained judgment in the attachment suit against J., November 30, 1854. On the 18th of February, 1855, executions in favor of other creditors of J. coming into the hands of H., as sheriff, he levied them on the same property, and subsequently sold the property and paid the proceeds into court. H. then brought this suit against the sureties in the replevin bond. It was held that the lien of T.'s attachment continued after the replevy of the goods by M. J. Hunt v. Robinson, 11 Cal. 262. The lien of an attachment upon funds in the hands of a receiver follows the property in the hands of his successors. Adams v. Woods, 9 Cal. 29. The return on an attachment cannot be amended so as to postpone the rights of creditors attaching subsequently. Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 21; 68 Am. Dec. 287.

4. Garnishment. See note to § 544. Where a debtor transfers personal property to a creditor, to be sold by him and the proceeds applied to the payment of his debts and debts of certain other creditors, with their consent, the transferee and those he represents acquire a lien upon the property and its proceeds superior to any which other creditors could acquire by the subsequent levy of an attachment or other process thereon. Handley v. Pfister, 39 Cal. 283; 2 Am. Rep. 449. The lien of an attachment upon real property is merged in that of the judgment, and has no effect, except to confer a priority in the lien of the judgment, and does not revive upon the expiration of the two years' lien of the judgment. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256.

§ 542a. Lien of attachment. The attachment whether heretofore levied or hereafter to be levied shall be a lien upon all real property attached for a period of three years after the date of levy unless sooner released or discharged as provided in this chapter, by dismissal of the action or by entry and docketing of judgment in the action. At the expiration of three years the lien shall cease and any proceeding or proceedings against the property under the attachment shall be barred; provided, that upon motion of a party to the action, made not less than five nor more than sixty days before the expiration of said period of three years, the court in which the action is pending may extend the time of said lien for a period not exceeding two years from the date on which the original lien would expire, and the lien shall be extended for the period specified in the order upon the filing, before the expiration of the existing lien, of a certified copy of the order with the recorder of the county in which the real property attached is situated. The lien may be extended from time to time in the manner herein prescribed.

Legislation § 542a. 1. Added by Stats. 1909, p. 749.

2. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 201, (1) in first sentence, inserting "whether heretofore levied or hereafter to be levied"; (2) in the proviso, inserting "before the expiration of the existing lien."

§ 543. Attorney to give written instructions to sheriff what to attach. Upon receiving information in writing from the plaintiff or his attorney, that any person has in his possession, or under his control, any credits or other personal property belonging to the defendant, or is owing any debt to the defendant, the sheriff must serve upon such person a copy of the writ, and a notice that such credits, or other property or debts, as the case may be, are attached in pursuance of such writ.

Legislation § 543. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 126.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. To hold a corporation as garnishee, the writ and notice must be served on the president, or other head of the same, or the secretary, cashier, or other managing agent thereof. In case of a banking corporation, service of process on the teller is not sufficient. Kennedy v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 38 Cal. 151. An ex-sheriff is served as a private individual. Graham v. Endicott, 7 Cal. 144.

§ 544. Garnishment, when garnishee liable to plaintiff. All persons having in their possession, or under their control, any credits or other personal property belonging to the defendant, or owing any debts to the defendant at the time of service upon them of a copy of the writ and notice, as provided in the last two sections, shall be, unless such property be delivered up or transferred, or such debts be paid to the sheriff, liable to the plaintiff for the amount of such credits, property, or debts, until the attachment be discharged, or any judgment recovered by him be satisfied.

Similar provision as to execution. Post, § 716.
Legislation § 544. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 127.

Garnishment. Although partially regulated by statute, yet garnishment is none the less a common-law proceeding. Cahoon v. Levy, 5 Cal. 294. Garnishment is the service of a writ of attachment upon personal property in the possession of persons other than the defendant in the writ, to secure the credits, debts, etc., in the hands of such third persons; and by the service in the manner provided by statute, whether termed "garnishment" or "service of attachment," while the possession is not necessarily disturbed, yet a lien is obtained on the defendant's title to the property in the hands of the garnishee. Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111. The contract liability is not converted, by the garnishment, into a statutory liability: the sole effect of the garnishment is to work a contingent transfer of the alleged indebtedness from the creditor to the garnisher, without any change in the nature of the liability. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. In an action against a garnishee by his creditor, the only effect of the garnishment is to suspend the proceedings: it is not a bar to the action. McFadden v. O'Donnell, 18 Cal. 160; Pierson v. McCahill, 21 Cal. 122; McKeon v. McDermott, 22 Cal. 667; 83 Am. Dec. 86. A garnishment is no defense to an action of the defendant against a garnishee while the attachment still remains pending and undetermined. Glugermovich v. Zicovich, 113 Cal. 64; 45 Pac. 174. An admission of the garnishee, consisting of a pencil-entry, after service of the notice, made in his ledger, by a book-keeper, on the margin of his account with an attachment debtor, showing that it was "attached" on the day of service, and a statement of the garnishee to such debtor, that the debt was attached, as an excuse for refusing further payments, though evidence of such attachment, is not conclusive, and may have been nothing more than the expression of an erroneous opinion as to the effect of the notice of attachment served by the sheriff, and the garnishee is not thereby estopped from showing that the notice of the garnishment attached merely "all moneys, credits, and effects," and did not include "debts." Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. The lien of a plaintiff, obtained by his attachment upon notes, fastens itself not only upon the notes, but also upon the proceeds thereof when collected. Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611.

The garnishee. An administrator may be garnished, after decree of distribution (Estate of Nerac, 35 Cal. 392; 95 Am. Dec. 111; Dunsmoor v. Furstenfeldt, 88 Cal. 522; 22 Am. St. Rep. 331; 12 L. R. A. 508; 26 Pac. 518); and a bailee is liable to garnishment. Chandler v. Booth, 11 Cal. 342; Hardy v. Hunt, 11 Cal. 343; 70 Am. Dec. 787. A school district is not a "person," within the meaning of the fifth subdivision of § 542, ante, and is not liable to be served as a garnishee. Skelly v. Westminster School Dist., 103 Cal. 652; 37 Pac. 643; Witter v. Mission School Dist., 121 Cal. 350; 66 Am. St. Rep. 33; 53 Pac. 905. An assignee for the benefit of creditors is not liable to garnishment, unless the assignment is subject to impeachment. Hecht v. Green, 61 Cal. 269. The garnishee has the right, which may be voluntarily exercised, to protect himself from all further liability, by delivering the property to the sheriff (Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262; Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611); and he may pay the attached money into court, where there are conflicting liens. Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522; Maier v. Freeman, 112 Cal. 8; 53 Am. St. Rep. 151; 44 Pac. 357. He is not required, and he has no right, to appear in the action: the only answer he makes is to the sheriff, at the time of the service of the writ, and that relates only to the property actually attached, which he has in his possession or under his control. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. Where the garnishee is sued by the defendant in an attachment suit, he may, by affidavit or other appropriate means, apply for a stay of the proceedings until the action of the attaching creditor can be disposed of, or the court may allow the cause to proceed to judgment, and stay execution upon enough to provide for satisfaction of the demand for which the debtor is garnished. Glugermovich v. Zicovich, 113 Cal. 64; 45 Pac. 174; McKeon v. McDermott, 22 Cal. 667; 83 Am. Dec. 86. The garnishee should be permitted to amend his answer, whenever he has committed a mistake or fallen into an error which could not reasonably have been avoided. Smith v. Brown, 5 Cal. 118. A garnishee who received the property of the defendant from a former pledgee, guaranteeing payment of the defendant's debt to such pledgee, and who paid the same before the levy of attachment, is entitled to a lien for the debt of the defendant to himself, and also for the amount paid upon the defendant's indebtedness to the former pledgee. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770. Where the garnishee denied both the attachment and the debt, and pleaded the bar of the statute of limitations, he cannot be deprived of his right to plead the statute, as against the plaintiff, on the ground that the attachment debtor, whose interest was adverse, had conceded the validity of the attachment. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36.

Debts and credits. A "debt" is money owing by the garnishee to the defendant, which may be paid over to the sheriff; while "credits" are something belonging to the defendant, but in the possession and under the control of the garnishee, such as promissory notes or other evidences of indebtedness of third parties, which may be delivered up or transferred to the sheriff. Gow v. Marshall, 90 Cal. 565; 27 Pac. 422; and see Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81; Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611; Deering v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 109 Cal. 73; 41 Pac. 801. The word "debt," as used in the law of garnishment, includes only legal debts, causes of action upon which the defendant in the attachment, under the common-law practice, can maintain an action of debt or indebitatus assumpsit, and not mere equity claims. Hassie v. G. I. W. U. Congregation, 35 Cal. 378; Redondo Beach Co. v. Brewer, 101 Cal. 322; 35 Pac. 896. Any kind of obligation of one to pay money to another is a debt: a debt signifies what one owes, and there is always some obligation that it shall be paid; but the manner of payment, or the means of coercing payment, does not enter into the definition. Dunsmoor v. Furstenfeldt, 88 Cal. 522; 22 Am. St. Rep. 331; 12 L. R. A. 508; 26 Pac. 518. A notice of garnishment, under a writ of attachment describing only "moneys, credits, and effects" as being attached, does not include any "indebtedness" due from the garnishee to the principal defendant, nor create any liability therefor to the attaching creditor. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. A garnishment of "certain credits belonging to the defendant," which a corporation has in its possession or under its control, is not an attachment of a "debt" due from the corporation to the defendant, and the attaching creditor acquires no lien upon or right to such debt by the service of the writ. Gow v. Marshall, 90 Cal. 565; 27 Pac. 422. Debts secured by mortgage may be attached by garnishment, but in no other way. McGurren v. Garrity, 68 Cal. 566; 9 Pac. 839. All debts and credits of a defendant, in possession of another person, are attachable by garnishment (Deering v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 109 Cal. 73; 41 Pac. 801; Gow v. Marshall, 90 Cal. 565; 27 Pac. 422; Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81; Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611); as is also the indebtedness of the vendee for the purchase price of real estate (Ross v. Heintzen, 36 Cal. 313); and the debt secured by a mortgage (McGurren v. Garrity, 68 Cal. 566; 9 Pac. 839); and the judgment debt; but the judgment itself is not. McBride v. Fallon, 65 Cal. 301; 4 Pac. 17; Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232; 1 Am. St. Rep. 48; 13 Pac. 621; Latham v. Blake, 77 Cal. 646; 18 Pac. 150; 20 Pac. 417; Hoxie v. Bryant, 131 Cal. 85; 63 Pac. 153; and see Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187; Crandall v. Blen, 13 Cal. 15.

Equitable rights and contingent claims. The equitable right of a subcontractor, under the assignment of an interest in a building contract, whereby the contractor authorized the owner to pay to the subcontractor a certain portion of the contract price, to be paid in installments as the work progressed, upon the certificate of the architect, as provided in the contract between the owner and the contractor, is not such a legal demand as will support a garnishment of the owner in an action against the contractor; and the certificate of the architect creates no debt in favor of the subcontractor until indorsed by the contractor and accepted by the owner. Hassie v. G. I. W. U. Congregation, 35 Cal. 378. The assignee of a vendee under an executory contract for the conveyance of land has no legal demand against the vendor for the amount paid by the vendee on the purchase price, or for moneys expended by himself in improvements, where the vendor elects to declare the contract forfeited for failure of the assignee of the vendee to pay the purchase price at the stipulated time: whatever right the assignee has is merely equitable, and not subject to garnishment. Redondo Beach Co. v. Brewer, 101 Cal. 322; 35 Pac. 896. An execution purchaser, who, pending appeal, bid in the property for the entire amount of his judgment against the defendant, does not, merely by reason of the modification of the judgment on appeal, reducing the amount thereof, become the debtor of the defendant for the amount of the purchase price bid by him in excess of the judgment as modified: the sale was valid at the time it was made, but was liable to be set aside upon a reversal or modification of the judgment on appeal, or by the court below, upon the return of the case, upon motion of the defendant, or by action; and this right to have the sale set aside is at the election of the defendant, and not of his creditors; and unless he elects to treat the sale as valid, there can be no pretense that the purchaser is his debtor; and if the plaintiff's attachment is served before the defendant makes such election, there is no debt upon which the attachment can operate. Johnson v. Lamping, 34 Cal. 293. The purchaser of mortgaged property, who has agreed with the mortgagor to pay the mortgage debt, does not thereby become indebted to the mortgagee, and is not subject to garnishment in a suit against the latter. Hartman v. Olvera, 54 Cal. 61. A third party, committing a trespass against the defendant in an attachment suit, is liable to such defendant for damages; but the defendant alone has the right to waive the tort, and he cannot be deprived thereof by his creditors, who have no right to treat such tort-feasor as the defendant's debtor. Johnson v. Lamping, 34 Cal. 293.

Deposits in bank. Where moneys have been placed on general deposit in a bank, and negotiable certificates of deposit have been issued to the depositor for the amount, there is nothing left in the possession of the bankers, belonging to the depositor, upon which an attachment can fasten; the bankers being liable to pay the amount to the holders of the certificates, whoever they may be, on presentation. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655. A savings bank cannot avoid its liability to pay over the money of a depositor, on a garnishment at the suit of the depositor's creditor, on the ground that its by-laws, assented to by the depositor, make his pass-book transferable to order; the pass-book not being a negotiable instrument, nor capable of being made such by agreement. Witte v. Vincenot, 43 Cal. 325.

Partnership assets. Money derived from the sale of partnership property conveyed by an individual partner to a trustee for his wife, in fraud of creditors of partnership, is liable to garnishment. Burpee v. Bunn, 22 Cal. 194. Moneys in the hands of a receiver, in a suit for dissolution of partnership, are subject to attachment, at any time before a final decree of dissolution and distribution. Adams v. Woods, 9 Cal. 24; and see Adams v. Woods, 8 Cal. 152; 68 Am. Dec. 313; Adams v. Haskell, 6 Cal. 113; 65 Am. Dec. 491.

Promissory notes. The indebtedness of the maker upon a promissory note, after its maturity, is not the subject of attachment, unless the note is at the time in the possession of the defendant. Gregory v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 339. A promissory note, held by a third party as collateral security for a debt of a defendant in attachment, is a credit, and is attachable by garnishment, and the lien of the attachment upon the note transfers itself to the money collected thereon by the garnishee. Deering v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 109 Cal. 73; 41 Pac. 801; Gow v. Marshall, 90 Cal. 565; 27 Pac. 422.

Property in custodia legis. Where money is in the hands of the clerk of the court, deposited, under an order of the court, by the assignee of an insolvent, pending litigation as to the proper disposition thereof among the creditors, and an order of distribution is made by the court, the sum found due each creditor is a debt due the creditor from the clerk, and may be attached in his hands by a creditor of the creditor. Dunsmoor v. Furstenfeldt, 88 Cal. 522; 22 Am. St. Rep. 331; 12 L. R. A. 508; 26 Pac. 518; Estate of Nerac, 35 Cal. 392; 95 Am. Dec. 111. Money voluntarily paid into court, without an order of court, by a garnishee who has filed a complaint in interpleader against attaching creditors, is subject to attachment (Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386; 43 Pac. 1111); as is also money placed in the hands of an agent to pay creditors, who have not agreed to look to the agent for payment. Chandler v. Booth, 11 Cal. 342. Money of a prisoner under sentence of life imprisonment is attachable in the hands of a chief of police, who holds it as bailee, and not in his official capacity, where it has nothing to do with the conviction on the criminal charge. Coffee v. Haynes, 124 Cal. 561; 71 Am. St. Rep. 99; 57 Pac. 482. Surplus money remaining in the hands of trustees after the satisfaction of the judgment by the sale of land on foreclosure, is subject to the lien of an attachment levied upon the equity of redemption. Brown v. Campbell, 100 Cal. 635; 38 Am. St. Rep. 314; 35 Pac. 433; and see Knight v. Fair, 9 Cal. 117; McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655; Halsey v. Martin, 22 Cal. 645.

Liability of garnishee. The liability of a garnishee to the plaintiff is direct, for the value of the goods in his possession or under his control (Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262; Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271; 37 Am. St. Rep. 50; 33 Pac. 857; Carter v. Los Angeles Nat. Bank, 116 Cal. 370; 48 Pac. 332); and the liability dates from the service of the writ (Johnson v. Carry, 2 Cal. 34; Norris v. Burgoyne, 4 Cal. 409; Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262); but no such liability exists where an execution is levied upon such debts. Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242. The acceptor of a bill of exchange, who, in accepting it, does not inform the payee of an attachment previously served upon him as a garnishee in a suit against such payee, is estopped from setting up such garnishment against a purchaser for a valuable consideration. Garwood v. Simpson, 8 Cal. 101. Any estoppel which may exist against the garnishee in favor of the attachment debtor, by refusal of further payments on the ground that the debt had been attached, to deny the efficacy of the notice of garnishment, cannot avail the plaintiff as attaching creditor, who relies upon an attachment in his favor which did not include the debt. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. A garnishee is bound to protect the rights of all parties to the goods or credits attached in his hands; and if, after notice, though execution may have been awarded against him, he satisfies the judgment, it is in his own wrong, and constitutes no valid defense to the claim of the assignee. Hardy v. Hunt, 11 Cal. 343; 70 Am. Dec. 787. The measure of the garnishee's liability depends upon the amount of property in his possession or under his control at the time the writ is served. Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262. Partnership property can be seized under an execution against one of the partners, for his individual debt, and sold; but the interest which passes by the sale is only the interest of the debtor partner in the residuum of the partnership property, after the settlement of the partnership debts.

Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611. The return of the officer is not conclusive against the garnishee. Broadway Ins. Co. v. Wolters, 128 Cal. 162; 60 Pac. 766.

Defenses by garnishee. The garnishee can plead any defense against his creditor, and also that his debt has been satisfied, or that he failed to recover judgment, or that it was reversed or was barred. Carter v. Los Angeles Nat. Bank, 116 Cal. 370; 48 Pac. 332. A garnishee does not relieve himself of liability by refusing to disclose his indebtedness to the judgment debtor, by holding the money in his possession until served with an execution in another case, and by then paying the money to the sheriff without any suggestion as to the former service or the appropriation of the payment; in such a case, the garnishee should be ordered to pay to the judgment creditor the amount of his indebtedness to the judgment debtor. Finch v. Finch, 12 Cal. App. 274; 107 Pac. 594. The delivery of an ordinary check upon a bank for part of the fund standing therein to the credit of the drawer, does not, prior to its presentation, operate as an assignment of the fund pro tanto, and a garnishment of the fund under execution, as belonging to the drawer, will prevail over all unpresented and unaccepted checks previously drawn. Donohoe-Kelly Banking Co. v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 138 Cal. 183; 94 Am. St. Rep. 28; 71 Pac. 93. The liability created by a garnishment is never barred by the statute of limitations. Carter v. Los Angeles Nat. Bank, 116 Cal. 370; 48 Pac. 332. The running of the statute of limitations in favor of a debtor is not interrupted by making him a garnishee, where he denies any indebtedness, or disputes the defendant's title to any property in his possession. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. This section is intended to apply to those cases, only, in which the garnishee admits his indebtedness as to the defendant in attachment, or admits his possession or control of specific property of the defendant: in such case he can discharge his admitted obligation by paying the debt to the sheriff or delivering possession of the defendant's property; and if he chooses to retain possession of the defendant's property, or to withhold payment of a sum admitted to be due, he thereby makes himself, by his own act, the trustee of a fund or of the specific property in custodia legis, and in that character liable to account to the party entitled, whenever called upon. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36; and see Carter v. Los Angeles Nat. Bank, 116 Cal. 370; 48 Pac. 332. No equitable circumstances need be shown, to justify the suit brought by the judgment creditor against the garnishee. Carter v. Los Angeles Nat. Bank, 116 Cal. 370; 48 Pac. 332. To prevent the debt of a garnishee to his creditor becoming barred by the statute of limitations after attachment, where the creditor refuses to sue thereon, the garnisher may sue the garnishee upon his contingent liability, making the creditor of the garnishee a party to the suit, and thereby protect the interests of all parties. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. A judgment cannot be entered against a garnishee upon the return of the sheriff, without further proceedings, and without the appearance of the garnishee in the action, for the amount stated to be due, and a judgment entered in such manner is void upon its face. Broadway Ins. Co. v. Wolters, 128 Cal. 162; 60 Pac. 766. The judgment against a garnishee should be simply for the amount due: an order to pay the money into court is improper. Smith v. Brown, 5 Cal. 118; Brummagin v. Boucher, 6 Cal. 16. Proceedings supplementary to execution need not be invoked by the plaintiff in an attachment prior to the commencement of the action against the garnishee upon his statutory liability, where he does not seek the discovery of the property itself, or to enforce his lien upon it, but alleges that the garnishee has fraudulently disposed of the property and converted the proceeds to his own use. Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262; Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611; Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271; 37 Am. St. Rep. 50; 33 Pac. 857. When the debt is barred against a judgment debtor, who has been garnished, before the liability of the garnishee is sought to be enforced by the attaching creditor, the right of the latter to maintain an action against the garnishee is also barred. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. Having once invoked the stringent provisions of the attachment law, the plaintiff cannot resort to other remedies to the prejudice of the defendant, so long as he relies upon his attachment lien; but when the garnishee has disposed of the property and converted the proceeds to his own use, and the plaintiff neither seeks to enforce his attachment lien on the property nor asks to obtain its discovery to subject it to his debt, his means of enforcing the liability of the garnishee for the value of goods in his possession or under his control at the time of the attachment is by independent action. Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262; Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611; Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271; 37 Am. St. Rep. 50; 33 Pac. 857.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. The doctrine of garnishment, though regulated, in part, by statute, is a common-law proceeding; and in proceedings against a garnishee the parties may demand a jury trial. Cahoon v. Levy, 5 Cal. 294. The liability dates from the service on the garnishee. Johnson v. Carry, 2 Cal. 33.

2. Effect of garnishment. A garnishment served upon the owner, in a suit against the head contractor, after the commencement of the building and before notice served, prevails over the lien of a subcontractor. Cahoon v. Levy, 6 Cal. 295; 65 Am. Dec. 515. The lien of a subcontractor filed, and notice given to the owner of a building, within thirty days after the completion of the work, under the act of 1855, attaches from the time the work was commenced, and takes precedence over a garnishment served on the owner against the contractor, after the work was commenced, and before the filing and serving notice of lien. Tuttle v. Montford, 7 Cal. 358. Where A., who carried on a printing-office, and was indebted to the hands of the office, placed in the hands of B. a certain amount of money, with directions to B. to pay the hands, which B. neglected to do, and where there was no evidence that the hands agreed to look to B. for their money, or that A. was indebted to the hands in an amount equal or approximate to the sum in B.'s hands, and the money was subsequently attached in the hands of B., at the suit of C. against A., it was held that the money was liable to the attachment. Chandler v. Booth, 11 Cal. 342. The fact that the defendant in an action for the recovery of money has been garnished by a creditor of the plaintiff constitutes no defense, and cannot be set up in bar. The remedy of defendant in such case is by motion, based upon affidavit of the fact, for stay of proceedings until the action against the plaintiff or the attachment is disposed of. McKeon v. McDermott, 22 Cal. 667; 83 Am. Dec. 86; Pierson v. McCahill, 21 Cal. 122. Money deposited with the sheriff, by a defendant, to procure the release of an attachment is in the custody of the law; but when the parties, by agreement, take it out of the hands of the sheriff and loan it out to third parties, these parties are not the bailees of the sheriff, and the money ceases to be in the custody of the law, and can only be reached on proceedings supplementary to execution, in the same manner as other debts are reached. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 586. The defendant, previous to the suit of the plaintiff against the R. S. Mining Co., sued the company, and obtained judgment against it by default. The judgment was made to draw a certain rate of interest, without there being any prayer for such relief in the complaint, and was erroneous in certain other respects. On appeal, the judgment was modified in certain respects. There was no stay of proceedings in the court below, and before the decision on appeal the defendant had taken out an execution, and caused the mining claims of the R. S. Mining Co. to be sold. At the sale, the defendant bid the full sum for which his execution called, and became the purchaser. He paid the sheriff no money, except his fees on the execution, but gave him a receipt for a sum equal to the face of the execution, less the fees paid to the sheriff. The R. S. Mining Co. had ceased to work their mine prior to this sale. After the sale, a contract was made between the defendant and the company, by which the latter agreed to work the mine during the time allowed for redemption, and pay over the proceeds to the defendant, and the latter agreed to pay all the expenses of working, and to pay the company wages. Under this contract the defendant received from the mine, over and above expenses, the sum of seven thousand dollars in gold-dust. Plaintiff, as an attaching creditor of the R. S. Mining Co., brings suit against the defendant as garnishee. Held, that the case presented failed to make the defendant a debtor of the company within reach of plaintiff's attachment. Johnson v. Lamping, 34 Cal. 295.

§ 545. Citation to garnishee to appear before a court or judge. Any person owing debts to the defendant, or having in his possession, or under his control, any credits or other personal property belonging to the defendant, may be required to attend before the court or judge, or a referee appointed by the court or judge, and be examined on oath respecting the same. The defendant may also be required to attend for the purpose of giving information respecting his property, and may be examined on oath. The court or judge may, after such examination, order personal property, capable of manual delivery, to be delivered to the sheriff on such terms as may be just, having reference to any liens thereon or claims against the same, and a memorandum to be given of all other personal property, containing the amount and description thereof.

Compare, "Proceedings Supplementary to Execution." Post, §§ 714–721.

Legislation § 545. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 128, as amended by Stats. 1855, p. 197.

Examination of garnishee. Where a garnishee, in discharge of a rule, answers, on oath, that he was released by the plaintiff from his obligation to answer, and that the plaintiff had abandoned his examination, he should be discharged without further delay, unless his answer is controverted by the affidavit of the plaintiff. Ogden v. Mills, 3 Cal. 253. The provisions of this section were intended for the security of the plaintiff, and not to confer a privilege upon the garnishee, and the plaintiff may or may not, at his election, require the garnishee to appear and answer on oath, and his liability will not be affected by the failure of the plaintiff to take such step. Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262; Robinson v. Tevis, 36 Cal. 611. A garnishee will be discharged of his liability to answer, by laches of the plaintiff to proceed with the examination. Ogden v. Mills, 3 Cal. 253. A garnishee can only be required to answer as to his liability to the debtor defendant at the time of the service of the writ. Norris v. Burgoyne, 4 Cal. 409. Upon proceedings supplementary to execution, where there are other persons claiming liens upon money in the possession of the garnishee, the court cannot order the garnishee to pay money in his possession to the plaintiff, but is authorized only to make an order to the effect that the plaintiff may bring an action against the garnishee as provided by § 720, post, to which action other persons claiming liens upon the money by prior attachments might be made or become parties. Deering v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 109 Cal. 73; 41 Pac. 801.

Examination of defendant. A defendant, against whose property a writ of attachment has been issued, cannot be compelled to attend before the judge or a referee and submit to an examination as to the situation and condition of his property, nor can he be compelled to deliver up his property. Ex parte Rickleton, 51 Cal. 316.

Attachment of pledge. The interest of the pledgor can only be reached by serving a garnishment on the pledgee, and not by a seizure of the pledge: the law wisely provides that the pledgee shall not be deprived of his possession, unless it be by an order made after examination, and on such terms as may be just, having reference to any liens thereon or claims against the same; by this method the rights of all the parties may be protected, and it is the only method by which the interest of the pledgor can be subjected to the writ. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to preceding section. Where a garnishee answers on oath that he was released by the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff had abandoned his examination, he should be discharged by the court, unless his answer is controverted by the affidavit of the plaintiff. Ogden v. Mills, 3 Cal. 253. He can only be required to answer as to his liability, to the debtor, at the time of the service of the garnishment. Norris v. Burgoyne, 4 Cal. 409. He should be allowed to amend his answer, whenever it appears that he was mistaken or in error, and that either could not have been reasonably avoided. Smith v. Brown, 5 Cal. 118. Where B. was garnished in a suit against C., the day before he accepted an order drawn by A. in favor of C., but failed to inform C. thereof; and C., for a valuable consideration, sold the order, as indorsed, to D., an innocent purchaser. It was held, that B. was estopped from setting up against it any antecedent matter, and is liable to D. for the full amount thereof. Garwood v. Simpson, 8 Cal. 101. A plaintiff who has sued out an attachment, and given the necessary notice to a garnishee that the property in his hands is attached, and subsequently the garnishee fraudulently disposes of the property, may waive his lien on the property and bring suit for the value of the property against the garnishee. Roberts & Co. v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262.

Unless the answer of a garnishee discloses liens having priority, judgment must be rendered for the amount he admits is due. Cahoon v. Levy, 4 Cal. 244. Garnishment of bailor. Hardy v. Hunt, 11 Cal. 343; 70 Am. Dec. 787. An order requiring the garnishee to pay into court the amount for which judgment has been rendered against him, is improper. Smith v. Brown, 5 Cal. 118; Brummagim v. Boucher, 6 Cal. 16. The provisions of this section do not confer a privilege upon the garnishee. The plaintiff may or may not require the garnishee to appear and answer on oath, and his liability will not be affected by the failure of the plaintiff to take such a step. Roberts & Co. v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262. Where shares of stock in a corporation have been regularly transferred as security for a loan, the corporation is no longer in privity with the mortgagor, and the mortgagee is the only proper garnishee in a suit against the mortgagor, in order to attach his interest in the corporation. Edwards v. Beugnot, 7 Cal. 162. After the delivery and presentation of an order, a debt due by the drawee cannot be reached on attachment issued by the creditors of the drawer. Wheatley v. Strobe, 12 Cal. 92; 73 Am. Dec. 522. Plaintiff delivered to defendants gold-dust, to be forwarded to San Francisco, to be coined and returned. The dust belonged to five persons, partners in mining, of whom plaintiff and C. were two. While the dust was in the hands of the defendants, C. sold to plaintiff his interest in it, and gave a receipt evidencing the sale. Defendants after this received coin made of the dust, and a creditor of C. attached the coin by garnishing defendants. Defendants had no notice of the sale to plaintiff until the day after the attachment, when plaintiff demanded C.'s share of the coin. It was held, that plaintiff was entitled to the coin; that the dust in defendant's hands was in the constructive possession of all the five owners, C. having no exclusive interest in any part until it was converted into coin and divided among the owners; that C.'s right in the dust was a chose in action, which he could assign by order in favor of the purchaser or assignee, and after such order, neither C. nor his creditors could claim any right to the money, and that the statute of frauds has no application to a case like this. Walling v. Miller, 15 Cal. 38.

§ 546. Inventory, how made. Party refusing to give memorandum may be compelled to pay costs. The sheriff must make a full inventory of the property attached, and return the same with the writ. To enable him to make such return as to debts and credits attached, he must request, at the time of service, the party owing the debt or having the credit to give him a memorandum, stating the amount and description of each; and if such memorandum be refused, he must return the fact of refusal with the writ. The party refusing to give the memorandum may be required to pay the costs of any proceedings taken for the purpose of obtaining information respecting the amounts and description of such debt or credit.

Return of writ, generally. See post, § 559.

Legislation § 546. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 129, which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in each instance.

Debt and credit, distinguished. A "debt" is money owing by the garnishee to the defendant, which may be paid over to the sheriff; but a "credit" is something belonging to the defendant, of which the garnishee has possession and control, and which may be delivered up or transferred to the sheriff: a garnishment of "certain credits belonging to the defendant," which a corporation has in its possession or under its control, is not an attachment of a debt due from the corporation to the defendant. Gow v. Marshall, 90 Cal. 565; 27 Pac. 422.

§ 547. Perishable property, how sold. Accounts without suit to be collected. If any of the property attached be perishable, the sheriff must sell the same in the manner in which such property is sold on execution. The proceeds, and other property attached by him, must be retained by him to answer any judgment that may be recovered in the action, unless sooner subjected to execution upon another judgment recovered previous to the issuing of the attachment. Debts and credits attached may be collected by him, if the same can be done without suit. The sheriff's receipt is a sufficient discharge for the amount paid.

Legislation § 547. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 130, which had (1) the word "shall" instead of "must," before "sell the same," and before "be retained," and (2) the words "shall be" instead of "is," after "receipt."

Perishable property. The "perishable property" attached, that the sheriff may sell, under this section, without an order of the court, is such only as is subject to speedy and natural decay; but the sale of other property, which would materially depreciate in value from other causes than decay, cannot be made, except by order of the court, under § 548, post. Witherspoon v. Cross, 135 Cal. 96; 67 Pac. 18.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Sale of perishable property. Davis v. Ainsworth, 14 How. Pr. 346. Collection of debts. Mechanics' etc. Bank v. Dakin, 33 How. Pr. 316; 50 Barb. 587; Heye v. Bolles, 2 Daly, 231.

§ 548. Property attached may be sold as under execution, if the interests of the parties require. Whenever property has been taken by an officer under a writ of attachment, and it is made to appear satisfactorily to the court or a judge thereof that the interest of the parties to the action will be subserved by a sale thereof, the court or judge may order such property to be sold in the same manner as property is sold under an execution, and the proceeds to be deposited in the court to abide the judgment in the action. Such order can be made only upon notice to the adverse party or his attorney, in case such party has been personally served with a summons in the action.

Legislation § 548. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 654, as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 72, Kerr ed. p. 101, § 66, which had (1) the words "in pursuance of the provisions of said act" after "writ of attachment," (2) the words "shall be" instead of "is," before "made to appear," and (3) the words "or a county judge" after "judge thereof." When enacted in 1872, it read same as at present, except that it contained the words "or a county judge," as in the Practice Act.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 4.

Application of proceeds. The proceeds of property seized by an officer under attachment from two separate courts, and sold under an order of the court on which the junior attachment issued, should not all be deposited with the latter court, as thereby the lien of the prior attachment would be lost; and the officer will not be protected by the order of such court in making such deposit, since, having both attachments in his hands, he must know that that court could deal only with the surplus remaining after the satisfaction of the first demand. Weaver v. Wood, 49 Cal. 297.

Notice. The order of sale cannot be made, except upon notice to the adverse party. Witherspoon v. Cross, 135 Cal. 96, 67 Pac. 18.

§ 549. When property claimed by a third party, how tried. If any personal property attached be claimed by a third person as his property, the same rules shall prevail as to the contents and making of said claim, and as to the holding of said property, as in case of a claim after levy upon execution, as provided for in section six hundred and eighty-nine of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Sureties on indemnity. Post, § 1055.

Legislation § 549. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 131, which read: "If any personal property attached be claimed by a third person as his property, the sheriff may summon a jury of six men to try the validity of such claim; and such proceedings shall be had thereon, with the like effect, as in case of a claim after levy upon execution."

2. Amended by Stats. 1891, p. 20.

Claim of third person to property. Demand upon and notice to an officer are necessary, where the property is in the possession and apparent control of the defendant at the time of the seizure, before the claimant can maintain an action of claim and delivery. Taylor v. Seymour, 6 Cal. 512; Killey v. Scannell, 12 Cal. 73.

The attachment by a sheriff of goods in the possession of the attachment debtor, which he has no reason to suppose to be the property of another, is in pursuance of the authority of the writ of attachment, and does not constitute a conversion of the property attached; in order to render him liable, facts should be stated to show that upon notice of the true owner's claim, he refused to surrender the property. Fuller Desk Co. v. McDade, 113 Cal. 360; 45 Pac. 694. A demand for the return of property is not vitiated by an exception therein of property stated as that owned by a certain person, not a party to the action. Susskind v. Hall, 5 Cal. Unrep. 304; 44 Pac. 328. Where a third person has property of an attachment debtor in his possession, mingled with his own property, of a different kind and character, plainly and easily distinguishable from the other, which he refuses to point out, claiming ownership of all, the sheriff is not authorized to seize the property of such third person. Susskind v. Hall, 5 Cal. Unrep. 304; 44 Pac. 328; and see Daumiel v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 43; Wellington v. Sedgwick, 12 Cal. 469; Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483. The claimant may be required to describe the property, when testifying in an action brought by him against an officer for the recovery of the same. Brichman v. Ross, 67 Cal. 601; 8 Pac. 316. The right of the officer to notice and demand is not affected by the fact that he has obtained indemnity before seizing the goods: notice of the claim of another may materially affect the character of the indemnity required. Taylor v. Seymour, 6 Cal. 512. Where, prior to the amendment of this section and § 689, post, a sheriff seized the goods of a third party, in the custody of the owner or a person other than the defendant, he is a trespasser ab initio, and no previous demand is necessary to authorize a recovery for such trespass. Moore v. Murdock, 26 Cal. 514; Black v. Clasby, 97 Cal. 482; 32 Pac. 564; and see Ledley v. Hays, 1 Cal. 160; Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483; Boulware v. Craddock, 30 Cal. 190. When the taking of the property is tortious, no demand is necessary before beginning suit. Ham v. Henderson, 50 Cal. 367. The vendee of a third party, purchasing after levy, is entitled to make demand for the return of goods seized, and upon failure or refusal of the officer to yield up the possession, he can maintain an action for conversion: conversion by seizure on attachment does not deprive the owner of the title, nor render such subsequent transfer void. Howe v. Johnson, 117 Cal. 37; 48 Pac. 978. Proof of the service of the claim on the officer is admissible against him, in an action by a claimant for the wrongful seizure of property, though not pleaded; § 689, post, being for the protection of the officer, and thus a matter of defense. Paden v. Goldbaum, 4 Cal. Unrep. 767; 37 Pac. 759. In an action of claim and delivery, a simple allegation of the demand is sufficient, as against a general demurrer; if the form of the demand does not comply with the requirement of § 689, post, the defendant may set up such fact in his answer, or object to the admission of evidence of demand. Brenot v. Robinson, 108 Cal. 143; 41 Pac. 37.

Estoppel to claim ownership. The owner of property attached or levied upon as the property of another, is not conclusively estopped from showing title in himself because he has given an accountable receipt for its delivery to the officer, although the receipt admits that the property is attached or levied upon as the property of the debtor, if he makes known to the officer his claim at or before the time the receipt is given; but if he fails to make his claim known, and thus influences the conduct of the officer, he is estopped from afterwards asserting it, provided the facts and circumstances relating to his claim were then known to him; but such receipt will constitute prima facie evidence of ownership, and, unless overcome by proof on the part of the claimant, must be decisive against him; and to overcome this prima facie ownership in the debtor, the receiptor must prove that he claims the property, and that it was in fact his own. Bleven v. Freer, 10 Cal. 172; Dresbach v. Minnis, 45 Cal. 223. In an action of claim and delivery, brought by a purchaser against a sheriff who levied an attachment, the sheriff stands in the shoes of the attaching creditor, and is bound by the estoppel against such creditor, and cannot defend the action by justifying under the writ of attachment. Sullivan v. Johnson, 127 Cal. 230; 59 Pac. 583.

Indemnity to sheriff. It is the right and duty of the sheriff to take full indemnity from each attaching creditor, so that he may be secure in any event, as he cannot foresee whose levy will ultimately prevail. Davidson v. Dallas, 8 Cal. 227. Where the plaintiff, on demand of the officer, gave him not only an indemnity bond, but also a written agreement that he might retain for a reasonable time, as additional security against the claim of a third party, all the moneys that might come into his hands by reason of his attachment or any execution to be issued in the action, the reasonable time stipulated for must be construed as relating to the proceedings by such third party to recover the money attached, and the officer cannot be required, regardless of the proceedings by such third party, to pay the money into court or to apply it in satisfaction of the judgment subsequently obtained by the plaintiff in the attachment suit. Scherr v. Little, 60 Cal. 614. Where a sheriff has required indemnity bonds from two several attaching creditors upon his seizure and detention of property claimed by a third party, and he has been held liable in damages to such claimant as a trespasser, his recourse upon the several bonds must be determined by the following rules: 1. If the attachments are both ultimately sustained, and the whole proceeds of the property are absorbed by the debt of the prior attaching creditor, then he will be solely responsible to the sheriff for the entire liability incurred by him to the claimant; 2. If the levy of the prior attaching creditor is defeated, and that of the junior attaching creditor sustained, then the latter will be solely responsible for the entire amount; 3. If both attachments are sustained, and the property is sold for more than sufficient to pay the prior attaching creditor, then each of said creditors will be responsible in proportion to the amounts paid to each by the sheriff; 4. If both attachments are defeated by the defendant in the attachment suit, or if the suits of the sheriff against the indemnitors are commenced before the determination of the attachment suits, then the separate responsibility of the attaching creditors will be in proportion to the amounts of their respective attachments, unless the whole amount for which both judgments were levied exceeded the value of the property as settled in the suit against the sheriff, in which case the prior attaching creditor will be responsible to the amount of his attachment, and the subsequent attaching creditor for the remainder. Davidson v. Dallas, 8 Cal. 227; but see same case, 15 Cal. 75, where this decision is commented on and doubted.

Justification of officer under writ. To justify under the writ, the officer must show title to the goods in the defendant in the attachment suit at the time of the levy. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312. An officer, in order to justify the seizure, under a writ of attachment, of personal property found in the possession of a stranger to the suit, claiming title thereto, must show a judgment or prove the debt for which judgment is demanded; and to do so, the papers in the attachment suit are not sufficient. Brown v. Cline, 109 Cal. 156; 41 Pac. 862; Brichman v. Ross, 67 Cal. 601; 8 Pac. 316; and see Thornburgh v. Hand, 7 Cal. 554. The officer must prove the existence of the debt for which the attachment was issued, when the debt has not been established by a judgment against the debtor: when that is done, the judgment proves it (Sexey v. Adkinson, 34 Cal. 346; 91 Am. Dec. 698); and he must prove not only the attachment, but also the proceedings on which it was based, against the claim of a third person. Horn v. Corvarubias, 51 Cal. 524; Thornburgh v. Hand, 7 Cal. 554; and see Darville v. Mayhall, 128 Cal. 617; 61 Pac. 276; Aigeltinger v. Einstein, 143 Cal. 609; 101 Am. St. Rep. 131; 77 Pac. 669. A sheriff, justifying on the ground that the property seized had been fraudulently sold by the attachment defendant to the claimant, need not plead such fraudulent sale in his answer, in a suit brought by the claimant to recover the property: he may simply deny the plaintiff's title, and at the trial prove the facts showing that the sale was fraudulent and void. Mason v. Vestal, 88 Cal. 396; 22 Am. St. Rep. 310; 26 Pac. 213. An officer may defeat a claim by showing that the property had been fraudulently transferred to the claimant by the defendant in the attachment suit (Howe v. Johnson, 107 Cal. 67; 40 Pac. 42); and he may show, in justification, that the property had been sold by the attachment debtor to the claimant, in contemplation of insolvency and in fraud of his creditors, and that, subsequently to such seizure, the assignee in insolvency of such debtor had recovered possession of the property from the officer. Bolander v. Gentry, 36 Cal. 105; 95 Am. Dec. 162. The circumstance that the property was in the possession of the execution debtor at the date of the seizure amounts to nothing, except upon proof of fraud or commixture. Boulware v. Craddock, 30 Cal. 190. Where the sheriff wrongfully took possession of the goods, he cannot justify on the ground that the coroner had taken them from his possession before he removed them. Squires v. Payne, 6 Cal. 654. The seizure of the property of tenants in common, on an attachment against one of such tenants, is not a trespass against his cotenants: in attaching the interest of one tenant in common, the sheriff is justified in taking possession of the entire property for the purpose of subjecting to sale the undivided interest of the attachment debtor. Bernal v. Hovious, 17 Cal. 541; 79 Am. Dec. 147; Waldman v. Broder, 10 Cal. 378; Veach v. Adams, 51 Cal. 609. The proof of the writ and of the debt are merely prima facie evidence of the right of the officer to make the levy and take possession of the property from a third party, who is entitled to recover it upon proving it to be his. Brichman v. Ross, 67 Cal. 601; 8 Pac. 316. Whenever property is found in the possession of a stranger claiming title, the mere protection of the writ does not justify its seizure: the officer must go further, and prove that the attachment defendant was indebted to the attachment plaintiff; and if in the attachment suit judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff, that will establish the indebtedness of the defendant; if not, the officer must otherwise prove the indebtedness of the defendant, in order to justify his proceeding. Brichman v. Ross, 67 Cal. 601; 8 Pac. 316. The sale of personal property without change of possession is fraudulent as against the creditors of the seller, and such property may lawfully be attached in the latter's possession for his debt; the purchaser cannot recover the property from the officer. Richards v. Schroder, 10 Cal. 431; Joshua Hendy Machine Works v. Connolly, 76 Cal. 305; 18 Pac. 327. The sale of the stock and fixtures of a saloon, by the owner thereof, to a former bartender, for an actual consideration equal to the full value thereof, and not for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding his creditors, accompanied by the delivery of the exclusive possession thereof, conveys such title to the purchaser that he may demand the return of the property, which was seized immediately thereafter upon attachment. Howe v. Johnson, 117 Cal. 37; 48 Pac. 978. Live-stock seized as the property of the defendant, while in his possession, and which he formerly owned, may be claimed and recovered by a third person, to whom they had been sold and delivered by the defendant, and by whom they had been placed in the hands of the defendant as an agister. Henderson v. Hart, 122 Cal. 332; 54 Pac. 1110. The produce of a ranch conveyed by the defendant, but which remained in his possession after the conveyance, becomes the property of the grantee, without delivery, where the sale was not in fact fraudulent, and may be recovered by him, when seized on attachment against the grantor. Howe v. Johnson, 107 Cal. 67; 40 Pac. 42.

Joint trespassers jointly liable. Where a sheriff wrongfully seizes property in two attachment suits, and is notified immediately by owner, and demand made for redelivery, but sells the property after receiving bonds of indemnity from both the attaching creditors, and applies the proceeds of the sale, first to the judgment of the prior attachment, and the balance, in part, to the second, the sheriff and each of the attaching creditors are joint trespassers, and jointly liable to the owner for the damages sustained. Lewis v. Johns, 34 Cal. 629.

Attachable interest. The interest of a defendant in an attachment suit, as tenant in common, which depends upon the performance of conditions yet to be performed, is not an attachable interest. Tuohy v. Wingfield, 52 Cal. 319; Howell v. Foster, 65 Cal. 169; 3 Pac. 647. Crops grown by an adverse possessor cannot be seized on attachment, in a suit against the legal owner. Smith v. Cunningham, 67 Cal. 262; 7 Pac. 679. Where the plaintiff made a conditional sale and lease of personal property, upon the breach of which he was entitled to possession thereof, and the vendee, after the levy of an attachment against him, made default, the plaintiff, upon surrendering to the vendee all his unpaid obligations, is entitled to possession, upon demand made to the sheriff, and he has a cause of action against the sheriff for claim and delivery. Kellogg v. Burr, 126 Cal. 38; 58 Pac. 306; and see Rodgers v. Bachman, 109 Cal. 552; 42 Pac. 448. The seizure of property by a third person is wrongful and unlawful, and the owner may maintain an action against the sheriff for its recovery. Woodworth v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 164. An officer cannot protect himself for interfering with the property of a third person, by the plea that he attached and sold only the interest of the judgment debtor; and where the judgment debtor has no interest, no harm is done the owner, and trespass lies against the sheriff for any unlawful interference. Rankin v. Ekel, 64 Cal. 446; 1 Pac. 895. That an attaching creditor had reason to believe that the property was the property of his debtor, does not justify the sheriff in seizing such property, nor is it any defense to an action by the owner for a conversion. Angell v. Hopkins, 79 Cal. 181; 21 Pac. 729. Declarations of ownership of personal property, made by a defendant to his creditors while he is in possession thereof, do not affect the ownership thereof by a third party, nor subject such property to attachment in an action against such defendant. Green v. Burr, 131 Cal. 236; 63 Pac. 360.

Mortgaged property. Property covered by a chattel mortgage, duly executed and recorded, cannot be attached without payment of the mortgage debt, or a deposit of the amount with the county clerk or county treasurer, payable to the order of the mortgagee. Berson v. Nunan, 63 Cal. 550; Meyer v. Gorham, 11 Cal. 392; Irwin v. McDowell, 91 Cal. 119; 27 Pac. 601. A levy on mortgaged property, and the placing of a keeper in charge thereof, is a conversion by the sheriff, although the property is not moved or otherwise disturbed, and although the levy is released before any demand is made by the mortgagee. Rider v. Edgar, 54 Cal. 127; Irwin v. McDowell, 91 Cal. 119; 27 Pac. 601; and see Rankin v. Ekel, 64 Cal. 446; 1 Pac. 895.

Measure of damages. The measure of damages for the seizure of mortgaged personal property is the full amount of the mortgage debt, if the property is worth enough to pay it; and if not, then such amount only as it is worth, and also, in either case, a fair compensation for loss of time, and expenses properly incurred in pursuit of the property. Irwin v. McDowell, 91 Cal. 119; 27 Pac. 601; Sherman v. Finch, 71 Cal. 68; 11 Pac. 847. In estimating the value of the property seized, the jury may consider the actual value of the property in the market when it was seized by the officer, and what amount it would take, in the market, to replace the same. Cassin v. Marshall, 18 Cal. 689. The detriment proximately caused by the seizure of mortgaged property is, not the value of the property, but the amount of the mortgage debt; and this detriment the officer seizing the property assumes to make good. Wood v. Franks, 56 Cal. 217. In determining what was the value of the property at the time of the conversion, evidence is admissible as to the cost of the property, as a circumstance to aid in such determination. Angell v. Hopkins, 79 Cal. 181; 21 Pac. 729. The officer cannot show, as a measure of damages, that the property, when sold, brought full and fair auction prices, nor what the property sold for at the sheriff's sale, nor that he was instructed by the attaching creditor to employ a competent auctioneer to make the sale, and that he obeyed such instruction. Cassin v. Marshall, 18 Cal. 689.

Sheriff's jury. Prior to the amendment of § 689, post, in 1891, if the verdict of the sheriff's jury was in favor of the claimant, the sheriff might release the levy, unless the judgment creditor gave him sufficient indemnity; but the verdict of the sheriff's jury against the claimant did not protect the officer in retaining the attached property. Perkins v. Thornburgh, 10 Cal. 190; Sheldon v. Loomis, 28 Cal. 122.

Right of claimant of attached property to intervene. See note 18 Ann. Cas. 594.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Davidson v. Dallas, 8 Cal. 227; Bleven v. Freer, 10 Cal. 172; Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770.

§ 550. If plaintiff obtains judgment, how satisfied. If judgment be recovered by the plaintiff, the sheriff must satisfy the same out of the property attached by him which has not been delivered to the defendant, or a claimant as hereinbefore provided, or subjected to execution on another judgment recovered previous to the issuing of the attachment, if it be sufficient for that purpose:

1. By paying to the plaintiff the proceeds of all sales of perishable property sold by him, or of any debts or credits collected by him, or so much as shall be necessary to satisfy the judgment;

2. If any balance remain due, and an execution shall have been issued on the judgment, he must sell under the execution so much of the property, real or personal, as may be necessary to satisfy the balance, if enough for that purpose remain in his hands. Notices of the sales must be given, and the sales conducted as in other cases of sales on execution.

Disposition of proceeds. Neglect of sheriff to pay over moneys. Pol. Code, § 4162.

Preference. Claim for labor, wages, etc. Post, § 1206.

Sales on execution. Post, §§ 692–709.

Legislation § 550. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 132, which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in each case.

Satisfaction of judgment. Executions must be satisfied by the sheriff in the order of attachments, and when he does this, his ministerial duties are fulfilled, and he is protected against any attack by reason of irregularity in the issuance of a writ regular on its face; but irregularity in the proceedings leading up to the issuance of the writ do not excuse the officer in refusing to recognize the validity of a writ regular on its face, and in applying the attached property to the satisfaction of a judgment in a junior attachment suit (McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115); but an order of the bankruptcy court, restraining a sale, justifies the officer in refusing to execute the process. Alexander v. Wilson, 144 Cal. 5; 77 Pac. 706. An action may be maintained by an execution creditor for money collected by the sheriff on an execution. Harvey v. Foster, 64 Cal. 296; 30 Pac. 849. The levy of an execution, beyond giving notice of sale, is unnecessary, where the property is held under an attachment to satisfy the judgment. McFall v. Buckeye Grangers' etc. Ass'n, 122 Cal. 468; 68 Am. St. Rep. 47; 55 Pac. 253. The invalidity of prior attachment liens may be determined on a motion of the plaintiff for an order to compel the sheriff to pay over the proceeds of the sale of attached property; and if notice of the motion is not given by the plaintiff to the other attaching creditors, and the sheriff wishes the decision to be binding upon them, he should give them notice of the motion. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570. Corporate stock attached may be sold on execution, without first proceeding under § 545, ante, or §§ 714–721, post. West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315; 85 Am. St. Rep. 171; 65 Pac. 622. The code contains express directions to the sheriff as to the sale of attached property, and directions therefor are not required to be given in the judgment; nor is the lien of attachment lost by taking a simple money judgment, without embodying therein directions for the sale of the attached property. Low v. Henry, 9 Cal. 538; Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165; Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. The segregation of interests held in common cannot be made by the sheriff or his keepers with the consent of the tenants in common, but without the consent of the attaching creditor: the latter has the right to insist upon the sale of the undivided interest of the defendant in the common property. Veach v. Adams, 51 Cal. 609. The sheriff has no right to sell at private sale, nor to authorize any one else to do so. Sheehy v. Graves, 58 Cal. 449. One who purchases property under a judgment in an attachment suit may maintain an action to enjoin another, who subsequently attaches the same property in a suit against the same defendant, from proceeding to sell the property under his subsequent lien. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165. The title of the purchaser of shares of stock at an execution sale is not affected by the failure of the officer to show that he levied before selling. McFall v. Buckeye Grangers' etc. Ass'n, 122 Cal. 468; 68 Am. St. Rep. 47; 55 Pac. 253.

Prorating proceeds of attached property among creditors. See note Ann. Cas. 1913C, 285.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The term "judgment" means a final one. Wright v. Rowland, 4 Keyes, 165; 36 How. Pr. 248. The application of the attaching creditor to compel the sheriff to pay over the proceeds of property attached, there being conflicting claims between several attaching creditors, may be made by motion. If notice of the motion is not given by the party to the other attaching creditors, it is the duty of the sheriff to do so, if he wishes the decision to bind them. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570.

§ 551. When there remains a balance due, how collected. If, after selling all the property attached by him remaining in his hands, and applying the proceeds, together with the proceeds of any debts or credits collected by him, deducting his fees, to the payment of the judgment, any balance shall remain due, the sheriff must proceed to collect such balance, as upon an execution in other cases. Whenever the judgment shall have been paid, the sheriff, upon reasonable demand, must deliver over to the defendant the attached property remaining in his hands, and any proceeds of the property attached unapplied on the judgment.

Proceedings supplementary to execution. Post, §§ 714 et seq.

Legislation § 551. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 133, which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in each instance.

Deposit with clerk not payment. A deposit, by the defendant, of the amount of the judgment against him, with the clerk of the court, pending an appeal by the plaintiff, is not such a payment as entitles him to a release of the property held under the writ of attachment. Sagely v. Livermore, 45 Cal. 613.

Surplus moneys. After the satisfaction of the judgment of the attachment creditor, any surplus moneys that remain are subject to the rights of the judgment debtor or his assignee (Sexey v. Adkison, 40 Cal. 408); and they are liable to garnishment. Graham v. Endicott, 7 Cal. 144.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. When the attachment is satisfied, the property not disposed of, as well as surplus moneys, are subject to the rights of the debtor or his assignee. Sexey v. Adkison, 40 Cal. 408.

§ 552. When suits may be commenced on the undertaking. If the execution be returned unsatisfied, in whole or in part, the plaintiff may prosecute any undertaking given pursuant to section five hundred and forty or section five hundred and fifty-five, or he may proceed, as in other cases, upon the return of an execution.

Legislation § 552. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 134, which read as at present, except for the changes in the section numbers.

Jurisdiction. Where a judgment for costs, in an action brought in the superior court in which an attachment is issued, is rendered for less than three hundred dollars, and an appeal therefrom is taken to the supreme court, and the execution of the judgment stayed, a justice's court, and the superior court on appeal, have jurisdiction of an action to enforce the bond given to secure the payment of the costs in the attachment suit, although the appeal from the judgment therein is still pending and undetermined. Karry v. Superior Court, 162 Cal. 281; 128 Pac. 760.

Demand. The object of a demand is to enable a party to perform his contract or discharge his liability, according to the nature of it, without a suit at law. There is no stereotyped form or manner of demand: any language intended to constitute a demand, and which plainly informs the party of whom the demand is made that he is required to perform the duty or obligation to which the demand refers, is sufficient; but, like all allegations of fact, the demand should be pleaded with directness and certainty. Mullally v. Townsend, 119

Cal. 47; 50 Pac. 1066. A demand for the redelivery of property released by an undertaking given under §§ 554, 555, post, may be made by either the officer or the plaintiff in the attachment suit. Brownlee v. Riffenburg, 95 Cal. 447; 30 Pac. 587. A demand that the sureties fulfill the obligation as expressed in the undertaking is sufficient: the fact that such demand is coupled with a demand that the defendant pay the amount of judgment recovered in the attachment suit does not affect it, although the undertaking was not to pay the judgment recovered, where such judgment was less than the conceded value of the goods. Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47; 50 Pac. 1066. The return of a sheriff on an execution issued in an attachment suit, showing a demand upon the officers of the defendant corporation for the payment of the amount named in the execution, and that he was informed by the officers of the corporation that they had no property of the defendant in their possession, sufficiently shows that the defendant's property, previously seized under attachment, and released on bond, was not delivered to the sheriff pursuant to the provisions of the bond. Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 971. Where the judgment recovered was less than the value of the property attached, as fixed in the bond for release, and less than its admitted value at the time of the release, the payment of the amount of the judgment is the full measure of the obligation of the sureties, and a demand upon them for the amount of such judgment is sufficient, where there was a refusal of the defendant to redeliver the property. Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47; 50 Pac. 1066. Where the undertaking was, that, in case of default by the principal to redeliver the property to satisfy the judgment against him, the undertakers would, on demand, pay the value of the property released, demand, and refusal to pay the judgment and redeliver the property released, are not sufficient to fix the liability of the sureties: there must also be a demand for the payment of the value of the property. Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538; Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47; 50 Pac. 1066. Where the undertaking was, that the defendant would, on demand, pay a judgment, if obtained by the plaintiff, a complaint to recover on the undertaking is insufficient, which contains no averment of any demand, and no allegation showing the amount of the judgment to be unpaid. Kanouse v. Brand, 11 Cal. App. 669; 106 Pac. 120. Where the undertaking was, that the defendant would pay the amount of the judgment on demand, the sureties become immediately liable, without demand or notice, where there was a demand upon and refusal by the defendant (Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367; 24 Pac. 1072); and where the liability was, by the terms of the bond, joint and several, and the principal was not a party to the suit, demand upon the sureties alone is sufficient. Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47; 50 Pac. 1066. Demand need not be made upon an insolvent debtor for the return of the property, before an action can be maintained against the sureties on his bond to release the attached property. Rosenthal v. Perkins, 123 Cal. 240; 55 Pac. 804. The sheriff's return upon execution issued in attachment may show a sufficient demand. Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 971.

Actions on undertaking. This section makes the issuance and return of an execution a condition precedent to the right to commence an action upon an undertaking given pursuant to § 555, post. Brownlee v. Riffenburg, 95 Cal. 447; 30 Pac. 587; Rosenthal v. Perkins, 6 Cal. Unrep. 21; 53 Pac. 444. The direct collection from the sureties, of the judgment against the defendant, is not authorized. Holladay v. Hare, 69 Cal. 515; 11 Pac. 28. The plaintiff, being the real party in interest, may sue on a bond executed in the name of the sheriff (Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194); and he may institute and maintain his action against the sureties on the same day on which payment was demanded of and refused by the defendant. Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367; 24 Pac. 1072. Immediately upon demand on the defendant, and his failure to redeliver the property as required by the terms of the undertaking, the sureties become liable to pay the full value of the property attached. Metrovich v. Jovovich, 58 Cal. 341. Where the defendant, and one who has acquired a mortgage lien upon the property after its release upon the giving of the delivery bond, refuse to redeliver the property after judgment, except upon the payment of the amount of the mortgage lien, there is such a refusal as to fix the liability of the sureties on the undertaking: the plaintiff is not bound to accept the property burdened with a lien placed upon it after its release from attachment. Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47; 50 Pac. 1066. The plaintiff is not required to look to the undertaking alone: he may proceed by execution against the property of the defendant, and if the execution is returned unsatisfied, he may proceed upon the undertaking. Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277. The undertaking cannot be enforced, pending appeal, where a stay bond is given by the defendant. Ayres v. Burr, 132 Cal. 125; 64 Pac. 120.

Pleading, variance. Where the complaint, in an action upon the undertaking, alleges that demand was made upon the defendant "for the payment of said judgment, with interest thereon, and costs," and that defendant neglected and refused "to pay the balance due on said judgment, or any portion thereof," the allegation of demand and refusal is sufficient, in the absence of a special demurrer, where a portion of the judgment had already been paid. Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367; 24 Pac. 1072. The complaint in an action on an undertaking given to procure a release of attached property, must allege that the attachment was discharged. Palmer v. Melvin, 6 Cal. 652; Williamson v. Blattan, 9 Cal. 500; Jenner v. Stroh, 52 Cal. 504; and see Los Angeles County v. Babcock, 45 Cal. 252. Where, by the terms of the undertaking, a demand is necessary to fix the liability of the sureties, the complaint must contain the averment of such demand. Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538. The redelivery of the property by the sheriff to the defendant need not be alleged: it is sufficient to aver the order of the court discharging the attachment upon the giving of the undertaking. McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339; Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367; 24 Pac. 1072. Where a bond is given before the levy of attachment, for the purpose of preventing the attachment or the completion thereof, the complaint must allege that the sheriff did not complete the levy. Coburn v. Pearson, 57 Cal. 306. An allegation, that the judgment in the attachment suit was recovered, entered, and docketed, is sufficient, where the undertaking reads, "If the plaintiff shall recover judgment in said action, we will pay," etc. McCutcheon v. Weston, 65 Cal. 37; 2 Pac. 727. Where the undertaking recites that it was given to prevent the levy, and the complaint alleges that it was given to release the property attached, there is no material variance, if the complaint avers the issuance of the attachment, that under it the sheriff attached certain property, and that the defendant, being desirous of having the attached property released, executed the undertaking set forth in the complaint, which undertaking, after reciting the issuance of the writ and command thereof, states, "Now, therefore, we, in consideration of the premises, and to prevent the levy of said attachment," etc. Preston v. Hood, 64 Cal. 405; 1 Pac. 487; McCutcheon v. Weston, 65 Cal. 37; 2 Pac. 727.

Liability of sureties. Actual ownership of the property attached is no concern of the surety; he can meddle with such property, and remove it beyond the reach of the attaching creditor, only by undertaking that if the plaintiff shall recover judgment in the action, such attached and released property shall be restored to the attaching officer; whether it belongs to a third party, or for any other reason is not legally subject to the attachment, is a question to be litigated between the plaintiff and the adversary claimant, and in no way affects the surety's express covenant to restore; the fact that the property belongs to a defendant against whom no judgment was recovered is immaterial, if judgment was recovered against any of the defendants. McCormick v. National Surety Co., 134 Cal. 510; 66 Pac. 741. The sureties are not released by the subsequent discharge of the defendant in bankruptcy, where such proceedings are instituted more than four months after the levying of the attachment: in such case the defendant is not entitled to have the attachment lien discharged; if the proceedings in bankruptcy have not the effect, under the bankruptcy law, of discharging the attachment levied upon the property of the defendant if an undertaking had not been given, they do not have the effect of releasing the undertaking given. Harding v. Minear, 54 Cal. 502. Where, at the commencement of a proceeding in insolvency, there is no attachment in force upon which it can operate, an attachment against the insolvent debtor having been previously dissolved by a bond given for that purpose, the liability of the sureties on such bond is not released or affected by the insolvency proceeding. Rosenthal v. Perkins, 123 Cal. 240; 55 Pac. 804. In an action upon an undertaking, no collateral inquiry can be made as to the fact of levy, or of the property being subject to it: the condition of the bond is to answer the judgment, and if it is regular, it is not at all important whether the property is leviable or not, for by the contract the parties have bound themselves to pay in any event, independently of all considerations of this sort. McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339; Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538. Irregularities in the affidavit and undertaking, or in the proceedings to procure the attachment, if waived in the attachment suit, cannot be taken advantage of by the sureties in a collateral proceeding on the undertaking given to secure the release of the attachment. Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 971. An undertaking required by a sheriff for the release of exempt property, the exemption having been claimed, is void for want of consideration. Servanti v. Lusk, 43 Cal. 238. Denials on information and belief, made by the sureties in an action upon their undertaking, in relation to matters which could easily be ascertained by reference to the record of the court in the attachment proceedings, and concerning which the affirmative allegations of the answer show that the defendant had knowledge or information, are not permissible, and do not raise an issue on matters thus attempted to be denied. Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47; 50 Pac. 1066. Where the principals in a bond, given to a sheriff to release goods from attachment, tender to the plaintiff the full amount of his debt and costs, and the plaintiff refuses to receive the tender, the sureties are discharged, if the judgment debtor thereafter becomes insolvent. Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194; Hayes v. Josephi, 26 Cal. 535.

Effect of recitals in bond. Whatever an obligor recites in a bond to be true, may be taken as true against him, and need not be averred in the complaint on such bond, nor proved at the trial. Smith v. Fargo, 57 Cal. 157; McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339; Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538. Where the bond sued upon, as set out in the complaint, recites that the property of the defendant had been seized by the sheriff under the writ of attachment, and that the bond was given for the purpose of procuring the release of such property from the levy, it is unnecessary to make, in the complaint, a distinct allegation of the fact of the levy. Smith v. Fargo, 57 Cal. 157. Where the goods were in fact released as a consequence of the bond being given, and the undertaking recited that it was given pursuant to an order of the court requiring it to be given, and the officer accepted the bond and surrendered the property, it must be presumed that an order discharging the attachment was made pursuant to §§ 554, 555, post, and that the officer regularly performed his duty in releasing the goods. Rosenthal v. Perkins, 123 Cal. 240; 55 Pac. 804. A mistake in the recital, as to the amount for which the attachment issued, may be explained and corrected by parol. Palmer v. Vance, 13 Cal. 553.

Where return of execution unsatisfied is necessary to action on bond. The return of an execution unsatisfied, in whole or in part, must be made, before the plaintiff can maintain an action upon a statutory bond given under §§ 554, 555, post. Brownlee v. Riffenburg, 95 Cal. 447; 30 Pac. 587. An action on a common-law bond, given in lieu of the undertaking prescribed by § 555, post, where the condition is, that the "defendant will, on demand, pay to the plaintiff whatever judgment may be recovered in said action," may be maintained on the refusal of defendant to pay such judgment on demand, without return of the execution unsatisfied in whole or in part. Smith v. Fargo, 57 Cal. 157. The issuance and return of the execution unsatisfied is not necessary prior to an action on a common-law bond given in lieu of the undertaking provided for by § 540, ante, where the undertaking expressed is, not that the attachment debtor will pay the judgment, but a distinct and positive agreement that the sureties will themselves pay the amount on demand. Palmer v. Vance, 13 Cal. 553. The return of the execution unsatisfied, before commencing action upon the undertaking given to secure the release of the attachment, is not necessary, where the defendant in the attachment suit commenced insolvency proceedings under the act of 1880, after the release of the attachment. Rosenthal v. Perkins, 123 Cal. 240; 55 Pac. 804.

Measure of damages. In an action on the undertaking, where a portion of the attached property was levied upon and sold under execution upon the judgment, the measure of damages is the full value of the property attached, less the amount of the proceeds of the sale (Metrovich v. Jovovich, 58 Cal. 341); and in an action on the undertaking given for the release of the attached property, the measure of damages is the value of the property released, not exceeding the amount recovered in the attachment suit, with interest thereon until the date of judgment in the action on the bond. Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 971. An agreement to pay the value of property released cannot be extended to include the liability of the defendant in the attachment suit, where the sureties do not expressly undertake to pay the amount of the judgment recovered. Curtin v. Harvey, 120 Cal. 620; 52 Pac. 1077. The rights and remedies of the parties to a contract are to be determined according to the terms of the contract; for the law binds a party to a contract, only according to its terms; and the liability of sureties is not to be extended beyond the terms of their contract; to the extent, and in the manner, and under the circumstances pointed out in their obligation, they are bound, but no further; and they are entitled to stand on its precise terms. Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538; Curtin v. Harvey, 120 Cal. 620; 52 Pac. 1077. The sureties on an undertaking given for the release of an attachment may bind themselves and become liable for such other sums, in addition to the amount sued for, as may thereafter become due from the defendant to the plaintiff under the contract upon which the action is based; and such liability also includes amounts for which the defendant may become liable to the plaintiff under said contract, on their failure to receive and pay for goods prepared and offered for delivery, which the defendant improperly refused to accept. Crocker v. Field's Biscuit etc. Co., 93 Cal. 532; 29 Pac. 225.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The undertaking is not a substitution of security. Its only operation was to release the property from the custody of the sheriff, pending the suit. Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277.

§ 553. If defendant recovers judgment, what the sheriff is to deliver. If the defendant recovers judgment against the plaintiff, and no appeal is perfected and undertaking executed and filed as provided in section nine hundred and forty-six of this code, any undertaking received in the action, all the proceeds of sales and money collected by the sheriff, and all the property attached remaining in the sheriff's hands, must be delivered to the defendant or his agent, the order of attachment be discharged, and the property released therefrom.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 140; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 708; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in adding the words 'and no appeal is perfected and undertaking executed and filed as provided in § 937,' it being intended by this amendment and a proposed amendment to § 937 that an attachment should be left in force pending an appeal, though defendant had recovered judgment, if the plaintiff gave the required undertaking. The legislature failed, however, to pass the proposed amendment to § 937, so the above-mentioned amendment has no present effect."

4. Amended by Stats. 1909, c. 631, changing, in the addition of 1907, the words "section nine hundred and thirty-seven" to "section nine hundred and forty-six of this code."

Effect of appeal. The attachment remains in force, on appeal from a judgment in favor of the defendant, where the undertaking required by § 946, post, is given. Primm v. Superior Court, 3 Cal. App. 208; 84 Pac. 786. After judgment in favor of the defendant in a justice's court, the attachment is discharged; and as the attachment is merely a creation of the statute, its existence and operation continue no longer than the statute provides; and there being no provision prior to the amendments of 1907 and 1909 for the giving of a stay bond on appeal, the sheriff was not required to retain custody of property, pending an appeal. Loveland v. Alvord Consol. Quartz Mining Co., 76 Cal. 562; 18 Pac. 682.

Action on undertaking. The omission to allege a breach of the contract, or that a demand was made, in an action against the sureties in an undertaking, renders the complaint fatally defective. Morgan v. Menzies, 60 Cal. 341.

Discharge of attachment. The fact that the time for appeal from a judgment in the attachment suit, in favor of the defendant, has not expired, and that the judgment is not final in that regard, does not limit its effect upon the attachment (Aigeltinger v. Whelan, 133 Cal. 110; 65 Pac. 125; Witherspoon v. Cross, 135 Cal. 96; 67 Pac. 18); and after such judgment the defendant can make a valid transfer of the property. Loveland v. Alvord Consol. Quartz Mining Co., 76 Cal. 562; 18 Pac. 682. A nonsuit discharges the attachment, and the obligation of the undertaking under § 555, post, notwithstanding the reversal of the judgment on appeal, and a subsequent new trial, in which judgment is given for the plaintiff: after such nonsuit, the undertaking given to procure the attachment must be delivered to the defendant. Hamilton v. Bell, 123 Cal. 93; 55 Pac. 758. The lien of the attachment ceases on dismissal of suit, and a subsequent reinstatement of the case by the court cannot restore the attachment so as to affect the right of a third party. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312.

§ 554. Proceedings to release attachments. Whenever the defendant has appeared in the action, he may, upon reasonable notice to the plaintiff, apply to the court in which the action is pending, or to the judge thereof, for an order to discharge the attachment, wholly or in part; and upon the execution of the undertaking mentioned in the next section an order may be made, releasing from the operation of the attachment any or all of the property attached; and all of the property so released, and all of the proceeds of the sales thereof, must be delivered to the defendant, upon the justification of the sureties on the undertaking, if required by the plaintiff. Such justification must take place within five days after notice of the filing of such undertaking.

Appearance. Post, § 1014.

Legislation § 554. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 136, as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 305, which had (1) the words "shall have" instead of "has," before "appeared in," (2) the words "or to a county judge" after "judge thereof," (3) the words "such order may be granted" instead of "an order may be made," and (4) did not have the word "must" before "be delivered." When enacted in 1872, § 554 read as at present, except for the addition made in 1907, and that it contained the words "or to a county judge."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 4, omitting the words "or to a county judge."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 141; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 709, adding the last sentence; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment fixes the time within which the sureties must justify, if required by the plaintiff."

Appearance. A notice of motion to dissolve an attachment is not an appearance; but the plaintiff may require an appearance as a condition of moving to dissolve the attachment. Glidden v. Packard, 28 Cal. 649.

Application for release of attachment. After the sheriff's return to a writ of attachment, a defendant, who seeks the release of attached property, must apply to the court for an order of release. Kanouse v. Brand, 11 Cal. App. 669; 106 Pac. 120; San Francisco Sulphur Co. v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 11 Cal. App. 695; 106 Pac. 111.

Undertaking. The condition of a bond given to release attached property requires the redelivery thereof to the sheriff, if the plaintiff recovers any judgment in the action. McCormick v. National Surety Co., 134 Cal. 510; 66 Pac. 741. The bond for the release of an attachment does not operate as a stay bond. Bailey v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 5 Cal. App. 740; 91 Pac. 416.

Giving of statutory bond to dissolve attachment as bar to motion to quash. See note 12 Ann. Cas. 170.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 555 of this code.

§ 555. Attachment, in what cases it may be released and upon what terms. Before making such order, the court or judge must require an undertaking on behalf of the defendant, by at least two sureties, residents and freeholders, or householders, in the state, to the effect that in case the plaintiff recovers judgment in the action, defendant will, on demand, redeliver the attached property so released to the proper officer, to be applied to the payment of the judgment, or, in default thereof, that the defendant and sureties will, on demand, pay to the plaintiff the full value of the property released, not exceeding the amount of such judgment. The court or judge making such order may fix the sum for which the undertaking must be executed, and if necessary in fixing such sum to know the value of the property released, the same may be appraised by one or more disinterested persons, to be appointed for that purpose. The sureties may be required to justify before the court or judge, and the property attached cannot be released from the attachment without their justification, if the same is required.

Undertaking to prevent attachment. Ante, § 540.

Court commissioners, power of, to take bonds, examine sureties, etc. Ante, § 259, subd. 3.

Sureties.

1. Qualifications of. Ante, § 494; post, § 1057.
2. Justification. Ante, § 259, subd. 3, § 494; post, § 948.

Legislation § 555. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 137, as amended by Stats. 1863–64, p. 44, which had (1) in the first line, (a) the word "granting" instead of "making," and (b) the word "shall" instead of "must"; (2) the word "such" instead of "the," after "redeliver"; (3) the words "granting such release" instead of "making such order"; (4) the word "shall" instead of "must," before "be executed"; (5) the words "shall not" instead of "cannot," before "be released."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 308, (1) in the first line, omitting "the" before "making," (2) changing "county" to "state," (3) changing "and that" to "or," before "in default thereof," (4) adding the word "that" after "default thereof," and (5) changing the word "three" to "one or more."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 141; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 709, (1) changing the word "recover" to "recovers," before "judgment in the action," (2) adding the words "not exceeding the amount of such judgment," after "property released," (3) changing the word "be" to "is," before "required," at end of section.

Necessity for order of court. No order of court is essential to the effectiveness of a bond voluntarily given to prevent the levy of an attachment, or to procure a release thereof (Bailey v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 5 Cal. App. 740; 91 Pac. 416); but after the return of a writ of attachment, a release of the attached property must be by order of court. Kanouse v. Brand, 11 Cal. App. 669; 106 Pac. 120; San Francisco Sulphur Co. v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 11 Cal. App. 695; 106 Pac. 111.

The undertaking. The lien is released by the execution of the undertaking. Hunt v. Robinson, 11 Cal. 262; Rosenthal v. Perkins, 123 Cal. 240; 55 Pac. 804. The bond provided for by this section is the bond to be given by the defendant in the attachment suit, and not by the claimant of the property. Hunt v. Robinson, 11 Cal. 263. It is to be given as a substitute for the attachment lien, and to secure a redelivery of the attached property, or payment of its value, to be applied to the payment of any judgment recoverable in the case. Harding v. Minear, 54 Cal. 502; Metrovich v. Jovovich, 58 Cal. 341; Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47; 50 Pac. 1066; Risdon Iron etc. Works v. Citizens' Traction Co., 122 Cal. 94; 68 Am. St. Rep. 25; 54 Pac. 529. The effect of the undertaking is merely to release the property from the custody of the sheriff, pending the suit: it is not an actual substitution of security. Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277. The fact that the undertaking given contains conditions more onerous than the statutory undertaking, does not render it void; and being given for a purpose which was accomplished when the order of court was obtained, it is binding as a common-law obligation. Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367; 24 Pac. 1072.

Liability of sureties. Where the undertaking expresses the consideration to be the release of the property from the attachment, the liability of the sureties attaches when the court makes the order releasing the property, notwithstanding the sheriff refuses to comply with such order of release, and refuses to redeliver the property to the defendant. Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367; 24 Pac. 1072. Where the execution is returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, the plaintiff may prosecute the undertaking given pursuant to this section. Bailey v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 5 Cal. App. 740; 91 Pac. 416. A judgment against any one of several defendants is sufficient to authorize the recovery from the sureties, upon the refusal to redeliver the property, where the undertaking is conditioned that the "plaintiff recover judgment in said action." McCormick v. National Surety Co., 134 Cal. 510; 66 Pac. 741. Where a sheriff accepts an undertaking to prevent an attachment, under § 540, ante, in which the sureties agree to pay whatever judgment the plaintiff may obtain, and the debt is established by judgment, an action on the undertaking is not affected by the debtor's adjudication in bankruptcy within four months after the attachment (San Francisco Sulphur Co. v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 11 Cal. App. 695; 106 Pac. 111); but the dissolution of an attachment by an insolvency proceeding discharges the obligation of the sureties in a redelivery bond given under this section. Rosenthal v. Perkins, 6 Cal. Unrep. 21; 53 Pac. 444.

Redelivery. Where the condition of the undertaking is, that the attached property shall be returned, such condition is not complied with by an offer to return, or by a return of a portion of the property. Metrovich v. Jovovich, 58 Cal. 341.

Plaintiff's possession in replevin. The possession obtained by the plaintiff in replevin is only temporary: it does not divest the title nor discharge the lien. Hunt v. Robinson, 11 Cal. 262.

Right of obligor in bond for release of attached property to attack attachment. See note 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 401.

Amendment of claim or pleading as discharge of sureties on bonds given to dissolve attachments. See note 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 484.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Effect of undertaking. It is not a substitution of security. Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277. A bond given voluntarily is valid at common law. Palmer v. Vance, 13 Cal. 553. A substantial compliance with this section, in respect to the undertaking, is sufficient. Heynemann v. Eder, 17 Cal. 433; Palmer v. Vance, 13 Cal. 553. If the sheriff takes a sufficient statutory undertaking, he has no further responsibility. Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194.

2. Action on the undertaking. In an action on the undertaking, the complaint should allege that the property attached was released upon the delivery of the undertaking. Williamson v. Blatton, 9 Cal. 500. Whether each obligor is liable to the sheriff for the whole amount of any judgment against him, leaving the question of contribution to be settled between them, was questioned in White v. Fratt, 13 Cal. 521. Where defendant applied to the court for a discharge of the attachment, and an undertaking was executed by D. and R., reciting the fact of the attachment, and that "in consideration of the premises, and in consideration of the release from attachment of the property attached as above mentioned," they undertake to pay whatever judgment plaintiff may recover, etc., the court made an order discharging the writ and releasing the property. In an action against the sureties on the undertaking, it was held, that the complaint need not aver that the property was actually released and delivered to the defendant; that as the consideration for the undertaking was the release of the property, and as the complaint avers such release, in consequence and in consideration of the undertaking, by order of the court, which is set out, the actual release and redelivery of the property to defendant is immaterial, the plaintiff having no claim on it after the undertaking was given and the order of release made. McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339. An undertaking, given to a sheriff to procure a release of property attached, is for the benefit of the plaintiff, who may sue on it. Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194. If the defendant obtains an order for the release of property upon an undertaking executed by sureties, conditioned to pay the plaintiff any judgment he may recover in the action, and the property is thereupon released: whenever the liability of the sureties is fixed, by the rendition of a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, the sureties have a right to tender the plaintiff the full amount of the judgment, and if he refuses to receive the same, the sureties are discharged from their obligation on the undertaking. Hayes v. Josephi, 26 Cal. 540; Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194. Tender, by sureties, of the full amount of judgment recovered, is equivalent to payment or release by said plaintiff. Norwood v. Kenfield, 34 Cal. 329; Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194.

§ 556. When a motion to discharge attachment may be made, and upon what grounds. The defendant may also at any time, either before or after the release of the attached property, or before any attachment shall have been actually levied, apply, on motion, upon reasonable notice to the plaintiff, to the court in which the action is brought, or to a judge thereof, that the writ of attachment be discharged on the ground that the same was improperly or irregularly issued.

Legislation § 556. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (re-enactment of Practice Act, § 138, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 301), and then read: "The defendant may, also, any time before the time for answering expires, apply, on motion, upon reasonable notice to the plaintiff, to the court in which the action is brought, or to the judge thereof, or to a county judge, that the attachment be discharged on the ground that the writ was improperly or irregularly issued."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 309, to read as at present, except that (1) it had the word "the" instead of "a" before "judge thereof," and (2) had the words "or to a county judge" after these words.

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 4.

Who may move for discharge. A defendant, who, more than four months after levy of attachment, secures a certificate of discharge in bankruptcy, does not thereby become entitled to file a supplemental answer and procure a discharge of the attachment: the only effect of such discharge is to limit the judgment recoverable in the attachment suit, and the plaintiff is entitled to judgment for the enforcement of his attachment lien, and if such attachment has been discharged, he is entitled to recover upon the undertaking, upon the giving of a statutory bond. Harding v. Minear, 54 Cal. 502. Persons not named as defendants, but claiming to be such, may move to discharge the writ, if, in their affidavits, they state that they are defendants in the action, misnamed in the plaintiff's complaint and affidavit, and the plaintiff does not deny such affidavits. Sparks v. Bell, 137 Cal. 415; 70 Pac. 281. Judgment creditors of the defendants may intervene to set aside the attachment, because void as to them. Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378; 79 Am. Dec. 184. Where a subsequent attaching creditor intervenes to set aside a prior attachment on the ground of fraud, and the court finds that only a portion of the debt on which the prior attachment issued was fraudulent, the lien of the prior attachment should be postponed only as to the fraudulent portion (Coghill v. Marks, 29 Cal. 677); and an order, on motion of an intervener, entirely setting aside the plaintiff's attachment, will be modified on appeal, so as merely to postpone the plaintiff's lien to that of the intervener. Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157. An assignee in insolvency may move for a release of the attached property, although not a party to the record. Baum v. Raphael, 57 Cal. 361. A stranger cannot interfere upon the ground of irregularity of the proceedings: if the proceedings of the prior attaching creditor are not void, but voidable, a subsequent attaching creditor cannot object; only the defendant can object. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570.

Notice of motion. The notice of motion should specify the grounds thereof, and wherein it will be urged that the writ was improperly issued. Freeborn v. Glazer, 10 Cal. 337; Loucks v. Edmondson, 18 Cal. 203.

Motion for discharge. The only remedy for an improper attachment is a motion to set it aside, where no jurisdictional defect is apparent on the face of the proceeding. Martinovich v. Marsicano, 150 Cal. 597; 119 Am. St. Rep. 254; 89 Pac. 333. The motion to discharge the writ may be made before the attachment is levied. Sparks v. Bell, 137 Cal. 415; 70 Pac. 281. The motion to dissolve cannot be turned into a demurrer to the complaint: thus, if the complaint sets forth a cause of action upon a contract, express or implied, it cannot be attacked for ambiguity or uncertainty, nor on the ground that it does not state a cause of action upon the contract. Hale Bros. v. Milliken, 142 Cal. 134; 75 Pac. 653.

Evidence on hearing of motion. The complaint and the affidavit of attachment constitute the record, which may be considered without proof upon a motion to dissolve the attachment; but when the motion is made upon matters appearing outside of the complaint and affidavit, the moving party must introduce evidence in proof of these facts: an oral admission of matter of evidence, made upon a previous motion, which was denied, and made only for the purpose of that motion, cannot dispense with evidence of the facts upon a subsequent motion to vacate the order denying the motion and to dissolve the attachment. Goldman v. Floter, 142 Cal. 388; 76 Pac. 58. The complaint, answer, and decree in liquidation proceedings against an insolvent bank may be read upon the motion to dissolve an attachment levied upon the funds of the bank, notwithstanding the plaintiff in the attachment proceedings is not a party in the liquidation proceedings. Crane v. Pacific Bank, 106 Cal. 64; 27 L. R. A. 562; 39 Pac. 215.

"Improper" and "irregular" writ, defined. An attachment is properly issued when issued in a case provided for by § 537, ante, and it is regularly issued when the requirements of §§ 538, 539, ante, are complied with; irregularities warranting a discharge of the writ usually appear upon the face of the affidavit or undertaking, or, where properly but prematurely issued, by a comparison with the summons and complaint. Where the attachment is improperly issued, that is to say, in a case not provided for by statute, the evidence must usually be sought dehors the papers upon which it is evidently founded. Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9; 33 Pac. 741; Sparks v. Bell, 137 Cal. 415; 70 Pac. 281.

Waiver of irregularities. Any irregularities in obtaining the attachment are waived by the defendant, where he appears and answers without taking advantage of them, by motion or otherwise, in the course of the proceedings: the process is merely auxiliary, and the judgment cures all irregularities. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165; Harvey v. Foster, 64 Cal. 296; 30 Pac. 849; Scrivener v. Dietz, 68 Cal. 1; 8 Pac. 609; Schwartz v. Cowell, 71 Cal. 306; 12 Pac. 252. The omission of the word "company," in the defendant's corporate name, in the original undertaking and affidavit, does not affect the attachment lien, and is waived by the appearance and answer of the corporation in its true name, without objection. Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 971. Where property is attached, the right to apply for a discharge of the writ, under this section, is not waived because a release of the property was previously obtained by giving the undertaking required by §§ 554, 555, ante. Winters v. Pearson, 72 Cal. 553; 14 Pac. 304.

Amendment of proceedings. Prior to the amendment of § 558, post, in 1909, amendments of defects in the affidavit or proceedings were not allowed. Winters v. Pearson, 72 Cal. 553; 14 Pac. 304. Where the complaint is defective merely, and can be made good by amendment, the plaintiff should be allowed to amend before the decision of the motion to dissolve; but if incurable, the attachment must be dissolved. Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161; Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 971. The complaint may be amended, pending a motion to discharge the attachment, so as to state an unambiguous cause of action upon the contract, where the motion is made upon the ground that the complaint does not show that the plaintiff's action is upon the contract. Hale Bros. v. Milliken, 142 Cal. 134; 75 Pac. 653. A defective complaint may be amended without affecting the attachment lien; and an objection that the amendment states a different cause of action from that declared on in the original complaint cannot be urged for the first time in a collateral suit on a bond given for the release of the attachment. Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556; 21 Pac. 971. If, in the original complaint, it appears that the defendant had pledged a certificate of stock to secure the plaintiff, and the affidavit states that no security was given, an amendment of the complaint, so as to state that the security had become valueless by reason of its sale and the application of the proceeds thereof on account of the debt, does not remedy nor cure the defects of an affidavit which does not state these facts, and the attachment must be discharged. Fisk v. French, 114 Cal. 400; 46 Pac. 161.

When writ should be discharged. The defendant can have the attachment set aside, where it is improperly issued. Laughlin v. Thompson, 76 Cal. 287; 18 Pac. 330. The writ must be discharged, if, upon motion made before or after the levy, it appears that it was improperly or irregularly issued. Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320; Pajaro Valley Bank v. Scurich, 7 Cal. App. 732; 95 Pac. 911; Fairbanks v. Getchell, 13 Cal. App. 458; 110 Pac. 331. A writ improperly or irregularly issued as to one or more of several defendants, must be discharged as to such defendant or defendants, where such fact appears upon his or their motion therefor. Sparks v. Bell, 137 Cal. 415; 70 Pac. 281. The attachment should be discharged, where the writ was issued in an action for damages resulting from negligence; and where the court refuses, on motion, to do so, it may be discharged on appeal, even if final judgment is affirmed (Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17); and the attachment should also be discharged, where a partnership exists between the parties plaintiff and defendant as to the subject-matter of the suit (Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203); and also where the affidavit contains a false statement (Fish v. French, 114 Cal. 400; 46 Pac. 161), and where there is a defect in the affidavit (Winters v. Pearson, 72 Cal. 553; 14 Pac. 304), and where the affidavit is in the alternative, and insufficient (Hawley v. Delmas, 4 Cal. 195; Wilke v. Cohn, 54 Cal. 212; Harvey v. Foster, 64 Cal. 296; 30 Pac. 849; Winter v. Pearson, 72 Cal. 553; 14 Pac. 304); and also for failure of the affidavit to state the amount of the indebtedness (Harvey v. Foster, 64 Cal. 296; 30 Pac. 849), or to state that the payment of the contract sued on was not secured by any mortgage or lien upon real or personal property, or, if so secured, that the security has become valueless (Scrivener v. Dietz, 68 Cal. 1; 8 Pac. 609); and also where the writ was issued on a contract not payable in this state (Beltaire v. Rosenberg, 129 Cal. 164; 61 Pac. 916); and also where a vendor's lien existed at the time of the issue of the writ (Gessner v. Palmateer, 89 Cal. 89; 13 L. R. A. 187; 24 Pac. 608), and where the property was exempt from execution (Holmes v. Marshall, 145 Cal. 777; 104 Am. St. Rep. 86; 2 Ann. Cas. 88; 69 L. R. A. 67; 79 Pac. 534); and also where the writ was issued for an amount greater than that stated in the affidavit. Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 137 Cal. 646; 70 Pac. 732; Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93; 33 Am. St. Rep. 163; 31 Pac. 846. On a motion to dissolve an attachment issued upon the plaintiff's affidavit, stating the general conclusion that the mortgage given to secure the indebtedness has become valueless, if the defendant's affidavit specifically states facts which show that the mortgage still remains in full force and effect, and that there has been no depreciation in value of the security of the mortgage, or of the mortgaged premises, up to the time of the issuance of the attachment, which facts are not controverted by the plaintiff, there is no conflict of evidence on the motion, and the order of the trial court denying the motion will be reversed on appeal. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 174; 24 Pac. 113. Where the affidavit to procure the attachment states that the sum claimed "has not been secured by any mortgage or lien upon real or personal property," and defendant's affidavit on motion to discharge the attachment states that the plaintiff "purchased the note sued upon in this action with full knowledge that the same was given as collateral to and identical with the debt secured by the said contract and lien in said real estate," and no counter-affidavit is filed by the plaintiff, the attachment should be discharged. Gessner v. Palmateer, 89 Cal. 89; 13 L. R. A. 187; 24 Pac. 608; 26 Pac. 789. Where the motion for the discharge of the attachment is made on the ground that the plaintiff has a vendor's lien as security for the debt, and the vendee, prior to the attachment, conveyed to a third party, the attachment should not be dissolved: the question whether the person purchasing from the vendee took in good faith, without notice, for a valuable consideration, cannot be determined on ex parte affidavits in an attachment suit, but must be tried in a direct proceeding against such purchaser, and, until it is determined, it cannot be known with certainty whether or not the plaintiff has an available lien. Porter v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 199. Variance in the name of the defendant is not fatal to the writ, as "Welch" for "Welsh," where the identity of the person is established by the finding of the court. Donohoe-Kelly Banking Co. v. Southern Pacific Co., 138 Cal. 183; 94 Am. St. Rep. 28; 71 Pac. 93.

Erroneous levy. The release from attachment of property exempt from execution is not a dissolution of the writ, but an order setting aside the erroneous levy, which the court has power to do, having power over its own process (Holmes v. Marshall, 145 Cal. 777; 104 Am. St. Rep. 86; 2 Ann. Cas. 88; 69 L. R. A. 67; 79 Pac. 534); and such an order as effectually dissolves the attachment as if the writ were quashed. Risdon Iron etc. Works v. Citizens' Traction Co., 122 Cal. 94; 68 Am. St. Rep. 25; 54 Pac. 529.

Order dissolving attachment. The order dissolving the attachment should specify the grounds of discharge, where the motion is made on two grounds, one of which goes to the right of the plaintiff to any attachment in the action, and the other only to an irregularity in the writ, avoidable by the issuance of another: if the order is made on the latter ground, the plaintiff is free to take proper steps to procure the issuance and service of a proper writ. Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93; 33 Am. St. Rep. 163; 31 Pac. 846.

Release by sheriff. Where the order of the court releases the property from attachment, the wrongful refusal of the sheriff to obey the order and to redeliver the property does not render the discharge inoperative. McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339; Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367; 24 Pac. 1072. An attachment debtor, upon effecting a settlement with his creditor, cannot require the sheriff to release the property attached, except upon payment of his fees. Robinett v. Connolly, 76 Cal. 56; 18 Pac. 130; Perrin v. McMann, 97 Cal. 52; 31 Pac. 837.

Appeal from order. An appeal lies from an order dissolving or refusing to dissolve the attachment (Mudge v. Steinhart, 78 Cal. 34; 12 Am. St. Rep. 17; 20 Pac. 147); and also from an order releasing property not liable to seizure: the right of appeal is not limited to orders made on the ground that the writ was improperly or irregularly issued (Risdon Iron etc. Works v. Citizens' Traction Co., 122 Cal. 94; 68 Am. St. Rep. 25; 54 Pac. 529); but an order refusing to dissolve the attachment, made on conflicting evidence, will not be reviewed on appeal (Barrell v. Lake View Land Co., 122 Cal. 129; 54 Pac. 594); nor will the decision of the court, on conflicting evidence, on motion to dissolve, be interfered with on appeal, where there is sufficient evidence to sustain the order (Rodley v. Lyons, 129 Cal. 681; 62 Pac. 313); nor will an order discharging the attachment be reversed on appeal, where the affidavits used on the motion are in conflict (Egener v. Juch, 101 Cal. 105; 35 Pac. 432); but where the court erroneously refused to dissolve an attachment improperly issued, such attachment will be ordered dissolved on appeal, even though the judgment is regular. Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17; Taaffe v. Rosenthal, 7 Cal. 514. The validity of the judgment or an order denying a new trial is not affected in any way by errors in the attachment-papers; nor can questions relating to them be considered on an appeal from such judgment or order. Herman v. Paris, 81 Cal. 625; 22 Pac. 971. An appeal from an order dissolving an attachment may be taken within sixty days from the date of the order; and it cannot be objected to the appeal, that the lien of the attachment was not preserved because the appeal was not perfected within five days, and the undertaking on appeal was not for double the amount claimed. Flagg v. Puterbaugh, 101 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 95. Under the Practice Act, an order refusing to dissolve an attachment was not appealable, nor could it be reviewed on an appeal from the judgment as an intermediate order. Allender v. Fritts, 24 Cal. 447; Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 89 Am. Dec. 49.

Irregularities and defects which will avoid attachments. See note 79 Am. Dec. 164.

Dissolution of attachment. See note 123 Am. St. Rep. 1030.

Right to recover counsel fees as damages upon dissolution of attachment. See note 10 Ann. Cas. 954.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The notice should specify in what particulars the writ was improperly issued. Freeborn v. Glazer, 10 Cal. 337. If the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, and does not admit of amendment, the attachment should be dissolved; but if the complaint can be made good, the plaintiff should be allowed to amend, pending the motion to dissolve. Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161; see also subds. 1 and 2 of note to § 537 of this code.

§ 557. When motion made on affidavit, it may be opposed by affidavit. If the motion be made upon affidavits on the part of the defendant, but not otherwise, the plaintiff may oppose the same by affidavits or other evidence, in addition to those on which the attachment was made.

On affidavits. Compare "Motion to Vacate or Modify Injunction." Ante, § 532.

Legislation § 557. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 139, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 301.

Affidavits may be controverted. Specific statements of fact made by a defendant in attachment may be contradicted by the plaintiff's affidavit, but, if this is not done, the defendant's affidavit must be taken as establishing the truth of what it contains. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 174; 24 Pac. 113.

§ 558. When writ must be discharged. If upon such application, it satisfactorily appears that the writ of attachment was improperly or irregularly issued it must be discharged; provided that such attachment shall not be discharged if at or before the hearing of such application, the writ of attachment, or the affidavit, or undertaking upon which such attachment was based shall be amended and made to conform to the provisions of this chapter.

Legislation § 558. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 140, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 302; which had (1) the word "shall" before "satisfactorily," (2) the word "appear" instead of "appears," and (3) the word "shall" instead of "must."

3. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 253, adding the proviso.

When writ must be discharged. Where the writ was improperly, irregularly, or wrongfully issued, it must be discharged (Winters v. Pearson, 72 Cal. 553; 14 Pac. 304; Sparks v. Bell, 137 Cal. 415; 70 Pac. 281); on motion (Martinovich v. Marsicano, 150 Cal. 597; 119 Am. St. Rep. 254; 89 Pac. 333), without reference to any levy made thereunder. Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320.

Amendment of affidavit and undertaking. Prior to the amendment of 1909, neither the affidavit on which the attachment issued, nor the undertaking on attachment, is amendable, if not sufficient to sustain the writ. Winters v. Pearson, 72 Cal. 553; 14 Pac. 304; Tibbet v. Tom Sue, 122 Cal. 206; 54 Pac. 741. Under this section, a motion to discharge for irregularity may now be met by proper amendment of the affidavit, undertaking, or writ (Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320; Fairbanks v. Getchell, 13 Cal. App. 458; 110 Pac. 331); but a fatally defective affidavit is not amendable. Pajaro Valley Bank v. Scurich, 7 Cal. App. 732; 95 Pac. 911; Fairbanks v. Getchell, 13 Cal. App. 458; 110 Pac. 331.

Amendment of writs of attachment and of papers on which they are based. See note 61 Am. Dec. 125.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157.

§ 559. When writ to be returned. The sheriff must return the writ of attachment with the summons, if issued at the same time; otherwise, within twenty days after its receipt, with a certificate of his proceedings indorsed thereon or attached thereto; and whenever an order has been made discharging or releasing an attachment upon real property, a certified copy of such order may be filed in the offices of the county recorders in which the notices of attachment have been filed, and be indexed in like manner.

Notices of attachment filed. Ante, § 542, subds. 1, 2.

Return of inventory with writ. See ante, § 546.

Legislation § 559. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 141, the first sentence of which, ending "attached thereto," constituted the section when enacted in 1872, except that the word "shall" was changed to "must," the rest of the section reading, "The provisions of this chapter shall not apply to any suits already commenced, but so far as such suits may be concerned, the act entitled An Act to Regulate Proceedings against Debtors by Attachment, passed April 22, 1850, shall be deemed in full force and effect."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 91, adding the last half of the section, beginning "and whenever."

Objections to the return. The garnishee has nothing to do with the return of the writ, unless false in some particular which would subject him to an unwarranted liability; nor is he required to make any objections to the return, until its correctness becomes material in the action against him upon his liability as garnishee. Clyne v. Easton, 148 Cal. 287; 113 Am. St. Rep. 253; 83 Pac. 36. A mortgagee cannot complain of a discrepancy in the statement of the date appearing in the indorsement on the copy of the attachment filed in the clerk's office, where the latter, which was erroneous, was not filed until after the mortgage was executed, and did not mislead the mortgagee. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 239; 70 Am. Dec. 775.

Conclusiveness of return. The statute does not make the return conclusive, or the only evidence of the manner of executing process (Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 239; 70 Am. Dec. 775); nor is the return conclusive as to the regularity of the attachment of property in the hands of a third party, in an action between the attaching creditor and such third party. Blanc v. Paymaster Mining Co., 95 Cal. 524; 29 Am. St. Rep. 149; 30 Pac. 765. A certificate of the sheriff, that the property stood in the name of a trustee at the time of the levy, is not conclusive, in an action between one claiming under execution sale in an attachment suit and one claiming under a trust deed, where the latter is shown to be void. Johnson v. Miner, 144 Cal. 785; 78 Pac. 240. The sheriff is concluded by his return, when it is set up by any party who may claim something under it. Harvey v. Foster, 64 Cal. 296; 30 Pac. 849; and see Meherin v. Saunders, 110 Cal. 463; 42 Pac. 966. Failure of the officer to do the things required by law, and in the order prescribed, is fatal. Watt v. Wright, 66 Cal. 202; 5 Pac. 91.

Evidence to aid return. The written return of the officer is not the only evidence that the writ was properly served: if the return simply omits to state any fact necessary to a valid service, such fact may be supplied by parol evidence, so long as the facts stated in the return are not so varied or contradicted as to affect vested rights (Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462; 22 Pac. 284; Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 238; 70 Am. Dec. 775; Sinsheimer v. Whitely, 111 Cal. 378; 52 Am. St. Rep. 192; 43 Pac. 1109); but parol evidence to supplement the return must be clear and satisfactory, and not rest upon presumption. Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462; 22 Pac. 284. Where the return merely states that the officer duly levied upon the property, upon a specified day, by posting a copy of the writ, attached to a notice to the defendant that the property was attached, on the premises, and at the trial the officer testified that he posted the papers on a small building, the only improvement on the premises, such building must necessarily be held to be the most conspicuous place on the land. Davis v. Baker, 72 Cal. 494; 14 Pac. 102. Entries in books in the sheriff's office, showing brief memoranda of the receipt of writs of attachments, dates of return, and proceedings therein, made in the usual course of business, are admissible in evidence as books of original entries, being often the only available evidence of the transaction to which they refer. Hesser v. Rowley, 139 Cal. 410; 73 Pac. 156. Where the officer testified that it was his custom to levy the writ by first posting the attachment, with the notice of the levy, upon the land, and afterwards filing the same in the recorder's office, this being the reverse of the order prescribed by statute, there is a conflict of evidence, and the finding of the court that the attachment was duly levied is conclusive. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165. Where the officer expressly states, on cross-examination, that he is not willing to swear that he served the notice with a copy of the attachment, or that other papers served were true copies, and it is evident that he testified to the doing of acts necessary to be done by him, not from recollection, but because the law made it his duty to do them, he therefore presumed that he had done them, the showing is insufficient to establish proper service. Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462; 22 Pac. 284.

Statement of facts in the return. This section contains no express provisions requiring that all acts necessary to a valid levy shall be set out in the return; the general rule with regard to mesne process is, that all presumptions are in favor of the regularity of the acts of the officer, and that a return which simply states that process was executed is sufficient, prima facie, to show due and proper execution; this is a disputable presumption, which may be controverted, but it is good as against a collateral attack. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 239; 70 Am. Dec. 775; Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165; Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. The sheriff must state fully, in his return, what acts he performed in serving the writ, so that the court can decide upon its sufficiency, and it will be presumed that he states all that he did towards making service. Sharp v. Baird, 43 Cal. 577. Where the officer states in his return that he did certain acts as constituting his levy, but such acts are not sufficient, subsequent purchasers may rely upon such return as one stating, in effect, that the acts named therein were all the acts done by him; but where the officer states generally that he served the writ by attaching the property, and, in addition, that he did certain acts, specifically named, subsequent purchasers cannot maintain that he did nothing but what is specifically set out, and reject the general statement. Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462; 22 Pac. 284. A return which does not show that the officer posted "in a conspicuous place on the land," or at all, a copy of the description of the land, in connection with a copy of the writ of attachment, and of the notice that the land had been attached, is fatally defective. Watt v. Wright, 66 Cal. 202; 5 Pac. 91. The return need not state that the papers were posted in a conspicuous place, if the place stated is necessarily a conspicuous place. Davis v. Baker, 72 Cal. 494; 14 Pac. 102. A return showing that service was made by posting a copy of the attachment on the premises, should also state whether or not there was any occupant on the premises: it is not sufficient to state that the "notice" was posted upon the premises; the sheriff cannot substitute a notice for a copy of the writ required to be posted. Sharp v. Baird, 43 Cal. 577. The return of an attachment on a growing crop, stating that the officer "attached the same by taking it into my custody, and not putting a keeper in charge," is insufficient, in not showing the delivery of a copy of the writ and notice of attachment to the defendant in possession. Rudolph v. Saunders, 111 Cal. 233; 43 Pac. 619.

Return as notice. The return of the officer and the recording of the notice of attachment of real estate in the recorder's office is sufficient to put a subsequent purchaser on inquiry, and if the return can be aided by parol evidence, he is bound to take notice of the fact, and he takes the land at his peril, and subject to the right of a purchaser on execution sale in an attachment suit to make good his title by such evidence. Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462; 22 Pac. 284.

Description of property in the return. The return of the sheriff, filed in the recorder's office, which, through error, does not describe the property attached, cannot be amended so as to postpone the rights of creditors attaching it prior to the filing, but before the amendment. Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 21; 68 Am. Dec. 287. Variance between the description of the property attached and that contained in the sheriff's deed under the execution, is immaterial, where nobody was misled, and the description in the return was sufficient to notify a purchaser of the property, and to enable the sheriff to identify the same. Godfrey v. Monroe, 101 Cal. 224; 35 Pac. 761.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See subd. 3 of note to § 542 of this code. The sheriff's return, how far conclusive. Egery v. Buchanan, 5 Cal. 53. How far it may be amended. Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 21; 68 Am. Dec. 287; Newhall v. Provost. 6 Cal. 85; Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 238; 70 Am. Dec. 775.

§ 560. Release of real property from attachment. An attachment as to any real property may be released by a writing signed by the plaintiff, or his attorney, or the officer who levied the writ, and acknowledged and recorded in the like manner as a grant of real property; and upon the filing of such release, it is the duty of the recorder to note the same on the record of the copy of the writ on file in his office. Such attachment may also be released by an entry in the margin of the record thereof, in the county recorder's office, in the manner provided for the discharge of mortgages under section twenty-nine hundred and thirty-eight of the Civil Code.

Legislation § 560. 1. Addition by Stats. 1901, p. 141; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

2. Added by Stats. 1907, p. 709; amendment of unconstitutional § 560, supra, which did not have the words "or the officer who levied the writ"; the code commissioner saying of the enactment in 1907, "New section. The statute did not heretofore provide any method of releasing, without application to the court, an attachment upon real property. As it is desired to make such releases expeditiously in many instances, although the action is not dismissed or terminated, this amendment provides such mode of release."

CHAPTER V.

RECEIVERS.

§ 564. Appointment of receiver.
§ 565. Appointment of receivers upon dissolution of corporations.
§ 566. Receiver, restrictions on appointment. Ex parte application, undertaking on.
§ 567. Oath and undertaking of receiver.
§ 568. Powers of receivers.
§ 569. Investment of funds.
§ 570. Disposition of unclaimed funds in hands of receiver.

§ 564. Appointment of receiver. A receiver may be appointed by the court in which an action is pending, or by the judge thereof—

1. In an action by a vendor to vacate a fraudulent purchase of property, or by a creditor to subject any property or fund to his claim, or between partners or others jointly owning or interested in any property or fund, on the application of the plaintiff, or of any party whose right to or interest in the property or fund, or the proceeds thereof, is probable, and where it is shown that the property or fund is in danger of being lost, removed, or materially injured;

2. In an action by a mortgagee for the foreclosure of his mortgage and sale of the mortgaged property, where it appears that the mortgaged property is in danger of being lost, removed, or materially injured, or that the condition of the mortgage has not been performed, and that the property is probably insufficient to discharge the mortgage debt;

3. After judgment, to carry the judgment into effect;

4. After judgment, to dispose of the property according to the judgment, or to preserve it during the pendency of an appeal, or in proceedings in aid of execution, when an execution has been returned unsatisfied, or when the judgment debtor refuses to apply his property in satisfaction of the judgment;

5. In the cases when a corporation has been dissolved, or is insolvent, or in imminent danger of insolvency, or has forfeited its corporate rights;

6. In all other cases where receivers have heretofore been appointed by the usages of courts of equity.

Appointment of receiver on dissolution of co-operative business association. See Civ. Code, § 653j.

Legislation § 564. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 143 (New York Code, § 244), as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 61, Kerr ed. p. 88, which read: "A receiver may be appointed by the court in which the action is pending, or by a judge thereof. 1. Before judgment, provisionally on the application of either party when he establishes a prima facie right to the property, or to an interest in the property, [which] is the subject of the action, and which is in possession of an adverse party, and the property or its rents and profits are in danger of being lost or materially injured or impaired. 2. After judgment to dispose of the property according to the judgment, or to preserve it during the pending of an appeal, and, 3. In such other cases as are in accordance with the practice of courts of equity jurisdiction."

Receiver, defined. A receiver is a person authorized to take possession of property in litigation and hold it for the litigant finally determined to be entitled thereto. Cook v. Terry, 19 Cal. App. 765; 127 Pac. 816.

Scope of section. This section confines the power to appoint a receiver to the court, or to the judge thereof (Quiggle v. Trumbo, 56 Cal. 626); and the appointment of receivers, and their duties and powers, are regulated, in part, by this section. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121.

Nature of remedy. The appointment of a receiver is an equitable remedy, and has been said to be, in effect, an equitable execution; it is a provisional remedy, and bears the relation to courts of equity that proceedings in attachment bear to courts of law: to take possession of the property of another is, seemingly, a harsh proceeding, but it is justified by circumstances which demand its adoption, either arising from contract or the general rules of law. McLane v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 86 Cal. 606; 6 Pac. 748. There is no such thing as an action brought distinctly for the mere appointment of a receiver. La Société Française v. District Court, 53 Cal. 495. Such an appointment, under this section, is merely auxiliary to a pending action. Yore v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 431; 41 Pac. 477. A new lien is not created by this section. Locke v. Klunker, 123 Cal. 231; 55 Pac. 993.

When a receiver will be appointed. The exercise of the power of appointing a receiver rests in the sound discretion of the court, to be governed by a view of the whole circumstances of the case; one of the circumstances being the probability of the plaintiff being ultimately entitled to a decree. Copper Hill Mining Co. v. Spencer, 25 Cal. 11; La Société Française v. Selheimer, 57 Cal. 623; Curnow v. Happy Valley etc. Hydraulic Co., 68 Cal. 262; 9 Pac. 149; Fish v. Benson, 71 Cal. 428; 12 Pac. 454; Downing v. Le Du, 82 Cal. 471; 23 Pac. 202; Loftus v. Fischer, 113 Cal. 286; 45 Pac. 328. The court has no power to appoint a receiver in an action to which the person to be affected by the order is not a party. Ex parte Casey, 71 Cal. 269; 12 Pac. 118. The authority conferred upon the court to make the appointment necessarily presupposes that an action is pending before it, instituted by some one authorized by law to commence it. La Société Française v. District Court, 53 Cal. 495. The appointment of a receiver must be ancillary to a pending and independent cause of action: its purpose is to preserve the property, pending the litigation, so that any judgment rendered therein may be effective. Hobson v. Pacific States Mercantile Co., 5 Cal. App. 94; 89 Pac. 866. A party to an action should not, against his will, be subjected to the onerous expense of a receiver, except the appointment is lawful, and obviously necessary for the protection of the opposite party. De Leonis v. Walsh, 148 Cal. 254; 82 Pac. 1047. The court has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver, at the commencement of an action to enforce a wife's equitable demand for maintenance, to preserve her equitable claim against the separate property of her husband, and to avoid voluntary transfers thereof by him to defeat such rights. Murray v. Murray, 115 Cal. 266; 56 Am. St. Rep. 97; 37 L. R. A. 626; 47 Pac. 37. Where a particular person is appointed a receiver by the consent of the then parties to the action, and thereafter, upon objections made by intervening creditors, he is removed, and another person is appointed receiver at the request of such interveners, a party subsequently substituted as plaintiff in the place of the original plaintiff is not estopped to question the validity of the appointment of the second receiver. Grant v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 71; 47 Pac. 872. After judgment rendered in favor of a plaintiff, the mere fact that a receiver, appointed before the judgment, at the request of the plaintiff, has died, does not warrant the appointment of another at the request of the defendant. De Leonis v. Walsh, 148 Cal. 254; 82 Pac. 1047. A receiver will not be appointed to take property out of the possession of a defendant, without trial, or previous notice to the defendant, save in case of irreparable pending injury, and in no case where a temporary injunction would be sufficient. Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561. In an action involving merely legal, as distinguished from equitable, rights, which proceeds on the assumption of ownership by the plaintiff of land and the profits thereof, the appointment of a receiver is not authorized by law. San José etc. Bank of Savings v. Bank of Madera, 121 Cal. 543; 54 Pac. 85. An order appointing a receiver, which purported to determine the question of ownership, that was never tried and never anywhere put in issue, is erroneous. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121.

Receiver upon dissolution of partnership. Where the title to mining property belonging to a partnership stands in the name of a corporation, which possesses no interest in the property, such property is assets of the copartnership, and the court is authorized to appoint a receiver to take charge of and work it, in a suit for the dissolution and accounting of the partnership. Fischer v. Superior Court, 98 Cal. 67; 32 Pac. 875.

Receiver in actions of foreclosure. A receiver should not be appointed, pendente lite, in an action to foreclose a mortgage, on the ground that the mortgaged property is in danger of being materially injured, if the injury, though considerable in extent, will still leave enough of the property remaining intact to be ample security for the debt (Title Insurance etc. Co. v. California Development Co., 164 Cal. 58; 127 Pac. 502); nor can a receiver be appointed to collect and preserve future rents to abide the result of an action, not in the nature of a suit in equity, to subject the rents to the payment of a mortgage debt, but which proceeds on the assumption of ownership, by the plaintiff, of the land and the profits thereof (San José etc. Bank of Savings v. Bank of Madera, 121 Cal. 543; 54 Pac. 85); nor can the court by the appointment of a receiver, take from the mortgagor, or from any person claiming under him, the rents, issues, and profits of the mortgaged premises and apply them to the mortgage debt, unless the mortgage so provides in terms. Locke v. Klunker, 123 Cal. 231; 55 Pac. 993. Where, in a mortgage or deed of trust (whether it is a deed of trust or a simple mortgage is immaterial), a power is expressly conferred on the parties of the second part, in case default is made in payment of the principal or interest of the bonds, for which such mortgage or deed of trust was given as security, to enter upon and take possession of the mortgaged property, the appointment of a receiver of the property described in the mortgage or deed of trust is proper, where the mortgagors made default, and refused to surrender possession of the mortgaged property. Sacramento etc. R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 55 Cal. 453. Where a railway corporation gave, as security for the payment of bonds, a mortgage to trustees, who were empowered, after default, to collect the income and apply it to the discharge of current expenses and taxes, upon default a court of equity has power to appoint the surviving trustee as receiver, with power to retain possession of the road and exercise the powers conferred by the mortgage. McLane v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 606; 6 Pac. 748. Where, on a foreclosure sale of mortgaged premises, a sum sufficient to satisfy the debt secured by the mortgage is not realized, and the plaintiff applies to the court for an order that the money derived from a sale of a crop grown on the premises be applied to the payment of the deficiency, the court has authority to appoint a receiver. Montgomery v. Merrill, 65 Cal. 432; 4 Pac. 414; Treat v. Dorman, 100 Cal. 623; 35 Pac. 86. An objection, in an action of foreclosure, that the court appointed a receiver of the rents and profits of the premises during the pendency of the action, is answered by this section, which authorizes the appointment of receiver, where the condition of the mortgage has not been performed, and the property is probably insufficient to discharge the mortgage debt. La Société Française v. Selheimer, 57 Cal. 623. A receiver should not be appointed in actions of foreclosure, except upon a statement of facts showing that the actual value of the mortgaged premises is less than the debt secured, with interest and costs, and that resort to the rents and profits is necessary: a general statement in the complaint, that the mortgaged premises are insufficient to pay and discharge the mortgage debt, being of a mere conclusion, is insufficient (Bank of Woodland v. Stephens, 144 Cal. 659; 79 Pac. 379); as is also an allegation, without further showing, that the mortgaged property was probably insufficient to pay the mortgage debt. Locke v. Klunker, 123 Cal. 231; 55 Pac. 993. The purchaser of property at a foreclosure sale is entitled thereto, and to its rents and profits, or to the value of the use and occupation thereof from the time of the sale up to the date of any redemption made; but where the judgment debtor remains in possession of mining property, working the same, and is insolvent, and the value of the property is liable to be destroyed through waste, and it is in the interest of all parties that the work should be continued, the purchaser is entitled to an order appointing a receiver (Hill v. Taylor, 22 Cal. 191; Walker v. McCusker, 71 Cal. 594; 12 Pac. 723; White v. White, 130 Cal. 597; 80 Am. St. Rep. 150; 62 Pac. 1062); but there is no provision in the codes, nor any decision, nor any principle, under which a purchaser is entitled to the appointment of a receiver to take charge of property, during the period of redemption, to prevent the commission of waste. West v. Conant, 100 Cal. 231; 34 Pac. 705; Scott v. Hotchkiss, 115 Cal. 89; 47 Pac. 45; Mau v. Kearney, 143 Cal. 506; 77 Pac. 411. Where a mortgagee in possession has not committed waste, nor otherwise abused his position, the court has no power to appoint a receiver to collect the rents and profits of the mortgaged property and to pay them out, giving priority to a judgment debt and counsel fees over the claim of the mortgagee. Cummings v. Cummings, 75 Cal. 434; 17 Pac. 442. Where a suit is brought to enforce the specific execution of the terms and stipulations of a mortgage, by which, on the happening of a specific event, the trustees, or the survivors of them, are entitled to take possession of the property mortgaged, hold it, receive the income arising from it and apply such income according to the terms of the mortgage, the casus fœderis, upon which the surviving trustee was to take possession, having occurred, it is within the province of a court of equity, and comes within the provision of the sixth subdivision of this section, authorizing the appointment of a receiver. McLane v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 606; 6 Pac. 748. No stipulation can confer jurisdiction upon the court to appoint a receiver in a case where the court has no such authority given by law. Scott v. Hotchkiss, 115 Cal. 89; 47 Pac. 45; Baker v. Varney, 129 Cal. 564; 79 Am. St. Rep. 140; 62 Pac. 100. Thus, the court has no jurisdiction, in an action of foreclosure, to appoint a receiver of rents and profits of mortgaged property, merely upon a stipulation in the mortgage for such appointment in case of default and foreclosure (Baker v. Varney, 129 Cal. 564; 79 Am. St. Rep. 140; 62 Pac. 100); and, notwithstanding the stipulation, the party who desires a receiver must state facts sufficient to show that the premises mortgaged are probably insufficient to pay the mortgage debt, with interest and costs. Scott v. Hotchkiss, 115 Cal. 89; 47 Pac. 45; Baker v. Varney, 129 Cal. 564; 79 Am. St. Rep. 140; 62 Pac. 100; Bank of Woodland v. Stephens, 144 Cal. 659; 79 Pac. 379. In an action of foreclosure, where there is a stipulation in the mortgage that a receiver may be appointed, and the mortgagor is in possession of land on which there are growing crops, and there is an averment that the security is insufficient, the court is authorized to appoint a receiver to take and hold the rents and profits to secure the debt. Scott v. Hotchkiss, 115 Cal. 89; 47 Pac. 45. Where there is nothing in the complaint to justify the appointment of a receiver pending a foreclosure suit, unless it be a stipulation in the mortgage providing for the appointment of receiver on an ex parte application, it may be presumed that the order was made upon motion, and upon affidavits showing the facts necessary to give the court jurisdiction. Garretson Investment Co. v. Arndt, 144 Cal. 64; 77 Pac. 770.

Receiver after judgment. The third subdivision of this section is very comprehensive, and any suitable process or mode of proceedings may be adopted, conformably with the spirit of the code; and since the powers and duties of the person appointed by the court to execute conveyances are fixed by the decree, it is immaterial whether he is called a commissioner or a receiver. Seadden Flat Gold Mining Co. v. Seadden, 121 Cal. 33; 53 Pac. 440. Where judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiff in an action for divorce and alimony, and alimony was made a lien upon property of the defendant, the court has power to appoint a receiver to take possession of the property, collect the rents and profits, and sell the property, and pay the sums adjudged to be due (Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583; 57 Pac. 582); and the court has power to appoint a receiver, in whom legal title may be vested by a decree to make a conveyance, for the purpose of carrying a judgment into effect, in an action to compel a conveyance from the heirs of a deceased person, many of whom are minors (Scadden Flat Gold Mining Co. v. Scadden, 121 Cal. 33; 53 Pac. 440); but the court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver to carry into effect a judgment for the recovery of rents, where the execution of such judgment has been stayed by proper bond, pending an appeal therefrom by the defendant (San José etc. Bank of Savings v. Bank of Madera, 121 Cal. 543; 54 Pac. 85); nor, after the entry of a money judgment, to continue the receiver for the purpose of enforcing the judgment, where he was appointed pending the action, but took possession of no property before the judgment: his functions as a receiver ceased with the entry of the judgment. White v. White, 130 Cal. 597; 80 Am. St. Rep. 150; 62 Pac. 1062. Actions of ejectment are not included in the cases specified in this section in which receivers may be named before judgment (Bateman v. Superior Court, 54 Cal. 285; Scott v. Sierra Lumber Co., 67 Cal. 71; 7 Pac. 131); but a receiver may be appointed in an action of ejectment, after judgment, during the pendency of the appeal. Garniss v. Superior Court, 88 Cal. 413; 26 Pac. 351. Upon proceedings supplementary to execution, it is proper to order an execution debtor to make an assignment, to a receiver, of his patent right to an invention. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120. Seats in stock and produce exchanges constitute property within the reach of judgment creditors of the owner, and an order may be properly made, upon proceedings supplementary to execution against an owner of such seats, appointing a receiver, directing the execution debtor to make an assignment thereof to him to sell the same to satisfy the judgment. Habenicht v. Lissak, 78 Cal. 351; 12 Am. St. Rep. 63; 5 L. R. A. 713; 20 Pac. 874. While Federal courts have jurisdiction of questions arising as to the title to letters patent of the United States, yet, as they are not exempt from seizure and sale by the laws of the state, a court of equity can compel a defendant to assign them to a receiver, to be sold and applied to the satisfaction of judgments against him. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120.

Receivers of corporations. Under the code, the rule is, not to appoint a receiver to administer the assets of a defunct corporation, but to leave the whole matter of liquidation and distribution to the exclusive control of the directors at the date of dissolution, unless, upon the showing of some party interested, either a creditor or a stockholder, it is necessary, for the protection of his rights, that a receiver, under the control and superintendence of a court of equity, be appointed. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. The court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver for a corporation, organized for mutual protection, and for the payment of stipulated sums to members, and not for profit, on the alleged ground that its liabilities exceed its assets, that nearly half of its assets are due on policies to deceased members, and that salaries and expenses are wasting the assets, where there is no fraud or mismanagement, and the corporation was not dissolved nor adjudged insolvent, nor had forfeited its right to do business (Murray v. Superior Court, 129 Cal. 628; 62 Pac. 191); nor has the court jurisdiction to appoint a receiver, during the pendency of an action by a private person, to take control of the property and business of a corporation out of the corporate management, where it is operating its business, and asserting full ownership and right to the property. Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561. Where a corporation ceases to exist from any cause, whether from lapse of time, voluntary dissolution, or judgment of forfeiture for abuse of its powers, it necessarily results that its property is left to be disposed of according to law; and, in the absence of any statute regulating the matter, a court of equity has the undoubted right, in a proper proceeding instituted by a creditor or stockholder, to appoint a receiver to administer the property. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. There is no jurisdiction vested in courts of equity to appoint a receiver of the property of a corporation, in aid of a suit prosecuted by a private party. La Société Française v. District Court, 53 Cal. 495; Bateman v. Superior Court, 54 Cal. 285; Smith v. Superior Court, 97 Cal. 348; 32 Pac. 322; State Investment Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135; 35 Pac. 549; Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561; Murray v. Superior Court, 129 Cal. 628; 62 Pac. 191; White v. White, 130 Cal. 597; 80 Am. St. Rep. 150; 62 Pac. 1062. Under this section and § 400, ante, the legislature has left to the directors of a corporation, convicted of violating their duty to the people of the state, power and discretion to pay their own debts and to divide their own property, subject to the right of a court of equity to interfere and compel them to proceed properly, if any occasion for such interference should arise; and as to creditors, their interest must, in most cases, be opposed to the appointment of a receiver. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. A court of equity has no inherent power to appoint a receiver of an insolvent corporation, merely because of its insolvency. Hobson

v. Pacific States Mercantile Co., 5 Cal. App. 94; 89 Pac. 866. The provision of the fifth subdivision of this section, that a receiver "may" be appointed when a corporation has forfeited its charter, does not mean that a receiver "must" be appointed, on the ground that the public has an interest that the power shall be exercised: the creditors and stockholders are the only parties whose interest can demand the appointment of a receiver, under § 565, post. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. The appointment of a receiver to administer the assets of a corporation whose charter is forfeited is not designed as a penalty or part of the punishment to be visited upon the stockholders of the corporation in a proceeding in quo warranto; but the punishment is limited to the forfeiture of the charter, and the fine which the court may, in its discretion, impose; and the court cannot further affect the corporate property by its judgment, nor take it away from its stockholders. Id.

Powers of courts. There is no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of the property of a corporation in a quo warranto proceeding, upon a judgment of forfeiture of its corporate charter: a new suit must be commenced by a creditor or stockholder of the corporation for that purpose. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. A judgment declaring that a corporation defendant is guilty of usurping rights and franchises, "as charged and alleged in the complaint," and adjudging that the defendant be excluded from "such rights, privileges, and franchises," does not dissolve the corporation, nor undertake to do so; and an order appointing a receiver thereupon is without authority, and void. Yore v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 431; 41 Pac. 477. A court of equity has power to remove the directors of a corporation for fraudulent practices, and, when they have abandoned their trust, may make an ex parte order appointing a receiver to preserve its assets. California Fruit Growers' Ass'n v. Superior Court, 8 Cal. App. 711; 97 Pac. 769. An order appointing a receiver, and a decree directing a sale of the property and a settlement of the affairs of a corporation, necessarily result in the dissolution of the corporation, and the court thus accomplishes indirectly that which it has no power to do directly: courts of equity, as such, have no jurisdiction to restrain the operations or wind up the affairs of corporations. Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145; 76 Am. Dec. 508; La Société Française v. District Court, 53 Cal. 495; Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561. The rendition of the judgment authorized by § 809, post, ends the proceedings, and no receiver can be appointed, unless a new suit is commenced by a creditor or stockholder of the corporation for that purpose, under this section. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121.

Where authorized by usages of courts of equity. Where the court has general jurisdiction in a case, the authority to appoint a receiver is clearly given in both the fifth and the sixth subdivisions of this section; and such appointment in no way affects the title of any party to the property involved, but simply preserves it, and keeps it within the jurisdiction of the court, until the rights of the parties are determined. Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 11; 20 Am. St. Rep. 197; 9 L. R. A. 376; 24 Pac. 707. The rule in equity is, that a receiver may be appointed before answer, provided the plaintiff can satisfy the court that he has an equitable claim to the property in controversy, and that a receiver is necessary to preserve the same from loss; but such power should be very cautiously exercised. Murray v. Murray, 115 Cal. 266; 56 Am. St. Rep. 97; 37 L. R. A. 626; 47 Pac. 37. The sixth subdivision of this section is but declaratory of the equity jurisdiction conferred upon the district courts by the former constitution, in giving them jurisdiction in "all cases in equity," and includes only the suits in which it has been the usage of courts of equity to appoint a receiver; their jurisdiction in this respect would have been the same in the absence of the statutory provision. Bateman v. Superior Court, 54 Cal. 285; McLane v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 606; 6 Pac. 748; Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 11; 20 Am. St. Rep. 197; 9 L. R. A. 376; 24 Pac. 707. Where a municipal corporation contracted with a water company to grant certain privileges in consideration of the company making certain improvements to property, which was to be surrendered after a term of years, on payment for the same by the municipality, which, at the expiration of the term, it was unable to do, but brought an action for the appointment of a receiver to collect and receive the rents, issues, and profits of the property, including water rates, there is no just ground for the appointment of a receiver to take away from the company its current revenues, before final settlement and payment by the municipality of the value of the improvements. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 124 Cal. 368; 57 Pac. 210.

Receiver in partition proceedings. It is competent for a court of equity, in some cases, to appoint a receiver, in actions of partition, to take possession of the property and hold it for the benefit of all parties in interest (Goodale v. Fifteenth District Court, 56 Cal. 26); and though actions in partition are regulated to a great extent by statute, yet they partake more fully of the principles and rules of equity than those of law; and whenever it is necessary to protect the interests of all the parties, the court will, upon proper application, appoint a receiver. Woodward v. Superior Court, 95 Cal. 272; 30 Pac. 535. A receiver pendente lite may be appointed, in an action of partition, where a tenant in common of a growing crop is in the sole possession thereof, and denies the right of his co-tenant to any part thereof, and threatens to sell the entire crop and appropriate the proceeds to his own use. Baughman v. Reed, 75 Cal. 319; 7 Am. St. Rep. 170; 17 Pac. 222; Rohrer v. Babcock, 126 Cal. 222; 58 Pac. 537.

Notice and undertaking. The appointment of a receiver to take property out of the defendant's possession, without a trial, will not ordinarily be made without previous notice to the defendant. Hobson v. Pacific States Mercantile Co., 5 Cal. App. 94; 89 Pac. 866. The appointment of a receiver to take property and business out of the hands of persons in possession, claiming ownership thereof, without requiring a bond from the plaintiff, is, in most cases, a gross abuse of discretion. Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561. A receiver will not be appointed upon his ex parte application, without requiring ample security by his undertaking, with sufficient sureties, for all damages that may be caused by the appointment. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. An order granting an injunction and appointing a receiver, without any notice, or any bond from the plaintiff on the appointment of the receiver, is null and void. Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561. Court commissioners have no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver: a bond given by a receiver so appointed is void. Quiggle v. Trumbo, 56 Cal. 626.

Order appointing receiver. In the appointment of a receiver, the court should declare precisely what property is to continue in the hands of the receiver, or to be otherwise subject to the satisfaction of judgment, and the remainder, if any, should be wholly exempt from the effect of the judgment (Murray v. Murray, 115 Cal. 266; 56 Am. St. Rep. 97; 37 L. R. A. 626; 47 Pac. 37; and see Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121); but it is sufficient, in appointing the receiver or assignee of an insolvent, or a corporation or partnership, or the executor or administrator of a decedent, to mention generally all the property of the insolvent, corporation or partnership, or decedent. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. An order appointing a receiver, though very informal, is sufficient, if it carries an authority to the appointee to take possession of the property, and hold it pending the litigation, subject to the further order of the court. Cook v. Terry, 19 Cal. App. 765; 127 Pac. 816. The appointment of a receiver does not operate as a sequestration of the property mentioned in the order of appointment, where the complainant, at whose instance the receiver was appointed, had some estate in, or some right to, or some lien upon, the property involved, prior to and independently of the appointment of the receiver, and the receiver is then appointed to preserve and enforce his pre-existing right. Bank of Woodland v. Heron, 120 Cal. 614; 52 Pac. 1006. Where the court, by its order, takes property out of the actual possession of a stranger to the proceeding, who claims it as his own, the order is in excess of jurisdiction and void, irrespective of the actual state of the title, because no man can be deprived of his property without due process of law; nor can a court take property from his possession without a hearing, and compel him to prove title to regain it. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. Damages for attorneys' fees for a dissolution of the order appointing a receiver cannot be allowed, where such fees have not been paid. Cook v. Terry, 19 Cal. App. 765; 127 Pac. 816.

Discharge of receiver. Where a receiver was appointed for a purpose ancillary to the main object of the action, and final judgment was rendered in favor of the defendant, from which an appeal was taken, the court has jurisdiction to discharge the receiver (Baughman v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 572; 14 Pac. 207); and the court has power to vacate the appointment of a receiver, improvidently made, notwithstanding a motion for a new trial is pending, and admitting that the effect of the motion is to stay the proceedings generally. Copper Hill Mining Co. v. Spencer, 25 Cal. 11.

Remedies for erroneous appointment. Since the amendment in 1897 of § 939, post, allowing an appeal from an order appointing a receiver, and the amendment, at the same time, of § 943, post, providing for the staying of the order by an undertaking on appeal, a writ of prohibition will not lie to arrest proceedings under such an order, as the aggrieved party has a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law, within the meaning of § 1103, post, notwithstanding a question of jurisdiction is involved in the application for the writ. Jacobs v. Superior Court, 133 Cal. 364; 85 Am. St. Rep. 204; 65 Pac. 826. Although a party could, before that amendment, move the court to set aside an invalid order appointing a receiver, yet this was not a ground for refusing an application for a writ of prohibition: the most that could be claimed was, that the application should have been made to the lower court before moving for the writ. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121; and see Jacobs v. Superior Court, 133 Cal. 364; 85 Am. St. Rep. 204; 65 Pac. 826. Where judgment was had against a corporation, and execution was levied upon moneys and personal property held by a receiver of the corporation, illegally appointed, prohibition was the proper remedy to restrain the court from withholding such assets from the creditor (Murray v. Superior Court, 129 Cal. 628; 62 Pac. 191); and prohibition was the proper remedy to prevent the attempted receivership of the property of a corporation, during the pendency of an action to displace the management of the corporation by its directors (Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561); and also where no sufficient ground for the appointment of a receiver exists (Murray v. Superior Court, 129 Cal. 628; 62 Pac. 191); and also where the court appointed a receiver and commanded a court of concurrent jurisdiction, which had first assumed jurisdiction in the matter, and appointed a receiver, to desist from proceeding further (Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561); and also where the court, through its receiver, was doing an injury to the petitioners, in possession of the property under claim of ownership. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121; Bishop v. Superior Court, 87 Cal. 226; 25 Pac. 435; Cosby v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 45; 42 Pac. 460; Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561; Jacobs v. Superior Court, 133 Cal. 364; 85 Am. St. Rep. 204; 65 Pac. 826. If the order appointing the receiver is only collaterally involved, it cannot be assailed, except for want of jurisdiction. Title Insurance Co. v. Grider, 152 Cal. 746; 94 Pac. 601. As against a collateral attack upon an order appointing a receiver, the jurisdiction of the court will be upheld and its action validated, if this can be done, even though the facts showing such jurisdiction are defectively stated and inferences must be indulged in to support the judgment. Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 285; 47 Pac. 60. A mere averment that the value of property mortgaged is insufficient, or that the premises are insufficient, may be sufficient to uphold an order appointing a receiver where the attack is collateral, but not where there is a direct attack upon appeal. Bank of Woodland v. Stephens, 144 Cal. 659; 79 Pac. 379. Where a party, on petition, obtained an order to show cause why a writ of review of proceedings for the appointment of a receiver should not issue, and it does not appear whether the order was made with or without notice, or that the court was not justified in directing the taking and holding of the property until adjudication could be had, such writ operates only as to excess of jurisdiction, as the complaint for the appointment of a receiver may have showed a case in which an appointment was proper. Real Estate Associates v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 223. Where the court has general jurisdiction to appoint a receiver, error in the exercise of that jurisdiction is reviewable only on appeal, and not by certiorari. Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 11; 20 Am. St. Rep. 197; 9 L. R. A. 376; 24 Pac. 707; White v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 60; 42 Pac. 480. Where the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties, it has power to hear and determine a motion for the appointment of a receiver, and its action thereon cannot be regarded as in excess of its jurisdiction; and if error is committed, the petitioner has a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in due course of law, and the writ of prohibition cannot issue (Woodward v. Superior Court, 95 Cal. 272; 30 Pac. 535; and see Jacobs v. Superior Court, 133 Cal. 364; 85 Am. St. Rep. 204; 65 Pac. 826); nor can the title to property be tried upon a writ of prohibition. CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Receiver, appointment of. The county judge cannot (as a thing distinct from the injunction) appoint a receiver in an action pending in the district court. Ruthrauff v. Kresz, 13 Cal. 639. The general rule is, that a receiver should not be appointed without notice to the adverse party. People v. Norton, 1 Paige, 17; Field v. Ripley, 20 How. Pr. 26; Kemp v. Harding, 4 How. Pr. 178; Dorr v. Noxon, 5 How. Pr. 29. Except in special cases, where irreparable injury, or the like, will be sustained by the delay. West v. Swan, 3 Edw. Ch. 420. The merits are not inquired into, upon the motion to appoint a receiver. Sheldon v. Weeks, 2 Barb. 532; Conro v. Gray, 4 How. Pr. 166; Higgins v. Bailey, 7 Rob. 613. The application relates only to the preservation of the property. Sheldon v. Weeks, 2 Barb. 532; Chapman v. Hammersly, 4 Wend. 173. The appointment rests in the sound discretion of the court. Copper Hill M. Co. v. Spencer, 25 Cal. 15. A third party cannot take advantage of an irregularity in the appointment. Tyler v. Whitney, 12 Abb. Pr. 465; Tyler v. Willis, 33 Barb. 327. The court may revoke the order appointing a receiver, at any time before the appointment is consummated, and appoint another person. Siney v. New York Con. Stage Co., 28 How. Pr. 481; 18 Abb. Pr. 435.

2. Subd. 1. The purchaser at judicial sale of a mining claim may, where the judgment debtor remains in possession, working the claim, and is insolvent, have a receiver appointed to take charge of the proceeds, pending the time for redemption. Hill v. Taylor, 22 Cal. 191. A crop of grain is part of the land, and if a plaintiff is entitled to recover the land from the possession of another, he is also (the proper showing being made) entitled to a receiver to harvest and preserve the crop. Corcoran v. Doll, 35 Cal. 476.

3. Subd. 2. See Guy v. Ide, 6 Cal. 101; 65 Am. Dec. 490; Hill v. Taylor, 22 Cal. 191. As a general rule, the mortgagee in possession will not be deprived of the possession by the appointment of a receiver. Bolles v. Duff, 35 How. Pr. 481. Caution must be used in appointing a receiver in mortgage cases. Shotwell v. Smith, 3 Edw. Ch. 588; Bank of Ogdensburg v. Arnold, 5 Paige, 38; Warner v. Gouverneur's Executors, 1 Barb. 36. If the mortgagee in a chattel mortgage has possession, a receiver will only be appointed in case of pressing necessity. Bolles v. Duff, 35 How. Pr. 481; Patten v. Accessory Transit Co., 4 Abb. Pr. 235. See also Thompson v. Van Vechten, 5 Duer, 618, and Bayaud v. Fellows, 28 Barb. 451.

4. Subd. 3. May be appointed in proceedings supplementary to execution. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 586. After judgment, in an action to recover possession of real estate, and while a motion for a new trial is pending, a receiver of the rents and proceeds of the property in dispute may be appointed, if the facts of the case are such as warrant it. Whitney v. Buckman, 26 Cal. 447.

5. Subd. 4. See Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 586.

6. Subd. 5. See § 565 of this code. In Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 148, 76 Am. Dec. 503, it was held that a court of equity has no jurisdiction over corporations for the purpose of restraining their operations or winding up their concerns; that while it might compel the officers of the corporation to account for any breach of trust, the jurisdiction for this purpose was over the officers personally, and not over the corporation; hence it was error in the court below to appoint a receiver and decree a sale of the property and a settlement of the affairs of the corporation.

7. Subd. 6. Courts of equity have the authority to appoint receivers, and may order them to take possession of the property in controversy, whether in the immediate possession of the defendant or his agents; and in proper cases they can also order the defendant's agents or employees, although not parties to the record, to deliver the specific property to the receiver. Ex parte Cohen, 5 Cal. 494. Where the allegations of a bill are general in their nature, and the equities are fully denied by the answer, such a case is not presented as will authorize the appointment of a receiver, the withdrawal of the property from the hands of one acquainted with all the affairs of the concern, and placing it in the hands of another, who may not be equally competent to manage the business. Williamson v. Monroe, 3 Cal. 385.

8. Generally. Where it appears that the partners, parties to the suit for a dissolution, held a judgment against a third party, which was never reduced to the possession nor under the control of the receiver, it was held, that the appointment of the receiver did not operate as an assignment, nor transfer any property not so reduced to possession within a reasonable time. Money in the hands of a receiver is in custodia legis. Adams v. Woods, 8 Cal. 306. The transfer to a receiver, by order of court, of the effects of an insolvent, in the suit of a judgment creditor, is not an assignment absolutely void under the Insolvent Act of 1852, but is only void against the claim of creditors. Naglee v. Lyman, 14 Cal. 450. The pendency of a motion for a new trial does not operate as a stay of proceedings, so as to deprive the court of the right to vacate an order appointing a receiver, made before the trial. But where a receiver has been appointed, and, on the trial, judgment of nonsuit is rendered against the party at whose instance the receiver was appointed, a motion for a new trial suspends the operation of the judgment so as to prevent it from operating as a discharge of the action, unless an order is made discharging the receiver. Copper Hill M. Co. v. Spencer, 25 Cal. 15.

§ 565. Appointment of receivers upon dissolution of corporations. Upon the dissolution of any corporation, the superior court of the county in which the corporation carries on its business or has its principal place of business, on application of any creditor of the corporation, or of any stockholder or member thereof, may appoint one or more persons to be receivers or trustees of the corporation, to take charge of the estate and effects thereof, and to collect the debts and property due and belonging to the corporation, and to pay the outstanding debts thereof, and to divide the moneys and other property that shall remain over among the stockholders or members.

Dissolution.
1. Involuntary. Civ. Code, §§ 399, 400; post, §§ 802 et seq.
2. Voluntary. Post, §§ 1227 et seq.

Legislation § 565. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Stats. 1850, p. 347, §§ 16, 18, and Stats. 1862, p. 199, § 25.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 4, changing the word "district" to "superior," before "court of the county."

Scope of section. This section does not authorize the appointment of a receiver upon the ground that the corporation is not prosperous, or because its liabilities are greater than its assets, but only upon the dissolution of the corporation (Murray v. Superior Court, 129 Cal. 628; 62 Pac. 191); nor has the court power, under this section, to appoint a receiver, from the fact that a fine was imposed upon the corporation, payable to the people of the state, making the state a creditor of the corporation (Yore v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 431; 41 Pac. 477); nor does this section confer upon the court any authority to take charge of the management of the affairs of a corporation, in an action by the state against a corporation for its dissolution, or to assume the disposition of the effects of the corporation, winding up its affairs; nor has the court authority to appoint a receiver pendente lite: upon the entry of a judgment of dissolution, the functions of the court are at an end. State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135; 35 Pac. 549.

Effect of dissolution. The dissolution of a corporation leads practically to a winding up of its business. People v. Superior Court, 100 Cal. 105; 34 Pac. 492.

Who may have receiver appointed. A receiver of a dissolved corporation may be appointed, only when necessary for the purpose of preserving and distributing the property, and only upon the application of a party in interest, namely, a creditor or a stockholder (Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121); and can neither be invoked at the instance of a stranger, nor assumed by the court of its own motion. State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135; 35 Pac. 549. Where the affairs of a defunct corporation are under the control of its late directors as trustees for its creditors and stockholders, the creditors have nothing to do but present their demands and receive payment in the ordinary course of business, or, if payment is refused or delayed, they may proceed to enforce their demands; and it is always at the option of the creditors or stockholders to have a receiver, if they can allege facts showing that one is necessary. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1850, p. 347, §§ 16, 18; Stats. 1862, p. 199, § 25.

§ 566. Receiver, restrictions on appointment. Ex parte application, undertaking on. No party, or attorney of a party, or person interested in an action, or related to any judge of the court by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree, can be appointed receiver therein without the written consent of the parties, filed with the clerk. If a receiver is appointed upon an ex parte application, the court, before making the order, must require from the applicant an undertaking, with sufficient sureties, in an amount to be fixed by the court, to the effect that the applicant will pay to the defendant all damages he may sustain by reason of the appointment of such receiver and the entry by him upon his duties, in case the applicant shall have procured such appointment wrongfully, maliciously, or without sufficient cause; and the court may, in its discretion, at any time after said appointment, require an additional undertaking.

Legislation § 566. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then contained only two lines, "No party or attorney, or person interested in an action, can be appointed receiver therein."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 309, adding the rest of the section after the words "receiver therein," except for the changes noted infra.

3. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 60, adding the words "or related to any judge of the court by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree," in the first sentence.

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 142; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 710, (1) adding the words "of a party," in the first line, (2) changing the word "be" to "is," after "If a receiver," and (3) changing the word "may" to "must," before "require"; the code commissioner saying of the first and third changes, "Such changes having been made to conform to [sic] the section to the intent of the legislature in the passage of the original section."

Ex parte application. Undertaking. This section recognizes the appointment of a receiver upon an ex parte application (Real Estate Associates v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 223); and an undertaking is required of the applicant, only when the appointment is asked for ex parte (Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418); and the appointment is void, where the court has failed to require the undertaking from the applicant before making the order. Davila v. Heath, 13 Cal. App. 370; 109 Pac. 893; Bibby v. Dieter, 15 Cal. App. 45; 113 Pac. 874. The undertaking required under this section, where the application is made ex parte, must run in favor of each defendant in the action, and be in such form that any defendant shall have a right of action thereon if he is injured by the appointment; and on appeal, it will be presumed that persons purporting to act as the agents of a surety company, in the execution of such undertaking, sufficiently established their authority by evidence presented to the trial court. Title Insurance etc. Co. v. California Development Co., 164 Cal. 58; 127 Pac. 502.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A person should not be appointed receiver, who, by his own act, stands in an improper relation to the action. Smith v. New York Con. Stage Co., 28 How. Pr. 208; 18 Abb. Pr. 419.

§ 567. Oath and undertaking of receiver. Before entering upon his duties, the receiver must be sworn to perform them faithfully, and with two or more sureties, approved by the court or judge, execute an undertaking to the state of California, in such sum as the court or judge may direct, to the effect that he will faithfully discharge the duties of receiver in the action and obey the orders of the court therein.

Undertakings, generally. See post, § 941; Pol. Code, §§ 981, 947–986, 982.

Legislation § 567. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then had (1) the word "one" instead of "two," before "or more sureties," and (2) the words "such person, and" instead of "the state of California."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 142; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 710; the code commissioner saying, "The word 'one' is changed to 'two,' thus requiring two sureties, and making it uniform with other provisions of this code respecting sureties, and the undertaking with respect to form is left subject to the control of § 982 of the Political Code."

Liability of sureties. The sureties of a receiver merely undertake that he will faithfully execute the orders of the court; and if the receiver obeys such orders, the sureties are exonerated. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121.

§ 568. Powers of receivers. The receiver has, under the control of the court, power to bring and defend actions in his own name, as receiver; to take and keep possession of the property, to receive rents, collect debts, to compound for and compromise the same, to make transfers, and generally to do such acts respecting the property as the court may authorize.

Legislation § 568. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Scope of section. It was not intended by § 564, ante, to create a new lien by the mere appointment of a receiver in an action to foreclose a mortgage. Locke v. Klunker, 123 Cal. 231; 55 Pac. 993.

Power of receiver. A receiver appointed to keep, and care for, and dispose of property until the appointment of an assignee, has no further powers, save that he may sue and be sued in his own name, collect debts, and do such other acts respecting the property as the court may direct; but he is not authorized to bring suits not connected with his receivership, and necessary for him to perform its functions, nor to sue in his own name for property which has not come into his possession. Tibbets v. Cohn, 116 Cal. 365; 48 Pac. 372. A receiver can, with the permission of the court, do anything the court may do to make the most out of the assets in his hands; thus, he may settle disputed claims, compromise with debtors, lease and operate other property, and complete unfinished work. Pacific Ry. Co. v. Wade, 91 Cal. 449; 25 Am. St. Rep. 201; 13 L. R. A. 754; 27 Pac. 768. A receiver, appointed only to take possession of a mortgaged street-railway, and operate the same, has no authority to collect debts due to the defendant before his appointment, and mingle the funds thus received with those received in the course of his receivership. California Title Ins. etc. Co. v. Consolidated Piedmont Cable Co., 117 Cal. 237; 49 Pac. 1. The receiver of a mortgaged field has no right to cut timber from other land of the mortgagor, in order to build fences or houses on the tract covered by the mortgage, although it might benefit the mortgagor. Staples v. May, 87 Cal. 178; 25 Pac. 346. The receiver of an insolvent corporation is not bound to perform any of the contracts of the company, unless it is to the interest of creditors, or unless required by order of court; but delivery of water for irrigation under a contract of the company, is proper, where the receiver is the only person who can do so (Russ Lumber etc. Co. v. Muscupiabe etc. Water Co., 120 Cal. 521; 65 Am. St. Rep. 186; 52 Pac. 995); and the receiver may carry out to completion a special contract, necessary in the dissolution of a partnership, when in the interests of and with the consent of the partners. Rochat v. Gee, 137 Cal. 497; 70 Pac. 478. A receiver, appointed in a foreclosure suit against a deceased mortgagor, is not a public officer, charged with a trust as such officer, and he may act as agent for the sale of the note and mortgage, and make a valid contract, where the purchasers are not misled and the creditors of the deceased mortgagor do not complain. De Jarnatt v. Peake, 123 Cal. 607; 56 Pac. 467.

Order appointing receiver. The mere appointment of a receiver is not a determination of what the court shall order him to do; and to compel a person to make certain payments to the receiver is as much in the discretion of the court as the appointment of the receiver. Bank of Woodland v. Heron, 120 Cal. 614; 52 Pac. 1006. The appointment of a receiver is merely ancillary, where he is appointed before judgment to protect, pending litigation, the property in litigation, and in this case neither his functions nor the power of the court to remove or control him are suspended by an appeal; but the appointment of a receiver is not ancillary, where he is appointed after judgment to carry it into effect, as in the case of his appointment to sell mortgaged premises under a decree of foreclosure, when his proceedings are suspended by an appeal. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. The appointment is classed in our statutes as a provisional remedy, and is sometimes styled an equitable execution before judgment; and where the appointment is made after judgment, the functions of the receiver, either for the purpose of carrying the judgment into effect or for its preservation until execution thereof, are limited to the property described in the judgment. Kreling v. Kreling, 118 Cal. 421; 50 Pac. 549. Usually, a court will not appoint a receiver to carry on a business permanently; but it is not unusual or erroneous to authorize him to do so temporarily, where the interests of the parties require it. Rochat v. Gee, 137 Cal. 497; 70 Pac. 478. Where a receiver was appointed to take possession of and to operate a street-railway, the court may enter orders authorizing and directing the issuance of receiver's certificates, and providing that such certificates shall be a first lien upon the property in the hands of the receiver. Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 285; 47 Pac. 60. A direction, in a judgment, that, after the confirmation of a sale, the receiver shall execute a deed, will not be assumed to import that he shall execute it before he is authorized by law so to do, and such direction is not available to a judgment debtor, on appeal, for the purpose of impairing the sufficiency of the judgment directing the sale. Woodbury v. Nevada Southern Ry. Co., 120 Cal. 463; 52 Pac. 730. As against a collateral attack upon an order appointing a receiver, if the jurisdiction of the court can be upheld and its action validated, this will be done, even though the facts showing such jurisdiction are defectively stated and inferences must be indulged in to support the judgment. Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 285; 47 Pac. 60. Where a judgment directed the defendant to satisfy a claim within a specified time, and, in default thereof, that certain real estate should be sold and the proceeds applied on the judgment, and in case of a deficiency, that judgment should be docketed therefor against the defendant, the court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver to take charge of any other property than that described in the judgment. Kreling v. Kreling, 118 Cal. 421; 50 Pac. 549. An action against a corporation upon a note is an action at law, and the appointment of a receiver in such a case is unauthorized and void, although the corporation assents to the appointment, and the complaint alleges that it is insolvent and that other creditors are threatening to sue it, that it has no property to respond to the judgment, and that the action is brought in behalf of the plaintiff and other creditors. Smith v. Superior Court, 97 Cal. 348; 32 Pac. 322; and see Grant v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 71; 47 Pac. 872.

Suits by receivers. This section clears the way of all former niceties as to the questions whether a receiver could sue in his own name, and whether he could recover property which had not once been in his actual possession; and in Real Estate Associates v. Superior Court, 60 Cal. 223, the power of a receiver to maintain necessary actions in insolvent cases is expressly recognized. Dennery v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 7; 24 Pac. 147. A receiver in insolvency proceedings may maintain all actions necessary to preserve any property which comes into his possession (Tibbets v. Cohn, 116 Cal. 365; 48 Pac. 372); and he is expressly authorized, or directed, to sue for the recovery of goods fraudulently transferred by the insolvent, after demand and refusal (Tapscott v. Lyon, 103 Cal. 297; 37 Pac. 225); and he may bring an action for the conversion of property during his receivership, and must allege therein that his insolvent was the owner or entitled to the possession of the property, and that there has been a demand and refusal. Daggett v. Gray, 5 Cal. Unrep. 74; 40 Pac. 959. A receiver cannot sue to recover property which has not come into his possession, or which should have been delivered to him; he cannot maintain trover for property of the insolvent converted before the adjudication, or to recover property transferred by the debtor in fraud of his creditors (Tibbets v. Cohn, 116 Cal. 365; 48 Pac. 372); nor can he maintain an action of replevin, in an action of foreclosure, to recover the possession of personal property, not taken from his possession, but held by the sheriff under a writ of attachment, and in the possession of the receiver merely as a caretaker for the sheriff. Bishop v. McKillican, 124 Cal. 321; 71 Am. St. Rep. 68; 57 Pac. 76. An action brought by a receiver to set aside judgments obtained by fraud is proper; but he should resort to the usual means of an injunction, and give other security to indemnify creditors if they should ultimately establish the validity of their claims. Petaluma Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 488; 44 Pac. 177. A receiver, appointed in a foreclosure suit, is not a public officer, charged with a trust as such officer; and where he acts as an agent for the sale of the mortgaged premises, and a check is given by the purchasers in payment of the purchase price, he may maintain an action against the makers upon stoppage of payment. De Jarnatt v. Peake, 123 Cal. 607; 56 Pac. 467. A foreign receiver cannot sue in another state; but, on the ground of comity, courts will, where the good of a large number demands it, permit such suits to be maintained, and recognize orders and judgments of courts of sister states; but such right to sue is not conceded, nor a suit permitted to be maintained by a foreign receiver, where the claim conflicts with the rights of citizens or creditors in the state where suit is brought. Humphreys v. Hopkins, 81 Cal. 551; 15 Am. St. Rep. 76; 6 L. R. A. 792; 22 Pac. 892; Ward v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co., 135 Cal. 235; 67 Pac. 124; and see Lackmann v. Supreme Council, 142 Cal. 22; 75 Pac. 583. A receiver appointed in another state, presumably without the assent of other creditors in this state, who are not parties to the action, cannot represent such creditors in a suit between the receiver and a domestic attaching creditor. Lackmann v. Supreme Council, 142 Cal. 22; 75 Pac. 583. An action by a foreign receiver cannot be maintained here against a domestic creditor claiming the same fund, situated here, of an insolvent foreign corporation, sought to be appropriated by the receiver of such corporation. Ward v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co., 135 Cal. 235; 67 Pac. 124. No rule of state comity or law requires the rights of a domestic attaching creditor to be set aside in deference to a foreign receiver claiming under the laws of another state. Lackmann v. Supreme Council, 142 Cal. 22; 75 Pac. 583.

Suits against receivers. Courts of equity will not permit their receivers to be sued, or property in their possession to be seized or sold, without leave asked and granted; but, since the refusal of leave to sue in other tribunals, or to enforce the judgments of other courts, would, in many cases, destroy or impair rights which the court appointing the receiver has no power to conserve, it is the boast of such courts that they never refuse leave in a proper case. Petaluma Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 488; 44 Pac. 177. It is contrary to the established doctrine of courts of equity to permit a receiver to be made a party defendant, unless by consent of court: this is for the protection of receivers against unnecessary litigation, because relief can be obtained on motion to the court making the appointment; but such action may be justified, where the rights of the parties or of the receiver will not be injuriously affected by the decree, and where the decree specially reserves all rights of the receiver. Murray v. Etchepare, 132 Cal. 286; 64 Pac. 282. A suit, by permission, can always be brought against a receiver, to present claims against him in his official capacity, on such terms as will protect him, while affording full opportunity to the plaintiff to test his right. Tapscott v. Lyon, 103 Cal. 297; 37 Pac. 225. Whether the court will permit, upon application, an independent suit to be brought relative to the property in the hands of a receiver, or will compel intervention in the proceeding in which the receiver is appointed, is a matter for its discretion; and when it cannot afford the same relief in intervention as the claimant would be entitled to in an independent action, it should permit an independent suit. De Forrest v. Coffey, 154 Cal. 444; 98 Pac. 27. A superior court, having jurisdiction of an action in which a receiver of an insolvent corporation is appointed, does not abuse its discretion in denying leave to sue him in an independent action. De Forrest v. Coffey, 154 Cal. 444; 98 Pac. 27; Auzerais v. Coffey, 155 Cal. 102; 99 Pac. 1134. The claimant of real property, under title adverse to that of parties represented by a receiver in an action to foreclose a mortgage, should be granted leave, on application, to commence an action of ejectment, in order to try the question of title. Petaluma Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 488; 44 Pac. 177. A mortgagee should not be required to satisfy the court, in appointing a receiver, of the validity of his mortgage, or in other words, to litigate the whole question of the mortgagor's liability, and to establish it, on the motion, as a condition precedent to any permission to sue the receiver in the county where the land is situate; for, whenever the court appointing a receiver cannot protect an asserted right in a cause before it, the party will be allowed to proceed in the proper forum to establish his right if he can, and to enforce it by appropriate means. Petaluma Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 488; 44 Pac. 177. A judgment against a receiver, final because of failure to appeal therefrom or to move for a new trial, cannot be enforced by execution: it is against the receiver in his official capacity, and operates only as an established claim against the assets in his possession; its enforcement is a matter for the determination of the court having jurisdiction of the receivership, and to it application must be made for its payment. Painter v. Painter, 138 Cal. 231; 94 Am. St. Rep. 47; 71 Pac. 90. The rights of creditors are statutory, and cannot be divested by the mere volition of the court or judge in refusing leave to sue a receiver; but creditors have the right to take such proceedings as the law exacts for preserving or enforcing their liens according to their priority. Petaluma Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 488; 44 Pac. 177. A receiver lawfully in possession of property by direction of the court, and claimed to belong to the insolvent, cannot be held personally responsible as a trespasser, by adverse claimants, upon demand and refusal to give up the property. Tapscott v. Lyon, 103 Cal. 297; 37 Pac. 225. Where a receiver, holding by a valid appointment, containing no direction in excess of the jurisdiction of the court, attempts to take property lawfully in the possession of another, and to which he is not entitled, he may be resisted, just as any other trespasser may be resisted, and a person defending his lawful possession is not thereby brought in conflict with the court, as the fault is that of the receiver alone; and if he gains possession of property claimed by a stranger, the court will either order him to restore it, or permit an action to be brought against him to try the title. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. A receiver, being the legal custodian of all the books of a corporation defendant, may be made a party defendant to an application for an order to compel the entry of stock, in the transferee's name, upon the books of the defendant corporation, and may be commanded to make the proper entry of the transfer of the stock upon such books. People v. California Safe Deposit etc. Co., 18 Cal. App. 732; 124 Pac. 558.

Receipt of rents. Where a receiver collects and preserves rents, there is no necessity for a specific decree declaring such funds to be the property of the party finally recovering possession of the lands. Garniss v. Superior Court, 88 Cal. 413; 26 Pac. 351. The title of the defendant to the rents and profits of land under foreclosure of mortgage is in no way affected by the possession of the receiver. Garretson Investment Co. v. Arnot, 144 Cal. 64; 77 Pac. 770.

Compromise claims and payment of debts. Ordinarily, a receiver should not pay debts without a previous direction of the court; but the general rule is not inexorable, and, where the order of appointment is not broad enough, in a proper case such action of the receiver may be subsequently sanctioned by the court. Rochat v. Gee, 137 Cal. 497; 70 Pac. 478.

Possession and care of property by receiver. The possession of property by a receiver, pendente lite, does not affect the title to the property (Tibbets v. Cohn, 116 Cal. 365; 48 Pac. 372); nor does a mortgagee acquire any new or additional lien through the possession of the receiver. Bank of Woodland v. Heron, 120 Cal. 614; 52 Pac. 1006. The property of a corporation in the hands of a receiver is in custodia legis: the possession of the receiver is the possession of the court, for the benefit of all parties interested (De Forrest v. Coffey, 154 Cal. 444; 98 Pac. 27); and no one claiming a right paramount to that of the receiver can assert it in any action without the permission of the court; no sale can take place, no debt can be paid, no contract can be made, without its sanction. Pacific Ry. Co. v. Wade, 91 Cal. 449; 25 Am. St. Rep. 201; 13 L. R. A. 754; 27 Pac. 768. What the receiver does, the court does; the court, therefore, and not the receiver, holds, administers, and disposes of the property in the hands of the receiver; and, as long as it is undisposed of, action by the court is necessary. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. The receiver is the officer or representative of the court, appointed to take charge and management of the property which is the subject of litigation before it, for the purpose of its preservation and ultimate disposition according to final judgment therein; and as, in any particular action, the court has jurisdiction over only the property which is the subject of that litigation, that is the only property which it can authorize its receiver to interfere with or take into its possession. Kreling v. Kreling, 118 Cal. 421; 50 Pac. 549. Where the goods are described, and are in the possession of the person whose property the receiver is directed to take into possession, or are voluntarily delivered to him by the person having them, he must take them, on penalty of incurring contempt, and, having thus taken them, he cannot surrender them to an adverse claimant, without leave of the court. Tapscott v. Lyon, 103 Cal. 297; 37 Pac. 225. The receiver is under the control of the court, as is the property of which he is the custodian, and while the court will not permit any interference with such property without its leave, neither will it withhold such property from one who shows that he is entitled to it. De Forrest v. Coffey, 154 Cal. 444; 98 Pac. 27. Though the receiver is appointed upon the application of one of the parties interested in the property, yet his holding is not merely for the benefit of such party, or of any other party: it is the holding of the court for the equal benefit of those finally adjudged to have rights in it; and when the rights of the parties are established, the receiver is considered as holding for the benefit of the parties entitled to the property. Garniss v. Superior Court, 88 Cal. 413; 26 Pac. 351; Pacific Railway Co. v. Wade, 91 Cal. 449; 25 Am. St. Rep. 201; 27 Pac. 768. The holding of property by the receiver differs essentially from the holding of property under attachment: in the latter case, the law itself provides that the property shall be disposed of to satisfy the judgment; in the former, there is no such provision, and the property is in the hands of the receiver, to be disposed of by the court after a valid adjudication. Garretson Investment Co. v. Arndt, 144 Cal. 64; 77 Pac. 770. Where the receiver is lawfully in possession of property claimed to belong to his insolvent, even an adverse claimant is not justified in disturbing his possession without leave of court; nor is he responsible to such person in an action for the value of the property; and, having no right to deliver it to the adverse claimant without leave of the court, he cannot be held responsible for not doing so. Tapscott v. Lyon, 103 Cal. 297; 37 Pac. 225. Such discretion as a court has to prevent proceedings by adverse claimants to property in the custody of a receiver appointed by it is a regulated discretion, which cannot be abused. Petaluma Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 488; 44 Pac. 177. Where the order appointing a receiver was made ex parte, and it was not shown that anything connected therewith ever came to the knowledge of the corporation defendant, and it was insolvent, and seems to have left its creditors to get what they could out of the property, without objection, the presumption is, that it desired its property to go to its creditors according to their legal rights. Staples v. May, 87 Cal. 178; 25 Pac. 346. The mere order of the court appointing a receiver does not constitute, ipso facto, a possession of the property, independently of any actual possession of the receiver, or of any attempt by him to take possession; and an assignee of the owner of a crop, who took title prior to the taking possession thereof by a receiver appointed ex parte in a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage, without knowledge of such appointment, is entitled to an order directing the receiver to deliver the crop to him, rather than to the mortgagee plaintiff in the foreclosure suit. Bank of Woodland v. Herron, 120 Cal. 614; 52 Pac. 1006. The receiver cannot, when appointed for any proper purpose, be empowered to take possession of the crops of a mortgagor and apply them to the mortgage debt, nor, having taken possession, is any lien thereby acquired: this would be to give a lien upon property not included in the mortgage. Locke v. Klunker, 123 Cal. 231; 55 Pac. 993. The receiver is not required to place himself in the position of a wrong-doer, and need not take property from third persons, unless under an express order to that effect: suit should be brought to recover property in the possession of adverse claimants; but where the property is legally and properly in the possession of the receiver, the court should protect that possession, not only against acts of violence, but also against suits at law, so that a third person claiming the property may be compelled to come in and ask to be examined pro interesse suo, if he wishes to test the justice of the claim. Tapscott v. Lyon, 103 Cal. 297; 37 Pac. 225. The title of the defendant to the rents and profits of land under foreclosure of the mortgage is in no way affected by the possession of the receiver, nor can he be divested of it otherwise than by a valid adjudication; and where there is neither allegation nor prayer to justify the adjudication, it is incompetent for the court so to adjudge. Garretson Investment Co. v. Arndt, 144 Cal. 64; 77 Pac. 770. A receiver appointed to take charge of the separate property of a husband in an action for divorce, takes the property subject to all prior liens and encumbrances. Petaluma Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 488; 44 Pac. 177. The receiver has no authority to take property from the possession of strangers, who claim in good faith as absolute owners in their own right. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. Where a judgment debtor has property which cannot be reached by execution, and which he refuses to apply to the satisfaction of the judgment, he may be compelled, in proceedings supplementary to execution, to deliver it to a receiver appointed to dispose of it in aid of the execution. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120; Matteson v. Conley, 144 Cal. 483. Patent rights, assignable by the voluntary act of the owner, and by act and operation of law, can be ordered assigned to the receiver, to be sold and applied to the satisfaction of a judgment. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120. The court cannot direct a receiver to take charge of any other or additional property than that described in the judgment (Kreling v. Kreling, 118 Cal. 421; 50 Pac. 549); nor can it confer color of authority upon a receiver to extract ores from lands not covered by the securities involved in the suit, although it might enhance the value of such securities (Staples v. May, 87 Cal. 178; 25 Pac. 346); nor has the court jurisdiction, after the entry of a money judgment, to continue the receiver for the purpose of enforcing the judgment, where he had not taken possession of any property before the judgment. White v. White, 130 Cal. 597; 80 Am. St. Rep. 150; 62 Pac. 1062. When the bill upon which the appointment of a receiver was made is dismissed on demurrer, it is the duty of the court to direct the receiver to restore the property to the person from whom it was taken. Baughman v. Superior Court, 72

Cal. 572; 14 Pac. 207. There is no injustice in requiring a receiver to put back into a fund, where it belongs, a sum of money to which he has never had any right. Staples v. May, 87 Cal. 178; 25 Pac. 346. Where, upon false allegations in a pleading, the court appoints a receiver, and, at the trial, judgment is entered for the defendant, an order directing the receiver to turn the property over to the defendant is proper. Loftus v. Fischer, 117 Cal. 128; 48 Pac. 1030. The receiver may apply to the court for instruction and authority, from time to time, and in the order appointing him he may be directed to apply for instructions when necessary: he is but the hand of the court, to aid in managing and preserving the property, and any order of the court may, if erroneous, be reviewed on appeal, after final judgment has been rendered, or, in exceptional cases, after settlement of the final account of the receiver. Free Gold Mining Co. v. Spiers, 135 Cal. 130; 67 Pac. 61. An order for the direction of the receiver is in the discretion of the court, and requires immediate execution, to be of any avail; but the interests of all parties might be greatly prejudiced if every order of the court in connection with property in its custody was the subject of a direct appeal; any errors in the order should be reviewed upon an appeal from the judgment. Free Gold Mining Co. v. Spiers, 135 Cal. 130; 67 Pac. 61. The filing of an undertaking on appeal from an order appointing a receiver operates as a supersedeas, suspends all authority of the receiver under the order, withdraws from him the right to the control and possession of the property involved, and restores the same to the pleading party from whom it had been taken. Jacobs v. Superior Court, 133 Cal. 364; 85 Am. St. Rep. 204; 65 Pac. 826. Mere possession, by a receiver appointed in a foreign jurisdiction, of the debtor's property, however lawful, does not screen it from attachment in this state: to show a right superior to that of creditors, he must fall back upon the order appointing him receiver, and must depend upon the comity of this state as to the effect to be allowed that order. Humphreys v. Hopkins, 81 Cal. 551; 15 Am. St. Rep. 76; 6 L. R. A. 792; 22 Pac. 892; Ward v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co., 135 Cal. 235; 67 Pac. 124; Lackmann v. Supreme Council, 142 Cal. 22; 75 Pac. 583. Where property is in the hands of a receiver appointed in a suit to cancel a lease, and a similar suit was brought in a Federal court for the same purpose, to which the receiver was not a party, it cannot be objected to that court's jurisdiction that the property is in the hands of such receiver, and that leave had not been obtained from the state court to sue him. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co., 147 Cal. 663; 82 Pac. 319.

Receiver's certificates. It will be presumed, in support of a judgment holding a receiver's certificates valid, that everything necessary to authorize the court to order the issue of such certificates was shown, in the absence of evidence to the contrary. Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 285; 47 Pac. 60.

What expenses receiver may incur. The appointment of a receiver implies a material diminution of the fund out of which creditors are to be paid, and from which, in the first place, the fees of the receiver, his counsel and assistants, are to be subtracted. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. The receiver should be allowed reasonable fees for counsel employed by him in the proper discharge of his trust, the costs of litigation, and the expenses in taking care of, protecting, and repairing the property in his charge. McLane v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 606; 6 Pac. 748. The receiver should be allowed reasonable expenses incurred by him in the harvesting of a crop, although his appointment was improper (Locke v. Klunker, 123 Cal. 231; 55 Pac. 993); and he should be allowed expenses incurred in finishing an uncompleted contract, and paying debts incident thereto, in winding up the affairs of a partnership. Rochat v. Gee, 137 Cal. 497; 70 Pac. 478. The trustee and receiver of a railroad corporation should be allowed his expenses, reasonably incurred in the discharge of his trust, and such expenses are a lien upon the trust property, prior to that of the bondholders. McLane v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 606; 6 Pac. 478. Where, under circumstances authorizing such action, property is taken into the possession of the court, through a receiver, of such a character as to give the public a right to its continued operation and use, the court acquires the right and assumes the obligation of keeping such property in operation, and is authorized to incur expense and create obligations therefor (Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 285; 47 Pac. 60); and the receiver is justified in expending money for the purchase of rolling-stock and machinery, necessary for the operation of a railroad. McLane v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 606; 6 Pac. 478. The court may properly direct a receiver to pay a physician's bill for professional services, found to be a necessary item of maintenance, and being the purpose for which the funds were in the hands of the receiver. Murray v. Murray, 115 Cal. 266; 56 Am. St. Rep. 97; 37 L. R. A. 626; 47 Pac. 37.

Compensation and reimbursement of receiver. The amount of compensation and expenses allowed a receiver is properly costs of suit, and should be paid in preference to general creditors. Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 136 Cal. 646; 69 Pac. 436.

Money in the hands of a receiver, collected by him under his order of appointment, is subject to his lien upon it for his fees and costs of receivership. Garniss v. Superior Court, 88 Cal. 413; 26 Pac. 351. The costs of a receivership are primarily a charge upon, and are to be paid out of, the fund in his possession; but it is by no means the rule, that a receiver must in all cases look to that fund alone for his reimbursement, and that he has no other remedy if that fund is not available; nor is it necessary that the order settling the receiver's account shall determine what party is liable to him for his expenses and compensation, and where, before such settlement, the suit was dismissed by the plaintiff, at whose instance he was appointed, he may maintain an action against the plaintiff for his expenses and compensation. Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 129 Cal. 589; 62 Pac. 177. A mortgagee at whose instance a receiver is appointed in an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage is answerable for the costs of the receivership, and the receiver has a preferred lien for his expenses upon the funds and estate which come into his hands. Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 99 Cal. 407; 33 Pac. 1132; Fischer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 129; 42 Pac. 561. In an action by a receiver for compensation, it is a complete defense that he was appointed at his own request, and that he agreed to look entirely to the income from the property for compensation. Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 136 Cal. 646; 69 Pac. 436. An order fixing the compensation of a receiver, founded on an absolutely void order of appointment, is equally void. Grant v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 71; 47 Pac. 872. Where a receiver has gained possession of property through an irregular, unauthorized appointment, or if the property belongs to a third party, and is taken from him by paramount authority, the person at whose instance he was appointed is liable for his compensation. Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 129 Cal. 589; 62 Pac. 177. The obligation to compensate a receiver appointed under a null and void order rests upon those who sought and procured his appointment. Grant v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 71; 47 Pac. 872. An order fixing the compensation of a receiver, and taxing it as costs as against all the parties, and directing the receiver to apply toward its payment the balance of a fund in his hands as such receiver, is a final judgment in a collateral matter, and is appealable. Grant v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 71; 47 Pac. 872; Grant v. Superior Court, 106 Cal. 324; 39 Pac. 604. The statute of limitations does not begin to run against the action of a receiver to recover his compensation, until his account is allowed and settled; and the time during which an appeal from an order of allowance is pending suspends the running of the statute. Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 129 Cal. 589; 62 Pac. 177.

Settling final account. The court has jurisdiction to settle the account of a receiver appointed by it in an action, although the plaintiff dismissed the action before the issuance of any summons or the appearance of any defendant. Pacific Bank v. Madera Fruit etc. Co., 124 Cal. 525; 57 Pac. 462. A receiver, authorized to manage, control, and dispose of all the property of a partnership, may carry out to completion a special contract, and the court may properly allow all his expenses incurred therein, in the settlement of his final account. Rochat v. Gee, 137 Cal. 497; 70 Pac. 478. Formal findings, separate from the order approving or disapproving the account of a receiver, are not necessary in settling the final account. Rochat v. Gee, 137 Cal. 497; 70 Pac. 478; Estate of McPhee, 156 Cal. 337; 104 Pac. 455. There is no necessity for an order to the receiver to surrender property upon the settlement of his final account, where the property was originally purchased by the partnership from the receiver, and they never paid any part of the deferred purchase-money, and after the receiver paid all the debts and completed the contract the parties to the action took no further interest in the property, and the action was dismissed, and no claim for any settlement with the receiver was demanded for nearly ten years. Rochat v. Gee, 137 Cal. 497; 70 Pac. 478.

Discharge of receiver. Where the administration of a receiver is unduly prolonged, or he is unfaithful to his trust, the parties may apply for his discharge: they could have opposed his appointment in the first instance. Painter v. Painter, 138 Cal. 231; 94 Am. St. Rep. 47; 71 Pac. 90. Where the bill upon which a receiver was appointed is afterwards dismissed on demurrer, the duties of the receiver cease as between the parties to the action; and so where the defendant finally obtains judgment, the entry of judgment seems to have the effect of terminating the receiver's functions, although the plaintiff perfects an appeal; but the abatement of the action or the entry of final judgment does not discharge the receiver ipso facto. Baughman v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 572; 14 Pac. 207. Although the functions of the receiver terminate with the determination of the suit, yet he is still amenable to the court as its officer, until he complies with its direction as to the disposal of funds received during the receivership. Pacific Bank v. Madera Fruit etc. Co., 124 Cal. 525; 57 Pac. 462. The receiver is discharged by a decree in the cause, unless he is expressly continued; but this discharge refers to the surcease of his functions as receiver proper, leaving on him the duty of properly accounting under the order of the court; and whether he is thereafter called receiver or not, he is subject to the order of the court with respect to the winding up of his affairs as receiver, and until he is discharged of his responsibilities as trustee. Baughman v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 572; 14 Pac. 207. The end of the suit, its final adjudication, gives cause for the discharge of the receiver, but does not, ipso facto, effect his discharge, which results only from an order or decree of the court so directing; after the settlement of the suit, the receiver must have time and opportunity to prepare and present his accounts, and for the adjustment of the details of the receivership; nor does the dismissal of the action discharge the receiver from accountability to the court: he is still an officer of the court, and subject to its orders. Pacific Bank v. Madera Fruit etc. Co., 124 Cal. 525; 57 Pac. 462. The functions of a receiver, appointed pending an action for divorce, who does not take possession of any property before the judgment, terminates with the entry of the judgment. White v. White, 130 Cal. 597; 80 Am. St. Rep. 150; 62 Pac. 1062. Where the complaint is insufficient to justify the appointment of a receiver pending the action, the court has no power to continue him in office after the making of a final decree. Bank of Woodland v. Stephens, 144 Cal. 659; 79 Pac. 379. Where a receiver is appointed at the request of the plaintiff, for a purpose ancillary to the main object of the action, and judgment is afterwards rendered in favor of the defendant, an appeal by the plaintiff from the judgment does not deprive the lower court of jurisdiction to hear and determine a motion made by the defendant for the discharge of the receiver. Baughman v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 572; 14 Pac. 207.

Remedies. An order fixing the compensation of a receiver, whose appointment is in excess of the jurisdiction of the court, may be reviewed either upon certiorari or upon appeal, and prohibition does not lie to arrest the proceedings in the superior court (Grant v. Superior Court, 106 Cal. 324; 39 Pac. 604); and an order appointing a receiver, made without jurisdiction, may be annulled upon certiorari, notwithstanding the petitioner has appealed therefrom and has given an undertaking to stay proceedings. Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 124 Cal. 385; 57 Pac. 216. Parties have undoubted right to appeal from orders, made after final judgment, directing a receiver in an equity case to pay counsel fees; and therefore certiorari does not lie to review the same. Elliott v. Superior Court, 144 Cal. 501; 103 Am. St. Rep. 102; 77 Pac. 1109. An order, pending suit, authorizing the receiver to make purchases to conduct the prosecution of work, to be paid for out of the funds in his hands, is not appealable. Free Gold etc. Co. v. Spiers, 135 Cal. 130; 67 Pac. 61. An order authorizing and directing a receiver to pay a judgment rendered against him, cannot be attacked upon appeal, on the ground that the court erred in originally appointing him, where there is nothing to show that the court abused its discretion in granting the order. Painter v. Painter, 138 Cal. 231; 94 Am. St. Rep. 47; 71 Pac. 90. Where the receiver, under a void judicial order, seizes property in the possession of a stranger to the suit, an appeal affords no remedy for the wrong threatened; in such case, prohibition is appropriate, and the fact that the petitioner could have appealed from the order appointing the receiver, does not preclude him from that relief; the writ runs to and operates directly upon the court, but indirectly upon the receiver; and if served upon the receiver, it is notice that the proceedings are arrested, and stays his hand. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. The receiver may apply for the examination of the insolvent concerning his affairs: by this means the court can fully preserve the property of the insolvent and protect the rights of creditors. Dennery v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 7; 24 Pac. 147. Where the receiver has possession of property under a void commission, and the further acts of the court are arrested by prohibition, the writ must require the restoration of the property to the petitioner, otherwise prohibition would be valueless; and where the court exceeds its jurisdiction in appointing a receiver, or in directing him to take specific property out of the possession of a stranger, the wrong is in the order of the court, and the appropriate remedy is in some writ or proceeding operating on the court to restrain its judicial action, and not in the sort of resistance that may be opposed to an ordinary wrong-doer, or in such an action as may be brought against a private person who has committed a trespass. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. He may employ counsel. Adams v. Woods, 8 Cal. 315. Generally, he can pay out nothing, except on an order of the court; but there are exceptions to the rule, and he will not be denied reimbursements in every case in which he neglects to obtain the order, especially in a court of equity. Adams v. Woods, 15 Cal. 207. On an application, after final judgment, for an order for a receiver, that he pay over to the prevailing party money in his hands as receiver, it will not be presumed that the receiver has transcended his duties and took possession of property to which he was not entitled; nor is the opposite party entitled to have issues framed and submitted to a referee or jury to ascertain the ownership of the money in the receiver's hands. Whitney v. Buckman, 26 Cal. 451.

2. Fees. See Adams v. Haskell, 6 Cal. 475.

§ 569. Investment of funds. Funds in the hands of a receiver may be invested upon interest, by order of the court; but no such order can be made, except upon the consent of all the parties to the action.

Legislation § 569. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 142; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 570. Disposition of unclaimed funds in hands of receiver. A receiver having any funds in his hands belonging to a person whose whereabouts are unknown to him, shall, before receiving his discharge as such receiver, publish a notice, in one or more newspapers published in the county, at least once a week for four consecutive weeks, setting forth the name of the owner of any unclaimed funds, the last known place of residence or post-office address of such owner and the amount of such unclaimed funds. Any funds remaining in his hands unclaimed for thirty days after the date of the last publication of such notice, shall be reported to the court and, upon order of the court, all such funds must be paid into the state treasury accompanied with a copy of the order, which must set forth the facts required in the notice herein provided. Such funds shall be paid out by the state treasurer to the owner thereof or his order in such manner and upon such terms as are now or may hereafter be provided by law.

Legislation § 570. 1. Added by Stats. 1913, p. 92.

2. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 107, substituting the present final sentence for one reading, "All funds so paid into the state treasury must be received, invested, accounted for and paid out, in the same manner and by the same officers as is provided by law in the case of escheated estates, and in section twelve hundred and seventy-two of this code."

CHAPTER VI.

DEPOSIT IN COURT.

§ 572. Deposit in court.
§ 573. Money paid to clerk must be deposited with county treasurer.
§ 574. Manner of enforcing the order.

§ 572. Deposit in court. When it is admitted by the pleadings, or shown upon the examination of a party to the action, that he has in his possession, or under his control, any money or other thing capable of delivery, which, being the subject of litigation, is held by him as trustee for another party, or which belongs or is due to another party, the court may order the same, upon motion, to be deposited in court or delivered to such party, upon such conditions as may be just, subject to the further direction of the court.

Legislation § 572. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 142.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 142; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 710, (1) in first line, changing "pleading" to "pleadings"; (2) inserting "to the action," after "party," "as in its present form," the code commissioner said, "the section is entirely misleading."

When court may order deposit. To justify the making of an order requiring a deposit in court, the admission, in the pleadings, of having property, not directly the subject of litigation, in possession, belonging to another, must be free from any claim thereto. Burke v. Superior Court, 7 Cal. App. 178; 93 Pac. 1058. The order allowed by this section is, that the party pay the money into court, or to the party to whom it is admitted by the pleading, or shown by the examination of the party, to be due: to justify the court in ordering a deposit in bank, subject to its further order, of money which the party claims as his own, the court must first determine that such party has no title to it. Ex parte Casey, 71 Cal. 269; 11 Pac. 118. If the money in the possession of the party is not the subject of the litigation, but its payment is incident thereto, dependent upon the judgment to be rendered, as in the case of an action for redemption, specific performance, accounting, rescission, or the like, the provisions of this section do not authorize the issuance of an order to deposit it in court; and where the court ordered certain moneys, or a certificate of deposit, to be paid into court, and exception was taken thereto, such order may be reviewed as error of law occurring at the trial, upon appeal from an order granting or denying a new trial. Green v. Duvergey, 146 Cal. 379; 80 Pac. 234.

Trustee. This section refers to property without question in the hands of a trustee as trust property, or which belongs to or is due to another: it does not refer to that which an alleged trustee claims title to in his own right; and, under it, the court has no authority to adjudicate the title to property held by a person claiming it as his own. Ex parte Casey, 71 Cal. 269; 12 Pac. 118. Where the money directed to be paid into court was not at that time, and never had been, in the hands of the trustee, but was made up of moneys which the trustee should have but had not received as interest, the order is not within the class provided for by this section and the two following sections. Williams v. Dwinelle, 51 Cal. 442.

Sheriff's deposit not included. This section and § 573, post, provide for a case different from that of a sheriff depositing with the treasurer of a county, moneys received from a sale in foreclosure proceedings. Heppe v. Johnson, 73 Cal. 265; 14 Pac. 833.

Right to recover interest on fund in litigation or deposited in court. See note Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1004.

§ 573. Money paid to clerk must be deposited with county treasurer. Whenever money is paid into or deposited in court, the same must be delivered to the clerk in person, or to such of his deputies as shall be specially authorized by his appointment in writing to receive the same. He must, unless otherwise directed by law, deposit it with the county treasurer, to be held by him subject to the order of the court. The treasurer must keep each fund distinct, and open an account with each. Such appointment must be filed with the county treasurer, who must exhibit it, and give to each person applying for the same a certified copy of the same. It shall be in force until a revocation in writing is filed with the county treasurer, who must thereupon write "revoked," in ink, across the face of the appointment. For the safekeeping of the money deposited with him the treasurer is liable on his official bond.

Legislation § 573. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Stats. 1863–64, p. 468), and then read: "If the money is deposited in court it must be paid to the clerk, who must deposit it with the county treasurer, by him to be held subject to the order of the court. For the safe-keeping of the money deposited with him the treasurer is liable on his official bond."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 142; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 711; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in consolidating §§ 573 and 2104, there being two sections covering the same subject, where only one is needed, and omits the first sentence of the former section, so as to remove any possible conflict between them." When added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 394, § 2104 had, (1) in the first line, the words "moneys are" instead of "money is," and (2) the word "shall" instead of "must," in all instances.

Effect of order of court. When the court has taken cognizance of a fund, and, by its judgment, determines the same to have been paid into court, and the money is then deposited by the clerk with the county treasurer, as a deposit of court, the same becomes a deposit in court; and, however erroneously the court may have acted in the premises, its order, being within its jurisdiction, is not absolutely void, and is impregnable to collateral attack. Agoure v. Peck, 17 Cal. App. 759; 121 Pac. 706.

County treasurer should cash certificate of deposit. Where a county treasurer receives, as a deposit in court, a certificate of deposit indorsed to him, it is his duty to reduce it to money; if he does not, and loss ensues, he is answerable on his bond. Agoure v. Peck, 17 Cal. App. 759; 121 Pac. 706.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1863–64, p. 468.

§ 574. Manner of enforcing the order. Whenever, in the exercise of its authority, a court has ordered the deposit or delivery of money, or other thing, and the order is disobeyed, the court, beside punishing the disobedience, may make an order requiring the sheriff to take the money, or thing, and deposit or deliver it in conformity with the direction of the court.

Punishing the disobedience. Contempt. Post, § 1209.

Sheriff's duties as to official moneys. Pol. Code, § 4162.

Legislation § 574. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Scope of section. Proceedings under this section and §§ 714–721, post, were intended as a substitute for the creditors' bill as formerly used in chancery; so that any property reachable by a creditor's bill may now be reached by the process of proceedings supplementary to execution. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120; Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271; 37 Am. St. Rep. 50; 33 Pac. 857.

CHAPTER I.

JUDGMENT IN GENERAL.

§ 577. Judgment defined.
§ 578. Judgment may be for or against one of the parties.
§ 579. Judgment may be against one party and action proceed as to others.
§ 580. The relief to be awarded to the plaintiff.
§ 581. Action may be dismissed, or nonsuit entered.
§ 581a. Dismissal of action for failure to issue summons, when.
§ 581b. Dismissal of actions after transfer.
§ 582. All other judgments are on the merits.
§ 583. Dismissal of actions.

§ 577. Judgment defined. A judgment is the final determination of the rights of the parties in an action or proceeding.

Judgment.
1. Confession, by. Post, § 1132.
2. Default, by. Post, § 585.
3. Demurrer, on. Post, § 636.
4. Estoppel as to. Post, § 1908.
5. Generally. Post, § 664.
6. Nonsuit. Post, § 581.
7. On trial by court. Post, § 633.
8. On trial by jury. Post, § 664.

Order, defined. Post, § 1003.
Judgment in special proceeding, defined. See post, § 1064.

Legislation § 577. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 144 (New York Code, § 245), which had, (1) the word "the" instead of "an," before "action," and (2) at end of section, the words, "and may be entered in term or vacation."
2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 143; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Scope of section. The court is not prohibited by this section, nor by § 1003, post, from entering such intermediate determinations as the exigencies of a case may demand, and there is no conflict between these sections and § 187, ante, relating to the means provided for exercising jurisdiction. Thompson v. White, 63 Cal. 505. This section must be read in connection with §§ 138, 139, of the Civil Code, in actions for divorce and for the control of minor children. McKay v. McKay, 125 Cal. 65; 57 Pac. 677. The purpose of this section is, not to abolish the power of a court of equity to pronounce what in equity practice was called an interlocutory decree or decretal order, but only to provide that that which finally determines the rights of the parties should be called a judgment, and that every other direction of a court or judge made or entered in writing should be denominated an order. This section, and § 1003, post, were taken from the New York Code of Procedure, the purpose of which sections, as explained by the codifiers of that state, was to avoid the confusion incident to the use of the word "judgment" in two senses, one as interlocutory and the other as final; it being better to use the word only in the latter sense, and to designate all other written directions of the court as orders. Thompson v. White, 63 Cal. 505.

Judgment, final judgment, and order, defined. A judgment constituting a "final determination of the rights of the parties," is a final judgment. Hentig v. Johnson, 8 Cal. App. 221; 96 Pac. 390. A judgment may be final, in the sense of the term as used in this section and §§ 936, 1908, post, and yet not final as used in § 939, post. People v. Bank of Mendocino County, 133 Cal. 107; 65 Pac. 124. A judgment without parties, or a judgment, however perfect in form, attended with none of the consequences of a judgment, can be a judgment only by pretension, and its ratification by the creditor cannot affect rights acquired by a third party prior to the ratification, and while the judgment was one only in name. Wilcoxson v. Burton, 27 Cal. 228; 87 Am. Dec. 66. No particular form of judgment is prescribed in the statute; but it must be rendered by the court in such a mode as will conform to the cause of action stated and the proof adduced on the trial. McGarrahan v. Maxwell, 28 Cal. 78; Hentig v. Johnson, 8 Cal. App. 221; 96 Pac. 390. The decision of the court, if it finally determines the rights of parties touching the matters in controversy, is a judgment; and it is immaterial whether the court grants relief to each of the parties, or to one party only, or whether the relief is, in its character, legal or equitable, or both. McGarrahan v. Maxwell, 28 Cal. 75. An order is a decision made during the progress of the cause, either prior or subsequent to final judgment, settling some point of practice or some question collateral to the main issue presented by the pleadings, and necessary to be disposed of before such issue can be passed upon by the court, or necessary to be determined in carrying final judgment into execution; a final judgment is the determination of the court upon the issues presented by the pleadings, which ascertains and fixes absolutely and finally the rights of the parties in the particular suit in relation to the matter in litigation, and puts an end to the suit. Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 24; McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312; Estate of Smith, 98 Cal. 636; 33 Pac. 744; Wells v. Torrance, 119 Cal. 437; 51 Pac. 626. An order, as distinguished from a final judgment, is the judgment or conclusion of the court, upon any motion or proceeding not declared, determining the rights of the parties. Estate of Rose, 80 Cal. 166; 22 Pac. 86. The judgment becomes final upon its entry, not only as to the matters actually determined, but also as to every other matter which the parties might have litigated in the cause and have had decided. McKay v. McKay, 125 Cal. 65; 57 Pac. 677. Every order of a court or judge is, in one sense, a judgment; and the term "final judgment" means the ultimate or last judgment, which puts an end to the suit or proceedings. Estate of Smith, 98 Cal. 636; 33 Pac. 744. The judgment, when entered, becomes the record of what the court has determined, and it is then as binding as if entered immediately upon its rendition. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. The determination of a matter contained in an order is not a judgment. Scott v. Shields, 8 Cal. App. 12; 96 Pac. 385. Only one judgment is to be included in the judgment roll, and such judgment is the one defined in this section as constituting the final determination of the rights of the parties in the action. Colton Land etc. Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278; 33 Pac. 878. A judgment dissolving a partnership, and directing a sale of the partnership property and a division of the proceeds, is a final judgment. Clark v. Dunnam, 46 Cal. 204. A decree refusing to set aside a homestead is, in its essentials, a judgment; and a determination, upon the issue of widowhood, that a woman is not a widow, is a judgment. Estate of Harrington, 147 Cal. 124; 109 Am. St. Rep. 118; 81 Pac. 546. An order settling a receiver's account, although made before there has been a final judgment in the action in which he was appointed, is a final determination of the rights of the parties. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 134 Cal. 121; 66 Pac. 198. A decree pro confesso on a cross-bill in a suit in equity in a Federal court is interlocutory, and not final; and, after such decree has been vacated, no suit can be maintained in the state court upon it, or to annul the order vacating it. Blythe Co. v. Bankers' Investment Co., 147 Cal. 82; 81 Pac. 281. The statute of limitations does not begin to run against an action upon the judgment from the date of its entry, but only after the lapse of the period within which an appeal might be taken from the judgment if none is taken therefrom, or after the final determination following an appeal so taken. Feeney v. Hinckley, 134 Cal. 467; 86 Am. St. Rep. 290; 66 Pac. 580. The general rule, that, until a judgment becomes final by affirmance on appeal, or by lapse of the time within which an appeal may be taken, it is not admissible in evidence and cannot be relied on as the foundation of rights declared in it, does not apply to an action in the nature of a creditor's bill. Sewell v. Price, 164 Cal. 265; 128 Pac. 407. An entry by the clerk, at the end of the trial, in the minutes of the court, of the decision of the judge, being but a ministerial act of the clerk, does not constitute a judgment; but where the decision was rendered by the judge, but was not entered, before he went out of office, the entry of the judgment by the clerk, after the term of the former judge had expired, being but a ministerial act, has as much effect as if made before. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. An order settling the account of an administrator is not a final determination of the rights of the parties, constituting a judgment within the meaning of § 939, post, and especially where, in settling the account, portions thereof are left unsettled and undetermined. Estate of Rose, 80 Cal. 166; 22 Pac. 86. The judgment is not required to be signed by the judge, and a judgment produced from the original records needs no signature or exemplification; the signature is merely to give the clerk a surer means of accurately entering what has been adjudged. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26

Pac. 1074; Clink v. Thurston, 47 Cal. 21; Estate of Cook, 77 Cal. 220; 11 Am. St. Rep. 267; 1 L. R. A. 567; 17 Pac. 923; 19 Pac. 431.

Judgments against decedents. A judgment for mesne profits against the estate of a deceased person should be made payable in due course of administration. Nathan v. Dierssen, 164 Cal. 607; 130 Pac. 12.

Judgments of sister states. One judgment, being of as high a nature as another, a judgment in another state cannot extinguish or determine a judgment rendered here. Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 163 Cal. 632; Ann. Cas. 1914A, 364; 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 360; 126 Pac. 483.

Identity of names in judgment. Mere identity of name, in a judgment, does not establish the fact that the plaintiff and the defendant are the same person. Buckeye Refining Co. v. Kelly, 163 Cal. 8; Ann. Cas. 1913E, 840; 124 Pac. 536.

Validity of judgments. The validity of a judgment is governed by the laws of the state where it was rendered. Fox v. Mick, 20 Cal. App. 599; 129 Pac. 972. Every presumption is in favor of a judgment: it will be presumed that the plaintiff and the defendant, although bearing the same name, were different persons. Buckeye Refining Co. v. Kelly, 163 Cal. 8; Ann. Cas. 1913E, 840; 124 Pac. 536.

Jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of a court of a sister state may be controverted by extraneous evidence. Fox v. Mick, 20 Cal. App. 599; 129 Pac. 972. Where the procedure is regulated by statute, jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the action, as well as over the parties, terminates with the entry of final judgment therein, except for the purpose of enforcing the judgment and carrying out its provisions, or for correcting mistakes in the record, upon proper application therefor. McKay v. McKay, 125 Cal. 65; 57 Pac. 677.

Attack on judgments. A domestic judgment, regular upon its face, is not the subject of collateral attack. Layne v. Johnson, 19 Cal. App. 95; 134 Pac. 860. The judgment of a court of a sister state may always be impeached by showing that the court rendering it had no jurisdiction over the parties or the subject-matter of the action. Fox v. Mick, 20 Cal. App. 599; 129 Pac. 972. On a motion by the judgment debtor to have the satisfaction of a judgment entered of record, an assignee of the judgment cannot, for mere error in the exercise of jurisdiction, attack the validity of the judgment on which execution issued against his assignor. Buckeye Refining Co. v. Kelly, 163 Cal. 8; Ann. Cas. 1913E, 840; 124 Pac. 536.

Constructive service, fraud, due diligence. A judgment rendered upon a constructive service of summons should be set aside, where the evidence shows that the plaintiff did not use due diligence to find the defendant, and that his affidavit for service by publication was false, as on a direct attack upon the ground of fraud by the plaintiff in obtaining it, the question of due diligence, as between the parties, is open. Neither an order for publication of summons, based upon affidavit, nor a judgment following a service by publication thereon, is conclusive of the fact that due diligence was used to find the defendant. It is a fraud to present a false affidavit to obtain an order for the service of summons by publication, and a judgment based upon an order so obtained will be set aside, in an action by the defendant constructively served, against the plaintiff, where no rights of innocent third parties claiming under the judgment, are involved. Stern v. Judson, 163 Cal. 726; 127 Pac. 38.

Findings and conclusions of law. Whenever findings are required, there can be no rendition of the judgment until they are made and filed with the clerk. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. On a collateral attack, an inconsistency between the findings and the judgment does not impair the judgment: the question whether the findings support the judgment cannot be raised in a collateral action. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; Johnston v. San Francisco Savings Union, 75 Cal. 134; 7 Am. St. Rep. 129; 16 Pac. 753. Whenever findings are waived or are not required, the entry of the court's decision in the minutes of the court constitutes "rendition of the judgment," in the same manner as under the Practice Act. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. A judgment for mesne profits may be rendered, without a judgment for restitution, or without findings establishing the plaintiff's right to restitution. Nathan v. Dierssen, 164 Cal. 607; 130 Pac. 12. The court may, at any time before entry of judgment, change its conclusions of law upon facts found; and such change may be made by a judge other than the one who tried the case. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074.

Res adjudicata. Where an issue of fact, vital to the controversy, has been tried, and a judgment depending for its sufficiency upon the finding of fact becomes final, that determination of fact is forever binding, in every court, between the parties thereto and their privies. Estate of Harrington, 147 Cal. 124; 109 Am. St. Rep. 118; 81 Pac. 546; Quirk v. Rooney, 130 Cal. 505; 62 Pac. 825; Bingham v. Kearney, 136 Cal. 175; 68 Pac. 597. The test of the plea of res adjudicata is the subject-matter of the action, and not the remedy by which the party may seek judicially to assert the right of action. Suisun Lumber Co. v. Fairfield School District, 19 Cal. App. 587; 127 Pac. 349. It is not necessary that all of the parties plaintiff and defendant to a former action should be joined in a later action, to render a plea of res adjudicata available as an estoppel. Where an action was against a number of defendants, and its merits were adjudicated as to all, and the same plaintiff sues one, only, of such defendants upon the same cause of action, the later action is between "the same parties" as those of the former, upon the question of res adjudicata as between them. The plea of res adjudicata applies to every point that properly belongs to the subject of the litigation, and which the parties, exerting reasonable diligence, might have put forward at the time. Suisun Lumber Co. v. Fairfield School District, 19 Cal. App. 587; 127 Pac. 349. A judgment, based upon the confession of an insolvent debtor, made without the request and without the knowledge of the creditor, and entered up at the instance of the debtor alone, is not a judgment, as the creditor is not bound to accept it as the measure of his rights, nor would such confession bar an action brought by him on the same gravamen, nor estop the party by whom the confession was made from denying the facts set forth in it. Wilcoxson v. Burton, 27 Cal. 228; 87 Am. Dec. 66. A judgment that property involved in the action is community property, estops the wife from subsequently asserting that it is not such; it also estops a third party plaintiff from claiming, as between himself and the wife, that he acquired the legal title by deed. Nolan v. Hyatt, 163 Cal. 1; 124 Pac. 439. Where the plaintiff, in an action to recover pledged shares of corporate stock, obtains judgment for a return of the property, such judgment is a bar to a subsequent action to recover damages for wrongfully withholding its possession, or for the repayment of attorneys' fees incurred in the prior action. Van Horne v. Treadwell, 164 Cal. 620; 130 Pac. 5. A judgment of a court in probate, in homestead proceedings, raises an estoppel against a party seeking to have the homestead right set aside, where the right is denied upon the ground that such person was not the widow of the deceased, and the question of widowhood cannot be afterwards raised in an attempted litigation of the same claim upon distribution. Estate of Harrington, 147 Cal. 124; 109 Am. St. Rep. 118; 81 Pac. 546. The question of the validity of an executor's sale under the provisions of a will, made without notice, is concluded by the decree of distribution, where the court had jurisdiction: it cannot, more than thirty years afterwards, be again litigated in a collateral proceeding by the heir. Bagley v. San Francisco, 19 Cal. App. 255; 125 Pac. 931. Where a city alone is answerable for a demand against it, a former application for a writ of mandate against the city treasurer is no bar to an action for a money judgment against the city. Madary v. Fresno, 20 Cal. App. 91; 128 Pac. 340.

Merger of judgments. Merger takes place only where a security or an indebtedness of an inferior passes into one of a superior degree. Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 163 Cal. 632; Ann. Cas. 1914A, 364; 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 360; 126 Pac. 483. A judgment obtained in one state does not become merged in a judgment based upon it, which is rendered in favor of the judgment creditor in another state: so long as the indebtedness evidenced thereby is unsatisfied, successive suits in different states may be prosecuted. Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 163 Cal. 632; Ann. Cas. 1914A, 364; 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 360; 126 Pac. 483.

Changes in judgments. Changes in judgments are limited to the cases and conditions expressed in the statute by which they are authorized. McKay v. McKay, 125 Cal. 65; 57 Pac. 677.

Restoration of burnt records. A proceeding may be maintained for the restoration of a judgment roll destroyed by fire, although, at the time of such destruction, a motion for a new trial and the settlement of a bill of exceptions to be used thereon were then pending, and it is impossible to restore the contents of the bill of exceptions; and in such proceeding the effect of the restored record is not involved. Foerst v. Kelso, 163 Cal. 436; 125 Pac. 1054.

Action on judgment. No action lies upon a judgment until it is final. Feeney v. Hinckley, 134 Cal. 467; 86 Am. St. Rep. 290; 66 Pac. 580; Hills v. Sherwood, 33 Cal. 474; Gillmore v. American etc. Ins. Co., 65 Cal. 63; 2 Pac. 882.

Burden of proof. The burden is on the assignee of a part of a judgment to affirmatively show that the judgment debtor had notice of the assignment before paying the judgment. Buckeye Refining Co. v. Kelly, 163 Cal. 8; Ann. Cas. 1913E, 840; 124 Pac. 536.

Appeal. Where the relative rights of the parties are determined on appeal, the decision is, as to that subject and to that extent, the law of the case. Haggin v. Clark, 71 Cal. 444; 9 Pac. 736; 12 Pac. 478; Davidson v. Dallas, 15 Cal. 75; Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 387; Pico v. Cuyas, 48 Cal. 639. Where, on the rendition of a final judgment, the court also grants a perpetual injunction, there is but one judgment, and the decree is necessarily included in the appeal taken therefrom. McGarrahan v. Maxwell, 28 Cal. 75.

What deemed adjudged in judgment. See note post, § 1911.

Judgment as a contract. See note 2 Am. St. Rep. 414.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The original section contained the words, "and may be entered in term or vacation." They were omitted, first, because they are not part of the definition; second, because the same provision is contained in the other parts of this code. See, as to supreme court, § 48; district courts, § 78; county courts, § 89; justices' courts, § 118.

1. Judgment, defined. Every definite sentence or decision of a court, by which the merits of the cause are determined, is a judgment. Belt v. Davis, 1 Cal. 138; Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 24. A judgment dismissing an action is, in effect, a final judgment in favor of the defendant. Dowling v. Polack, 18 Cal. 625. An order of the county court dismissing an appeal is a judgment, within the meaning of this section. Pearson v. Lovejoy, 35 How. 193; 53 Barb. 407. A judgment may be a final adjudication in different senses. It may be final as to the court which renders it, without being final as to the subject-matter. Although a judgment may be final with reference to the court which pronounced it, and as such be the subject of an appeal, yet it is not necessarily final with reference to the property or rights affected, so long as it is subject to appeal and liable to be reversed. Hills v. Sherwood, 33 Cal. 478; United States v. Schooner Peggy, 1 Cranch, 103; 2 L. Ed. 49.

2. Order, defined. See § 1003 of this code. Order, as distinguished from a final judgment, is the judgment or conclusion of the court upon any motion or proceeding. Gilman v. Contra Costa County, 8 Cal. 57; 68 Am. Dec. 290; Effect of. McKinley v. Tuttle, 34 Cal. 235.

3. At what time judgment should be entered. If there is no question as to the proper judgment to be entered, the entry should be made at once, without waiting for a motion for a new trial. A stay of proceedings under the judgment protects the losing party in case the judgment should be set aside, or a new trial be granted. Hutchinson v. Bours, 13 Cal. 51.

4. Entry in vacation. In an action tried without a jury, judgment upon the findings may be entered in vacation. People v. Jones, 20 Cal. 50. If the judgment is pronounced by the court, drawn up in the form intended to be entered, signed by the judge, and filed with the clerk before adjournment of the term, it becomes the judgment of the court of the term at which it was pronounced, and it may, by the clerk, be entered in the judgment-book during vacation. Casement v. Ringgold, 28 Cal. 335. Where a judgment is reversed on appeal, with directions that a certain judgment be entered by the district court, such judgment can be entered by the clerk of the district court in vacation. People v. Jones, 20 Cal. 50.

5. Judgment against executors and administrators. In an action against an executor or administrator upon a rejected claim, the judgment should ascertain the amount due, and adjudge the same to be a valid claim against the estate, and provide that it be paid by the defendant in the due course of administration. No execution can be awarded. Rice v. Inskeep, 34 Cal. 224; Racouillat v. Sansevain, 32 Cal. 376.

6. Judgment against married woman. A judgment may be rendered against a married woman for costs, in an action brought by her concerning her separate property; and when so rendered, an execution in the usual form may be issued on the same, and her separate property sold by the sheriff. Leonard v. Townsend, 26 Cal. 442.

7. Judgment against husband and wife. In an action against husband and wife for services rendered by plaintiff to the wife, before marriage, judgment may be rendered against both defendants, with directions that it be enforced only against the separate property of the wife and the common property of both. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308.

8. Judgment against infants. It is a question whether, under our practice, an infant is entitled to have a day given in the judgment to show a cause against it. An infant is as much bound by a decree in equity as a person of full age, and will not be permitted to dispute it, except upon the same ground as an adult might have disputed it. If fraudulent, or obtained by collusion, it must be attached in a direct proceeding. Joyce v. McAvoy, 31 Cal. 273; 89 Am. Dec. 172.

9. Presumptions in favor of judgments. Jurisdiction will be presumed in the case of a judgment of a court of general jurisdiction; but if the want of jurisdiction appears on the face of the record of the judgment, the judgment is void, and it may be attacked in a collateral proceeding. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342; Thompson v. Monrow, 2 Cal. 100; 56 Am. Dec. 318; Kilburn v. Ritchie, 2 Cal. 148; 56 Am. Dec. 326; White v. Abernathy, 3 Cal. 426; Johnson v. Sepulbeda, 5 Cal. 151; Grewell v. Henderson, 7 Cal. 290; Nelson v. Lemmon, 10 Cal. 50; Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 566; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. In favor of a judgment rendered by a court of general jurisdiction, it will be presumed, unless the contrary affirmatively appears, that a party to it was made a party to the action in some manner provided by law. Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505.

10. Identity. A judgment was obtained against John P. Manrow, in New York, and an action was brought upon a judgment against John P. Manrow, in San Francisco. The identity of the person was presumed. Thompson v. Manrow, 1 Cal. 428; see also People v. Thompson, 28 Cal. 218.

11. Effect of judgment. If the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and parties, its judgment, whether legal or illegal, proper or improper, is valid and binding, until reversed or set aside. Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 678; 76 Am. Dec. 459; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Kohlman v. Wright, 6 Cal. 231. A judgment in favor of plaintiff against one of several defendants, in an action to set aside a deed as a cloud upon the title, is an adjudication that the title is in the plaintiff. Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176. A judgment upon demurrer is only a bar to a subsequent action, when it determines the merits of the case. Robinson v. Howard, 5 Cal. 428. The judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, directly upon the point, is, as a plea, and as evidence, conclusive between the same parties, upon the same matter directly, in another court (Love v. Waltz, 7 Cal. 250); but, as a plea, it is no bar, where the complaint in the former suit is so defective that a judgment rendered thereon would be a nullity. Reynolds v. Harris, 9 Cal. 338. Where there is a misdescription of a note, and a want of specification of the name of the owner, or of any allegation that his name is unknown, in the schedule of an insolvent, the proceedings in insolvency are no bar to a suit on the note, even if the insolvent did not know that the plaintiff was the real creditor. Judson v. Atwill, 9 Cal. 477. The former judgment must not only be upon the same cause of action, but between the same parties. Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607; Chase v. Swain, 9 Cal. 136. Plaintiff brought an action of replevin against the defendants to recover certain property, and obtained a judgment for its restitution and damages. Defendants paid the damages, but did not restore the property. Plaintiff then brought an action of trover to recover the value. Defendants pleaded the former recovery as a bar. It was held, that the judgment in replevin did not constitute a bar to the action of trover, it not having been satisfied. Nickerson v. California Stage Co., 10 Cal. 520. An action brought by an agent, in his own name, for a trespass, in taking coin from the agent, in which action the jury found that the coin belonged to the principal, and gave only nominal damages, is not a bar to an action by the principal for such coin. Pico v. Webster, 12 Cal. 140. A discharge in insolvency of a debt, is a discharge of a judgment on that debt, and the costs, rendered between the time of filing the petition and schedule and the time of discharge. Imlay v. Carpentier, 14 Cal. 175. A judgment in an action to quiet title is a bar to subsequent litigation on the same subject-matter. Reed v. Calderwood, 32 Cal. 109. If two Mexican grants of land, made to different persons, are confirmed and surveyed so as to overlap each other in part, and the owner of one becomes a party to the proceedings relating to the confirmation and survey of the other, he is estopped from denying that this grant was properly located. Semple v. Wright, 32 Cal. 659. A judgment in an action to recover the possession of real property is, as to all matters put in issue and passed on in the action, conclusive between the parties and their privies, and a bar in another action between the parties or their privies. Caperton v. Schmidt, 26 Cal. 490; 85 Am. Dec. 187. But the bar is limited to the rights of the parties as they existed at the time when the judgment was rendered, and neither the parties nor their privies are precluded from showing, in a subsequent action, that their rights have been waived or extinguished at a period after the rendition of the judgment. Id. A judgment in favor of the plaintiff, in an action of ejectment, does not estop the defendant from maintaining an action for the specific performance of a contract, made by the plaintiff before the commencement of the action of ejectment, to convey the same land to the defendant, if the contract was not set up in the answer as an equitable defense, and passed upon by the court. Hough v. Waters, 30 Cal. 309. In an equity case when all the proofs are in, and the case fully before the lower and the appellate court, the judgment of the latter, if it passes upon the merits of the controversy so presented, is conclusive. Soule v. Dawes, 14 Cal. 249. If an action is brought to recover possession of a lot of personal property, wrongfully taken and detained, and if the wrongful taking was one continuous act, a judgment, in that action, will be a bar to a subsequent suit for the remainder of the property. Herriter v. Porter, 23 Cal. 385. In an action at law, the defendants, in their answer, set up a set-off to plaintiff's demand, and, on the trial of the action, the record showed that the court excluded all evidence of the demand sought to be set off, and gave judgment for plaintiff. Held, that the judgment in the action at law cannot be pleaded as an estoppel in an action afterwards brought by the defendants in a court of equity to enforce the set-off. Hobbs v. Duff, 23 Cal. 596. A judgment binds only parties and privies. Beckett v. Selover, 7 Cal. 228; 68 Am. Dec. 237. Except in some cases for specific purposes. Davidson v. Dallas, 8 Cal. 227. A purchaser of land, subsequently to a suit brought against his vendor to quiet title, and to notice of lis pendens filed in the county recorder's office, is a mere volunteer, and is bound by the judgment. Gregory v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 594. One in the possession of land, who is neither a party nor a privy to a judgment for the recovery of possession, is not bound by the judgment, nor can he be dispossessed by virtue of a writ issued upon it, nor is it evidence against him. Le Roy v. Rogers, 30 Cal. 229; 89 Am. Dec. 88.

12. Recitals in a judgment. The recitals in a several judgment, against one of a number of defendants, that in a former judgment in the same action, the name of this defendant was stricken out on plaintiff's motion, may be contradicted by the recitals in the former judgment. Leese v. Clarke, 28 Cal. 33. The recital, that summons was served, is conclusive of the fact in a collateral proceeding. Sharp v. Lumley, 34 Cal. 611. And, generally, as to the effects of recitals in judgments, see Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; and Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505.

13. Void judgments. If it affirmatively appears, upon the face of the record, that a personal judgment of court of general jurisdiction was rendered without the court having acquired jurisdiction over the person of defendant, the judgment is void. Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 54; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Barrett v. Carney, 33 Cal. 530; Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 315; McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 309. Where a summons was served by a deputy sheriff, and returned with the following signature to the return, "Elijah T. Cole, D. S.," and judgment was rendered by default, it was held, that the judgment was null and void, for want of jurisdiction. Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; see Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. A judgment by default, entered by the clerk, where there has been no service of summons or appearance, is utterly void. Glidden v. Packard, 28 Cal. 649. When the clerk has authority to enter judgment out of court by default, but in the exercise of his authority makes a mistake as to the amount, the judgment is only erroneous; but where he enters a kind of judgment which he has no authority to enter without the direction of the court, the judgment is void. Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 530; see also Stearns v. Aguirre, 7 Cal. 448, and Lewis v. Clarkin, 18 Cal. 399. If a judgment is void for want of jurisdiction, it is not cured by the appearance of the defendant for the purpose of moving to set it aside. Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 568. If the defendant was served with process, though he was sued by a wrong name, the judgment is not void. Welsh v. Kirkpatrick, 30 Cal. 202; 89 Am. Dec. 85. A judgment against an infant, which does not give the infant a day after arriving at age to show cause against it, is not, for that reason, void. Joyce v. McAvoy, 31 Cal. 273; 89 Am. Dec. 172.

14. Collateral attacks on jurisdiction. A judgment, void upon its face, may be attacked, anywhere, directly or collaterally, either by parties or strangers. Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342; Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 54; McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 309; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. But if it is only erroneous, it can only be attacked by direct proceedings against the judgment. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742, and cases cited supra. A judgment by default, if summons has been served on defendant, cannot be attacked collaterally for an irregularity of service, nor for a defective return. The defendant must assert his rights by appeal from the judgment. Dorente v. Sullivan, 7 Cal. 279. Where several persons, members of a joint-stock company, were sued as such, and the action was discontinued as to B., one of the defendants, and judgment was taken against all the others, upon which execution was substantially issued, and the property of one M., who was not a party to the suit, taken to satisfy the same, it was held, that M. could not, by suit in equity against the plaintiff in the judgment, set it aside upon the ground that the discontinuance of the suit as to B. was a discontinuance as to all of the defendants, and that the judgment could not be attacked in this collateral manner. Markley v. Rand, 12 Cal. 275. The recital in a decree, "that defendants had been served with process, or had waived service," is sufficient evidence that the requisite proof was produced. In the absence of all evidence on this point, the presumption would be in favor of the jurisdiction of the court, and of the regularity of its proceedings; and, for the want of such evidence, the decree cannot be impeached in a collateral action. Nor can a decree be impeached collaterally because entered prematurely. The remedy is by a direct proceeding in the action. Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 315; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. Where a judgment was rendered by confession in open court, upon an allegation of indebtedness and appearance of the parties, whatever errors intervened, such errors cannot, at the instance of one, not a party to the judgment, be invoked to set aside or show the judgment a nullity. Cloud v. El Dorado County, 12 Cal. 128; 73 Am. Dec. 526. A decree of the probate court, ordering a claim to be paid, rendered on petition of the administrator, is final and conclusive, and cannot be attacked collaterally nor directly, on the ground that the evidence on which it was rendered was insufficient. Estate of Cook, 14 Cal. 130; State v. McGlynn, 20 Cal. 233; 81 Am. Dec. 118. In an action in the district court, on a bond given in the court of sessions, the court of sessions having declared the bond forfeited for non-appearance, the sureties cannot defend on the ground that the judgment of forfeiture was erroneous. They cannot thus attack the judgment. People v. Wolf, 16 Cal. 385. Boards of supervisors are special tribunals, with mixed powers, administrative, judicial, and legislative, and jurisdiction over roads, ferries, and bridges. Its judgments and orders can only be attacked collaterally, when there is a want of jurisdiction. Waugh v. Chauncey, 13 Cal. 12.

15. Effect of an alteration. The alteration of a judgment without notice, so as to include a party not served with process, if not void, is voidable, at the election of the party. Chester v. Miller, 13 Cal. 561. Where the court makes an order requiring plaintiff to appear at a certain time and show cause why a judgment in his favor should not be set aside, and it does not appear that any notice was given of the time at which the matter was to be heard, it is error for the court to set aside the judgment, and its order to that effect will be reversed on appeal. Vallejo v. Green, 16 Cal. 161. Equity has jurisdiction to vacate a judgment fraudulently altered to include a defendant not served with process, and not originally included in the judgment. Chester v. Miller, 13 Cal. 561.

16. Effect of appeal. Where an appeal from a judgment is taken to the supreme court, the court below loses control over the judgment, and an order amending it is erroneous. Bryan v. Berry, 8 Cal. 135.

§ 578. Judgment may be for or against one of the parties. Judgment may be given for or against one or more of several plaintiffs, and for or against one or more of several defendants; and it may, when the justice of the case requires it, determine the ultimate rights of the parties on each side, as between themselves.

Striking out party. Ante, § 473.
Fresh parties, bringing in. Ante, § 389.
Service on one defendant out of several, effect of. Ante, § 414.
Joint debtors, proceedings against. Post, §§ 989 et seq.
Joining persons severally liable on same instrument. Ante, § 383.
Association, action against persons under name of. Ante, § 388.

Legislation § 578. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 145 (New York Code, § 274).

Scope of section. This section has modified the common-law rule, that, in a suit against several joint debtors, the plaintiff must recover against all or none, so far as to permit judgment against some of the defendants, wherever the contract purports to be the contract of all the parties sued, and it turns out in proof that only some are liable. Lewis v. Clarkin, 18 Cal. 399; Morgan v. Righette, 5 Cal. Unrep. 397; 45 Pac. 260; People v. Frisbie, 18 Cal. 402; Shain v. Forbes, 82 Cal. 577; 23 Pac. 198; Bailey Loan Co. v. Hall, 110 Cal. 490; 42 Pac. 962; Dobbs v. Purington, 136 Cal. 70; 68 Pac. 323; Zibbell v. Southern Pacific Co., 160 Cal. 237; 116 Pac. 513; Clark v. Torchiana, 19 Cal. App. 786; 127 Pac. 831.

Judgments where there are several plaintiffs. Judgment may properly be given in favor of one plaintiff only, who is entitled to it. Roberts v. Hall, 147 Cal. 434; 82 Pac. 66. Where a party, without interest in the controversy, is improperly joined as a party plaintiff, he should be dismissed from the action, and a judgment should then be rendered in favor of the remaining plaintiffs, upon findings in their favor. Gillespie v. Gouly, 152 Cal. 643; 93 Pac. 856. Two persons, each claiming a portion of premises sought to be released from a mortgage, and each conceding the validity of the other's claim, may join as parties plaintiff in an action to redeem the whole mortgaged property, and the ultimate rights of the plaintiffs, as between themselves, may be determined by the judgment. Wadleigh v. Phelps, 149 Cal. 627; 87 Pac. 93.

Judgments where defendants are joined. A several judgment may be rendered against one member of a partnership. Shain v. Forbes, 82 Cal. 577; 23 Pac. 198. Where two persons are sued jointly upon a joint contract, a judgment may now be rendered in favor of the plaintiff and against one of the defendants, or in favor of one of the defendants and against the plaintiff. Dobbs v. Purington, 136 Cal. 70; 68 Pac. 323; Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 167; Lewis v. Clarkin, 18 Cal. 399; People v. Frisbie, 18 Cal. 402; Shain v. Forbes, 82 Cal. 577; 23 Pac. 198; Bailey Loan Co. v. Hall, 110 Cal. 490; 42 Pac. 962; Redwood City Salt Co. v. Whitney, 153 Cal. 421; 95 Pac. 885. Where an action is brought upon notes, several and joint, and the prayer of the complaint is for judgment "against said defendants" for the amount of the notes, it is not necessary that the judgment shall run against the defendants as copartners, although they admitted that a copartnership existed. Bailey Loan Co. v. Hall, 110 Cal. 490; 42 Pac. 962; Redwood City Salt Co. v. Whitney, 153 Cal. 421; 95 Pac. 885. Damages cannot be severed, where the action was for a wrong in which both of the defendants joined. McCool v. Mahoney, 54 Cal. 491. Where an action was brought against a husband and wife, and a verdict was rendered in favor of the wife against the plaintiff, without mentioning the husband, who had consented that judgment be entered against him, a judgment entered against the husband in favor of the plaintiff is proper. Etter v. Hughes, 5 Cal. Unrep. 148; 41 Pac. 790. A plaintiff may join all tort-feasors as defendants, in an action for negligence, but his right to recover from one so joined is not, in any degree, dependent upon his success as against the others. Fowden v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 149 Cal. 151; 86 Pac. 178. In an action for personal injuries, judgment may be given against one defendant and in favor of another defendant. Cole v. Roebling Construction Co., 156 Cal. 443; 105 Pac. 255. A judgment between co-defendants, in the absence of any issues upon which evidence may be received or findings made for the support of the judgment, is unauthorized. Bermingham v. Wilcox, 120 Cal. 467; 52 Pac. 822.

Effect of appeal by one defendant. Where judgment is rendered against two defendants, a defendant not appealing is not affected by the reversal of the judgment, on appeal by his co-defendant. Nichols v. Dunphy, 58 Cal. 605. Two defendants, who answer, and against whom a verdict is rendered, cannot complain that no judgment by default was entered against a third defendant who did not answer. Golden Gate etc. Mining Co. v. Joshua Hendy Machine Works, 82 Cal. 184; 23 Pac. 45. Where a verdict and judgment was jointly entered against two defendants, a new trial granted as to one of them does not vacate the judgment as to both. Fowden v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 149 Cal. 151; 86 Pac. 178; and see Rankin v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 73 Cal. 93; 15 Pac. 57; Chetwood v. California Nat. Bank, 113 Cal. 414; 45 Pac. 704; Dawson v. Schloss, 93 Cal. 194; 29 Pac. 31; Grundel v. Union Iron Works, 127 Cal. 438; 70 Am. St. Rep. 75; 47 L. R. A. 467; 59 Pac. 826. The rule declared by this section is not limited to actions in which the defendants have appeared and answered, but includes those in which some of the defendants have made default; the only limitation is, that, in case of default, the relief shall not exceed that demanded by the plaintiff. Bailey Loan Co. v. Hall, 110 Cal. 490; 42 Pac. 962. This section does not apply, where it would authorize the rendition of a judgment for a party in whose favor no cause of action is stated in the complaint, and against a party who has had no notice of any such cause of action, or any opportunity to meet it (Weinreich v. Johnston, 78 Cal. 254; 20 Pac. 556; and see Cotes v. Campbell, 3 Cal. 191; Curry v. Roundtree, 51 Cal. 184; McCord v. Seale, 56 Cal. 262); nor in the case of a suit against a wife, where the husband is joined as a necessary party under the express provisions of the statute, and where he has no other interest in the subject-matter of the litigation; therefore it is error to enter judgment against the wife before the husband is served with summons. McDonald v. Porsh, 136 Cal. 301; 68 Pac. 817.

Who may be joined as defendants. See note ante, § 379.

How judgment may be. See note post, § 579.

Rights of strangers. If judgment is asked for a certain amount, with a request that, out of such amount, a bank be paid, and the very judgment asked is given, the bank has a beneficial interest in the judgment, though the verdict was nominally in favor only of the plaintiff. Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 152 Cal. 196; 92 Pac. 182.

Effect of judgment against one co-trespasser as a bar to actions against the others. See note 54 Am. Dec. 204.

Single or separate judgments on consolidation of causes. See note 3 Ann. Cas. 534.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See § 414 of this code. If there are several defendants, having no community of interest or property, a joint judgment for affirmative relief in their favor is erroneous. Page v. Fowler, 39 Cal. 412; 2 Am. Rep. 462. In Stearns v. Aguirre, 6 Cal. 182, it was held that, in an action brought jointly against two defendants, on a joint and several obligation, the entry of final judgment on default against one of the defendants discharged the other. In cases of joint and several contracts, the plaintiff may elect whether he will sue the defendants severally or jointly; but plaintiff having elected to treat his demand as joint for the purpose of the action, he must be governed by the same rules which would have applied if his contract originally had been joint, and not joint and several; and it is clearly error to enter several judgments against the defendants. But see Lewis v. Clarkin, 18 Cal. 399. Where two persons are sued upon a joint contract, judgment may be had in favor of the plaintiff against one of the defendants, and in favor of one of the defendants against the plaintiff. Rowe v. Chandler, 1 Cal. 167. Where two or more defendants are not liable jointly, a joint judgment against both cannot be sustained; so held in an action by a lessor against two subtenants of the lessee, when it appeared that the subtenants did not occupy any portion of the premises jointly. Pierce v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 470. A judgment in an action against the sureties on an official bond, for a defalcation of the principal, should first determine the amount of the defalcation, and then proceed with a separate judgment against each of the sureties for the full amount for which he made himself liable in the bond, and costs, and with a provision that each judgment shall be satisfied by the collection or payment of the amount of the defalcation and costs. People v. Rooney, 29 Cal. 642; People v. Edwards, 9 Cal. 286. Where an action is brought by one of several persons claiming title from a common source, in his own behalf and in behalf of all others interested in the same manner as himself, on the ground of fraud, to set aside a deed executed to others by the same grantor, under whom plaintiff claims, the parties named in the complaint, for whose benefit the action is brought, are entitled to the benefit of the judgment declaring the deed fraudulent. Hurlbutt v. Butenop, 27 Cal. 54. Where a decision is made in an equitable action on any particular subject-matter, the rights of all persons whose interests are immediately connected with that decision, and affected by it, should be provided for. McPherson v. Parker, 30 Cal. 455; 89 Am. Dec. 129. Where three persons are sued on a promissory note, given by one of the parties in the name of all, as partners, and the evidence fails to show the partnership, or the authority of the party making the note, and one of the parties is nonsuited, a judgment taken against the other two was held valid. Stoddart v. Van Dyke, 12 Cal. 438. In a suit on an account, against "Randall & Inos," partners, the former only being served with process, a joint judgment was rendered against both. Held, void as against the party not served. Inos v. Winspear, 18 Cal. 397. Plaintiff sells goods to C. on his individual account. Subsequently, C. directs plaintiff to charge the goods to the joint account of C. and J., which is done. Plaintiff sues C. and J. jointly. Proven, that C. had no authority to bind J. Held, that, although J. is not liable, judgment may be rendered against C.; that our statute has modified the common-law rule, that, in a suit against several joint debtors, plaintiff must recover against all or none, so far, at least, as to permit judgment against a portion of the defendants, wherever the contract purports on its face to be the contract of all the parties sued, and it turns out in proof that a portion only are liable. Lewis v. Clarkin, 18 Cal. 399. In a suit against two, on a joint assessment for taxes, judgment may be rendered against one of the defendants, if the other is not liable. People v. Frisbie, 18 Cal. 402. A judgment against one or more joint guarantors of a note bars the action against the others. The entire cause of action is merged in the judgment. Brady v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 31.

§ 579. Judgment may be against one party and action proceed as to others. In an action against several defendants, the court may, in its discretion, render judgment against one or more of them, leaving the action to proceed against the others, whenever a several judgment is proper.

Striking out party. Ante, § 473.
Fresh parties, bringing in. Ante, § 389.
Service on one defendant out of several, effect of. Ante, § 414.
Joint debtors, proceedings against. Post, §§ 989 et seq.
Joining persons severally liable on same instrument. Ante, § 383.

Legislation § 579. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 146 (New York Code, § 274).

Judgment against one of several defendants. In an action against more than one defendant, the court may render judgment against only one, when a several judgment is proper. Madary v. Fresno, 20 Cal. App. 91; 128 Pac. 340. The court is authorized to render judgment against one defendant, without determining the liability of the others. Kelley v. Plover, 103 Cal. 35; 36 Pac. 1020. The court or jury may find against one or more of several defendants, but there must be a finding or verdict for or against each defendant. McMahon v. Hetch-Hetchy etc. Ry. Co., 2 Cal. App. 400; 84 Pac. 350. In an action to determine title, the court may order a continuance as to one defendant, direct the trial to proceed as to the other defendants, on the issues involved, and render a several judgment thereon. Bell v. Staacke, 159 Cal. 193; 115 Pac. 221. In an action on a joint and several contract, the court may proceed with the trial against a single defendant, who has voluntarily appeared, and render judgment against him. Bell v. Adams, 150 Cal. 772; 90 Pac. 118. In an action for personal injuries, against two defendants, jointly charged with negligence, a several judgment by default may be rendered against one defendant and the action proceed against the other. Cole v. Roebling Construction Co., 156 Cal. 443; 105 Pac. 255. Where a defendant fails to appear or answer, a finding that he was duly served is sufficient to show jurisdiction and to sustain the judgment. Lick v. Stockdale, 18 Cal. 219. A several judgment may be rendered against one of two defendants sued upon a joint contract, who was duly served, even though the other was not served (Kelly v. Bandini, 50 Cal. 530); and several judgments may be entered, and at different times, against several defendants occupying different portions of property sued for in ejectment. Lick v. Stockdale, 18 Cal. 219.

Joint judgment, where only one defendant served. A joint judgment against several defendants, as copartners, cannot be rendered, where only one was served. Estell v. Chenery, 3 Cal. 467.

Verdict and judgment vacated as to one defendant. A verdict against several persons sued jointly, found erroneous as to one of them, may be vacated as to that one, and continue in force and effect as to the remaining defendants. Clark v. Torchiana, 19 Cal. App. 786; 127 Pac. 831.

Validity of judgment. A judgment does not depend upon the clerk performing his duty in making up the judgment roll or in preserving the papers. Lick v. Stockdale, 18 Cal. 219.

Who may be joined as defendants. See note ante, § 379.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Where some of the defendants, partners, are not served with summons, the plaintiff may proceed against those served. Ingraham v. Gildemeester, 2 Cal. 88; Hirschfield v. Franklin, 6 Cal. 607. A joint judgment in ejectment, against defendants severally in possession of separate parcels of the land sued for, is erroneous. Leese v. Clark, 28 Cal. 26. In an action upon a joint or several bond, where all the obligors are made parties, the plaintiff may go to trial, if he elect to do so, before all the defendants are served. People v. Evans, 29 Cal. 429.

§ 580. The relief to be awarded to the plaintiff. The relief granted to the plaintiff, if there be no answer, cannot exceed that which he shall have demanded in his complaint; but in any other case, the court may grant him any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint and embraced within the issue.

Legislation § 580. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 147 (New York Code, § 275), substituting "cannot" for "shall not."

Construction of section. The relief provided by this section is confined, in case of default, to that demanded in the complaint, as was the rule under a prayer for special relief in equity; while in other cases it is extended to granting relief similar to that granted under a prayer for general relief in chancery courts (Johnson v. Polhemus, 99 Cal. 240; 33 Pac. 908); and the section is but a concise statement of the rule observed upon the subject of relief in courts of equity. Mock v. Santa Rosa, 126 Cal. 330; 58 Pac. 826. The court may, under this section, grant additional relief under the original complaint, without an amendment thereof for that purpose alone (Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3; 79 Pac. 527); and relief may be granted, within the issues of the complaint, even though not specifically prayed for. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Boston etc. Fruit Co., 126 Cal. 418; 58 Pac. 941; 59 Pac. 296. A judgment for more relief than is prayed for is not void as to the excess, and it cannot be attacked in collateral proceedings, although there is no prayer for general relief. Cohen v. Cohen, 150 Cal. 99; 11 Ann. Cas. 520; 88 Pac. 267.

Equitable relief. The circumstance that a court of law, as well as a court of equity, can hear and determine any issue of fact presented for adjudication in a proceeding properly before the court, has no weight in determining whether or not, upon a particular state of facts, the remedy is legal or equitable. Angus v. Craven, 132 Cal. 691; 64 Pac. 1091. Where a complaint praying for legal relief states a cause of action entitling the plaintiff to equitable relief, the court may, on the trial, permit the prayer to be so amended as to ask for the appropriate equitable relief. Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519; 17 Pac. 673; and see Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514; 99 Am. Dec. 423. A judgment for the value of personal property, rather than for its possession, is proper, where the action is for a rescission of the contract, on the ground of false representation. Stewart v. Hollingsworth, 129 Cal. 177; 61 Pac. 936. Rescission is only one of the remedies in case of fraud; and where real or personal property is fraudulently obtained, the most common and familiar relief granted by a court of equity is to convert the party guilty of the fraud into a trustee. More v. More, 133 Cal. 489; 65 Pac. 1044; Field v. Austin, 131 Cal. 379; 63 Pac. 692. The correction of a defect in a written instrument, not specifically pleaded, may be decreed by the court. Poledori v. Newman, 116 Cal. 375; 48 Pac. 325. Where the facts alleged and found, independently of an allegation of and a failure to find upon fraud, show a mistake in the description of property purchased, the plaintiff is entitled to a reformation of the deed to conform to the intention of the parties. Hoffman v. Kirby, 136 Cal. 26; 68 Pac. 321. A judgment in an action for the specific performance of a contract grants more relief than is authorized, where it directs specific performance by the defendant, and not by the plaintiff, and enjoins the defendant from conveying property and from working the same, without reference to any performance of the contract by the plaintiff. Ellis v. Rademacher, 125 Cal. 556; 58 Pac. 178. The amount of recoupment to which the plaintiff may in future be entitled cannot be determined by the judgment in an action, the especial object of which is to cancel a mortgage, and permitting only of the relief that the deed be reformed so as to express the real intention of the parties with reference to the property to be included therein. Hoffman v. Kirby, 136 Cal. 26; 68 Pac. 321. A judgment for the transfer and delivery of securities is a substantial compliance with this section, where the complaint set forth all the facts concerning the same, even though the formal prayer of the complaint omitted all mention thereof. Security Loan etc. Co. v. Boston etc. Fruit Co., 126 Cal. 418; 58 Pac. 941; 59 Pac. 296. Where the abatement of a nuisance was prayed for in the complaint, an injunction against the continuance of the nuisance is proper and within the issues. Sullivan v. Royer, 72 Cal. 248; 1 Am. St. Rep. 51; 13 Pac. 655. Where a plaintiff sought to prevent the discharge of mining débris into certain streams, the court is not warranted in inserting, in the decree, provisions relating to the use of the defendants' water-supply on lands other than theirs, or forbidding them to sell their water-supply or property to purchasers who they know will not respect the rights of others. Yuba County v. Kate Hayes Mining Co., 141 Cal. 360; 74 Pac. 1049. The court has a right to remove a trustee, or to appoint another in his place, under a complaint setting up a trust and all facts connected with it, alleging that the trustee had violated and repudiated his trust, that he had used trust property for his own use, and that he was an unfit person to be trustee, where issues were joined and trial had upon these averments. Schlessinger v. Mallard, 70 Cal. 326; 11 Pac. 728. If a plaintiff alleges the trust relation, the receipt of trust funds, and a failure to account, he has the right to recover in one action the specific property into which a portion of the fund is traced, and a personal judgment for the remainder which cannot be identified; but he cannot have a judgment declaring the defendant a trustee of specific property bought with trust funds, and decreeing such property to be the plaintiff's, and also a personal judgment for the money invested by the defendant in that property. Title Insurance etc. Co. v. Ingersoll, 158 Cal. 474; 111 Pac. 360.

Relief contingent on allegations and prayer of complaint. The decree should be definite and certain, and, where the answer admits the allegations of the complaint, grant no greater relief than that authorized by the complaint. Ellis v. Rademacher, 125 Cal. 556; 58 Pac. 178. The court cannot grant any relief not warranted by the averments of the complaint, whether admitted by legal effect, silence of the party, or written answer. Ellis v. Rademacher, 125 Cal. 556; 58 Pac. 178;

Hicks v. Murray, 43 Cal. 515; Carpentier v. Brenham, 50 Cal. 549; Cummings v. Cummings, 75 Cal. 434; 170 Pac. 442. Where the complaint does not allege that any money is due, but the answer presents that issue, the case is within this section. O'Donnell v. Kramer, 65 Cal. 353; 4 Pac. 204. Where the relief granted is beyond the issues embraced in the complaint, the appellate court will modify the judgment by striking out the excessive parts thereof. Yuba County v. Kate Hayes Mining Co., 141 Cal. 360; 74 Pac. 1049. The court may render judgment for the amount of a note and interest, although the complaint prays only for judgment for the face of the note. Lane v. Gluckauf, 28 Cal. 288; 87 Am. Dec. 121. In an action for support without divorce, the amount to be allowed is an issuable fact, and cannot be made, in the first instance, in excess of the amount asked for in the complaint. Benton v. Benton, 122 Cal. 395; 55 Pac. 152; Burnett v. Stearns, 33 Cal. 468; Gregory v. Nelson, 41 Cal. 278. Where, in an action for conversion, the complaint alleged attorneys' fees as an element of damages, in the absence of the evidence from the record it will be presumed that the verdict did not include attorneys' fees. McDonald v. McConkey, 57 Cal. 325. A plaintiff is not to be denied any relief, simply because he fails to prove that he is entitled to the full measure that he claims: he may be granted a part of the relief claimed, if it is justified by the pleading and evidence. Union Oil Co. v. Mercantile Refining Co., 8 Cal. App. 768; 97 Pac. 919. Where the plaintiff claimed ownership and right of possession of land, and prayed that he be adjudged to be such owner, though he did not allege that the defendant claimed some interest therein, nor call upon him to set forth his title, but the defendant denied the plaintiff's ownership, and asserted title in himself, and where the issues thus formed were tried by the jury and decided in the plaintiff's favor, the court may properly give judgment accordingly. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411; 80 Pac. 517. The prayer of the complaint must receive a reasonable interpretation, and be construed with reference to the purposes and the nature of the action. Brooks v. Carpentier, 53 Cal. 287. The relief demanded does not characterize the action, nor limit the plaintiff in respect to the remedy which he may have. Angus v. Craven, 132 Cal. 691; 64 Pac. 1091; Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519; 17 Pac. 673. Relief may be granted upon the facts within the issues, entitling to judgment, irrespective of the prayer, if the evidence is sufficient to uphold the judgment. Dennison v. Chapman, 105 Cal. 447; 39 Pac. 61. Where the plaintiff shows himself to be entitled to any relief, either at law or in equity, his complaint is not to be dismissed because he has made a mistake as to the form of his remedy, or because he has prayed for a judgment to which he is not entitled. Bedolla v. Williams, 15 Cal. App. 738; 115 Pac. 747. A decree directing the sale of real property, in an action relating to such property, may be made by the court, though such relief was not prayed for in the original complaint. Kent v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 130 Cal. 401; 62 Pac. 620.

Judgment under prayer for general relief. The provision of this section, that where there is no answer the relief granted cannot exceed that which is demanded in the complaint, does not make the judgment void, where the relief given is within the terms of a prayer for general relief, and is germane to the cause of action stated, although not authorized by the facts alleged. Cohen v. Cohen, 150 Cal. 99; 11 Ann. Cas. 520; 88 Pac. 267. The court can grant any relief consistent with the case made, and embraced within the issues, although not specifically prayed for. Zellerbach v. Allenberg, 99 Cal. 57; 33 Pac. 786; More v. Finger, 128 Cal. 313; 60 Pac. 933; Gimmy v. Gimmy, 22 Cal. 633; Scott v. Sierra Lumber Co., 67 Cal. 71; 7 Pac. 131; Hurlbutt v. N. W. Spaulding Saw Co., 93 Cal. 55; 28 Pac. 795. Any relief not inconsistent with the pleadings and the issues tried may be granted under a prayer for general relief. Mock v. Santa Rosa, 126 Cal. 330; 58 Pac. 826. Where the complaint closes with a prayer for general relief, the fact that the plaintiff is not entitled to all the relief that he has asked does not justify a nonsuit: the court should render such judgment as may appear to be proper. Fox v. Hall, 164 Cal. 287; 128 Pac. 749; Bell v. Solomons, 142 Cal. 59; 75 Pac. 649. In an action for an accounting, there may be a personal judgment for the balance of the money found to be due the plaintiff, after accounting had. Title Insurance etc. Co. v. Ingersoll, 158 Cal. 474; 111 Pac. 360. In equity, under a prayer for general relief, no relief can be granted beyond that authorized by the facts stated in the bill. Carpentier v. Brenham, 50 Cal. 549; Cummings v. Cummings, 75 Cal. 434; 17 Pac. 442. Where a suit is brought to annul deeds on the ground of undue influence and fraud, a judgment for reconveyance is appropriate, under a prayer for general relief: the rigid rules relating to rescission apply only to a rescission to be effected by the acts of the parties; the power of a court of equity to cancel the contract is of much wider scope, and its exercise governed by other principles. More v. More, 133 Cal. 489; 65 Pac. 1044. And where, in an action to quiet title, brought by the owner of an equitable estate against the holder of the legal estate, the facts upon which the plaintiff's claim is based are alleged, and there is a prayer for general relief, the court can grant any relief proper within the limitations of this section. De Leonis v. Hammel, 1 Cal. App. 390; 82 Pac. 349.

Relief granted, where no answer filed. The nature of the action is to be determined from the character of the complaint, and from the character of the judgment which might be rendered upon a default thereto. McFarland v. Martin, 144 Cal. 771; 78 Pac. 239. Relief, other than and different from that prayed for in the complaint and specified in the summons, is improper, where the defendant defaults. Mudge v. Steinhart, 78 Cal. 34; 12 Am. St. Rep. 17; 20 Pac. 147; Staacke v. Bell, 125 Cal. 309; 57 Pac. 1012; McFarland v. Martin, 144 Cal. 771; 78 Pac. 239. A judgment by default cannot give any relief in excess of that demanded in the complaint; and a default admits the material allegations of the complaint, and no more. Ellis v. Rademacher, 125 Cal. 556; 58 Pac. 178. A decree pro confesso concludes a party, only as to the averments in the bill: it does not amount to a confession of any fact not alleged in it. Savings and Loan Society v. Horton, 63 Cal. 105. A defaulting defendant has the right to assume that no relief will be granted beyond that which the complaint specifically asks, and a general prayer cannot enlarge the power of the court to grant relief not prayed for against a defaulting defendant; hence, a decree granting relief beyond that authorized in the complaint will be reversed, in so far as the same is in excess of the relief demanded in the complaint. Staacke v. Bell, 125 Cal. 309; 57 Pac. 1012. Relief against a defaulting or disclaiming defendant must be consistent with the case made upon the complaint and embraced within the issues; and a judgment rendered against him, upon ex parte evidence, which departs in its description of property from the description thereof as set forth in the complaint, or otherwise more specifically describes it, without an amendment of the complaint to support the judgment, is erroneous. Balfour-Guthrie Investment Co. v. Sawday, 133 Cal. 228; 62 Pac. 400; and see Holman v. Vallejo, 19 Cal. 498. In a suit on a promissory note, where no issue is joined on the question of interest, the relief granted against a defaulting defendant cannot exceed that prayed for in the complaint. Brown v. Caldwell, 13 Cal. App. 29; 108 Pac. 874. In an action on a note, where the court made an allowance for taxes on property and for interest on counsel fees, but the prayer of the complaint was only for five per cent as counsel fees, relief was granted for an excess over the amount demanded in the complaint. Parrott v. Den, 34 Cal. 79. The relief "demanded in the complaint" refers to the relief asked in the prayer,—the feature of the pleading to which alone reference may be had, in default cases, to ascertain what relief the plaintiff seeks; and the rule of the statute applies in its strictness to actions in foreclosure, alike with those of any other character. Brooks v. Forrington, 117 Cal. 219; 48 Pac. 1073; Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 14; Gautier v. English, 29 Cal. 165; Parrott v. Den, 34 Cal. 79. Counsel cannot be allowed fees in a foreclosure suit, upon default, where none are specifically prayed for, notwithstanding a prayer for general relief, and a stipulation, in the mortgage, making counsel fees a charge secured by the mortgage; nor are they recoverable as costs in the action. Brooks v. Forrington, 117 Cal. 219; 48 Pac. 1073. In a foreclosure suit, where judgment is taken by default, the decree can give no relief beyond that demanded in the bill; and a judgment is erroneous, that decrees a sale of property in a manner different from that prescribed in the statute, where the complaint simply asks a foreclosure of the mortgage and a sale of the property to satisfy the judgment. Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 14. The title of the defendant to rents and profits, pending foreclosure, is in no way affected by the possession of a receiver, and cannot be divested otherwise than by valid adjudication; and where the complaint does not justify such adjudication, the defendant being in default, the court cannot adjudge the defendant divested of such title. Garretson Investment Co. v. Arndt, 144 Cal. 64; 77 Pac. 770; Scott v. Hotchkiss, 115 Cal. 89; 47 Pac. 45; Brooks v. Forrington, 117 Cal. 219; 48 Pac. 1073; Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122; Staacke v. Bell, 125 Cal. 309; 57 Pac. 1012. Where the only relief prayed for was, that the defendant be enjoined from transferring its property or mortgages, an order, on default, directing a transfer and conveyance of the property to a receiver is in excess of the relief asked. Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122. A judgment by default is erroneous, where it awards interest from the date of the filing of the complaint, instead of from the date of entry of judgment. Gage v. Rogers, 20 Cal. 91. Where the prayer of the complaint is, that the defendants be required to convey the total amount of land claimed, and the action is dismissed as to two defendants, the others being required to convey the total amount, the relief granted is not in excess of the prayer of the complaint. Brooks v. Carpentier, 53 Cal. 287. A judgment, rendered on default, granting excessive relief, is the act of the court, and not of the judgment creditor; and an action does not lie to quash the execution and perpetually enjoin the collection of the judgment, upon the ground that it was obtained by fraud. Murdock v. De Vries, 37 Cal. 527. Intendments are in favor of the regularity of judgments; and where a cause is appealed on the judgment roll, with no bill of exceptions or statement, and nothing to show that the appellant ever asked for any other or further relief than that prayed for and received, he cannot be heard to complain. Treat v. Dorman, 100 Cal. 623; 35 Pac. 86. This section has no application to questions or jurisdiction; and a judgment, where no answer is filed, rendered by a court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the person, even though exceeding the relief demanded in the complaint, is erroneous merely, and not void. Chase v. Christianson, 41 Cal. 253. If the defendant does not answer, and the plaintiff asks for and receives more relief than he is entitled to, nothing more can be predicated than that an erroneous judgment was obtained, or one absolutely void pro tanto: if erroneous, the remedy is by appeal; and if void pro tanto, by motion to set it aside. Murdock v. De Vries, 37 Cal. 527; Chipman v. Bowman, 14 Cal. 157; Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200; Bell v. Thompson, 19 Cal. 706; Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170.

Relief where answer filed. The court may grant to plaintiff any relief consistent with the case made by him, and embraced within the issue, where an answer is filed (Poledori v. Newman, 116 Cal. 375; 48 Pac. 325; Johnson v. Polhemus, 99 Cal. 240; 33 Pac. 908; Bedolla v. Williams, 15 Cal. App. 738; 115 Pac. 747), though not specifically prayed for (Dennison v. Chapman, 105 Cal. 447; 39 Pac. 61; Moch v. Santa Rosa, 126 Cal. 330; 58 Pac. 826; Johnson v. Polhemus, 99 Cal. 240; 33 Pac. 908); and jurisdiction to grant any particular relief depends, not upon the prayer of the complaint, but upon the issues made by the pleadings. Murphy v. Stelling, 8 Cal. App. 702; 97 Pac. 672; Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411; 80 Pac. 517.

Presumptions in favor of default judgment. The recital that a default was regularly entered according to law is not necessarily based upon an affidavit, showing a publication, contained in the record; it may have been made to appear to the court that another affidavit showing due publication was filed within the proper time, and the recital may have been based upon that fact, and, in a collateral attack upon the judgment, it will be presumed, in support of the judgment, that the recital in the judgment was based upon such other affidavit, and that the same may have been lost or omitted from the record, where the record does not purport to show all that was done, and the judgment states that all that was necessary to be done was done. Sacramento Bank v. Montgomery, 146 Cal. 745; 81 Pac. 138.

Modification of judgment. An error in the judgment, not affecting the verdict nor requiring a new trial, may, and should, be corrected by modifying the judgment so as to conform to the verdict read in connection with the pleadings. Compressed Air Machinery Co. v. West San Pablo Land etc. Co., 9 Cal. App. 361; 99 Pac. 531.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Relief, when judgment is by default. If the judgment is by default, the court cannot grant any greater relief than that prayed for in the complaint and specified in the summons. Lamping v. Hyatt, 27 Cal. 102; Gautier v. English, 29 Cal. 165; Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 19; Gage v. Rogers, 20 Cal. 191; Parrott v. Den, 34 Cal. 79; McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115. If the complaint does not contain a prayer for a judgment in coin, a judgment by default in coin cannot be taken. Lamping v. Hyatt, 27 Cal. 102. A judgment rendered in an action on contract in favor of plaintiff on the complaint alone, after striking out an answer previously filed by defendant, is, in effect, a judgment by default, and is therefore erroneous if rendered for a greater amount than that for which the summons states judgment could be taken. Lattimer v. Ryan, 20 Cal. 628. A judgment entered by the clerk upon default, for an amount greater than is demanded in the prayer of the complaint, and specified in the summons, is not void, but is simply erroneous, and may be enforced until modified. Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 531.

2. Relief, after issue joined. Where an answer is filed, the court may grant any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint within the issue. San Francisco Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 76; Cassacia v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 28 Cal. 628. But the facts proved or admitted must clearly justify the relief granted. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 282.

3. Mandamus. Quo warranto. The provisions of this section are applicable to proceedings by mandate and quo warranto. People v. Board of Supervisors, 27 Cal. 655.

§ 581. Action may be dismissed, or nonsuit entered. An action may be dismissed, or a judgment of nonsuit entered, in the following cases:

1. By the plaintiff himself, by written request to the clerk, filed with the papers in the case, at any time before the trial, upon payment of his costs; provided, a counterclaim has not been set up, or affirmative relief sought by the cross-complaint or answer of the defendant. If a provisional remedy has been allowed, the undertaking must thereupon be delivered by the clerk to the defendant, who may have his action thereon;

2. By either party, upon the written consent of the other;

3. By the court, when either party fails to appear on the trial, and the other party appears and asks for the dismissal;

4. By the court, when, upon the trial and before the final submission of the case, the plaintiff abandons it;

5. By the court, upon motion of the defendant, when upon the trial the plaintiff fails to prove a sufficient case for the jury.

The dismissals mentioned in subdivisions one and two hereof are made by entry in the clerk's register. The dismissals mentioned in subdivisions three, four, and five of this section must be made by orders of the court entered upon the minutes thereof, and are effective for all purposes when so entered; but the clerk of the court must note such orders in his register of actions in the case.

Dismissal.
1. For want of prosecution. See post, § 583.
2. In justice's court. See post, § 890.
3. Of election contest. See post, §§ 1117, 1122, 1125.
4. For failure to give security for costs. See post, § 1037.
Variance, fatal or otherwise. Ante, §§ 469–471.
Trial, either party may bring on. Post, § 594.

Legislation § 581. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 148, which read: "An action may be dismissed, or a judgment of nonsuit entered, in the following cases: 1. By the plaintiff himself, at any time before trial, upon the payment of costs, if a counterclaim has not been made. If a provisional remedy has been allowed, the undertaking shall thereupon be delivered by the clerk to the defendant, who may have his action thereon; 2. By either party, upon the written consent of the other; 3. By the court, when the plaintiff fails to appear on the trial, and the defendant appears and asks for the dismissal; 4. By the court, when upon the trial, and before the final submission of the case, the plaintiff abandons it; 5. By the court, upon motion of the defendant, when upon the trial the plaintiff fails to prove a sufficient case for the jury. The dismissal mentioned in the first two subdivisions, shall be made by an entry in the clerk's register. Judgment may thereupon be entered accordingly." When enacted in 1872, § 581 read the same, except for the substitution (1) of "must" for "shall," after "undertaking," in subd. 1, and (2) of "is" for "shall be," after "subdivisions."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 100, (1) substituting the word "provided" for "if," before "a counterclaim"; (2) inserting the clause "or affirmative relief sought by the cross-complaint or answer of defendant."

3. Amended by Stats. 1885, p. 76, (1) in subd. 4, omitting "final" before "submission"; (2) adding subd. 6, which read: "By the court when, after verdict or final submission, the party entitled to judgment neglects to demand and have the same entered for more than six months."

4. Amended by Stats. 1889, p. 398, (1) in subd. 4, adding "final" before "submission"; (2) inserting, before "is made," in subd. 6, the words "of this"; (3) adding subd. 7, which read, "And no action heretofore or hereafter commenced shall be further prosecuted, and no further proceedings shall be had therein, and all actions heretofore or hereafter commenced shall be dismissed by the court in which the same shall have been commenced on its own motion, or on the motion of any party interested therein, whether named in the complaint as a party or not, unless summons shall have been issued within one year, and served, and return thereon made within three years after the commencement of said action, or unless appearance has been made by the defendant or defendants therein within said three years."

5. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 31, (1) inserting "section" after "this," in the second paragraph of subd. 6; (2) changing the section, after the words "within one year," in subd. 7, to read, "and all such actions shall be in like manner dismissed, unless the summons shall be served and return thereon made within three years after the commencement of said action. But all such actions may be prosecuted, if appearance has been made by the defendant or defendants within said three years, in the same manner as if summons had been issued and served."

6. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 98, (1) inserting, in subd. 1, the words "by written request to the clerk, filed among the papers in the case"; (2) changing the last paragraph of subd. 6, and adding a new paragraph, both of which comprise the two sentences following: "The dismissals mentioned in subdivisions one and two hereof are made by entry in the clerk's register. The dismissals mentioned in subdivisions three, four, five, and six of this section, shall be made by orders of the court entered upon the minutes thereof, and shall be effective for all purposes when so entered, but the clerk of the court shall note such orders in his register of actions in the case."

7. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 143; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

8. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 711; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment to subd. 3 authorizes the plaintiff, as well as the defendant, to ask for the dismissal of an action if his adversary does not appear at the trial. Subd. 6, concerning the dismissal of an action because the party entitled to judgment neglects to make demand therefor within six months, is omitted, because the changes made in § 664 require the judgment to be entered by the clerk without any demand by either party. The matters contained in former subd. 7 are, with certain changes, embraced in the new § 581a."

Construction of section. This section was designed for the benefit of defendants, to relieve them from the assertion of stale demands, and to insure proper diligence in the prosecution of asserted claims (Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich, 141 Cal. 4: 74 Pac. 352); and, dealing with the subject of orders of dismissal of actions, it should be held to apply to all such dismissals (Marks v. Keenan, 140 Cal. 33; 73 Pac. 751); and, except as authorized by this section, the court cannot dismiss an action, either as an entirety or as against parties: any judgment not authorized by this section must be upon the merits. Townsend v. Driver, 5 Cal. App. 581; 90 Pac. 1061. This section is inapplicable to justices' courts. Hubbard v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 166; 98 Pac. 394. The first subdivision cannot be restricted in its meaning to trials of merits after answer, for there may be such a trial on a general demurrer to the complaint as will effectually dispose of the case, where the plaintiff has properly alleged all the facts that constitute his cause of action; and if the demurrer is sustained, he stands on his own pleading, and submits to judgment on the demurrer, and if not sustained, he has his remedy by appeal; in such a case there would be a trial, within the meaning of the code, and the judgment would cut off the right of dismissal, unless it was first set aside or leave given to amend. Goldtree v. Spreckels, 135 Cal. 666; 67 Pac. 1091; and see Hancock Ditch Co. v. Bradford, 13 Cal. 637; Brown v. Harter, 18 Cal. 76; Tregambo v. Comanche Mill etc. Co., 57 Cal. 501; Finn v. Spagnoli, 67 Cal. 330; 7 Pac. 746. The first subdivision relates to dismissals made by the action of the plaintiff alone, but the dismissals provided for by the other subdivisions are made by a party only upon the written consent of the other, or by the court upon motion of a party, or upon its own motion. Boca etc. R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 150 Cal. 153; 88 Pac. 718. The auxiliary verb "may," in the introductory paragraph, cannot be read "must," as applied to either of the first two subdivisions (Rosenthal v. McMann, 93 Cal. 505; 29 Pac. 121); and the particle "an," qualifying "action," in the same paragraph, is equivalent to the word "any"; and the provisions of the section are applicable to an action in interpleader, as well as to other forms and causes of actions. Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152; 46 Pac. 904.

Entry of dismissal by clerk. A request for a dismissal must be signed by the attorney of record for the plaintiff, if there is such an attorney; otherwise, the clerk is not authorized to recognize the same as a discontinuance of the action, or to make an entry of dismissal in his register. Boca etc. R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 150 Cal. 153; 88 Pac. 718. The entry of a judgment of dismissal is not required, under this section: the entry of the order in the clerk's register is sufficient. Hopkins v. Superior Court, 136 Cal. 552; 69 Pac. 299; Huntington Park Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 692; 121 Pac. 701. The clerk has no authority to "order, adjudge, and decree" that an action be dismissed: such an entry by him, in his register, is not an entry of judgment. Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644; 59 Pac. 143. A judgment to be entered upon an order of dismissal is a judgment of the court, although it is to be entered by the clerk. Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644; 59 Pac. 143. A judgment sustaining the defendant's demurrer to a complaint, is not a mere dismissal of the action, but a final determination of the rights of the parties, which § 668, post, requires to be entered in the judgment-book. Wood v. Missouri etc. Ry. Co., 152 Cal. 344; 92 Pac. 868. The failure of the clerk to enter the dismissal in the register, and cause a proper judgment of dismissal to be entered in his judgment-book, cannot affect the substantial rights of the parties. Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152; 46 Pac. 904; Huntington Park Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 692; 121 Pac. 701. The entry of the order of dismissal in the minute-book of the court is, in its nature, a final judgment, and the time within which an appeal may be taken begins to run from the date of that entry. Matthai v. Kennedy, 148 Cal. 699; 84 Pac. 37; and see Marks v. Keenan, 140 Cal. 33; 73 Pac. 751; Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich, 141 Cal. 4; 74 Pac. 352; Swortfiguer v. White, 141 Cal. 579; 75 Pac. 172. The order dismissing an action is a final judgment; and the neglect of the clerk to register the order of dismissal in his register of actions does not destroy the effectiveness of the provisions of this section. Marks v. Keenan, 140 Cal. 33; 73 Pac. 751. The validity of an entry in the register, or of a judgment thereon, must be decided by reference to the pleadings in the action, where such validity is attacked either directly or collaterally. Page v. Superior Court, 76 Cal. 372; 18 Pac. 385. The validity of a judgment entered under the first subdivision of this section cannot be questioned, although the judgment is entered by the clerk without payment of costs. Hinkel v. Donohue, 90 Cal. 389; 27 Pac. 301; Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152; 46 Pac. 904. A mere order of dismissal, for any statutory cause, is to be entered in the clerk's register or minutes, but the entry of a final judgment must be made in the judgment-book. Wood v. Missouri etc. Ry. Co., 152 Cal. 344; 92 Pac. 868.

Action may be dismissed by plaintiff when. While the plaintiff has an inherent and absolute right to dismiss his action, yet such right can be exercised only in the mode prescribed by the statute, and is measured by the mode provided for its exercise (Huntington Park Improvement Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 692; 121 Pac. 701); and the only limitation upon such right is, that the defendant has filed a counterclaim or asked for affirmative relief (McDonald v. California Timber Co., 2 Cal. App. 165; 83 Pac. 172; Alpers v. Bliss, 145 Cal. 565; 79 Pac. 171; Thompson v. Spraig, 66 Cal. 350; 5 Pac. 506); and where no affirmative relief is demanded by the defendant, the plaintiff has the right to dismiss the action by filing with the clerk a written request therefor, the effect of which act, on his part, is, ipso facto, to dismiss the case. Huntington Park Improvement Co. v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 692; 121 Pac. 701. When it is said that an action may be dismissed or a judgment of nonsuit entered by the plaintiff himself, no more is meant than that he may apply to the clerk for the entry of dismissal in the clerk's register and a judgment accordingly; and the power of the clerk to enter judgment depends upon his power to make an entry of dismissal in the register. Page

v. Superior Court, 76 Cal. 372; 18 Pac. 385. A voluntary dismissal, without prejudice, at plaintiff's costs, is proper, under the first subdivision of this section, where the defendant, after having a default judgment set aside, had obtained leave to answer, but had not answered at the time of dismissal. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Portener, 139 Cal. 90; 72 Pac. 16. The right of the plaintiff to have the action dismissed, and the authority of the clerk to enter the judgment of dismissal, depend upon the condition of the pleadings at the time the plaintiff makes the request for such dismissal. Alpers v. Bliss, 145 Cal. 565; 79 Pac. 171. The provision of the first subdivision, concerning the dismissal of an action, is not mandatory or exclusive: the plaintiff may move for a dismissal in open court, and have an order made and entered with the same effect as though made by an entry in the clerk's register. McDonald v. California Timber Co., 2 Cal. App. 165; 83 Pac. 172. The plaintiff has no right, and the court has no authority, to dismiss a cause tried, submitted, and taken under advisement by the court (Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 100; Westbay v. Gray, 116 Cal. 660; 48 Pac. 800); but the court may grant a dismissal, on motion of the plaintiff, after the case is tried and submitted, where the order of submission was set aside and leave given to amend the pleadings, the case then standing as though no submission had ever been had. Westbay v. Gray, 116 Cal. 660; 48 Pac. 800. Where proceedings have been had under the act of 1909, authorizing the condemnation of property by municipalities for street purposes, there can be no dismissal, under either that act or this section, after the entry of the interlocutory judgment awarding damages to various defendants because of such taking. Title Insurance etc. Co. v. Lusk, 15 Cal. App. 358; 115 Pac. 53. In an action of eminent domain, the plaintiff is entitled to abandon his claim to the property and ask a dismissal before the expiration of thirty days from the entry of judgment. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Reis Estate Co., 15 Cal. App. 216; 114 Pac. 808. There is no right of dismissal, under this section, where an issue of law has been tried upon demurrer to the complaint, and leave to amend refused: the clerk has no authority to enter a dismissal, in such a case, upon the plaintiff's order, and the court may set it aside. Goldtree v. Spreckels, 135 Cal. 666; 67 Pac. 1091. The plaintiff may, at any time before trial, dismiss the action as to some of the defendants, and proceed against the others alone; and after the dismissal the dismissed defendants cannot contest the validity or regularity of the judgment. Reed v. Calderwood, 22 Cal. 463.

When affirmative relief is sought by defendant. The plaintiff cannot, upon his own motion, dismiss the action, where the defendant, by his answer, claims affirmative relief (Robinson v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 65 Cal. 264; 3 Pac. 878); nor, where the defendant, in his answer, avers matters growing out of the matters set forth in the complaint upon which he seeks affirmative relief, can the plaintiff dismiss the action upon his own motion, without the consent of the defendant. Clark v. Hundley, 65 Cal. 96; 3 Pac. 131. A judgment of dismissal is a nullity, where the defendant, in his answer, seeks affirmative relief. Thompson v. Spraig, 2 Cal. Unrep. 346; 4 Pac. 418. A counterclaim or cross-complaint, to prevent a dismissal under the first subdivision of this section, must be one under which the plaintiff would be entitled to affirmative relief. Mott v. Mott, 82 Cal. 413; 22 Pac. 1140, 1142; Belleau v. Thompson, 33 Cal. 495. Where the cross-complaint is stricken from the answer, leaving therein matters of defense only, the plaintiff may dismiss the action at any time before trial, upon payment of costs. Thompson v. Spraig, 66 Cal. 350; 5 Pac. 506. Where the defendant, in an action of ejectment, averred title in himself, set up a lease of the premises in controversy by himself to the plaintiff, and an indebtedness by the latter for rent accruing under the lease, such indebtedness does not constitute a counterclaim (Carpenter v. Hewel, 67 Cal. 589; 8 Pac. 314); nor do matters set out in a cross-bill, not arising out of the transaction set forth in the complaint, and not connected with the subject of the action. James v. Center, 53 Cal. 31. An answer setting up the defendant's title, and praying for a decree to establish it, and to enjoin the plaintiff from asserting any interest in the property or interfering with the defendant's possession thereof, does not prevent a dismissal of the action by the plaintiff (Wood v. Jordan, 125 Cal. 263; 57 Pac. 998); but this case was decided upon the authority of Moyle v. Porter, 51 Cal. 639, without the attention of the court being called to the material change of this section since that decision, and is overruled in Islais etc. Water Co. v. Allen, 132 Cal. 432, 64 Pac. 713, where it is held that such an answer does not seek affirmative relief. An action for divorce comes within the purview of the first subdivision of this section, where the defendant files a cross-complaint, and upon such cross-complaint prays affirmative relief. Mott v. Mott, 82 Cal. 413; 22 Pac. 1140. A cross-complainant cannot dismiss his cross-complaint after the filing of the answer of the plaintiff thereto, seeking the affirmative relief of a decree that the mortgage therein set forth be adjudged paid and satisfied. Rodgers v. Parker, 136 Cal. 313; 68 Pac. 975; Islais etc. Water Co. v. Allen, 132 Cal. 432; 64 Pac. 713. The plaintiff cannot be deprived of his right to a judgment of dismissal because the defendant files a cross-complaint after receiving notice of intention to move for an order of dismissal (Hinkel v. Donohue, 90 Cal. 389; 27 Pac. 301); nor where the defendant files an answer containing a counterclaim, after the order dismissing the cause has been entered in the minutes, but before the actual entry of the judgment. Evans v. Johnston, 115 Cal. 180; 46 Pac. 906.

In case of intervention. Where a petition in intervention is filed for the purpose, merely, of resisting the plaintiff's claim, and there is no counterclaim or cross-complaint, and no affirmative relief sought by the defendant, the plaintiff has the right to dismiss the action, both as against the defendant and the intervener. Henry v. Vineland Irrigation Dist., 140 Cal. 376; 73 Pac. 1061. An intervener, against whom no relief is prayed, may dismiss his petition of intervention, and this right is not affected by the fact that one of the plaintiffs has died and his successor is not brought in as a party. Sheldon v. Gunn, 56 Cal. 582. Where the intervener could accomplish nothing by a judgment upon the merits, that would not be accomplished by the dismissal of the action, the plaintiff may dismiss the action. Henry v. Vineland Irrigation Dist., 140 Cal. 376; 73 Pac. 1061; and see People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399, 773. A judgment rendered against an intervener is erroneous, where he abandoned the contest, and was out of the case by virtue of a dismissal. Sheldon v. Gunn, 56 Cal. 582.

Judgment of retraxit. A retraxit occurred at common law when a plaintiff came into court in person and voluntarily renounced his suit or cause of action; when this was done, and a judgment was entered in favor of the defendant, the plaintiff's cause of action was forever gone. Westbay v. Gray, 116 Cal. 660; 48 Pac. 800; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Portener, 139 Cal. 90; 72 Pac. 716; and see Board of Commissioners v. Younger, 29 Cal. 147; 87 Am. Dec. 164; Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542. Unless an order and judgment directing a dismissal operates as a retraxit, and so bars any action by the plaintiff for the same cause, the defendant is not aggrieved thereby. Stoutenborough v. Board of Education, 104 Cal. 664; 38 Pac. 449. A judgment of dismissal, entered without prejudice, at plaintiff's costs, is not a judgment on the merits, and is not a bar to a subsequent action, and consequently not an estoppel under § 1908, post. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Portener, 139 Cal. 90; 72 Pac. 716. A judgment of dismissal of a suit brought by a plaintiff in a Federal court, for want of jurisdiction or right of the plaintiff to sue in that court, is not res adjudicata as to the cause of action upon the merits, nor a bar to another action, for the same cause, brought by the same plaintiff in a state court. Wills v. Pauly, 116 Cal. 575; 48 Pac. 709. The power to make a retraxit, under our statute, is conferred upon the attorney of record in the case. Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542. A judgment of dismissal is a nullity, where the defendant, in his answer, seeks affirmative relief (Thompson v. Spraig, 2 Cal. Unrep. 346; 4 Pac. 418); and the judgment relates to the date of the legal demand for the dismissal of the action, where necessary to preserve the substantial rights of the parties. Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152; 46 Pac. 904. The mode pointed out in the first subdivision of this section is not mandatory, nor exclusive of the power of the court to grant an order of dismissal, which, when procured by the plaintiff, should be noted by the clerk in the register of action. Richards v. Bradley, 129 Cal. 670; 62 Pac. 316; and see Hinkel v. Donohue, 90 Cal. 389; 27 Pac. 301; Westbay v. Gray, 116 Cal. 660; 48 Pac. 800.

Dismissal by written consent. A complaint, stricken out by consent of both parties, is properly followed by a dismissal of the proceedings. Smith v. Ling, 73 Cal. 72; 14 Pac. 390. Where there is an attorney of record, the written consent that the action be dismissed must come from him or be sanctioned by him, and no stipulation as to the conduct or disposal of the action will be entertained by the court, unless the same is signed or assented to by the attorney of record; the party to the action may appear in his own proper person or by his attorney, but he cannot do both, and if he appears by his attorney, he must be heard through him. Board of Commissioners v. Younger, 29 Cal. 147; 87 Am. Dec. 164. A judgment of dismissal is invalid, where the plaintiff, without the knowledge or consent of his attorney of record, signed and delivered to the defendant's attorney a written stipulation authorizing the dismissal of the action and judgment was entered accordingly. Toy v. Haskell, 128 Cal. 558; 79 Am. St. Rep. 70; 61 Pac. 89.

Dismissal for failure to appear at trial. Upon failure of the plaintiff to appear at the trial, the defendant is not bound to take a dismissal of the action, though he may do so, where he has set up a counterclaim, and he has the right to proceed with the case and have a final judgment entered. Clune v. Quitzow, 125 Cal. 213; 57 Pac. 886. A court should not, under the third subdivision of this section, dismiss an action, in which an issue of fact is joined, for the failure of the plaintiff to appear at the trial, except upon proof that the plaintiff has had five days' notice of such trial, as prescribed in § 594, post. Estate of Dean, 149 Cal. 487; 87 Pac. 13. Where the plaintiff fails to appear at the time set for trial, a judgment of dismissal of the action for want of prosecution is not an adjudication of the cause upon its merits, and is not a bar to another action for the same cause: not having the elements to constitute a bar to another action, it has not the elements to support a plea in abatement. Pyle v. Piercy, 122 Cal. 383; 55 Pac. 141.

Nonsuit may be granted in what classes of cases. The court has authority to grant a judgment of nonsuit, only in certain cases specified. Hanna v. De Garmo, 140 Cal. 172; 73 Pac. 830. The rules of nonsuit are the same, whether the trial is by the court or by a jury. Freese v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 139 Cal. 392; 73 Pac. 172; Goldstone v. Merchants' Ice etc. Co., 123 Cal. 625; 56 Pac. 776; Marron v. Marron, 19 Cal. App. 326; 125 Pac. 914. In determining a motion for a nonsuit upon the close of contestant's case, in a will contest, the same rules apply as in civil cases. Estate of Daly, 15 Cal. App. 329; 114 Pac. 787.

Nonsuit, granted at what stage of the action. At common law, it was the right of the plaintiff to take a nonsuit at any time before the jury retired, and this section has not altered the rule. Hancock Ditch Co. v. Bradford, 13 Cal. 637. This section does not give an absolute right to a nonsuit after the case has been submitted and the jury has retired, but the right does exist at any time before such submission and retirement. Brown v. Harter, 18 Cal. 76; Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 100. A nonsuit can properly be granted after the evidence on both sides is closed (Toulouse v. Pare, 103 Cal. 251; 37 Pac. 146; Geary v. Simmons, 39 Cal. 224; Vanderford v. Foster, 65 Cal. 49; 2 Pac. 736); but this section does not purport to warrant a nonsuit, except upon a motion of the defendant when, upon the trial, the plaintiff fails to prove a sufficient case. Saul v. Moscone, 16 Cal. App. 506; 118 Pac. 452.

Nonsuit for failure to prove cause of action. Where the plaintiff introduces proof enough to make out a prima facie case under his pleading, a motion for a nonsuit, at the close of his case, should be denied. Estate of Daly, 15 Cal. App. 329; 114 Pac. 787. The defendant's motion for a nonsuit is properly denied, where the plaintiff makes out a prima facie case (Creditors' Union v. Lundy, 16 Cal. App. 567; 117 Pac. 624); and also where there is any evidence of a substantial nature, supporting the cause of action alleged in the complaint. McEwen v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 20 Cal. App. 477; 129 Pac. 598. The case is properly dismissed, where the plaintiff refuses to offer any testimony in support of his complaint (Stewart v. Stewart, 156 Cal. 651; 105 Pac. 955); and nonsuit is properly granted, where no evidence is introduced by him, tending to prove a particular issue material to the case. Sepulveda v. Sepulveda, 128 Cal. 661; 61 Pac. 272. In an action upon a fire-insurance policy, where no breach of the contract evidenced by the policy existed at the time of suit brought, and where the plaintiff introduces the policy in evidence at the trial, the court errs in refusing a motion for a nonsuit at the conclusion of the plaintiff's testimony. Irwin v. Insurance Co., 16 Cal. App. 143; 116 Pac. 294. In an action by a corporation to recover money alleged to have been misappropriated by its president, a nonsuit is properly granted where the misappropriation is not proved. Hercules Oil etc. Co. v. Hocknell, 5 Cal. App. 702; 91 Pac. 341. A motion for a nonsuit should be granted for failure of proof of cause of action alleged, and such motion is not waived by the subsequent introduction of evidence by the defendant, which does not change the status of the case, nor supply any defect in the plaintiff's case, as pointed out on the motion for nonsuit. Elmore v. Elmore, 114 Cal. 516; 46 Pac. 458; Smith v. Compton, 6 Cal. 24; Winans v. Hardenbergh, 8 Cal. 291; Abbey Homestead Ass'n v. Willard, 48 Cal. 614; Higgins v. Ragsdale, 83 Cal. 219; 23 Pac. 316. A nonsuit, in an action for negligence, can be granted only when the facts are undisputed, and are such that but one conclusion can be drawn from them; and the question is one of law for the court. Hanley v. California Bridge etc. Co., 127 Cal. 232; 47 L. R. A. 597; 59 Pac. 577. Where the plaintiff, in an action for personal injuries, was, as a matter of law, guilty of contributory negligence, the court should grant a nonsuit (Payne v. Oakland Traction Co., 15 Cal. App. 127; 113 Pac. 1074); but where the plaintiff's evidence shows a violation of the law of the road, and he is not chargeable, as a matter of law, with contributory negligence, a motion for a nonsuit, at the close of his evidence, is properly denied. McKernan v. Los Angeles Gas etc. Co., 16 Cal. App. 280; 116 Pac. 677. Upon a contest of a will and codicil, executed at different dates, there may be a nonsuit as to either branch of the case, where the evidence is insufficient, and the party in whose favor it is rendered is entitled to a judgment thereon. Estate of Ricks, 160 Cal. 450; 117 Pac. 532. Error in admitting evidence cannot be reviewed on a motion for a nonsuit; and where the evidence admitted substantially tends to prove all the facts essential to the plaintiff's cause of action, the nonsuit is properly denied (O'Connor v. Hooper, 102 Cal. 528; 36 Pac. 939); and a nonsuit is also properly denied, where the defendant expressly admits that the claim sued on was presented to and rejected by him, and there is evidence sufficient to justify and sustain the demand (Warren v. McGill, 103 Cal. 153; 37 Pac. 144); and a nonsuit should be denied where the evidence, and the presumptions reasonably arising therefrom, are legally sufficient to prove the material allegations of the complaint (Goldstone v. Merchants' Ice etc. Co., 123 Cal. 625; 56 Pac. 776; De Ro v. Cordes, 4 Cal. 117; McKee v. Greene, 31 Cal. 418; Alvarado v. De Celis, 54 Cal. 588; Felton v. Millard, 81 Cal. 540; 21 Pac. 533; 22 Pac. 750; Higgins v. Ragsdale, 83 Cal. 219; 23 Pac. 316); and also where there is any evidence to sustain the plaintiff's case, without passing upon the sufficiency of the evidence (Zilmer v. Gerichten, 111 Cal. 73; 43 Pac. 408; Felton v. Millard, 81 Cal. 540; 21 Pac. 533; 22 Pac. 750); and also where the plaintiff makes out a prima facie case, and there is no material variance between the averments and the proofs. Chapman v. Neary, 115 Cal. 79; 46 Pac. 867. An order granting a nonsuit and dismissing the action, after the cause was submitted upon briefs, but granted before the time for presenting the reply brief expired, is harmless, where, upon the case made, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Vincent v. Pacific Grove, 102 Cal. 405; 36 Pac. 773. The court may dismiss the action as to one defendant, where no case is made against him, notwithstanding the action proceeded as between the plaintiff and the other defendants. Rowe v. Simmons, 113 Cal. 688; 45 Pac. 983.

Nonsuit where case is insufficient for jury. Ordinarily, a nonsuit can be granted only in the cases specified by law, and upon motion, but error in taking from the jury the issue of undue influence, in a will contest, is without prejudice, where the contestant totally failed to make out a case, and the defect in his case was incurable. Estate of Higgins, 156 Cal. 257; 104 Pac. 6. To justify the submission of a question of fact to the jury, the proof must be sufficient to raise more than a mere conjecture or surmise that the fact is as alleged: it must be such that a rational mind can reasonably draw the conclusion that the fact exists. Janin v. London etc. Bank, 92 Cal. 14; 27 Am. St. Rep. 82; 14 L. R. A. 320; 27 Pac. 1100. A motion for a nonsuit is properly denied, where the evidence entitles the plaintiff to go to the jury on an issue stated (Gilliam v. Brown, 126 Cal. 160; 58 Pac. 466); and also where there is sufficient testimony to justify the court in submitting the facts to the jury. Anderson v. Hinshaw, 110 Cal. 682; 43 Pac. 389. Where it does not appear that the plaintiff failed to prove a sufficient case for the jury, nor that the defendant moved for a judgment of nonsuit, a judgment for the defendant cannot be treated as a judgment of dismissal, under the fifth subdivision of this section. Hancock v. Lopez, 53 Cal. 362. Where the evidence adduced by the plaintiff is not sufficient to justify a verdict in his favor, it is proper for the court, in effect, to grant a nonsuit by refusing to submit special issues to the jury, and to order them discharged. Estate of Morey, 147 Cal. 495; 82 Pac. 57. A motion for a nonsuit should be granted, where a verdict in favor of the plaintiff would be set aside for want of evidence to support it, and, in the absence of a jury, where the evidence is insufficient to support a judgment for the plaintiff (Downing v. Murray, 113 Cal. 455; 45 Pac. 869); and whenever the evidence introduced by the plaintiff so conclusively establishes a defense as that the court might properly grant a new trial in case of a verdict in his favor upon like evidence the court may direct a judgment of nonsuit (Goldstone v. Merchants' Ice etc. Co., 123 Cal. 625; 56 Pac. 776; McQuilken v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 7); but not where there is any substantial evidence, which, with the aid of all legitimate inferences favorable to the plaintiff, would support a verdict or finding that the material allegations of the complaint are true (Burr v. United Railroads, 163 Cal. 663; 126 Pac. 873); nor where the plaintiff's evidence would be held sufficient, on appeal, to support a judgment upon a verdict in his favor. Freese v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 139 Cal. 392; 73 Pac. 172.

Evidence, how considered on motion for nonsuit. The motion for a nonsuit admits the truth of the plaintiff's evidence, and every inference of fact that can be legitimately drawn therefrom; and, upon such motion, the evidence should be interpreted most strongly against the defendant. Hanley v. California Bridge etc. Co., 127 Cal. 232; 47 L. R. A. 597; 59 Pac. 577; Goldstone v. Merchants' Ice etc. Co., 123 Cal. 625; 56 Pac. 776; Estate of Ricks, 160 Cal. 450; 117 Pac. 532; Estate of Daly, 15 Cal. App. 329; 114 Pac. 787; Larson v. Larson, 15 Cal. App. 531; 115 Pac. 340; Christenson Lumber Co. v. Buckley, 17 Cal. App. 37; 118 Pac. 466; Marron v. Marron, 19 Cal. App. 326; 125 Pac. 914. A motion for a nonsuit should never be granted, where there is a conflict in the evidence. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 109 Cal. 566; 42 Pac. 154. A conflict of evidence as to a fact is a question for the jury: it should not be determined by the court as a matter of law, on motion for a nonsuit. Burr v. United Railroads, 163 Cal. 663; 126 Pac. 873. A motion for a nonsuit should be denied, where there is any substantial evidence tending to prove the plaintiff's case, without passing upon the sufficiency of such evidence. Marron v. Marron, 19 Cal. App. 326; 125 Pac. 914; Larson v. Larson, 15 Cal. App. 534; 115 Pac. 340. A motion for a nonsuit, directed "to all the causes of action mentioned in the complaint," is not tenable, unless, as to all, there is a failure of evidence. Pacific Vinegar etc. Works v. Smith, 152 Cal. 507; 93 Pac. 85. Where a motion for a nonsuit for want of testimony upon any material fact has been erroneously overruled, and the defendant proceeds and supplies the defect by evidence which he himself introduces, the error is waived. Lowe v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 154 Cal. 573; 98 Pac. 678.

Nature and effect of motion for nonsuit. A motion for a nonsuit admits the truth of all evidence in favor of the plaintiff, together with every inference or presumption legitimately deducible therefrom (Larson v. Larson, 15 Cal. App. 531; 115 Pac. 340; Marron v. Marron, 19 Cal. App. 326; 125 Pac. 914); it is equivalent to a demurrer to the evidence, or an objection that, admitting all of the proved facts to be true, they do not in legal effect operate in favor of the plaintiff, or entitle him to the relief asked for by him. Estate of Daly, 15 Cal. App. 329; 114 Pac. 787. A motion for a nonsuit, to prevent the submission of a case to the jury, presents a question of law for determination by the court (Estate of Daly, 15 Cal. App. 329; 114 Pac. 787); and in a statement on a motion for a new trial after nonsuit, the decision should be specified as an error of law. Donahue v. Gallavan, 43 Cal. 573; McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 284; Toulouse v. Pare, 103 Cal. 251; 37 Pac. 146. A nonsuit as to a certain defendant in a consolidated action does not affect the default of a party, previously entered, nor the right to judgment authorized by such default. Kennedy & Shaw Lumber Co. v. Dusenbery, 116 Cal. 124; 47 Pac. 1008.

Question of variance, how raised. Variance may be taken advantage of either by objecting to the admissibility of the evidence or by motion for a nonsuit; and the defendant is not precluded from moving for a nonsuit on the ground of variance by reason of his failure to object to the admissibility of the evidence. Elmore v. Elmore, 114 Cal. 516; 46 Pac. 458; Farmer v. Cram, 7 Cal. 135; Tomlinson v. Monroe, 41 Cal. 94; Johnson v. Moss, 45 Cal. 515. The motion for nonsuit is the proper method by which to raise the question of variance between the pleadings and the proof. Elmore v. Elmore, 114 Cal. 516; 46 Pac. 458.

Insufficiency of complaint no ground for nonsuit. It is not a ground for nonsuit, that the complaint does not state a cause of action. Keefe v. Keefe, 19 Cal. App. 310; 125 Pac. 929.

Nonsuit before referee. A plaintiff can voluntarily submit to a nonsuit before a referee, where no counterclaim is set up by the defendant. Plant v. Fleming, 20 Cal. 92.

Costs in case of nonsuit. The court is justified in ordering the plaintiff to pay jury fees, where he is nonsuited upon a trial before a jury. Fairchild v. King, 102 Cal. 320; 36 Pac. 649; Lukes v. Logan, 66 Cal. 33; 4 Pac. 883.

Findings unnecessary in case of nonsuit. Findings of fact and conclusions of law are not required, where the plaintiff is nonsuited at the trial. Gilson Quartz Mining Co. v. Gilson, 47 Cal. 597; Reynolds v. Brumagim, 54 Cal. 254; Harney v. McLeran, 66 Cal. 34; 4 Pac. 884; Toulouse v. Pare, 103 Cal. 251; 37 Pac. 146; Kennedy & Shaw Lumber Co. v. Dusenbery, 116 Cal. 124; 47 Pac. 1008.

Motion for nonsuit, necessity for. The court's summary dismissal of an action, at the conclusion of the evidence for both parties, without any motion by the defendant for a nonsuit, is not a dismissal authorized under the fifth subdivision of this section. Saul v. Moscone, 16 Cal. App. 506; 118 Pac. 452.

Motion for nonsuit, requisites of. A motion for a nonsuit should specify the grounds upon which it is made: ordinarily, a ground not stated cannot be considered. Kiler v. Kimbal, 10 Cal. 267; Holverstot v. Bugby, 13 Cal. 43; Baker v. Joseph, 16 Cal. 173; Sanchez v. Neary, 41 Cal. 485; Raimond v. Eldridge, 43 Cal. 506; Silva v. Holland, 74 Cal. 530; 16 Pac. 385; Loring v. Stuart, 79 Cal. 200; 21 Pac. 651; Miller v. Luco, 80 Cal. 257; 22 Pac. 195; Daley v. Russ, 86 Cal. 114; 24 Pac. 867; Palmer v. Marysville Democrat Pub. Co., 90 Cal. 168; 27 Pac. 21; Fontana v. Pacific Can Co., 129 Cal. 51; 61 Pac. 580; Durfee v. Seale, 139 Cal. 603; 73 Pac. 435; Stanton v. Carnahan, 15 Cal. App. 527; 115 Pac. 339; Coghlan v. Quartararo, 15 Cal. App. 662; 115 Pac. 664; Christensen Lumber Co. v. Buckley, 17 Cal. App. 37; 118 Pac. 466; Sebring v. Harris, 20 Cal. App. 56; 128 Pac. 7. The reason for the rule that a motion for a nonsuit should state the grounds therefor is to afford to the plaintiff an opportunity to correct any defects of pleading or of proof; but the rule does not apply where the defects could not have been remedied, even if specially pointed out: in such a case it is immaterial that the grounds are not specified (Christensen Lumber Co. v. Buckley, 17 Cal. App. 37; 118 Pac. 466); nor does the rule apply, where the case is one that cannot be cured, although attention is specifically called to the defects (Fontana v. Pacific Can Co., 129 Cal. 51; 61 Pac. 580; Daley v. Russ, 86 Cal. 114; 24 Pac. 867); and where the defects do not admit of correction, error in not specifying the grounds of the motion is immaterial. Daley

v. Russ, 86 Cal. 114; 24 Pac. 867; Nightingale v. Scannell, 18 Cal. 315.

Dismissal for failure to enter judgment within six months. The old sixth subdivision of this section, which provided that an action might be dismissed where judgment was not entered within six months after its rendition, was not mandatory (Rickey Land etc. Co. v. Glader, 153 Cal. 179; 94 Pac. 768; Hall v. Justice's Court, 5 Cal. App. 133; 89 Pac. 870); and the court, in its discretion, could grant or deny a motion to dismiss an action for the cause therein mentioned, without its action being disturbed on appeal, except for abuse of discretion. Neihaus v. Morgan, 5 Cal. Unrep. 391; 45 Pac. 255; Rosenthal v. McMann, 93 Cal. 505; 29 Pac. 121; Estate of McDevitt, 95 Cal. 17; 30 Pac. 101; Jones v. Chalfant, 3 Cal. Unrep. 585; 31 Pac. 257; Marshall v. Taylor, 97 Cal. 422; 32 Pac. 515; Fitzhugh v. Mason, 2 Cal. App. 220; 83 Pac. 282. Even had the sixth subdivision been mandatory, it could not authorize the dismissal of an action, where no neglect on the part of the plaintiff was shown. Marshall v. Taylor, 97 Cal. 422; 32 Pac. 515; and see Rosenthal v. McMann, 93 Cal. 505; 29 Pac. 121. The rule was, that where the court had actually rendered judgment, but it was not entered on the record, whether in consequence of the neglect of the court or the neglect or misprision of the clerk, an order could be made that the judgment rendered be entered nunc pro tunc, after the expiration of six months. Marshall v. Taylor, 97 Cal. 422; 32 Pac. 515. Where the failure to enter judgment for more than six months was the result of the negligence of the clerk, the defendant, on receiving the verdict, having handed it to the clerk and requested its entry, a motion to set aside the verdict and decision could be denied. Jones v. Chalfant, 3 Cal. Unrep. 585; 31 Pac. 257. A party was not guilty of negligence, where he requested the clerk to make the entry of judgment, and paid the fees therefor, and the clerk promised to make the entry, and the party supposed the judgment had been entered, although he did not enter his request in an order-book, as was customary, but not required by law. Gardner v. Tatum, 77 Cal. 458. The court did not lose jurisdiction of a cause by a failure to enter the judgment within the time prescribed, or by failure of the clerk to perform his duty. Waters v. Dumas, 75 Cal. 563; 17 Pac. 685. Where the cause was tried by the court, and submitted by both parties for a decision on the merits, the court could not, in deciding the case, order that a nonsuit be granted, and the action dismissed, on the ground that the defendant had neglected to demand and have a nonsuit entered for more than six months. San José Ranch Co. v. San José Land etc. Co., 126 Cal. 322; 58 Pac. 824. A judgment of dismissal, under the sixth subdivision, could be reversed, where the court abused its discretion in granting the motion to dismiss. Rickey Land etc. Co. v. Glader, 153 Cal. 179; 94 Pac. 768. A defendant who failed to demand a nonsuit was not in default, although he could obtain it; it was his privilege and right to demand, instead, a judgment on the merits, and whether the neglect was such as to justify a dismissal was subject to review on appeal. San José Ranch Co. v. San José Land etc. Co., 126 Cal. 322; 58 Pac. 824.

Dismissal for failure to issue and serve summons. Prior to the addition of the seventh subdivision to this section in 1889, (the present § 581a, post,) service was required to be made within a reasonable time; and where not so made, it was ground for a dismissal of the action. Murray v. Gleeson, 100 Cal. 511; 35 Pac. 88; and see Carpentier v. Minturn, 39 Cal. 450; Eldridge v. Kay, 45 Cal. 49; Lander v. Flemming, 47 Cal. 614; Diggins v. Thornton, 96 Cal. 417; 31 Pac. 289. By the addition of this subdivision, it was intended to prevent the indefinite extension of the life of an obligation, in spite of the statute of limitations, by simply commencing an action. Davis v. Hart, 123 Cal. 384; 55 Pac. 1060. The subdivision is in no sense prohibitory of the power of the court to dismiss the action: it does not limit, but enlarges, the power of the court; and the discretion of the court remains as before. Kreiss v. Hotaling, 99 Cal. 383; 33 Pac. 1125. Before the addition of this subdivision, the power to dismiss an action for the causes named was wholly discretionary; now it is compulsory, where the summons is not issued within one year and served within three years. Stanley v. Gillen, 119 Cal. 176; 51 Pac. 183; Ferris v. Wood, 144 Cal. 426; 77 Pac. 1037; First Nat. Bank v. Nason, 115 Cal. 626; 47 Pac. 595. The defendant's right to dismiss an action is absolute, where the summons is not served and returned within three years, and where no appearance is made, except to demand the dismissal. Sharpstein v. Eells, 132 Cal. 507; 64 Pac. 1080. The legislative will, in this addition, is comprehensively expressed, and the prohibition therein is absolutely imperative. Davis v. Hart, 123 Cal. 384; 55 Pac. 1060. The amendment is very sweeping, and is made expressly applicable to pending suits, and is mandatory and absolute (Vrooman v. Li Po Tai, 113 Cal. 302; 45 Pac. 470; White v. Superior Court, 126 Cal. 245; 58 Pac. 450; and see Grant v. McArthur, 137 Cal. 270; 70 Pac. 88); but it is not applicable to actions which have gone to judgment, nor where service was actually made, and judgment rendered within a year after the commencement of the action, though there was no return of service. Jones v. Gunn, 149 Cal. 687; 87 Pac. 577. The declaration, that "no further proceedings shall be had therein," is a statutory prohibition against any further proceedings; and if the court act in disregard thereof, it is acting without jurisdiction. Modoc Land etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 128 Cal. 255; 60 Pac. 848; and see White v. Superior Court, 126 Cal. 245; 58 Pac. 450. The amendment of 1895 to the seventh subdivision was intended to make the legislative intent free from ambiguity in reference to the duty of the court to dismiss an action, where the summons was not served and return made thereon within three years after the commencement of the action. Sharpstein v. Eells, 132 Cal. 507; 64 Pac. 1080; and see Vrooman v. Li Po Tai, 113 Cal. 302; 45 Pac. 470; Davis v. Hart, 123 Cal. 384; 55 Pac. 1060; Cooper v. Gordon, 125 Cal. 296; 57 Pac. 1006; White v. Superior Court, 126 Cal. 245; 58 Pac. 450; Modoc Land etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 128 Cal. 255; 60 Pac. 848. It is now compulsory on the court to dismiss the action, where the summons is not served within three years; in other cases there is no fixed rule as to dismissal for want of prosecution, and the power to dismiss an action on the ground of unnecessary delay in serving summons is still in the discretion of the court, subject to reversal for abuse of such discretion. Ferris v. Wood, 144 Cal. 426; 77 Pac. 1037; and see First Nat. Bank v. Nason, 115 Cal. 626; 47 Pac. 595; Stanley v. Gillen, 119 Cal. 176; 51 Pac. 183. The seventh subdivision is not to be construed as meaning that the plaintiff may have the full time limited thereby in all cases: it is still discretionary with the court to dismiss, even though summons is issued and served within the time limited. Stanley v. Gillen, 119 Cal. 176; 51 Pac. 183; and see First Nat. Bank v. Nason, 115 Cal. 626; 47 Pac. 595. The discretion of the court in dismissing an action on any ground, other than where the summons is not served within three years, in which case the court is without discretion, is not a capricious or arbitrary, but an impartial, discretion, guided and controlled, in its exercise, by fixed legal principles, to be exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law, and in a manner to subserve, and not to impede or defeat, the ends of substantial justice. Bailey v. Taaffe, 29 Cal. 422; First Nat. Bank v. Nason, 115 Cal. 626; 47 Pac. 595; Ferris v. Wood, 144 Cal. 426; 77 Pac. 1037. A delay in serving the summons, reasonably accounted for as an excuse, is not ground for dismissing the action for unreasonable delay in obtaining service. Ferris v. Wood, 144 Cal. 426; 77 Pac. 1037. The court has power to dismiss, where there has been an inexcusable delay in serving the summons, although service is had within three years after the filing of the complaint (Castro v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. Unrep. 500; 35 Pac. 1035); and where the plaintiff, in a contest for the purchase of state school-land, fails to serve and return the summons for the period of three years after the commencement of the action, the court has power, of its own motion, to dismiss the contest. Darlington v. Butler, 3 Cal. App. 448; 86 Pac. 194. Whether there has been excusable delay within the term of three years, is a question within the discretion of the court: each case must be determined upon its own peculiar circumstances. Castro v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. Unrep. 500; 35 Pac. 1035; and see Kreiss v. Hotaling, 99 Cal. 383; 33 Pac. 1125; Murray v. Gleeson, 100 Cal. 511; 35 Pac. 88. The successor in interest of a deceased defendant, upon whom summons was served as successor in interest of such defendant, has such an interest as authorizes him to make a motion to set aside a void decree entered upon such service, and for dismissal of the action for want of prosecution. Fanning v. Foley, 99 Cal. 336; 33 Pac. 1098. Where the record affirmatively shows that the summons was regularly served by publication within three years, jurisdictional recitals in the judgment must be taken, on collateral attack, as true, unless the record affirmatively shows that the facts upon which they are based are insufficient to sustain them. Sacramento Bank v. Montgomery, 146 Cal. 745; 81 Pac. 138. The original words, in the seventh subdivision, "and served, and return thereon made," referred to the summons, and those of the amendment of 1895, "and all such actions shall be in like manner dismissed, unless the summons shall be served and return thereon made," refer to the summons and also the action. Sharpstein v. Eells, 132 Cal. 507; 64 Pac. 1080.

Dismissal for want of prosecution. The trial court has power to dismiss an action for want of prosecution (Pardy v. Montgomery, 77 Cal. 326; 19 Pac. 530), and to dismiss a pending action, on the ground that it has not been diligently prosecuted (Gray v. Times-Mirror Co., 11 Cal. App. 155; 104 Pac. 481); and where there is no counter-showing, except that of the pleadings, it cannot be said, on appeal, that the court abused its discretion in dismissing the action. Davis v. Clark, 126 Cal. 232; 58 Pac. 542; Mowry v. Weisenborn, 137 Cal. 110; 69 Pac. 971. The motion to dismiss for want of prosecution is addressed to the discretion of the court; and its action will not be disturbed, except for an abuse of discretion. Vestal v. Young, 147 Cal. 715; 82 Pac. 381. All presumptions are against an abuse of discretion in vacating a former judgment or order on the ground of excusable neglect (Moore v. Thompson, 138 Cal. 23; 70 Pac. 930); and there being no showing to the contrary, it must be presumed that the court, in dismissing the action for want of prosecution, exercised its power properly, and within the rules prescribed by law. Pardy v. Montgomery, 77 Cal. 326; 19 Pac. 530. Where the defendant entered into a stipulation with the plaintiff, in effect admitting all the allegations of the complaint, he is estopped from urging the objection that the plaintiff has neglected to prosecute the action with due diligence. Cooper v. Gordon, 125 Cal. 296; 57 Pac. 1006. The dismissal of an action of quo warranto for want of prosecution is not a bar to another action of the same kind against the same defendants. People v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 296; 58 Pac. 704. The court has power, independently of this section, to dismiss an action for want of prosecution: the maxim, Expressio unius exclusio alterius est, cannot be invoked against the existence of such independent power. People v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 296; 58 Pac. 704; Hassey v. South San Francisco Homestead etc. Ass'n, 102 Cal. 611; 36 Pac. 945.

Prosecution of action, where defendant appears within three years. The seventh subdivision of this section (the present § 581a, post) authorizes a dismissal as to those defendants who do not appear, and a prosecution of the action against those who do appear, whenever the court would be authorized to render a judgment against them in the absence of other defendants. Peck v. Agnew, 126 Cal. 607; 59 Pac. 125. A defendant may waive the provisions of the seventh subdivision in regard to the time for his appearance. Cooper v. Gordon, 125 Cal. 296; 57 Pac. 1006; and see Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich, 141 Cal. 4; 74 Pac. 352. The original defendant's appearance at any time within three years from the commencement of the action gives jurisdiction of his person, and is equivalent to personal service of the summons and copy of the complaint upon him within that period. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Cochran, 141 Cal. 653; 75 Pac. 315. An appearance by a personal representative, within three years, obviates the necessity of service of summons: the court then exercises jurisdiction with the same effect as if the party were brought in by service of summons. Union Sav. Bank v. Barrett, 132 Cal. 453; 64 Pac. 713, 1071. A judgment of dismissal is properly vacated, where a stipulation was entered into between the parties, in lieu of an answer, containing a consent to entry of appearance of the defendant and entry of judgment. Cooper v. Gordon, 125 Cal. 296; 57 Pac. 1006; and see Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich, 141 Cal. 4; 74 Pac. 352. A stipulation, entered into by the defendant, admitting all the allegations of the complaint, and consenting to judgment against him, although not filed until after the case was dismissed, binds the parties, and is a basis of relief to a person injured by trusting to it (Cooper v. Gordon, 125 Cal. 296; 57 Pac. 1006); and, even though not filed, a stipulation giving the defendant time in which to plead constitutes a virtual appearance of the defendant, and is sufficient to preclude him from restraining the court from further proceedings. Roth v. Superior Court, 147 Cal. 604; 82 Pac. 246. A stipulation for an appearance, not within three years after the commencement of action, cannot be considered as an appearance. Grant v. McArthur, 137 Cal. 270; 70 Pac. 88. Verbal requests by the defendant for delay in service of summons, and verbal authority given by him to the plaintiff to enter judgment at any time without further service of papers, do not constitute an appearance in the action, nor a power of attorney to confess judgment. Siskiyou County Bank v. Hoyt, 132 Cal. 81; 64 Pac. 118. A judgment of dismissal will be modified on appeal, where the defendants who have appeared in the action are included, and an order of dismissal as to such defendants will be vacated. Peck v. Agnew, 126 Cal. 607; 59 Pac. 125.

How long jurisdiction continues. The mere pendency of a motion to dismiss cannot operate as a dismissal, nor divest the court of jurisdiction to decide the motion. Boca etc. R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 150 Cal. 153; 88 Pac. 718. Control of the court to allow alimony and counsel fees, pendente lite, in an action for divorce, is not lost until judgment of dismissal is entered (Page v. Page, 77 Cal. 83; 19 Pac. 183); and orders in relation to alimony and counsel fees, are not void, and cannot be annulled on certiorari, where made after entry of dismissal, but before the judgment of dismissal was entered in the judgment-book (Page v. Superior Court, 76 Cal. 372; 18 Pac. 385); but these decisions were rendered before the amendment of this section in 1897, and the entry of the dismissal in the clerk's register is now sufficient. Hopkins v. Superior Court, 136 Cal. 552; 69 Pac. 299; and see Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152; 46 Pac. 904.

Doctrine of relation. The judgment relates to the date of the legal demand for the dismissal of the action, where necessary to preserve the substantial rights of the parties. Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152; 46 Pac. 904.

Absence of notice of motions. Where issues of fact tendered by a complaint in intervention are undetermined, an order, without notice, dismissing the action as to the interveners, where notice is not waived, is unauthorized. Townsend v. Driver, 5 Cal. App. 581; 90 Pac. 1061.

Where counsel for each of the parties are present at the hearing of a motion to vacate a judgment, and contest the same, there is a waiver of notice of the motion. Acock v. Halsey, 90 Cal. 215; 27 Pac. 193; and see McLeran v. Shartzer, 5 Cal. 70; 63 Am. Dec. 84; Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667; 76 Am. Dec. 459.

Motion to dismiss, when improper. A motion to dismiss on the ground that the answer is sufficient to bar a recovery, is improper procedure. Forrester v. Lawler, 14 Cal. App. 170; 111 Pac. 284.

Defendant may ask dismissal. A defendant may employ counsel to take steps to bring about the dismissal of an action, without entering a general appearance. Caffey v. Mann, 3 Cal. App. 124; 84 Pac. 424.

Right of defendant to counsel fees. The right of the defendant to counsel fees, upon the dismissal of an action for slander, is not limited to a dismissal for a failure of the plaintiff to file a bond for costs. Caffey v. Mann, 3 Cal. App. 124; 84 Pac. 424.

Power of court over dismissals. The court may summarily vacate a void judgment of dismissal. Acock v. Halsey, 90 Cal. 215; 27 Pac. 193. In the absence of any showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that a judgment of dismissal was made on some good ground, and that, in ordering it, the court properly exercised its power in conformity with the rules of law (Woods v. Diepenbrock, 141 Cal. 55; 74 Pac. 546); and a judgment is proper, where, upon an issue of law involving the sufficiency of the complaint, the demurrer was sustained, and the plaintiff refused to amend (Saddlemire v. Stockton Sav. & L. Soc., 144 Cal. 650; 79 Pac. 381); but a motion to dismiss is not authorized by this section, where neither party was entitled to demand entry of judgment at any time before the motion was made. Neihaus v. Morgan, 5 Cal. Unrep. 391; 45 Pac. 255. An order of dismissal, entered by the clerk in the register, is completely annulled by a subsequent order of the court vacating it (Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644; 59 Pac. 143); and an order refusing to vacate a judgment of dismissal for want of findings is not appealable. Estate of Gregory, 122 Cal. 483; 55 Pac. 144. The court is not precluded from exercising its discretion, on motion to dismiss, because it had, shortly before the motion was made, given the plaintiff leave to amend. San José Land etc. Co. v. Allen, 129 Cal. 247; 61 Pac. 1083. The power to dismiss an action was first exercised by courts of equity; but, for a long period, courts of law have exercised the authority as part of their inherent powers; and the same rules now apply to a dismissal either at law or in equity, under code procedure. People v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 296; 58 Pac. 704.

Dismissal or nonsuit as bar. A judgment of dismissal, given upon motion of the plaintiff, before the hearing or trial of any issue of law or fact, and without any determination of the merits of the cause, is no bar to a subsequent suit in any court upon the same cause of action. Carr v. Howell, 154 Cal. 372; 97 Pac. 885. A wife's dismissal of her action for a divorce, without the consent, or even knowledge, of the defendant, and without consideration of any kind from him to her, is not a bar to a subsequent action concerning the matters involved therein. Clopton v. Clopton, 162 Cal. 27; 121 Pac. 720. Where a case has been removed from a state to a Federal court, the plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of his action, while a demurrer to the complaint is pending and undecided, is not a bar to a subsequent action in the state court upon the same cause of action. Carr v. Howell, 154 Cal. 372; 97 Pac. 885. A nonsuit suffered for any cause is not a bar to a suit subsequently brought on the same cause of action. San Francisco v. Brown, 153 Cal. 644; 96 Pac. 281. A nonsuit does not operate as a bar: a judgment, to operate as such, must be one rendered upon the merits, or must amount to a retraxit, as known in suits at common law, which is an open and voluntary renunciation of the plaintiff's suit in court, the plaintiff not being at liberty afterwards to renew it. Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542; Hubbard v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 166; 98 Pac. 394. A dismissal of the first action is not a bar to a second, nor a judgment on the merits, except where the judgment is, in effect, a retraxit. Westbay v. Gray, 116 Cal. 660; 48 Pac. 800; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Portener, 139 Cal. 90; 72 Pac. 716; Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542; Crossman v. Davis, 79 Cal. 603; 21 Pac. 963; Rosenthal v. McMann, 93 Cal. 505; 29 Pac. 121. A judgment of dismissal, rendered upon the oral agreement of the parties, in open court, with a stipulation that each party pay his own costs, is a bar to another suit upon the same cause of action. Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542.

Dismissal as final judgment. A judgment, although termed a dismissal, which is in fact a final decision of the case, and not a mere order of nonsuit or dismissal made in accordance with the provisions of this section, will be treated as a final judgment. Saul v. Moscone, 16 Cal. App. 506; 118 Pac. 452.

Mandamus. Mandamus will issue to compel the court to try a case attempted to be dismissed by the plaintiff, where affirmative relief is sought by the answer. Clark v. Hundley, 65 Cal. 96; 3 Pac. 131. Where the plaintiff moves for a dismissal at his costs, and the motion is resisted by the defendant and denied by the court, mandamus will not issue, commanding the judge to enter a judgment of dismissal, when the act to be done is judicial and discretionary. People v. Pratt, 28 Cal. 166; 87 Am. Dec. 110; People v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 79.

Prohibition. Prohibition is the appropriate remedy to prevent a stay of proceedings, where the court refuses to order the entry of dismissal until the plaintiff shall have paid the costs. Hopkins v. Superior Court, 136 Cal. 552; 69 Pac. 299. Prohibition will issue to restrain the court from proceeding with an action, where the plaintiff has dismissed it, and the court subsequently sets aside the order of dismissal and threatens further proceedings (Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152; 46 Pac. 904); and prohibition will issue to restrain the court from proceeding with the trial of a cause, three years after the subsequent commencement of the action, where a motion to dismiss had been made. Modoc Land etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 128 Cal. 255; 60 Pac. 848.

New trial. The question presented on a motion for a nonsuit is a question of law, and in a statement on a motion for a new trial, after nonsuit, the decision should be specified as an error of law. Donahue v. Gallavan, 43 Cal. 573; McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 284; Toulouse v. Pare, 103 Cal. 251; 37 Pac. 146.

Appeal. Where an action is improperly dismissed by the plaintiff, the defendant's remedy is by appeal from the judgment, and not by motion to set it aside. Higgins v. Mahoney, 50 Cal. 444; Westbay v. Gray, 116 Cal. 660; 48 Pac. 800. The appellate court will not go beyond the inquiry, whether or not the discretion of the trial court in dismissing the action has been abused. Hassey v. South San Francisco Homestead etc. Ass'n, 102 Cal. 611; 36 Pac. 945; People v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 296; 58 Pac. 704; Nicol v. San Francisco, 130 Cal. 288; 62 Pac. 513; Martin v. San Francisco, 131 Cal. 575; 63 Pac. 913; Kennedy v. Mulligan, 136 Cal. 556; 69 Pac. 291; and see Grigsby v. Napa County, 36 Cal. 585; 95 Am. Dec. 213; Chipman v. Hibberd, 47 Cal. 638; Lander v. Flemming, 47 Cal. 614; Simmons v. Keller, 50 Cal. 38; Kornahrens v. His Creditors, 64 Cal. 492; 3 Pac. 126; Saville v. Frisbie, 70 Cal. 87; 11 Pac. 502; Pardy v. Montgomery, 77 Cal. 326; 19 Pac. 530; Kubli v. Hawkett, 89 Cal. 638; 27 Pac. 57. The order granting a nonsuit, unless excepted to and assigned as error, cannot be assailed on appeal (Toulouse v. Pare, 103 Cal. 251; 37 Pac. 146; Hanna v. De Garmo, 140 Cal. 172; 73 Pac. 830); and the bill of exceptions or statement must affirmatively show that the ruling assigned as error actually took place at the trial and was excepted to. Hanna v. De Garmo, 140 Cal. 172; 73 Pac. 830; Flashner v. Waldron, 86 Cal. 211; 24 Pac. 1063; Warner v. Darrow, 91 Cal. 309; 27 Pac. 737; Malone v. Beardsley, 92 Cal. 150; 28 Pac. 218; Craig v. Hesperia Land etc. Co., 107 Cal. 675; 40 Pac. 1057. Where prohibition to a justice's court is denied, the parties cannot, by stipulation, limit the inquiry on appeal to the moot question, not arising upon the record, whether this section applies to justice's courts. Hubbard v. Justices' Court, 5 Cal. App. 90; 89 Pac. 865. It must be presumed, on appeal, in favor of a judgment of nonsuit, that a motion therefor was regularly made and granted by the court. Hanna v. De Garmo, 140 Cal. 172; 73 Pac. 830.

Right of plaintiff to take a nonsuit where the defendant has interposed a counterclaim entitling him to affirmative relief, where right to such dismissal is not defined or denied by statute. See note 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 340.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. By the plaintiff. Plaintiff may take a nonsuit at any time before the jury retires, if a counterclaim has not been made. Hancock Ditch Co. v. Bradford, 13 Cal. 637; Brown v. Harter, 18 Cal. 76. Plaintiff has not the absolute right to dismiss or take a nonsuit after the case has been finally submitted and the jury has retired. Brown v. Harter, 18 Cal. 76. Nor has the court any authority to enter an order of dismissal without the consent of defendant. Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 101. C., one of four defendants in ejectment, moved to transfer the action to a United States court, on the ground of his alienage, and an order was made, staying all proceedings until the motion could be heard. Before the hearing of the motion, plaintiff dismissed the action as to C. and one other defendant, and took judgment against the other two, who had made default. C. afterwards insisted upon his motion, and filed affidavits tending to show that the defaulting defendants were occupying the premises as his tenants, and were colluding with the plaintiff. The motion was denied, and C. having appealed from that order and from the judgment, it was held that the motion was properly denied. Reed v. Calderwood, 22 Cal. 463. In an action of ejectment against several defendants, the plaintiff may, before trial, dismiss the action as to some of the defendants, and proceed against the others. Id.; Dimick v. Deringer, 32 Cal. 488. In an action upon a joint and several bond, where all the obligors are made defendants, the plaintiff may go to trial, if he elects so to do, before all the defendants are served, and may dismiss as to some of the defendants, and take judgment against the others. People v. Evans, 29 Cal. 429. The defendant, in his answer, set up a cross demand, and proved affirmative relief. Afterwards a stipulation, signed by the attorneys of the parties, was filed, whereby it was provided that upon the trial of the cause an account might be taken of the matter thus set up; that the stipulation should be regarded as a compromise of the counterclaim; and that the counterclaim should be deemed stricken from the answer. It was held, that, on this state of the record, the clerk was not required nor authorized by § 148 of the Practice Act, in the absence of any direction from the court or counsel of the defendant, to enter an order upon request of plaintiff dismissing the action. The construction of the pleadings and stipulation, and determination of the rights of the parties with respect to the counterclaim under them, required the exercise of judicial functions. People v. Loewy, 29 Cal. 264. Plaintiff is not bound to tender costs; the provisions subject him only to the liability. Hancock Ditch Co. v. Bradford, 13 Cal. 637.

2. Upon written consent. If a plaintiff, who has appeared by attorney, afterwards stipulates in writing that the action may be dismissed, the court should not make the order of dismissal, unless the attorney of record assents to the same. Board of Commissioners v. Younger, 29 Cal. 147; 87 Am. Dec. 164.

3. When the plaintiff fails to appear. When the plaintiff fails to appear on the trial, and the defendant appears and moves for a dismissal or nonsuit, the court must grant the motion. Peralta v. Mariea, 3 Cal. 185.

4. When, upon the trial, the plaintiff fails to prove his case. The court below is justified in granting a defendant's motion for a nonsuit, in a case where the evidence, if submitted to the jury, would not have supported a verdict for the plaintiff. Geary v. Simmons, 39 Cal. 224; Masten v. Griffen, 33 Cal. 111; Stuart v. Simpson, 1 Wend. 376; Cravens v. Dewey, 13 Cal. 40; Ringgold v. Haven, 1 Cal. 108; Dalrymple v. Hanson, 1 Cal. 125; Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; 52 Am. Dec. 303; Ensminger v. McIntire, 23 Cal. 593. But the motion should not be granted, if there is evidence tending to prove all the material allegations of the complaint. McKee v. Greene, 31 Cal. 418; Ringgold v. Haven, 1 Cal. 108; De Ro v. Cordes, 4 Cal. 117; Cravens v. Dewey, 13 Cal. 40. The court should, of its own notion, dismiss a case based upon a consideration which contravenes public policy, whether the parties take the objection or not. Valentine v. Stewart, 15 Cal. 387. Plaintiffs may be nonsuited upon the opening statement of their counsel. Hoffman v. Felt, 1 Cal. Unrep. 369. Where, in an action on a verbal contract, several distinct promises, on the part of defendants, were alleged, and were denied by the answer, and on the trial the plaintiff introduced no proof, except as to one of the promises, it was held, that this was ground for nonsuit; that the provisions of the code required a relaxation of the common-law rule respecting a variance, and that it being apparent that defendants were not surprised or prejudiced by the failure of proof, the error in stating the agreement should have been disregarded. Peters v. Foss, 20 Cal. 586. In an action of ejectment, one of several defendants, who, in his answer, disclaims all right, title, and interest in the premises, but also denies all the allegations of the complaint, and avers that "he was and still is lawfully seised and in possession" of the land claimed, is not entitled to have the action dismissed as to himself. Pioche v. Paul, 22 Cal. 105. In an action against four upon a joint contract, the plaintiff adduced no evidence to establish the joint liability of all, and a motion for a nonsuit was made on this ground, but refused by the court, and judgment was rendered against all the defendants jointly. It was held, that the judgment was erroneous; but that the plaintiffs might have discontinued the suit as against those not shown to be liable, and have proceeded to judgment against those whose liability was established, upon such terms and conditions as should appear to be just. Acquital v. Crowell, 1 Cal. 191. If the complaint avers that the defendant brought a false charge against the plaintiff, and threatened to publish the same, and injure his credit, unless he paid a false account, and that by reason of the false charge and threats he paid the same without other consideration, and prays judgment for the money thus paid, the payment of the money without consideration is the gist of the plaintiff's cause of action, and if he fails to offer evidence of the facts tending to show a want of consideration, a nonsuit should be granted. Kohler v. Wells Fargo & Co., 26 Cal. 607. Where, in an action for breach of a verbal contract, there was a slight difference between the statement in the complaint and that in the answer, of the promises on the part of the plaintiff, which were the consideration of defendant's promise, but no issue was raised by the answer as to the performance, by plaintiff, of his promises, and, on the trial, plaintiff rested without proof as to the consideration, it was held, the absence of proof on this point was not ground for a nonsuit. Peters v. Foss, 20 Cal. 586. In an action of ejectment, a nonsuit should be granted as to such defendants as were not in possession of the premises at the commencement of the action. Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 268. In an action of ejectment, upon disclaimer of possession or interest in the property, a judgment for the plaintiff cannot be entered. When such disclaimer is relied upon, the proper judgment is one of nonsuit. Noe v. Card, 14 Cal. 576. In passing upon the correctness of the ruling of the court below in granting a nonsuit, the supreme court will consider as proven every fact which the evidence tended to prove, and which was essential to be proven to entitle the plaintiff to recover. Dow v. Gould etc. Mining Co., 31 Cal. 630.

5. Referee may grant nonsuit. The referee, in cases referred to him, takes the place of the judge, and may grant, or the plaintiff may submit to, a nonsuit in a proper case. Plant v. Fleming, 20 Cal. 92.

6. Discontinuance. The plaintiff commenced an action of forcible entry and detainer against the defendant, in a justice's court. The justice certified it to the district court. It was held, that the transfer was illegal, and did not defeat the plaintiff's right by operating as a discontinuance. Larue v. Gaskins, 5 Cal. 507. The submission of a cause to arbitration operates as a discontinuance. Gunter v. Sanchez, 1 Cal. 45.

7. Proceedings on motion for nonsuit or dismissal. A party moving for a nonsuit must state in his motion the precise grounds upon which he relies, so that the attention of the court and counsel may be directed to the supposed defects in the plaintiff's case. People v. Banvard, 27 Cal. 474; Kiler v. Kimbal, 10 Cal. 267.

8. Waiver. Where a defendant, after moving for a nonsuit, introduces evidence supplying the defect in the plaintiff's testimony on which the motion for nonsuit was founded, he thereby waives his motion, and cannot insist upon it on appeal. Ringgold v. Haven, 1 Cal. 108; Smith v. Compton, 6 Cal. 24; Perkins v. Thornburgh, 10 Cal. 189; Winans v. Hardenbergh, 8 Cal. 291. Where plaintiffs, having excepted to the ruling of the court excluding certain evidence, take, in consequence of such ruling, a nonsuit, with leave to move to set it aside, they do not waive any of their rights to the exception taken. Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544.

9. Generally. Where a complaint disclosed that the same subject-matter had been litigated between the same parties in a prior suit, and that in such suit the plaintiff in this suit had set up the same equity which he claims by this, the action will be ordered to be dismissed. Barnett v. Kilbourne, 3 Cal. 327. Where the complaint in an action on a bill of exchange describes it as payable to the order of A., and the bill offered in evidence is drawn payable to B., it is a variance to be taken advantage of by objecting to the evidence, or by a motion of nonsuit. Farmer v. Cram, 7 Cal. 135. In cases of nonsuit, costs ought not to be taxed, by way of indemnity. Rice v. Leonard, 5 Cal. 61.

§ 581a. Dismissal of action for failure to issue summons when. No action heretofore or hereafter commenced shall be further prosecuted, and no further proceedings shall be had therein, and all actions heretofore or hereafter commenced must be dismissed by the court in which the same shall have been commenced, on its own motion, or on motion of any party interested therein, whether named in the complaint as a party or not, unless summons shall have issued within one year, and all such actions must be in like manner dismissed, unless the summons shall be served and return thereon made within three years after the commencement of said action. But all such actions may be prosecuted, if appearance has been made by the defendant or defendants, within said three years in the same manner as if summons had been issued and served; provided, that, except in actions to partition or to recover possession of, or to enforce a lien upon, or to determine conflicting claims to, real or personal property, no dismissal shall be had under this section as to any defendant because of the failure to serve summons on him during his absence from the state, or while he has secreted himself within the state to prevent the service of summons on him.

Legislation § 581a. Added by Stats. 1907, p. 712; the code commissioner saying, "A new section containing the matter in subd. 7 of former § 581, but excepting from its operation those cases in which effective judgment cannot be recovered against a defendant, when the failure to serve process upon him has been due either to his secreting himself within the state, or to absenting himself therefrom to prevent such service."

This section is an amendment of the old seventh subdivision of § 581, ante. See note to that section, ante.

Where defendant secretes himself. Proof that the defendant secreted himself to avoid the service of summons may be made in answer to a motion for dismissal. Wilson v. Leo, 19 Cal. App. 793; 127 Pac. 1043.

Summons must be issued within one year. A defendant, who specially appears in the action and moves for its dismissal on the ground that no summons has been issued within a year after the action was commenced, is entitled, upon the subsequent dismissal by the plaintiff, to one hundred dollars as costs to cover counsel fees. Caffey v. Mann, 3 Cal. App. 124; 84 Pac. 424. Where summons has been issued as against the original defendant within the year, the court may bring in an administrator as a party, and direct the issuance and service on him of summons, more than a year after the commencement of the action, if the time in which an action can be brought against him as personal representative has not expired. Churchill v. Woodworth, 148 Cal. 669; 113 Am. St. Rep. 324; 84 Pac. 155.

Service and return must be made within three years. Summons must be served and return made within three years after the commencement of the action. Bernard v. Parmelee, 6 Cal. App. 537; 92 Pac. 658. Where there is no appearance within the time limited, and no return of summons, the action may be dismissed, although there has been filed an affidavit of service on one of the defendants, and a copy of the summons. Grant v. McArthur, 137 Cal. 270; 70 Pac. 88. It is the duty of the court to dismiss an action, commenced more than five years before the motion for dismissal, and in which no summons has been served, or appearance made by the defendant. McColgan v. Piercy, 17 Cal. App. 160; 118 Pac. 957. The provision requiring a dismissal for a failure to make return of service within three years cannot apply to an action where service was actually made, trial had, and a judgment entered, which has become final, and which was rendered within a year after the commencement of the action. Jones v. Gunn, 149 Cal. 687; 87 Pac. 577.

Court may dismiss within statutory period. While it is the duty of the trial court to dismiss an action, where the summons has not been issued within one year, or served and returned within three years, yet the court still retains the discretionary power to dismiss for undue delay in issuing or serving summons, even though the delay has been for a shorter period than that named in this section. Witter v. Phelps, 163 Cal. 655; 126 Pac. 593. A statutory provision for the dismissal of an action, if summons is not issued nor served within a given period, does not affect the power of the court, in the exercise of its discretion, to dismiss the action for want of prosecution within said period. Bernard v. Parmelee, 6 Cal. App. 537; 92 Pac. 658.

Appearance by defendant. This section does not require that the appearance shall be filed within three years, or within any specified time: the time limited is for the making of an appearance, and appearance is made when written notice of appearance is given to the plaintiff. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Griswold, 153 Cal. 692; 96 Pac. 353. A stipulation, signed by the attorneys for both parties, though not filed, and extending the time to answer, is an "appearance," within this section. Roth v. Superior Court, 147 Cal. 604; 82 Pac. 246. Notice of appearance and consent to judgment are not required to be filed within any particular time: filing is required only for jurisdiction. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Griswold, 153 Cal. 692; 96 Pac. 353. The defendant does not, by demurring and moving for a change of the place of trial, waive his right to have the action dismissed for undue delay in making the service of summons. Witter v. Phelps, 163 Cal. 655; 126 Pac. 593.

§ 581b. Dismissal of actions after transfer. No action heretofore or hereafter commenced, where the same was not originally commenced in the proper county, shall be further prosecuted, and no further proceedings shall be had therein, and all such actions heretofore or hereafter commenced must be dismissed by the court to which the same shall have been transferred, on its own motion, or on the motion of any party interested therein, whether named in the complaint as a party or not, where the costs and fees of transmission of the pleadings and papers therein to the clerk or justice of the court to which it is transferred, or of filing the papers anew, have not been paid by the plaintiff for one year after the time when such pleadings or papers shall have arrived in the custody of such clerk or justice. The clerk of such court, or such justice shall, where such court or justice desires to dismiss an action under the provisions of this section, file anew such transferred pleadings and papers without fee.

Legislation § 581b. Added by Stats. 1913, p. 244.

§ 582. All other judgments are on the merits. In all cases other than those mentioned in the last two sections, judgment must be rendered on the merits.

Legislation § 582. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 149.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 143; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 712, (1) substituting "all" for "every," before "case," and (2) the word "two sections" for "section"; the code commissioner saying, "Amendment rendered necessary by addition of last section to the code."

Judgment on merits, what constitutes. A judgment on the merits is one which determines, either upon an issue of law or of fact, which party is right: a judgment that a party cannot be heard concludes only as to that question. Oakland v. Oakland Water Front Co., 118 Cal. 160; 50 Pac. 277. A judgment on the pleadings is a judgment on the merits. Bailey v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 5 Cal. App. 740; 91 Pac. 416. Before the enactment of §§ 581a, 581b, ante, a judgment of dismissal, not for one of the causes named in § 581, ante, was a judgment upon the merits. Amestoy Estate Co. v. Los Angeles, 5 Cal. App. 273; 90 Pac. 42; Townsend v. Driver, 5 Cal. App. 581; 90 Pac. 1071. It is error to strike out an answer filed in time, but served two days afterwards, and render judgment by default in favor of plaintiff: judgment should be rendered, after trial, on the merits. Lybecker v. Murray, 58 Cal. 186.

Presumptions from judgment on merits. A judgment is presumed to be rendered pursuant to this section, where nonsuit was not taken by the plaintiff before or after verdict, nor the particular cause of action in any manner withdrawn at any stage of the proceedings, nor the judgment without prejudice; and the court is presumed to have passed on all the facts before it, and granted the plaintiff all the relief to which he was entitled, where, having all the facts before it, judgment is rendered on the merits; under such circumstances, the silence of the court as to further relief demanded, but not granted, must be held to be a denial thereof; and the judgment, though erroneous, is conclusive, as to parties and privies, until reversed. Gray v. Dougherty, 25 Cal. 266.

Judgment on pleadings had when. The defendant's right to move for judgment upon the pleadings, where the complaint fails to state a cause of action, is well settled. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573; King v. Montgomery, 50 Cal. 115. Judgment on the pleadings is proper, where the complaint warrants the granting of the relief sought, and the answer presents nothing to bar or defeat the action (St. Mary's Hospital v. Perry, 152 Cal. 338; 92 Pac. 864; Zany v. Rawhide Gold Mining Co., 15 Cal. App. 373; 114 Pac. 1026); and also where the defendant's answer, containing no denials of the allegations of the complaint, fails to set out all the facts showing that his alleged causes of action constituted valid counterclaims (Benham v. Connor, 113 Cal. 168; 45 Pac. 258); and also whenever the answer fails to deny any of the material allegations of the complaint, in such form as to put the same in issue (Doll v. Good, 38 Cal. 287); and also where no defense is alleged in the answer (Heydenfeldt v. Jacobs, 107 Cal. 373; 40 Pac. 492; Evinger v. Moran, 14 Cal. App. 328; 112 Pac. 68): proof of the averments in the answer would be immaterial, and denials, in such case, are merely matters of law (Heydenfeldt v. Jacobs, 107 Cal. 373; 40 Pac. 492); and the court is not precluded from passing upon a pending motion for judgment upon the pleadings by the fact that it has made an order sustaining a demurrer to the answer, without leave to amend (Le Breton v. Stanley Contracting Co., 15 Cal. App. 429; 114 Pac. 1028); but a motion for judgment on the pleadings should not be granted, where material matters, denied on information and belief, are not presumptively within the knowledge of the defendants (Wickersham v. Comerford, 104 Cal. 494; 38 Pac. 101); and where two sufficient special defenses to an action are improperly commingled, but no objection is taken on that ground, a motion for judgment on the pleadings should be denied, without reference to the sufficiency of the denials of the answer (Eppinger v. Kendrick, 114 Cal. 620; 46 Pac. 613); nor is the plaintiff entitled to judgment on the pleadings, where the answer pleads the statute of limitations, and an estoppel by reason of a former decision between the same parties. Brind v. Gregory, 122 Cal. 480; 55 Pac. 250.

Motion for judgment on pleadings. On a motion for judgment on the pleadings, by the defendant, any matter outside of the complaint, or any defense thereto in the answer, cannot be considered: the motion should be determined as a demurrer to the complaint, upon the same grounds, would be. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573. A motion for a judgment on the pleadings, in favor of the plaintiff, is similar in purpose and effect to a demurrer to the answer for insufficiency. Le Breton v. Stanley Contracting Co., 15 Cal. App. 429; 114 Pac. 1028. Where, pending the motion, an amended answer is filed, the motion depends upon the sufficiency of the amended answer. Evinger v. Moran, 14 Cal. App. 328; 112 Pac. 68. It is not necessary, on passing on the motion, to determine the sufficiency of the denials in the original answer, where those in the amended answer are sufficient. Matteucci v. Whelan, 123 Cal. 312; 69 Am. St. Rep. 60; 55 Pac. 990. That facts are not definitely stated in the complaint is unavailing on the motion: there must be an entire absence of some fact or facts essential to constitute a cause of action. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573. Pleadings are construed most strongly against the pleader, on a motion for judgment thereon (Benham v. Connor, 113 Cal. 168; 45 Pac. 258); and the truth of the facts alleged in the complaint are admitted for the purposes of the motion of the defendant for judgment upon the pleadings. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573; McGowan v. Ford, 107 Cal. 177; 40 Pac. 231.

Effect of erroneous judgment in court of equity. Equity will not set aside a judgment for mere error, of law or fact, in the rendition of judgment. Wickersham v. Comerford, 104 Cal. 494; 38 Pac. 101.

§ 583. Dismissal of actions. The court may in its discretion dismiss any action for want of prosecution on motion of the defendant and after due notice to the plaintiff, whenever plaintiff has failed for two years after answer filed to bring such action to trial. Any action heretofore or hereafter commenced shall be dismissed by the court in which the same shall have been commenced or to which it may be transferred on motion of the defendant, after due notice to plaintiff or by the court on its own motion, unless such action is brought to trial within five years after the defendant has filed his answer, except where the parties have stipulated in writing that the time may be extended.

Legislation § 583. Added by Stats. 1905, p. 244.

Dismissal for want of prosecution is not on merits. The dismissal of an action for lack of prosecution is without regard to the merits or demerits of the cause of action. Bell v. Solomons, 162 Cal. 105; 121 Pac. 377.

Dismissal without restoration of records. The trial court has jurisdiction to dismiss an action, the record of which has been destroyed; and this power is not dependent upon a restoration of the record. Bell v. Solomons, 162 Cal. 105; 121 Pac. 377.

Effect of stipulation for extension. The failure to bring an action to trial within five years after answer filed does not necessitate its dismissal, where the parties stipulated in writing for the extension. Nathan v. Dierssen, 164 Cal. 607; 130 Pac. 12.

Order dismissing entire case appealable. An order dismissing and disposing of an entire case is a final judgment, and appealable. Dempsey v. Underhill, 156 Cal. 718; 106 Pac. 73.

CHAPTER II.

JUDGMENT UPON FAILURE TO ANSWER.

§ 585. In what cases judgment may be had upon failure of defendant to answer.

§ 585. In what cases judgment may be had upon failure of defendant to answer. Judgment may be had, if the defendant fails to answer the complaint, as follows:

1. In an action arising upon contract for the recovery of money or damages only, if the defendant has been personally served and no answer has been filed with the clerk of the court within the time specified in the summons, or such further time as may have been granted, the clerk, upon application of the plaintiff, must enter the default of the defendant, and immediately thereafter enter judgment for the amount demanded in the complaint, including the costs, against the defendant, or against one or more of several defendants, in the cases provided for in section four hundred and fourteen.

2. In other actions, if the defendant has been personally served and no answer has been filed with the clerk of the court within the time specified in the summons, or such further time as may have been granted, the clerk must enter the default of the defendant; and thereafter the plaintiff may apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint. If the taking of an account, or the proof of any fact, is necessary to enable the court to give judgment, or to carry the judgment into effect, the court may take the account or hear the proof, or may, in its discretion, order a reference for that purpose. And where the action is for the recovery of damages, in whole or in part, the court may order the damages to be assessed by a jury; or if, to determine the amount of damages, the examination of a long account is involved, by a reference as above provided.

3. In all actions where the service of the summons was by publication, the plaintiff, upon the expiration of the time for answering, may, upon proof of the publication, and that no answer has been filed, apply for judgment; and the court must thereupon require proof to be made of the allegations of the complaint; and if the defendant is not a resident of the state, must require the plaintiff, or his agent, to be examined, on oath, respecting any payments that have been made to the plaintiff, or to any one for his use, on account of any demand mentioned in the complaint, and may render judgment for the amount which he is entitled to recover; provided, that, in all cases affecting the title to or possession of real property, where the service of the summons was by publication and the defendant has failed to answer, no judgment shall be rendered upon proof of mere occupancy, unless such occupancy shall have continued for the time and shall have been of the character necessary to confer title by prescription, and in all cases where the plaintiff bases his claim upon a paper title, the court shall require evidence establishing plaintiff's equitable right to judgment before rendering such judgment; provided, further however, that in actions involving merely the possession of real property where the complaint is verified and shows by proper allegations that no party to the action claims title to the real property involved, either by prescription, accession, transfer, will or succession but only the possession thereof, the court may render judgment upon proof of occupancy by plaintiff and ouster by defendant.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 144; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 42, (1) in subd. 1, substituting "demanded in the prayer of the complaint" for "specified in the summons"; (2) in subd. 2, first sentence, substituting "may apply to the court" for "may apply at the first or any subsequent term of the court."

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 712, (1) in subd. 1, striking out "prayer of the," in the phrase "demanded in the prayer of the complaint"; (2) substituting "is" for "be," before "involved" (in subd. 2) and before "not a resident" (in subd. 3); the code commissioner saying, "Amendments simply change the verb to the indicative, to conform to the same change elsewhere."

5. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 932, (1) at the beginning of subds. 1 and 2, inserting in the phrase "if no answer has been filed," the words "the defendant has been personally served and"; (2) in subd. 3, (a) inserting "all" in the phrase "In all actions," (b) substituting "allegations of the complaint" for "demand mentioned in the complaint," (c) substituting "any demand mentioned in the complaint" for "such demand," and (d) inserting at the end of the subdivision the two provisos.

Answer, what constitutes. A demurrer is an answer, within this section; a defendant does not appear and demur to a complaint until his demurrer is filed. Fletcher v. Maginnis, 136 Cal. 362; 68 Pac. 1015.

Entry of default by clerk. The clerk can enter default, only under the express provisions of this section (Kennedy v. Mulligan, 136 Cal. 556; 69 Pac. 291; Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co., 136 Cal. 571; 69 Pac. 220; Oliphant v. Whitney, 34 Cal. 25), or where the defendant has failed to appear within the time specified in the summons, or within such further time as may be granted. Kennedy v. Mulligan, 136 Cal. 556; 69 Pac. 29; People v. Weil, 53 Cal. 253; Wharton v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727. He must, upon the application of the plaintiff, enter default, notwithstanding the service of a pleading if it has not been filed in time (Fletcher v. Maginnis, 136 Cal. 362; 68 Pac. 1015); and he may enter default, where a motion to strike the answer from the files is granted, and the time for pleading to the complaint has expired (Rose v. Lelande, 20 Cal. App. 502; 129 Pac. 599); but he has no authority to enter default, where the court has set aside and vacated the service of summons. Elder v. Grunsky, 127 Cal. 67; 59 Pac. 300. In entering a default he acts ministerially; he has no judicial power to pass upon the sufficiency of an answer. Rose v. Lelande, 20 Cal. App. 502; 129 Pac. 599.

Entry of judgment by clerk upon default. The clerk is a minister or servant of the law, to act where the law orders him to act; then, only, is his action valid. Junkans v. Bergin, 64 Cal. 203; 30 Pac. 627. His authority to enter judgment by default is limited to actions arising upon contracts for the recovery of money or damages only. Shay v. Chicago Clock Co., 111 Cal. 549; 44 Pac. 237; People v. Weil, 53 Cal. 253. No intendments are indulged in support of his acts: what he does must be within the authority conferred upon him by statute. Providence Tool Co. v. Prader, 32 Cal. 634; 91 Am. Dec. 598. He cannot enter a judgment by default in an action for damages for trespass. Shay v. Chicago Clock Co., 111 Cal. 549; 44 Pac. 237. He must ascertain from the complaint that the action is of the kind mentioned in the first subdivision of this section, and he must ascertain when and where the summons was served, and whether the defendant is in default: these acts are ministerial as contradistinguished from judicial acts. Providence Tool Co. v. Prader, 32 Cal. 634; 91 Am. Dec. 598; and see Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 530; Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co., 136 Cal. 571; 69 Pac. 220; Wharton v. Hanlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727. His action in estimating and adding the amount of an attorney's fee to the judgment is as properly ministerial as is his calculation of interest upon the principal sum of a note sued on. Alexander v. McDow, 108 Cal. 25; 41 Pac. 24. He may, in an action on a note payable in gold coin, enter a judgment payable in gold coin, if the defendant suffers a default (Harding v. Cowing, 28 Cal. 212); and he may enter a judgment against a defaulting defendant, without at the same time entering a judgment against a co-defendant who has not been served (Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218); and he may enter judgment by default in a joint action against several defendants, only when they have been served and have failed to answer (Junkans v. Bergin, 64 Cal. 203; 30 Pac. 627); and he has power to enter the separate defaults of those defendants who have been served with summons and have not answered, and to enter a joint judgment by default against all of those served, although other of the defendants have not been served; but he has no power to enter a judgment by default against only a part of the defendants who have been served and have not answered (Wharton v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727); nor can he enter judgment for an amount in excess of that called for in the complaint. Alexander v. McDow, 108 Cal. 25; 41 Pac. 24. Excess of power exercised by the clerk, in entering judgment by default, which appears on the face of the record and renders the judgment void, may be set aside upon motion. Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co., 136 Cal. 571; 69 Pac. 220. The provision that the clerk must enter judgment immediately after entering default is merely directory: his failure to do so does not render void a judgment subsequently entered upon such default; nor can the defendant invoke such failure for the purpose of annulling the judgment, to which he has no other defense. Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218.

Judgment, or entry of default, where service is by publication. A judgment by default, where the service of summons was by publication, is not void on its face, where it contains a recital of due service, if there is nothing in the record inconsistent therewith. Howard v. McChesney, 103 Cal. 536; 37 Pac. 523. The entry of a money judgment against a non-resident, upon service of summons by publication, is unauthorized, where there is not shown to be property of such non-resident within this state, upon which the court has jurisdiction to cause its judgment and decrees to operate. Merchants' Nat. Union v. Buisseret, 15 Cal. App. 444; 115 Pac. 58. A publication of summons which omits the notice, that, unless the defendant appears and answers, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint, does not authorize the clerk to enter the default of the defendant. People v. Weil, 53 Cal. 253.

Service of process, and proof thereof. The court acquires jurisdiction to enter default by service of process, and does not lose jurisdiction by neglecting to make proof of such service a matter of record. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Matthai, 116 Cal. 424; 48 Pac. 370; Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600; 29 Pac. 220; and see Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509; Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. An amended complaint, which merely brings in new parties, in which a defaulting defendant is not interested, and which is not an amendment in matter of substance as to such defendant, does not open the default, nor require the service of the amended complaint upon the defaulting party. San Diego Sav. Bank v. Goodsell, 137 Cal. 420; 70 Pac. 299. The court has no power or authority to grant cross-complainants affirmative relief, where there was no service of the cross-complaint. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Clarke, 110 Cal. 27; 42 Pac. 425. An affidavit of service of summons, which fails to show any service thereof, is insufficient to sustain a judgment upon a direct appeal therefrom. Linott v. Rowland, 119 Cal. 452; 51 Pac. 687; and see McMillan v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 372; Schloss v. White, 16 Cal. 65; McKinlay v. Tuttle, 42 Cal. 570; People v. Bernal, 43 Cal. 385.

Form of summons. A variance, in the summons, from the form of words prescribed by the code, cannot mislead or injure the defendant, where the court is applied to and grants such relief as is given in the code, and the relief does not differ from nor exceed that demanded in the complaint. Clark v. Palmer, 90 Cal. 504; 27 Pac. 375.

Waiver of right to default judgment. The defendant may, by his conduct, waive his right to have judgment entered in his favor, upon the plaintiff's default to his cross-complaint. Madison v. Octave Oil Co., 154 Cal. 768; 99 Pac. 176.

Hearing of evidence by the court. Under this section, the court is authorized to hear the evidence that may be offered, as against a defaulting defendant, to sustain the allegations of the complaint. Cole v. Roebling Construction Co., 156 Cal. 443; 105 Pac. 255. In an action to determine adverse claims to real property, a judgment by default against the named defendant who has been personally served with summons is not void because evidence was not required. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles Farming etc. Co., 150 Cal. 647; 89 Pac. 615.

Default admits what. A default admits the truth of matters pleaded, and must therefore be construed to admit that the amount claimed by the complaint is both reasonable and due, and no evidence is required to be taken for the purpose of fixing such amount, where it is ascertainable from the complaint. Alexander v. McDow, 108 Cal. 25; 41 Pac. 24.

Findings waived by default. Defendants who make default and fail to appear at the trial waive findings. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Clarke, 110 Cal. 27; 42 Pac. 425.

Validity of default judgment. A default judgment against a corporation is not void upon its face, where the complaint states a cause of action, and the summons was duly served on the president of the corporation, and the default and judgment were duly entered. Robinson v. Blood, 151 Cal. 504; 91 Pac. 238. A formal entry of default need not be first made, to confer jurisdiction on the court to enter judgment against a defaulting party, even where no notice of hearing was given. Wakefield v. Wakefield, 16 Cal. App. 113; 116 Pac. 309. A valid judgment by default may be rendered by the court, though no formal default has been entered: the default limits the time during which the defendant may file his answer, and that time never extends beyond trial and judgment. Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519; 42 Am. St. Rep. 145; 37 Pac. 509. A defendant is entitled to receive notice of an order dismissing a demurrer, before any default can be taken against him under a rule of the court (see Winchester v. Black, 134 Cal. 125; 66 Pac. 197); but where the defendant's attorney is present in court upon the overruling of his demurrer, and asks and obtains leave to file an answer within five days, he waives written notice, and judgment by default is rightly entered at the expiration of such time. Barron v. Deleval, 58 Cal. 95.

Discretion of court in setting aside default. The discretion of the court in setting aside a default is best exercised when it tends to bring about a judgment upon the merits of the controversy between the parties. Nicoll v. Weldon, 130 Cal. 666; 63 Pac. 63; Winchester v. Black, 134 Cal. 125; 66 Pac. 197. A motion to set aside a default rests so largely in the discretion of the trial court, that its action thereon will very rarely be disturbed upon appeal. Langford v. Langford, 136 Cal. 507; 69 Pac. 235; and see Winchester v. Black, 134 Cal. 125; 66 Pac. 197.

Vacation of default judgment. No affidavit of merits is required in a proceeding by motion, made and granted, to vacate a judgment by default, as having been prematurely entered. Quan Quock Fong v. Lyons, 20 Cal. App. 668; 130 Pac. 33. One who succeeds to property subject to a void default judgment may appear to have the judgment vacated, though not a party to the judgment. Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co., 136 Cal. 571; 69 Pac. 220; People v. Mullan, 65 Cal. 396; 4 Pac. 348; Dorland v. Smith, 93 Cal. 120; 28 Pac. 812; Malone v. Big Flat etc. Mining Co., 93 Cal. 384; 28 Pac. 1063.

Vacating default judgments. See note ante, § 473.

Appeal. An appeal may be taken from a judgment by default entered by the clerk; and the existence of a remedy by motion in the superior court to set it aside, if irregular or void, cannot affect the right of appeal, nor justify a motion to dismiss the appeal. Jameson v. Simonds Saw Co., 144 Cal. 3; 77 Pac. 662.

Terms defined. A judgment void upon its face is one that appears to be void upon an inspection of the judgment roll. Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co., 136 Cal. 571; 69 Pac. 220; and see People v. Harrison, 84 Cal. 607; 24 Pac. 311.

Judgment based on false return of process. See note 19 Am. Dec. 137.

Default judgment against married woman. See note 134 Am. St. Rep. 941.

Validity of default judgment awarding relief beyond prayer of complaint. See note 11 Ann. Cas. 353.

Default judgment entered by clerk without required order of court as void or voidable. See note 16 Ann. Cas. 1211.

Right to mandamus to compel proper official to enter judgment by default. See note Ann. Cas. 1913B, 344.

Right to amend pleadings after default judgments. See note Ann. Cas. 1913B, 481.

Validity of judgment by default rendered against person in custody. See note Ann. Cas. 1913C, 245.

Power of defendant's attorney to withdraw answer and permit default judgment. See note 33 L. R. A. 515.

Assessment of damages by jury on default. See notes 15 L. R. A. 614; 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1.

Effect of default judgment beyond the scope of the relief asked. See note 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 803.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. A judgment by default, entered before the expiration of the full time allowed for answering, will be reversed on appeal. Burt v. Scranton, 1 Cal. 416. So, too, will a judgment entered by default when the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Hallock v. Jaudin & Co., 34 Cal. 167. In proceedings to contest the elections of county officers, the contestant is not permitted to take judgment by default. Keller v. Chapman, 34 Cal. 635. Where a complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, judgment thereon by default will be reversed on appeal. Hallock v. Jaudin & Co., 34 Cal. 167. A default may be taken against a municipal corporation. Hunt v. San Francisco, 11 Cal. 250. A judgment by default may be rendered against a corporation incorporated under the laws of two states. Dodge v. Mariposa County, 1 Cal. Unrep. 398. A judgment by default may be taken against an administrator. Chase v. Swain, 9 Cal. 130. A judgment by default can be rendered upon an unliquidated demand, where the defendant has been notified in the summons of the amount for which plaintiff will take judgment. Hartman v. Williams, 4 Cal. 254. A default on a complaint containing special counts, defectively stated, will support a judgment; the default is confession of the indebtedness for the causes and on the accounts alleged in the complaint. Hunt v. San Francisco, 11 Cal. 250. In all cases not within the exception of the statute, an answer without a verification to a verified complaint may be stricken out on motion, and application for judgment, as upon default, may be made at the same time. Drum v. Whiting, 9 Cal. 422. Where an amended complaint in ejectment sets up title acquired after commencement of action, and a judgment by default is regularly entered, the judgment is valid. Smith v. Billett, 15 Cal. 23. In an action to recover on a promissory note, and to establish a lien for the amount upon certain real estate purchased with money advanced by plaintiff to defendant, and for which advance the note was given, the clerk entered judgment by default for the amount of the note. Plaintiff, having exhausted his remedies on this judgment, by executions and proceedings supplementary thereto, obtained from the court a decree for the equitable relief sought in the complaint, to wit, for a lien upon and a sale of the real estate. Held, that this decree was void, assuming the judgment against defendant to be valid. Such judgment, if valid, terminated the controversy, and whatever related to the merits of the case was merged in the judgment. But it is doubtful whether the clerk could enter judgment in an action of this nature, without application to the court. Kittridge v. Stevens, 16 Cal. 381. A motion that defendant will move to dissolve an attachment issued in a cause is not such an appearance in an action as authorizes the clerk to enter a judgment by default. Glidden v. Packard, 28 Cal. 649. A judgment in ejectment awarding damages, rendered on a default, will not be reversed, because it does not appear that the court examined witnesses as to the amount of the damages. Dimick v. Campbell, 31 Cal. 238. If the defendant demands a bill of particulars, and obtains an order for leave to answer within ten days after the bill is served, and a bill is served which does not contain the items of account, the clerk may enter a default and judgment, if the defendant fails to answer within ten days thereafter. Providence Tool Co. v. Prader, 32 Cal. 634; 91 Am. Dec. 598. A demurrer is an answer, within the meaning of this section. Oliphant v. Whitney, 34 Cal. 25.

2. Clerk acts ministerially. The clerk, in entering a judgment after default, acts in a ministerial capacity, and cannot enter a judgment granting any relief beyond that warranted by the facts stated in the complaint. Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 416; Wallace v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 495; Kelly v. Van Austin, 17 Cal. 564; Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192; Leese v. Clark, 28 Cal. 33; Providence Tool Co. v. Prader, 32 Cal. 634; 91 Am. Dec. 598; Oliphant v. Whitney, 34 Cal. 25. When the law declares what the judgment shall be, a judgment on default is the judgment of the law, not of the clerk. Harding v. Cowing, 28 Cal. 212. If a demurrer is filed within the time allowed for answering, the clerk cannot enter default or judgment, because the demurrer was not served upon the opposite attorney. The clerk cannot hear evidence and determine whether the demurrer or answer has been served or not. Oliphant v. Whitney, 34 Cal. 25. The entry of default, in the proper case, is a ministerial act, to be performed by the clerk; and the disqualification of the judge does not disqualify the clerk. People v. De Carrillo, 35 Cal. 37.

3. Recitals by clerk. Not necessary that the clerk should insert in the judgment a recital of his exposition of the preceding facts. Leese v. Clark, 28 Cal. 33.

4. Default, when service is made on portion of defendants only. Where two defendants are jointly sued, and service had on both, the clerk of the court has no authority to enter judgment by default against one, and his act in so doing is without color of law. Stearns v. Aguirre, 7 Cal. 449. But see Kelly v. Austin, post. In an action against defendants jointly and not severally liable, a portion only of them were served with process. Held, that the clerk could not, on the application of plaintiff, enter judgment upon default against parties served only, and that judgment so entered is void. The proper course in such a case being to enter judgment against all the defendants, but so as to be enforced against the joint property of all, and the property of those served. Kelly v. Austin, 17 Cal. 564. But see Tay v. Hawley, 39 Cal. 95, in which it is substantially held that such a judgment is invalid. See also § 414 of this code. If persons are served who are not named in the complaint, either by real or fictitious names, it is error to render judgment against them by default. Lamping v. Hyatt, 27 Cal. 102.

5. Proof of facts, not required. Where the complaint is verified, and the defendant fails to answer, plaintiff is entitled to judgment on the complaint, without proof of the facts. Tuolumne Redemption Co. v. Patterson, 18 Cal. 415; Lick v. Stockdale, 18 Cal. 219. See exceptions under subds. 2 and 3 of this section.

6. Coin judgments. If the note sued on is payable in money generally, and the complaint contains a copy of the same, the clerk cannot, after default, enter judgment payable in gold coin. Wallace v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 495. If the complaint in an action on a judgment contains an allegation that the judgment sued on was rendered payable in gold coin, and defendant makes default, the clerk should enter judgment payable in the same kind of money. Wallace v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 495. In an action upon a note payable in gold coin, if the defendant suffers a default, the clerk may enter a judgment against him, payable in gold coin. Harding v. Cowing, 28 Cal. 212; Galland v. Lewis, 26 Cal. 47.

7. Judgment entered by order of court. Upon facts found, whether by report of referee or special verdict of the jury, the action of the court must be invoked before the judgment can be entered. Peabody v. Phelps, 9 Cal. 224. If a demurrer has been filed, the clerk cannot enter a default without an order of the court. Oliphant v. Whitney, 34 Cal. 25. If a frivolous demurrer is filed, and leave is not asked to file an answer, it is not error for the court to enter a default of judgment upon overruling the demurrer. Seale v. McLaughlin, 28 Cal. 668. If an answer is filed, raising an issue, and a trial is had, and witnesses are sworn and examined, and the court takes the case into consideration, it cannot then strike out the answer of the defendant and enter his default, and render judgment for plaintiff. Abbott v. Douglass, 28 Cal. 295.

8. What a default cures or admits. A defective allegation of a fact may be cured by default or verdict, but not the entire absence of any allegation whatsoever. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555; Barron v. Frink, 30 Cal. 489; People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 137; Harlan v. Smith, 6 Cal. 173; McGregor v. Shaw, 11 Cal. 47; Watson v. Zimmerman, 6 Cal. 46; but see Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 243. If a person is sued by a fictitious name, and the return of the sheriff on the summons shows service on the defendant by his proper name, as "John Doe, alias Westfall," a default being entered, judgment may be rendered against the defendant in his true name, Westfall, without proof that Doe and Westfall are the same. Curtis v. Herrick, 14 Cal. 117; 73 Am. Dec. 632.

9. Waiver. The acceptance by plaintiff's attorney of service of a demurrer, filed by a defendant after his default has been entered, waives the default. Hestres v. Clements, 21 Cal. 425.

CHAPTER III.

ISSUES. MODE OF TRIAL, AND POSTPONEMENTS.

§ 588. Issue defined, and the different kinds.
§ 589. Issue of law, how raised.
§ 590. Issue of fact, how raised.
§ 591. Issue of law, how tried.
§ 592. Issue of fact, how tried. When issues both of law and fact, the former to be first disposed of.
§ 593. Clerk must enter causes on the calendar, to remain until disposed of. When may be restored.
§ 594. Parties may bring issue to trial.
§ 595. Motion to postpone a trial involving title to mining claim.
§ 596. In cases of adjournment a party may have the testimony of any witness taken.

§ 588. Issue defined, and the different kinds. Issues arise upon the pleadings when a fact or a conclusion of law is maintained by the one party and is controverted by the other. They are of two kinds:

1. Of law; and,
2. Of fact.

Issues.
1. Of law and fact. See post, §§ 589, 590.
2. Of fact, in justice's court. See post, §§ 878 et seq.

Legislation § 588. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 151 (New York Code, § 248), which read: "An issue arises when a fact or conclusion of law is maintained by the one party, and is controverted by the other. Issues are of two kinds: 1. Of law; and, 2. Of fact."

Construction of sections. The provisions of this section and §§ 656, 657, post, do not apply to every order that may be made ex parte, or by the court on its own motion, simply because the court has permitted written objections to be filed. Leach v. Pierce, 93 Cal. 614; 29 Pac. 235. It is not within the discretionary power of the court to dispense with the provisions of this section and §§ 589, 590, post; yet such provisions are not violated by a decision of the appellate court, that a party, by his conduct at the trial, is estopped from asserting, on appeal, for the first time, that a fact found by the trial court, although outside of the issues, was not within the issues made by the pleadings. Ortega v. Cordero, 88 Cal. 221; 26 Pac. 80.

Issue arises when. An issue arises when a fact or conclusion of law is maintained by one party, and is controverted by the other (Harris v. San Francisco Sugar etc. Co., 41 Cal. 393); and, by implication of law, upon new matter in the answer, deemed controverted by the opposite party. Rogers v. Riverside Land etc. Co., 132 Cal. 9; 64 Pac. 95.

Motion for new trial. Whenever, under the pleadings in a suit, an issue of fact is presented to a court, which is to be determined by the preponderance of evidence on the issue, a party is entitled, after a decision or finding thereon, to have the court re-examine it upon a motion for a new trial. People v. Bank of San Luis Obispo, 152 Cal. 261; 92 Pac. 481.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Pardee v. Schenck, 11 How. Pr. 500.

§ 589. Issue of law, how raised. An issue of law arises upon a demurrer to the complaint or answer, or to some part thereof.

Issues of law, how raised in justice's court. See post, § 879.

Legislation § 589. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 152 (New York Code, § 249), as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 62, Kerr ed. p. 88, which did not have the comma nor the word "or" after "answer."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Stats. 1854, p. 88.

§ 590. Issue of fact, how raised. An issue of fact arises—

1. Upon a material allegation in the complaint controverted by the answer; and,

2. Upon new matters in the answer, except an issue of law is joined thereon.

Issues of fact, in justice's court, how raised. See post, § 880.

Issue of fact raised how. An issue of fact arises, only where a material averment of fact is made on the one side and controverted on the other: the law does not raise issues of fact. Crackel v. Crackel, 17 Cal. App. 600; 121 Pac. 295. The effect of § 130 of the Civil Code, providing that the court shall, upon default of the defendant in an action for divorce, require proof of the facts alleged before granting relief, is not to raise an "issue of fact." Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122. An issue of fact is raised, where a written opposition is filed to a petition for letters testamentary, alleging the incompetency of the petitioner, and the petitioner files a written answer denying the facts so alleged (Estate of Bauquier, 88 Cal. 302; 26 Pac. 178, 532); but there is no issue of fact as to an allegation of the complaint not controverted in the answer. Yaeger v. Southern California Ry. Co., 5 Cal. Unrep. 870; 51 Pac. 190.

Findings proper when. The court cannot properly make findings of fact and conclusions of law, unless issues are joined and a trial thereof had; and they have no place in an action to foreclose a mortgage, where the defendant fails to answer. Waller v. Weston, 125 Cal. 201; 57 Pac. 892. A finding is erroneous which is outside of any issue presented in the case; and if on a material allegation, it is against the admissions of the pleadings, and a judgment based thereon is erroneous. Moynihan v. Drobaz, 124 Cal. 212; 71 Am. St. Rep. 46; 56 Pac. 1026. Issues of fact upon which findings are permitted or required are only those specified in this section. Waller v. Weston, 125 Cal. 201; 57 Pac. 892.

Issues in probate accounts. The manner in which the accounts of an executor are usually made up, and the manner in which objections thereto are usually presented, do not conduce to the development of issues, such as arise upon pleadings in civil actions, and to which findings are required to be responsive. Estate of Levinson, 108 Cal. 450; 41 Pac. 483; 42 Pac. 479; Miller v. Lux, 100 Cal. 609; 35 Pac. 345, 639.

Action of court reviewed how. The mode of reviewing the action of the court upon an issue of fact is the same, whether it is an action at law or a suit in equity: there must be a motion for a new trial. Harris v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 41 Cal. 393.

New trial. A determination of an issue of fact is the verdict or decision sought to be set aside when a new trial is asked under the code. Harris v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 41 Cal. 393.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176.

§ 591. Issue of law, how tried. An issue of law must be tried by the court, unless it is referred upon consent.

Trial by court, generally. Post, §§ 631 et seq.
Issues of law, in justice's court.
1. How raised. See post, § 879.
2. How tried. See post, § 881.

Legislation § 591. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 154, which read: "An issue of law shall be tried by the court, unless it be referred, upon consent, as provided in chapter VI of this title."

Trial, defined. A trial is the examination, before a competent tribunal, according to law, of the facts or the law put in issue in a cause, for the purpose of determining such issue: when a court hears and determines any issue of fact or of law, for the purpose of determining the rights of the parties, it may be considered a trial. Tregambo v. Comanche Mill etc. Co., 57 Cal. 501; Goldtree v. Spreckels, 135 Cal. 666. The trial, by the court, of an issue of law, upon a demurrer to the complaint, without leave to amend, is a trial of the cause, which involves a judgment of dismissal, and precludes the right of the plaintiff to dismiss the action before trial, under the statute providing for the dismissal of the cause before trial. Goldtree v. Spreckels, 135 Cal. 666; 67 Pac. 1091.

Trial of issues on appeal from justice's court. See note post, §§ 592, 976.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A trial is the examination before a competent tribunal, according to the law, of the facts, or a question of law put in issue in a cause, for the purpose of determining such issue. Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131. Until a decision has been entered in the minutes, or reduced to writing by the judge, and signed by him, and filed with the clerk, a case has not been tried. Hastings v. Hastings, 31 Cal. 95.

§ 592. Issue of fact, how tried. When issues both of law and fact, the former to be first disposed of. In actions for the recovery of specific, real, or personal property, with or without damages, or for money claimed as due upon contract, or as damages for breach of contract, or for injuries, an issue of fact must be tried by a jury, unless a jury trial is waived, or a reference is ordered, as provided in this code. Where in these cases there are issues both of law and fact, the issue of law must be first disposed of. In other cases, issues of fact must be tried by the court, subject to its power to order any such issue to be tried by a jury, or to be referred to a referee, as provided in this code.

Generally, as to jury trial. Post, §§ 600–628.
Waiver of jury trial. Post, § 631.
Reference. Post, §§ 638–645.
Court, trial by. Post, §§ 631–636.
Issues of fact.
1. In justice's court, how tried. See post, § 882.
2. In forcible entry and detainer, to be tried by jury. See post, § 1171.

Legislation § 592. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 155 (New York Code, § 253), which read: "An issue of fact shall be tried by a jury, unless a jury trial is waived, or a reference be ordered, as provided in this act. Where there are issues both of law and fact to the same complaint, the issues of law shall be first disposed of." When enacted in 1872, § 592 substituted (1) the word "must" for "shall," (2) "code" for "act," and (3) omitted the words "to the same complaint."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 309.

Right to jury trial in actions at law. It is always for the judge, sitting as a chancellor, to determine whether, when certain rights are established, he will grant an equitable remedy prayed for, or compel the party to be satisfied with his legal remedy; but when the asserted rights, upon which any remedy may rest, are legal rights, and cognizable in a court of law, such rights must be determined according to the methods of the common-law courts, and in such case the party cannot be deprived of his constitutional privilege of jury. Hughes v. Dunlap, 91 Cal. 585; 27 Pac. 642. The right to a trial by jury is secured to the defendant by this section; and a demand therefor is not necessary in an action for the recovery of possession of personal property. Swasey v. Adair, 88 Cal. 179; 25 Pac. 1119. A written demand for a jury must be held to be a continued refusal to waive the right thereto; and a party is not required to repeat the demand after the court has once denied the application; and the action of the court, after such application, in proceeding to try the case for recovery of possession of certain personal property, without a jury, is reversible error. Swasey v. Adair, 88 Cal. 179; 25 Pac. 1119. The right to a trial by jury where an action is brought to recover specific real property, is not defeated by any particular form which the action may take. Davis v. Judson, 159 Cal. 121; 113 Pac. 147; Hughes v. Dunlap, 91 Cal. 385; 27 Pac. 642. While a plaintiff out of possession may bring a suit in equity, under § 738, post, to determine an adverse claim against a defendant in possession, yet where the object of the action is to recover possession, and the defendant denies the allegations of the complaint, and sets up title by adverse possession, he cannot deprive the defendant of a jury trial of the issues raised by the answer. Newman v. Duane, 89 Cal. 597; 27 Pac. 66. In an action to quiet title, brought by a party out of possession against one claiming title and in possession, either party is entitled to a jury as a matter of right. Gillespie v. Gouly, 120 Cal. 515; 52 Pac. 816. Where the plaintiff has been ousted from possession, and the question of ownership is in issue, the parties are entitled to a jury trial upon that issue. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411; 80 Pac. 517; and see Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096. An action to recover damages for past trespasses upon land being an action at law, in which the parties thereto are entitled to a trial by jury, the fact that the plaintiff also asks for an injunction does not take away from him his right to have the real issues of fact tried by a jury. Hughes v. Dunlap, 91 Cal. 385; 27 Pac. 642.

Right to jury trial, and discretion of court, in equity cases. Causes of equitable cognizance fall solely within the provisions of the last clause of this section (Warring v. Freear, 64 Cal. 54; 28 Pac. 115; Learned v. Castle, 67 Cal. 41; 7 Pac. 34; Bell v. Marsh, 80 Cal. 411; 22 Pac. 170; and see Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411; 80 Pac. 517); and in such causes the defendant is not entitled to a jury (Noble v. Learned, 7 Cal. Unrep. 297; 87 Pac. 402), nor is it error to refuse a demand for a jury trial in suits in equity (Ashton v. Heggerty, 130 Cal. 516; 62 Pac. 934); hence, it is not error to refuse the plaintiff a jury trial in a proceeding in equity to reform a contract. Loftus v. Fischer, 113 Cal. 286; 45 Pac. 328; and see La Société Française v. Selheimer, 57 Cal. 623; Fish v. Benson, 71 Cal. 428; 12 Pac. 454. The defendant in an action to foreclose the lien of an assessment is not entitled to a jury trial: such action is in equity, and is not founded upon any contract made by, or personal liability against, the defendant. Santa Cruz Rock Pavement Co. v. Bowie, 104 Cal. 286; 37 Pac. 934; Emery v. Bradford, 29 Cal. 75; Taylor v. Palmer, 31 Cal. 240; Cassidy v. Sullivan, 64 Cal. 266; 28 Pac. 234. Cases of fraud are subjects of both equitable and legal jurisdiction, and the parties are entitled to a jury trial, where the facts constituting the fraud, as well as the relief sought, are cognizable in a court of law; but where, on the case made, relief can only be had in a court of equity, the parties are not entitled to a jury trial. Fish v. Benson, 71 Cal. 428; 12 Pac. 454; La Société Française v. Selheimer, 57 Cal. 623; Jones v. Gardener, 57 Cal. 641; Lorenz v. Jacobs, 59 Cal. 262. The right to trial by jury in an action to abate a nuisance is not given either by the constitution or by statute; the prayer for damages is incidental to the relief sought; and the action being properly brought in a court of equity, all the issues in the case will be determined. McCarthy v. Gaston Ridge Mill etc. Co., 144 Cal. 542; 78 Pac. 7; Hudson v. Doyle, 6 Cal. 101; Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 573; McLaughlin v. Del Re, 64 Cal. 472; 2 Pac. 244; Sweetser v. Dobbins, 65 Cal. 529; 4 Pac. 540. The issues in suits in equity should be tried by the court, unless it sees fit to order any or all of them to be submitted to a jury. McLaughlin v. Del Re, 64 Cal. 472; 2 Pac. 244; Churchill v. Baumann, 104 Cal. 369; 36 Pac. 93; 38 Pac. 43. The granting or refusing of a demand for a jury trial in suits in equity is entirely within the discretion of the court (Curnow v. Happy Valley etc. Hydraulic Co., 68 Cal. 262; 9 Pac. 149; and see La Société Française v. Selheimer, 57 Cal. 623); and whether the court shall submit special issues to the jury is also a matter within its own discretion. Schultz v. McLean, 109 Cal. 437; 42 Pac. 557.

Right of court to order trial by jury. The court may order a cause to be tried by a jury, without assigning any reason therefor, although a jury is waived by both parties. Bullock v. Consumers' Lumber Co., 3 Cal. Unrep. 609; 31 Pac. 367.

Motion for new trial. In order to review a question of fact, whether the case is at law or in equity, there must be a motion for a new trial. Thompson v. White, 63 Cal. 505.

Waiver of jury. A jury can be waived only in one of the modes prescribed in § 631, post. Swasey v. Adair, 88 Cal. 179; 25 Pac. 1119.

Right of court to order reference. An issue of fact, in an action at law, must be tried by jury, unless a jury is waived: it cannot be referred, except upon the written consent of both parties. Seaman v. Mariani, 1 Cal. 336. Injury is not presumed in consequence of a trial by jury instead of by the court. Doll v. Anderson, 27 Cal. 248.

Issue of law, disposal of. A defendant who has interposed a demurrer to the complaint has a right to a direct decision of the issue of law thereby presented, whether he fails to urge it or not. Winchester v. Black, 134 Cal. 125; 66 Pac. 197. In an action for personal injuries, the jury should not be asked, "What was the proximate cause of the accident and injury complained of": that question involves a question of law. Petersen v. California Cotton Mills Co., 20 Cal. App. 751; 130 Pac. 169.

Trial complete when. A case cannot be considered as tried until a decision has been made and filed, unless the filing of the decision has been waived. Warring v. .

Freear, 64 Cal. 54; 28 Pac. 115; Hastings v. Hastings, 31 Cal. 95.

Conclusiveness of verdict and findings of jury. Where, in an action to quiet title to property, a jury was impaneled, without objection, to try the legal issues raised by the answer, a stipulation by the parties, that the jury might render a general verdict in favor of either party, is legitimate, and estops the unsuccessful party from repudiating the general verdict, which is conclusive of the whole case. Johnson v. Mina Rica Gold Mining Co., 128 Cal. 621; 61 Pac. 76. A general verdict of the jury is conclusive on the court, save only the power to set it aside and grant a new trial, and no finding of the court can add to or take from the force of the verdict upon the principal issue in the case. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411; 80 Pac. 517. Where the issues are submitted to a jury in a suit in equity, their verdict is merely advisory. McCarthy v. Gaston Ridge Mill etc. Co., 144 Cal. 542; 78 Pac. 7; Hudson v. Doyle, 6 Cal. 101; Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 573; McLaughlin v. Del Re, 64 Cal. 472; 2 Pac. 244; Sweetser v. Dobbings, 65 Cal. 529; 4 Pac. 540. The adoption of a verdict is equivalent to a finding by the court to the extent to which the verdict covers the issues made by the pleadings, and it is the duty of the court to find upon all the issues not covered by the verdict, unless they are waived. Warring v. Freear, 64 Cal. 54; 28 Pac. 115; Bates v. Gage, 49 Cal. 126; Wingate v. Ferris, 50 Cal. 105. The general verdict of a jury in a suit in equity should be disregarded if insufficient, and even a special verdict is merely advisory, and may be set aside, or disregarded, or adopted. Warring v. Freear, 64 Cal. 54; 28 Pac. 115; Brandt v. Wheaton, 52 Cal. 430; Stockman v. Riverside etc. Irrigation Co., 64 Cal. 57; 28 Pac. 116. Where, in proceedings to condemn property for a public use, the question whether the taking of the same is necessary for such use is submitted to the jury, and they find on the issue, the court has no power to disregard the finding and make findings of its own. Wilmington Canal etc. Co. v. Dominguez, 50 Cal. 505.

Fraud as question of law or fact. See note 1 Ann. Cas. 446.

Assumption of risk arising after commencement of employment as question of law or fact. See note 3 Ann. Cas. 814.

Reasonableness of time for delivery of goods as question of law or fact. See note 6 Ann. Cas. 245.

Proof of foreign law as properly made to court or jury. See note 7 Ann. Cas. 74.

Negligence of railroad in constructing permanent structure close to tracks as question of law or fact. See note 7 Ann. Cas. 331.

Original or collateral nature of oral promise within statute of frauds as question of law or fact. See note 8 Ann. Cas. 539.

Province of court or jury to determine whether contract is contrary to public policy. See note 11 Ann. Cas. 124.

Reasonableness of time in which goods are returned under contract of "sale or return" as question of law or fact. See note 14 Ann. Cas. 331.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Definition of trial. Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131, Hastings v. Hastings, 31 Cal. 95, cited in note to § 591, ante.

2. Matters to be determined by the jury. Dedication of a street is a conclusion of fact, to be drawn by the jury from the circumstances of each case; the whole question, as against the owner of the soil, being, whether there is sufficient evidence of an intention on his part to dedicate the land to the public as a public highway. Harding v. Jasper, 14 Cal. 648. The question of abandonment of a mining claim is a question for the jury. Waring v. Crow, 11 Cal. 371. As is that of the reasonableness of the use of water to be determined by the jury upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case. Esmond v. Chew, 15 Cal. 143. So, too, the question of diligence. Weaver v. Eureka Lake Co., 15 Cal. 274. And the question of damages in an action of trespass. Drake v. Palmer, 4 Cal. 11. The fact whether a structure was a public nuisance is a question for the jury. Gunter v. Geary, 1 Cal. 467. The question of malice, in an action for malicious prosecution, is for the jury. Potter v. Seale, 8 Cal. 217. In an action for malicious prosecution of a suit on a bill of exchange which was paid, whether the plaintiffs in that suit knew that the bill was in fact paid, when they sued, is a question for the jury. Weaver v. Page, 6 Cal. 684. The existence of a custom is a question for the jury to decide. Panaud v. Jones, 1 Cal. 500. The question of notice of dissolution of partnership is a fact for the jury. Rabe v. Wells, 3 Cal. 151; Treadwell v. Wells, 4 Cal. 260. Where an action was brought for the balance of an account, and the answer set up payment by a promissory note, and the plaintiff replied that he was induced to receive the note by fraud, the court held that it was one of the cases where the party was entitled to a trial by jury, and that it could not be referred but by consent of the parties. Seaman v. Mariani, 1 Cal. 336. Where the boundaries of a lot of land are uncertain, the location of the lot is a question for the jury. Reynolds v. West, 1 Cal. 328; Hicks v. Davis, 4 Cal. 69. What is actual and what is constructive possession, in many cases is a question of fact for the jury. O'Callaghan v. Booth, 6 Cal. 65. So, too, is the question of the dedication of the premises by possession as a homestead. Cook v. McChristian, 4 Cal. 26.

3. Matters to be determined by the court. A court does not require the verdict of a jury to inform it of facts occurring in the presence of the court. People v. Judge of Tenth Judicial District, 9 Cal. 21. A party cannot try his case before a judge, without objection, and, after he has lost it, object that the case was not tried by a jury. Smith v. Brannan, 13 Cal. 115. If there is no dispute as to the facts, and the law upon those facts declares a transaction fraudulent, there is no question for the jury. Chenery v. Palmer, 6 Cal. 122; 65 Am. Dec. 493. What facts and circumstances constitute evidence of carelessness, is a question of law for the court to determine. But what weight the jury should give to these facts and circumstances is for the jury. Gerke v. California Steam Nav. Co., 9 Cal. 258; 70 Am. Dec. 650. After judgment by default in ejectment, a jury trial cannot be awarded. Smith v. Billett, 15 Cal. 26. Whether a judgment entered in the court below is entered in accordance with the mandate of the appellate court, is a question of law, and not of fact Leese v. Clark, 28 Cal. 33.

4. Juries, in equity cases. The language of the constitution as to trial by jury was used with reference to the right as it exists at common law. The right cannot be claimed in equity cases, unless an issue of fact be framed for the jury, under the direction of the court. Koppikus v. State Capitol Comm'rs, 16 Cal. 248; Smith v. Rowe, 4 Cal. 7; Walker v. Sedgwick, 5 Cal. 192; Cahoon v. Levy, 5 Cal. 294. A court of equity may direct, whenever, in its judgment, it may become proper, an issue to be framed upon the pleadings, and submitted to the jury. Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 263; Weber v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 447. In equity cases, the court below may disregard the verdict of a jury. Goode v. Smith, 13 Cal. 84. Though special issues, framed by the court according to equity practice, may be tried by a jury in equity cases, but if the failure to present the issues is the result of plaintiff's own motion, he cannot be allowed to take advantage of it. Brewster v. Bours, 8 Cal. 505.

5. Jury, mandamus cases. In an application for mandamus to compel a judge to sign a bill of exceptions, which the petitioner alleges he refuses to do, where the judge in his answer avers that he has signed a true bill of exceptions, and that the one presented by the relator is not a true bill, it was held that the petitioner was not entitled to a jury to try the issue. People v. Judge of Tenth Judicial District, 9 Cal. 21.

6. Generally. Where issues of law and fact are both raised, the issue of law should first be disposed of. Brooks v. Douglass, 32 Cal. 208. If the answer contains a legal and an equitable defense, the court may first try the equitable defense, and refuse the plaintiff a jury trial, and, if the facts warrant it, grant the equitable relief prayed for. Bodley v. Ferguson, 30 Cal. 511.

§ 593. Clerk must enter causes on the calendar, to remain until disposed of. When may be restored. The clerk must enter causes upon the calendar of the court according to the date of issue. Causes once placed on the calendar must remain upon the calendar until finally disposed of; provided, that causes may be dropped from the calendar by consent of parties, and may be again restored upon notice.

Mandamus to compel clerk to perform duty. Post, § 1085.

Issue, generally. Ante, § 588.

Abolition of terms. See Const., art. VI, § 5.

Legislation § 593. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 156 (New York Code, § 256), which read: "The clerk shall enter causes upon the calendar of the court, according to the date of the issue. Causes once placed on the calendar for a general or special term, if not tried or heard at such term, shall remain upon the calendar from court to court, until finally disposed of." When enacted in 1872, § 593 (1) substituted the word "must" for "shall," in both instances, and (2) omitted "the" before "issue."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 5.

Change of date of cause on calendar. The position of a cause on the calendar will not be changed to a different day from that on which it is set by the clerk, whether upon the stipulation of the parties or on motion of either party, except upon good cause shown. Wetmore v. San Francisco, 43 Cal. 37. An order dismissing a demurrer must be regarded as equivalent to an order overruling it. Winchester v. Black, 134 Cal. 125; 66 Pac. 197; and see Voll v. Hollis, 60 Cal. 569; Davis v. Hurgren, 125 Cal. 48; 57 Pac. 684.

Knowledge of rules of court. The parties to an action are bound to know the rules of the trial court relating to the calling of the calendar and the setting of causes for trial. Dusy v. Prudom, 95 Cal. 646; 30 Pac. 798.

§ 594. Parties may bring issue to trial. Either party may bring an issue to trial or to a hearing, and, in the absence of the adverse party, unless the court, for good cause, otherwise direct, may proceed with his case, and take a dismissal of the action, or a verdict or judgment, as the case may require; provided, however, if the issue to be tried is an issue of fact, proof must first be made to the satisfaction of the court that the adverse party has had five days' notice of such trial.

Dismissal. Ante, § 581.

Surprise.

1. Setting aside judgment for. Ante, § 473.
2. New trial. Post, § 657.

Legislation § 594. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 157, which had the word "an" instead of "the," before "issue," in first line.

2. Amended by Stats. 1899, p. 5, adding the proviso.

Construction of sections. This section does not require that a party intending to apply to the court to have a day fixed for the trial shall give notice of his intended application to the adverse party: it requires merely that five days' notice of the time set for the trial shall be given. McNeill & Co. v. Doe, 163 Cal. 338; 125 Pac. 345. The provision respecting five days' notice has reference only to proceedings taken against a party in his absence: it has no application to cases in which both parties are represented when the case is called for trial. Sheldon v. Landwehr, 159 Cal. 778; 116 Pac. 44. A court should not dismiss an action, under the third subdivision of § 581, ante, except upon proof made in compliance with § 594. Estate of Dean, 149 Cal. 487; 87 Pac. 13.

Notice of trial, necessity for and sufficiency of. This section was designed to prevent the manifest injustice of dismissing a party's action, or trying it in his absence, because of his failure to appear at a time at which he could not be held to have had notice that the trial would be had, or that any proceeding would be taken against him. Estate of Dean, 149 Cal. 487; 87 Pac. 13. It is error to dismiss an action as to interveners, where issues of fact are tendered by their complaint, without the five days' notice prescribed by this section, or a waiver thereof. Townsend v. Driver, 5 Cal. App. 581; 90 Pac. 1071. The jurisdiction of the court is not affected by a failure to comply with a rule of the court requiring five days' notice of trial. Petition of Los Angeles Trust Co., 158 Cal. 603; 112 Pac. 56. The parties to an action, and their attorneys, whether residents or non-residents of the county where the case is pending, must watch its progress, and are charged with notice of the fact that it is set for trial. Dusy v. Prudom, 95 Cal. 646; 30 Pac. 798; Bell v. Peck, 104 Cal. 35; 37 Pac. 766; Eltzroth v. Ryan, 91 Cal. 584; 27 Pac. 932. Where the judgment recites that the defendant had been notified of the day set for trial, more than five days prior thereto, a compliance with the provisions of this section is shown. Johnston v. Callahan, 146 Cal. 212; 79 Pac. 870. A recital in the judgment, that, on the hearing of a motion, both parties agreed in open court that the case should be peremptorily set for trial upon the decision of the motion, and the case was so set, is proper, where the defendant did not appear, and the finding is conclusive as against counsel's statement conflicting therewith, as to the insufficiency of the notice of trial. Rodley v. Lyons, 129 Cal. 681; 62 Pac. 313.

Dismissal or judgment in absence of adverse party. Where the plaintiff fails to appear at the trial, the defendant may proceed with the case and have final judgment entered. Clune v. Quitzow, 125 Cal. 213; 57 Pac. 886. A dismissal on account of the absence of the plaintiff, involving the absolute destruction of his rights, should be seriously considered by the court: so serious a penalty should not be imposed, unless the due administration of justice clearly requires it. Jaffe v. Lilienthal, 101 Cal. 175; 35 Pac. 636.

Absence at trial as waiver of jury. Where the defendant sends a telegram to the judge, demanding a trial by jury, on the day preceding the trial, but fails to appear in person or by counsel at the trial, the court may dispense with the jury. McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 223; 23 Pac. 312.

Waiver of notice of trial. A guardian ad litem has power to waive the five days' notice of the setting of a case for trial required by this section; and such waiver is had, if the guardian, on the day set for trial, appears in court and objects to the proceeding, and the court thereupon, without further objection from him, continues the trial for three days. Granger v. Sheriff, 133 Cal. 416; 65 Pac. 873.

Presumption arising from notice of trial. A party who, having actual notice of the day of trial, and knowing also that no further postponement would be agreed to, fails to appear either in person or by attorney, must be presumed to know that such failure would result in a trial in his absence. McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312.

Relief for party absent from trial. To entitle a party to relief on the ground of surprise, where the trial is had in his absence, he must show that he was injured, and that a different result would be reached if a new trial were had. McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312; Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Cook v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 237; Brooks v. Douglass, 32 Cal. 208.

Appeal. A rule of the trial court, requiring reasonable notice to the adverse party of the time fixed for trial, cannot be considered on appeal, where it is no part of the record. Johnston v. Callahan, 146 Cal. 212; 79 Pac. 870.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See § 581 of this code.

§ 595. Motion to postpone a trial involving title to mining claim. A motion to postpone a trial on the ground of the absence of evidence can only be made upon affidavit showing the materiality of the evidence expected to be obtained, and that due diligence has been used to procure it. A trial shall be postponed when it appears to the court that the attorney of record, party, or principal witness is actually engaged in attendance upon a session of the legislature of this state as a member thereof. The court may require the moving party, where application is made on account of the absence of a material witness, to state upon affidavit the evidence which he expects to obtain; and if the adverse party thereupon admits that such evidence would be given, and that it be considered as actually given on the trial, or offered and overruled as improper, the trial must not be postponed. In actions involving the title to mining claims, or involving trespass for damage upon mining claims, if it be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court that, in order that justice may be done and the action fairly tried on its merits, it is necessary that further developments should be made, underground or upon the surface of the mining claims involved in said action, the court shall grant the postponement of the trial of the action, giving the party a reasonable time in which to prepare for trial and to do said development-work.

Costs on continuance. Post, § 1029.
Extension of time during attendance upon legislature. See post, § 1054.

Legislation § 595. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (substantially a re-enactment of Practice Act, § 158), and then consisted of the first and third sentences of the present text.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 1, (1) adding the second sentence; (2) in the third sentence (the second of the original code section), (a) striking out "also," after "The court may," (b) adding "where application is made on account of the absence of a material witness," (c) substituting "admits" for "admit."
3. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 1448, adding the last sentence.

Construction of section. The intention of the code, while protecting the court from imposition and unnecessary delays, is to secure a reasonable opportunity to litigants to try their cases on the merits, to the end that justice may be done; and while no definite rule can be laid down, embracing all the different circumstances under which continuances should be granted, yet the spirit and intention of the code should always be borne in mind. Light v. Richardson, 3 Cal. Unrep. 745; 31 Pac. 1123.

Due diligence must be shown by affidavit. A continuance can be granted on the ground of the absence of evidence, only upon an affidavit showing the materiality of the evidence expected to be obtained, and that due diligence had been used to obtain it. Storch v. McCain, 85 Cal. 304; 24 Pac. 639; Kern Valley Bank v. Chester, 55 Cal. 49. An affidavit, on motion for a continuance, failing to show any diligence, and not disclosing any defense on the merits, is insufficient. Harloe v. Lambie, 132 Cal. 133; 64 Pac. 88.

Absence of witness. The affidavit, upon a motion for a continuance on the ground of the absence of a witness, must show what is expected to be proved by such witness (Kern Valley Bank v. Chester, 55 Cal. 49); but this requirement is not imperative, and should not be demanded of counsel, when he cannot have the aid of his client, whose absence is excusable. Light v. Richardson, 3 Cal. Unrep. 745; 31 Pac. 1123. It is not error to refuse a continuance because a regularly subpœnaed witness does not respond, and may have left the state, particularly where his evidence appears to be merely cumulative. Hawley v. Los Angeles Creamery Co., 16 Cal. App. 50; 116 Pac. 84. The circumstance that the witness who is unable to attend is at the same time one of the parties, strengthens the showing in favor of a continuance, but does not necessarily compel the court to grant it. Sheldon v. Landwehr, 159 Cal. 778; 116 Pac. 44.

Absence of party. A showing of the illness of the defendant, of such a nature that he could neither attend the trial nor have his deposition taken, is sufficient to entitle him to a continuance, where there is nothing to contradict the showing, or to raise a suspicion as to the good faith of the application. Morehouse v. Morehouse, 136 Cal. 332; 68 Pac. 976; Jaffe v. Lilienthal, 101 Cal. 175; 35 Pac. 636. The unavoidable absence of a party does not necessarily compel the court to grant a continuance. Sheldon v. Landwehr, 159 Cal. 778; 116 Pac. 44. It is not an abuse of discretion to refuse a continuance because of the absence of the plaintiff, if nothing indicates that he would be able to appear at any later time, and no excuse is shown for the failure to take his deposition in proper form before the trial. Beckman v. Waters, 161 Cal. 581; 119 Pac. 922.

Costs as condition of continuance. The court has a right to impose costs, other than those properly taxable, as a condition for postponing a trial (Pomeroy v. Bell, 118 Cal. 635; 50 Pac. 683); and a party cannot, after agreeing that the payment of certain items of costs be made a condition to a continuance, be heard to say that the court had no power or discretion to impose any particular item of costs. Bashore v. Superior Court, 152 Cal. 1; 91 Pac. 801.

Good faith in applying for continuance. The good faith of the application for a continuance is a question that may be considered in granting a continuance. Sheldon v. Landwehr, 159 Cal. 778; 116 Pac. 44.

Discretion of court as to continuances. Continuances should not be granted without good cause, and the granting or refusing thereof is usually a matter largely within the discretion of the trial court. Marcucci v. Vowinckel, 164 Cal. 693; 130 Pac. 430; Sheldon v. Landwehr, 159 Cal. 778; 116 Pac. 44. Granting or refusing a continuance on the ground of the absence of counsel, is a matter resting largely, if not wholly, in the discretion of the court (Kern Valley Bank v. Chester, 55 Cal. 49); and the same rule applies as to the absence of associate counsel. Peachy v. Witter, 131 Cal. 316; 63 Pac. 468.

Power to continue. The jurisdiction to hear and determine a cause or proceeding involves the power to postpone the hearing for good cause, unless prohibited by statute. Curtis v. Underwood, 101 Cal. 661; 36 Pac. 110.

Refusal to continue proper when. The refusal of a continuance is proper, where the application was made on the day set for trial, and the affidavit showed that the address of the absent witness was unknown, and the cause had been set for more than two months previously, and the defendant had not made any effort to secure the testimony of such witness. Tompkins v. Montgomery, 123 Cal. 219; 55 Pac. 997. It is not error to refuse a continuance, where the opposing party makes the admission contemplated by this section, and the affidavit containing all that was proposed to be proved by the absent witness was admitted in evidence at the trial. Loftus v. Fischer, 113 Cal. 286; 45 Pac. 328. The court is justified in refusing a continuance to allow the filing of an amended complaint, where the case had already been tried twice, and the court was not informed of the nature of the proposed amendment, or that the plaintiff was unable to establish, under the pleadings on file, the averments that he might include in such amended complaint (Schultz v. McLean, 109 Cal. 437; 42 Pac. 557); and a continuance, asked on the ground that necessary parties to a cross-complaint were not served with process, is properly refused, where they were parties to the action and had been served with summons. Rodgers v. Parker, 136 Cal. 313; 68 Pac. 975.

Discretionary nature of power to grant continuance. See note 74 Am. Dec. 141.

Absence of counsel as ground for continuance. See note Ann. Cas. 1913C, 431.

Injunction against judgment for refusal of continuance. See note 30 L. R. A. 703.

Presence of witnesses at trial as curing error in denying motion for continuance on ground of absent witnesses. See note 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 721.

Admissibility or subsequent trial of admission made to defeat continuance. See note 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 169.

Continuance because of illness of party. See note 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 660.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Absence of witnesses. The affidavit of a party moving for a continuance on the ground of the absence of a witness, must show that the facts expected to be proven by such witness are material. People v. Mellon, 40 Cal. 648; Hawley v. Stirling, 2 Cal. 470; Berry v. Metzler, 7 Cal. 418. An affidavit which merely shows that the desired witness resides in another county from that of the place of trial, and that a subpœna has been placed in the hands of the sheriff of the county where the witness resides, and has been returned not served, does not show sufficient diligence to entitle the defendant to a continuance. People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31. Affidavits must show due diligence in endeavoring to procure the attendance of witnesses and in preparing the trial. People v. Baker, 1 Cal. 404. The party must have resorted to the proper legal means for that purpose, or must satisfy the court that a resort to such means would have been useless. Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123. Where the answer of defendant was filed May 10th, and the application for a continuance, to take testimony in New York, was filed June 14th of the same year, during which interval no attempt was made to sue out a commission for the purpose, it was held that this is not sufficient diligence to entitle the party to a continuance. Pierson v. Holbrook, 2 Cal. 598. Affidavits for a continuance, based upon the ground of absence of witnesses, must state that the facts expected to be proved by absent witnesses cannot otherwise be proved. People v. Quincy, 8 Cal. 89; Pierce v. Payne, 14 Cal. 419; People v. Gaunt, 23 Cal. 156. Nor is it sufficient to state that the party has no other witnesses by whom he expects to prove the same facts. Pope v. Dalton, 31 Cal. 218. Affidavits for a continuance on the ground of absent witnesses should state that the testimony wanted is not simply cumulative, and cannot be proven by others, and also that the application is not made for delay; the character of the diligence used in trying to obtain the attendance of the witness, whether by exhausting the process of the law or otherwise, should also be stated. People v. Thompson, 4 Cal. 240; People v. Quincy, 8 Cal. 89; Pierce v. Payne, 14 Cal. 420.

2. Absence of counsel. An action was commenced September 9, 1867, and the demurrers were filed September 19th. On the 13th of November following, the cause was placed on the calendar, and set for trial on the demurrers for the 14th. On the 14th, defendants asked for a continuance, on affidavits setting out substantially that they had employed attorneys residing in a county distant from Kern County, who had prepared and filed demurrers, and had informed them that the cause would not be tried until the term of said court for December, 1867, and that the attorneys would then be in attendance; that the term then being held was an adjourned term of the June term, 1867, and that they could not procure attendance of their attorneys, and were taken by surprise; that one Bridger was a material witness for defendant Menzel, and lived in Los Angeles, and Menzel had seen him several weeks before, when he promised to be in attendance, but that he had not come, and that by reason of the promise, and what the attorney told them, they had taken no steps to secure the witness's deposition. The court denied the motion for a continuance, and on the 15th of November overruled the demurrers. On the 18th, the defendants answered, and the cause was set for trial on the 19th. On appeal, it was held, that it was not error, under the circumstances, to deny the continuance or overrule the demurrers. Lightner v. Menzel, 35 Cal. 459. Where a case, set for trial on a particular day, with the knowledge and consent of defendant's attorney, and he then, two or three days before the day of trial, goes to another county to try another cause there, a continuance was denied. Haight v. Green, 19 Cal. 113.

3. Absence of a party. A case was called for trial in its regular place on the calendar; counsel for defendant moved to postpone the trial for three days, on account of the temporary absence of the defendant. The motion was based upon an affidavit of the business associate of the defendant, to the effect that the defendant had gone to the state of Nevada a few days previous to the motion, on important private business, and that affiant knew nothing about the facts of the case, but believed that it would be impossible to try it without the defendant's presence, as the facts were altogether within his knowledge, and that he did not know when defendant would return, but he expected him to do so within a few days. The court denied the motion, and upon appeal it was held that the denial did not amount to an abuse of discretion. Wilkinson v. Parrott, 32 Cal. 102.

4. Newly discovered evidence. Material testimony, discovered at too late a period to produce the same at the trial, is good ground for a continuance. Berry v. Metzler, 7 Cal. 418.

5. Surprise. If defendants are surprised by an amendment, and find it necessary to assume a different line of defense in consequence of it, they are entitled to a continuance to prepare for their defense. Polk v. Coffin, 9 Cal. 58. A refusal to grant a continuance for the absence of witnesses or counsel, under circumstances showing that the party or his counsel was surprised as to the time or place of holding court, is erroneous. Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 183. If a party is taken by surprise by an extension of time to take testimony before a referee, and by the testimony thereby introduced, he is for that reason entitled to a continuance. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 129.

6. Discretion of the court. Granting or refusing a continuance rests very much in the sound discretion of the court. Musgrove v. Perkins, 9 Cal. 211. And even when the facts show that the action of the court below approached an arbitrary exercise of its discretion, that action will not be reviewed, unless there has been a motion for a new trial, and the application supported by the affidavits of the absent witness, if such affidavits can be obtained; or if not, then it should be shown to the court that they cannot be obtained. Unless this be done, the appellate court will not interfere, in civil cases, with the action of the lower court. Pilot Rock Creek Canal Co. v. Chapman, 11 Cal. 161; People v. Gaunt, 23 Cal. 156. The judge, after having heard the testimony and argument of counsel in a case, and announced orally from the bench his finding, may continue the case until the next term of court. Hastings v. Hastings, 31 Cal. 95.

7. Admissions to prevent a continuance. In criminal cases, on a motion for continuance made by defendant, on the ground of the absence of a material witness, based on a sufficient affidavit, the agreement of the district attorney, that the witness, if present, would have deposed as averred in defendant's affidavit, is not sufficient to warrant overruling the motion; he should have agreed that the facts stated were true. People v. Diaz, 6 Cal. 249. Where the plaintiff, to avoid the continuance, admits that a witness would testify to certain facts set up in the affidavit, and the trial proceeds, the affidavit becomes evidence, but not conclusive proof of its contents. Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 645; Boggs v. Merced Mining Co., 14 Cal. 358.

8. Generally. Courts are liberal in granting postponements; and if a party, who is unprepared for trial at the time of the calling of his case, fails to move for a continuance, he waives his want of preparation, and cannot afterwards, when judgment has gone against him, move for a new trial on this ground. Turner v. Morrison, 11 Cal. 21. The mistaken advice of an attorney to his client, not to prepare for trial, is not ground for a continuance. Musgrove v. Perkins, 9 Cal. 211. An agreement for a postponement, made by counsel, but not reduced to writing, will not be regarded by the court. Peralta v. Mariea, 3 Cal. 187.

§ 596. In cases of adjournment a party may have the testimony of any witness taken. The party obtaining a postponement of a trial in any court of record must, if required by the adverse party, consent that the testimony of any witness of such adverse party, who is in attendance, be then taken by deposition before a judge or clerk of the court in which the case is pending, or before such notary public as the court may indicate, which must accordingly be done; and the testimony so taken may be read on the trial, with the same effect, and subject to the same objections, as if the witnesses were produced.

Essentials of deposition. The depositions must be taken in the manner prescribed by the code, when made a valid condition to a continuance; and the reporter's notes of the testimony of the witnesses, at the time of granting the continuance, but not read over or signed or corrected by them, nor certified by the reporter or by any other person, are lacking in the essential elements of a deposition, and an uncertified transcript thereof is not admissible at the trial. Thomas v. Black, 84 Cal. 221; 23 Pac. 1037.

CHAPTER IV.

TRIAL BY JURY.

Article I. Formation of Jury. §§ 600–604.
II. Conduct of Trial. §§ 607–619.
III. Verdict. §§ 624–628.

ARTICLE I.

FORMATION OF JURY.

§ 600. Jury, how drawn.
§ 601. Challenges. Each party entitled to four peremptory challenges.
§ 602. Challenge of jurors for cause.
§ 603. Challenges, how tried.
§ 604. Jury to be sworn.

§ 600. Jury, how drawn. When the action is called for trial by jury, the clerk must draw from the trial-jury box of the court the ballots containing the names of the jurors, until the jury is completed, or the ballots are exhausted.

Jury.
1. Generally. Ante, §§ 190–254.
2. Trial. Ante, §§ 193, 194.
3. Trial by, conduct of. Post, §§ 607 et seq.
4. Waiver of. Post, § 631.

Verdict. Post, §§ 624 et seq.
Trial-jury box. Ante, § 246.
Jurors, who are competent. Ante, §§ 198, 199.
Exceptions and excuses. Ante, §§ 200–202.

Legislation § 600. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 159, which read: "When the action is called for trial by jury, the clerk shall prepare separate ballots containing the names of the jurors summoned who have appeared and not been excused, and deposit them in a box. He shall then draw from the box twelve names, and the persons whose names are drawn shall constitute the jury. If the ballots become exhausted before the jury is complete, or if from any cause a juror or jurors be excused or discharged, the sheriff shall summon, under the direction of the court, from the citizens of the county and not from bystanders, so many qualified persons as may be necessary to complete the jury. The jury shall consist of twelve persons, unless the parties consent to a less number. The parties may consent to any number not less than three. Such consent shall be entered by the clerk in the minutes of the trial."

Manner of drawing jury in criminal case. Twelve names must be drawn from the box by the clerk, and the defendant must be allowed to examine the whole twelve before exercising his right of peremptory challenge as to any; and those not challenged or excused must then be sworn; after which as many more names as will make up the deficiency must be drawn, when the same process must be repeated until the jury is completed. People v. Scoggins, 37 Cal. 676; People v. Russell, 46 Cal. 122; People v. Lums, 57 Cal. 115; People v. Riley, 65 Cal. 107; 3 Pac. 413; People v. Hickman, 113 Cal. 80; 45 Pac. 175.

Special venire. The court, in impaneling a trial jury in a civil action, instead of taking the names of the jurors appearing on the supervisors' list, may order the sheriff to summon a special venire, when there is nothing to indicate that the sheriff is disqualified. Perkins v. Sunset Telephone etc. Co., 155 Cal. 712; 103 Pac. 190.

Jury in equity case. The defendant is not entitled to demand a jury trial of legal issues involved in an equitable action. Coghlan v. Quartararo, 15 Cal. App. 662; 115 Pac. 664.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The original section contained provisions as to the number to compose a jury, the manner summoning talesmen, and the preparation of the trial-jury box. All these provisions are contained in Part I of this code, vol. I, pp. 123 to 139, inclusive.

1. Jury, how constituted. See §§ 190 to 195, inclusive, ante.
2. Qualifications and exemptions of jurors. See §§ 198, 199, 200, 201, ante. A party who accepts a juror, knowing him to be disqualified, cannot afterwards avail himself of such disqualification. People v. Stonecifer, 6 Cal. 411.
3. Manner of selecting and returning jurors. See §§ 204–210, inclusive, ante.
4. Time and manner of drawing jurors. See §§ 214–221, inclusive, ante.
5. Manner of summoning jurors. See §§ 225, 226, 227, ante; People v. Rodriguez, 10 Cal. 59; People v. Stuart, 4 Cal. 225. Where the sheriff is a party. Pacheco v. Hunsaker, 14 Cal. 120.
6. Manner of impaneling jury. See §§ 246, 247, ante. In a criminal case. People v. Scoggins, 37 Cal. 676.
7. Excusing jurors. See § 201, ante; People v. Arceo, 32 Cal. 40.

§ 601. Challenges. Each party entitled to four peremptory challenges. Either party may challenge the jurors, but where there are several parties on either side, they must join in a challenge before it can be made. The challenges are to individual jurors, and are either peremptory or for cause. Each party is entitled to four peremptory challenges. If no peremptory challenges are taken until the panel is full, they must be taken by the parties alternately, commencing with the plaintiff.

Challenge for cause. Post, § 602.
Number of peremptory challenges, in justice's court. See post, § 885.

Legislation § 601. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 161, which read: "Either party may challenge the jurors, but when there are several parties on either side, they shall join in a challenge before it can be made. The challenges shall be to individual jurors, and shall either be peremptory, or for cause. Each party shall be entitled to four peremptory challenges." When enacted in 1872, § 601 substituted (1) the word "where" for "when," (2) "must" before "join," for "shall," (3) "are" after "challenges," for "shall be," (4) "are either" for "shall either be," and (5) "is" for "shall be," after "party."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 310.

Constitutionality of section. The provision of this section, that where there are several parties on either side of an action, they must join in a challenge, is not violative of the fourteenth amendment of the Federal constitution, in denying to persons the equal protection of the laws. Muller v. Hale, 138 Cal. 163; 71 Pac. 81.

Procedure on challenging jurors. The proper practice, in the selection of a jury in a civil case, is to fill the panel, and upon the challenge of a juror for cause, or without cause, immediately to call another to take his place, so that in determining whether to challenge or not, the party may do so with a full panel before him. Silcos v. Lang, 76 Cal. 118; 20 Pac. 297; Vance v. Richardson, 110 Cal. 414; 42 Pac. 909. Each party has the right to examine the twelve jurors before exercising his peremptory challenge as to any, and if some are excused for cause, the deficiency must be supplied with others, who may, in like manner, be examined, until twelve competent and qualified jurors are in the box; thereupon each party may exercise his right to a peremptory challenge, but he cannot be required to exercise it prior to this time. People v. Scoggins, 37 Cal. 676; Taylor v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 45 Cal. 323.

Right to peremptory challenges. The right to challenge the jurors peremptorily is absolute; and the fact that a party has once passed the jury, including a juror afterwards sought to be challenged, does not cut off this right. Silcox v. Lang, 78 Cal. 118; 20 Pac. 297. Where separate trials are refused, and actions against several defendants consolidated, it is not error to restrict the defendants to four peremptory challenges, in which all must join. San Luis Obispo County v. Simms, 1 Cal. App. 175; 81 Pac. 972. Where the defendant refuses to exercise a peremptory challenge, and passes the jury to the plaintiff, who accepts the jury, there is an acceptance of the jury, and the refusal of the court to permit the defendant thereafter to exercise a peremptory challenge is not error. Vance v. Richardson, 110 Cal. 414; 42 Pac. 909.

Challenge to favor juror. See note 9 Am. Dec. 81.

Right to examine juror to determine whether to exercise peremptory challenge. See note 109 Am. St. Rep. 564.

Right and manner of exercise of peremptory challenges by joint parties in civil actions. See note 16 Ann. Cas. 265.

Time of exercise of right of peremptory challenge. See note 19 Ann. Cas. 766.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. People v. McCalla, 8 Cal. 303; People v. Scoggins, 37 Cal. 679. Each party has a right to put questions to a juror, to show not only that there exists proper grounds for a challenge for cause, but to elicit facts to enable the party to decide whether or not he will make a peremptory challenge. Watson v. Whitney, 23 Cal. 378; People v. Reyes, 5 Cal. 347.

§ 602. Challenge of jurors for cause. Challenges for cause may be taken on one or more of the following grounds:

1. A want of any of the qualifications prescribed by this code to render a person competent as a juror;

2. Consanguinity or affinity within the fourth degree to any party, or to an officer of a corporation, which is a party;

3. Standing in the relation of guardian and ward, master and servant, employer and clerk, or principal and agent, or debtor and creditor, to either party, or to an officer of a corporation which is a party, or being a member of the family of either party; or a partner in business with either party; or surety on any bond or obligation for either party, or being the holder of bonds or shares of the capital stock of a corporation which is a party;

4. Having served as a juror in a civil action or been a witness on a previous trial between the same parties, for the same cause of action; or having served as a juror within one year previously in any civil action or proceeding in which either party was plaintiff or defendant;

5. Interest on the part of the juror in the event of the action, or in the main question involved in the action, except his interest as a member or citizen or taxpayer of a county, city and county, incorporated city or town, or other political subdivision of a county, or municipal water district;

6. Having an unqualified opinion or belief as to the merits of the action founded upon knowledge of its material facts or of some of them;

7. The existence of a state of mind in the juror evincing enmity against or bias to either party;

8. That he is a party to an action pending in the court for which he is drawn and which action is set for trial before the panel of which he is member.

Subd. 1.
1. Competent jurors. Ante, § 198.
2. Incompetent jurors. Ante, § 199.
3. Exemptions and excuses. Ante, §§ 200, 201.

Subd. 2. Consanguinity or affinity, generally. Ante, § 170.

Challenge in criminal causes. See Pen. Code, §§ 1055 et seq.

Legislation § 602. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 162, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 302. When enacted in 1872, (1) in subd. 1, "statute" was changed to "this code," (2) in subd. 2, "either party" was changed to "any party"; (3) in subd. 3, "being security" was changed to "surety."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 310, (1) in subd. 2, substituting "fourth" for "third"; (2) in subd. 5, changing "the interest of the juror" to "his interest"; (3) in subd. 6, (a) omitting "formed or expressed," after "Having," and (b) after "action" adding "founded upon knowledge of its material facts, or of some of them"; (4) in subd. 7, adding "or against," before "either party."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 145; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 713, (1) at end of subds. 2 and 3, adding "or to an officer of a corporation which is a party"; (2) in subd. 7, striking out the words "or against," before "either party"; (3) adding subd. 8, which ended the section, although the code commissioner said, in his note to this section, "The amendment adds to the section subdivisions 8 and 9, and to subdivisions 2 and 3 the words 'or to an officer of a corporation which is a party.'"

5. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 1090, (1) in subd. 2, adding a comma after "corporation"; (2) in subd. 3, (a) after "agent," adding "or debtor and creditor," (b) changing comma to semicolon after "either party," in the second instance, and (c) adding, after "either party," in third instance, "or being the holder of bonds or shares of the capital stock of a corporation which is a party"; (2) in subd. 4, (a) before "or been," adding "in a civil action," and (b) after "of action," adding "or having served as a juror within one year previously in any civil action or proceeding in which either party was plaintiff or defendant"; (3) in subd. 6, omitting a comma after "action" and after "facts"; (4) in subd. 8, omitting "for trial" after "pending," and (b) a comma after "drawn."

6. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 510, in subd. 5, substituting "except his interest as a member or citizen or taxpayer of a county, city and county, incorporated city or town, or other political subdivision of a county or municipal water district," for "except his interest as a member or citizen of a municipal corporation."

Challenge must be specific. A general challenge of a juror for cause, without specification of the particular ground, is insufficient. Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483.

Want of qualifications prescribed by code. A juror, selected or listed, may be challenged for cause, where he does not possess the necessary qualifications. People v. Richards, 1 Cal. App. 566; 82 Pac. 691. The "last assessment-roll," within the meaning of the statute prescribing the qualifications of jurors, is the last one completed: the assessment-roll is not completed until certified by the assessor and delivered to the clerk of the board of supervisors. Houghton v. Market Street Ry. Co., 1 Cal. App. 576; 82 Pac. 972.

Competency of jurors. See note ante, § 198.

Consanguinity to a party. A liberal construction is to be given to the second subdivision; and where a brother of the juror was interested to the extent of ten per cent of the amount of the recovery, he is within the prohibition of the second subdivision. Mono County v. Flanigan, 130 Cal. 105; 62 Pac. 293.

Fiduciary or business relation. A tenant of plaintiff, under a lease which required him to deliver, as rent, a share of the crop, is not disqualified, under the third subdivision. Arnold v. Producers' Fruit Co., 141 Cal. 738; 75 Pac. 326.

Juror in previous trial. A jury is not rendered incompetent because it has just tried a case involving the liability of the defendant for a similar cause of action, depending on the same general considerations. Algier v. Steamer Maria, 14 Cal. 167.

Interest in result of action. The fifth subdivision, construed, does not expressly remove the disqualification of a judge, because of his membership or citizenship in a municipal corporation, which, alike with that of a juror, existed at common law. Meyer v. San Diego, 121 Cal. 102; 66 Am. St. Rep. 22; 41 L. R. A. 762; 53 Pac. 434.

Opinion as to merits of action. Where a juror states that he had formed an opinion on an issue in the case while sitting as a juror on a trial of a different cause of action, he is properly excused. Grady v. Early, 18 Cal. 108.

Enmity or bias. The right to unbiased and unprejudiced jurors is an inseparable and inalienable part of the right to trial by jury guaranteed by the constitution; but the rule excluding jurors for actual bias in civil cases is not to be confounded with the rule in criminal cases, in relation to opinions founded or based on public rumor, statements in public journals, or common notoriety, which permits the acceptance of a juror, if it appears to the court, on his declaration, that he can and will, notwithstanding such opinion, act impartially and fairly on matters submitted to him. Lombardi v. California Street Ry. Co., 124 Cal. 311; 57 Pac. 66. The statement by a juror, that, should the testimony be evenly balanced, he would decide for the plaintiff, and should the verdict be for the plaintiff, he would go to the biggest verdict, shows such bias in favor of the plaintiff as to render the disallowance of the challenge error. Lombardi v. California Street Ry. Co., 124 Cal. 311; 57 Pac. 66. The mere fact that jurors summoned are acquainted with the plaintiff does not imply bias in his favor, any more than it raises a presumption of prejudice against him. Perkins v. Sunset Telephone Co., 155 Cal. 712; 103 Pac. 190. A challenge for actual bias, where the juror stated that he had an abiding prejudice against cases of the class in which the one he was summoned belonged, and that the evidence in the particular case must be sufficient to overcome such prejudice, is erroneously overruled. Fitts v. Southern Pacific Co., 149 Cal. 310; 117 Am. St. Rep. 130; 86 Pac. 710. In an action to recover damages for negligence in causing the death of a minor child, it is error to overrule challenges to jurors for actual bias shown generally against such suits. Quill v. Southern Pacific Co., 140 Cal. 268; 73 Pac. 991. Where a juror stated that he regarded actions for libel as being of somewhat the same character as speculations; that, in many instances, he felt they were unwarranted by the facts; and that his being a newspaperman, and having an adverse opinion of damage suits, might create a prejudice in his mind and make him unfit to act as a juror,—the disallowance of a challenge is proper, where he said that he would try the case upon the law and the evidence, and it was shown that he had no acquaintance with the parties, and had no knowledge of the facts in the case. Graybill v. De Young, 146 Cal. 421; 80 Pac. 618. Abstract bias in favor of one in plaintiff's position does not render denial of challenge error, where the juror was unacquainted with any party to the suit (Baker

v. Borello, 136 Cal. 160; 68 Pac. 591); but the declaration of a juror, that he was hostile to all landlords, where the plaintiff was one, after having been accepted and informed of the nature of the action, renders him incompetent. Lawlor v. Linforth, 72 Cal. 206; 13 Pac. 496.

Fitness of juror determined how. The conclusion of the court on the challenge of a juror is to be drawn, not from any particular answer which the juror makes to a question asked him, but from his whole testimony. Baker v. Borello, 136 Cal. 160; 68 Pac. 591. Whether a prospective juror is fair and impartial, and should be allowed to sit in the case, is to be determined, in the first instance, by the trial judge. Graybill v. De Young, 146 Cal. 421; 80 Pac. 618.

Discretion of court. In passing upon challenges to jurors for cause, considerable latitude of discretion is allowed to the trial court. McKernan v. Los Angeles Gas etc. Co., 16 Cal. App. 280; 116 Pac. 677.

Appeal. The determination of a challenge will be interfered with on appeal, only when the evidence adduced is such that it cannot be said from it, as a matter of law, that the juror was so prejudiced thereby that he could not be a fair juror (Graybill v. De Young, 146 Cal. 421; 80 Pac. 618; Mono County v. Flanigan, 130 Cal. 105; 62 Pac. 293); and where the court exercised its discretion in excusing a juror to attain justice, the appellate court will interfere with great reluctance. Grady v. Early, 18 Cal. 108; Lawlor v. Linforth, 72 Cal. 205; 13 Pac. 496.

Inability to understand the English language as ground for challenge to juror. See note 35 Am. Rep. 728.

Challenge of jurors on account of preconceived opinions. See note 36 Am. Dec. 521.

Bias or interest or prejudice which disqualifies juror. See note 9 Am. St. Rep. 744.

Prejudice as to business of party to action as disqualifying juror. See note 20 Ann. Cas. 1312.

Interest or bias sufficient to disqualify juror in eminent domain proceedings. See note 5 Ann. Cas. 923.

Effect on competency of juror of residence in county or municipality interested in suit. See notes 6 Ann. Cas. 961; Ann. Cas. 1913A, 120.

Sympathy for laboring men generally as sufficient ground for challenge of juror for cause. See note Ann. Cas. 1913A, 1279.

Sympathy for plaintiff in action for personal injuries as bias sufficient to constitute disqualification of juror. See note Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1183.

Prejudice against race or color of party to action as constituting disqualification of juror. See note Ann. Cas. 1912B, 969.

Competency of jurors who have previously served in cause involving same or similar facts. See notes 4 Ann. Cas. 965; 68 L. R. A. 871.

Personal knowledge of facts to be proved as affecting competency. See note 63 L. R. A. 807.

Who are related by affinity. See note 79 Am. St. Rep. 200.

Competency of employee of party as juror. See note 12 Ann. Cas. 306.

Relationship to witness as constituting disqualification of juror. See note Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1060.

Relationship of juror to party as ground for new trial. See note 18 L. R. A. 477.

Religious affiliations as affecting competency of juror. See note 17 Ann. Cas. 343.

Membership in a religious society or denomination as a disqualification to serve as a juror in a case involving its rights. See note 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 992.

Relationship to private corporation or association for profit which will disqualify a juror in a civil action in which it is interested. See note 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 978.

Competency as juror of employee or relative of employee of party or person interested in an action. See note 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 982.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Want of qualifications. See §§ 198, 199, 200, and 201, ante, and subd. 2 of note to § 600, ante.

2. Consanguinity. See §§ 1389 to 1393, inclusive, of the Civil Code.

3. Juror or witness on former trial. Where a juror had been accepted by both parties, and subsequently, during the examination of another juror, the fact came out that there had been a former trial of forcible entry and detainer for the same ground now in dispute, and the juror accepted then, of his own accord, stated that the title to the ground had been spoken of in the forcible entry case, and that his mind was made up as to the title, and the plaintiffs thereupon challenged him for cause, and the court excused him, defendants resisting, on the ground that it was too late. Held, not error; that where the court below exercised its discretion in excusing a juror to attain justice, this court would interfere with great reluctance. Grady v. Early, 18 Cal. 108. That a jury has just tried a case involving the liability of defendant for a similar cause of action, depending on the same general considerations, does not render a member of it incompetent to sit in the subsequent case. Algier v. Steamer Maria, 14 Cal. 167.

4. Unqualified opinions. If a juror heard or read a statement of the facts of a case, it does not, of itself, disqualify him, for he may not have formed or expressed an "unqualified opinion." A mere impression or suspicion derived from such reading or hearing will not disqualify. The juror must have reached a conclusion, like that upon which he would be willing to act in ordinary matters. People v. Reynolds, 16 Cal. 128. In an action of ejectment, a juror who has formed an opinion adverse to the validity of title under which defendants claimed, is disqualified. White v. Moses, 11 Cal. 68. A verdict of a jury will not be set aside on the ground that one of the jurors "knew and was aware of the circumstances connected with the affair," the subject-matter of the suit, where no objection was raised until after verdict rendered, and it not appearing that he had formed or expressed an opinion before the trial, or was in any way biased in favor of plaintiff. Lawrence v. Collier, 1 Cal. 37.

5. Bias. Each party has a right to put questions to a juror, to show not only that there exist proper grounds for a challenge for cause, but to elicit facts to enable him to decide whether he will make a peremptory challenge or not. People v. Reyes, 5 Cal. 347; Watson v. Whitney, 23 Cal. 375. Prejudice has no degrees. The law contemplates that every juror who tries a cause shall have a mind free from all bias or prejudice of any kind; and if a juror is prejudiced in any manner, he is not a proper person to sit on the jury. People v. Reyes, 5 Cal. 347. A juror, being challenged, was examined before triers, and asked the following questions: 1. Are you not a member of a secret and mysterious order, known as and called Know-Nothings, which has imposed on you an oath or obligation, beside which an oath administered to you in a court of justice, if in conflict with that oath or obligation, would be by you disregarded? 2. Are you a member of any secret association, political or otherwise, by your oaths or obligations to which any prejudice exists in your mind against Catholic foreigners? 3. Do you belong to any secret political society, known as and called by the people at large in the United States, Know-Nothings? and if so, are you bound by an oath, or other obligation, not to give a prisoner of foreign birth, in a court of justice, a fair and impartial trial? The court refused to permit the juror to answer the questions. On appeal, the refusal was held to be error, the appellate court holding that a person who had taken such oaths would be grossly unfit to act as a juror. People v. Reyes, 5 Cal. 347; see also Watson v. Whitney, 23 Cal. 375. A person who knows the defendants, who declares that if the testimony was evenly balanced, he would incline to their side, but would decide against them if the testimony was against them, and he would do his duty as a juror under the instructions of the court, is a competent juror. McFadden v. Wallace, 38 Cal. 51.

6. Manner of taking objection. A general challenge for cause, without specification of the particular ground, is insufficient. The code enumerates several different grounds for which such challenge may be taken, and a designation of the one upon which any particular challenge rests is essential to its consideration by the court. It is not sufficient to say: "I challenge the juror for cause." Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483.

§ 603. Challenges, how tried. Challenges for cause must be tried by the court. The juror challenged and any other person may be examined as a witness on the trial of the challenge.

Challenge, grounds of, in justice's court. See post, § 885.

Legislation § 603. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 163, which had "shall" instead of "must."

Examination of jurors upon voir dire. See note 23 Am. Dec. 177.

Discharge of accepted juror for incapacity or impropriety. See note 1 Am. St. Rep. 522.

Improper refusal of court to sustain challenge to juror for cause as warranting reversal where injured party exhausts his peremptory challenges. See note 9 Ann. Cas. 279.

§ 604. Jury to be sworn. As soon as the jury is completed, an oath must be administered to the jurors, in substance, that they and each of them will well and truly try the matter in issue between ——, the plaintiff, and ——, defendant, and a true verdict render according to the evidence.

Oath, administration of, generally. Post, §§ 2093–2097.

Legislation § 604. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 160, which (1) had the words "oath or affirmation shall" instead of "oath must," (2) did not have the word "and" before "each of them," and (3) had the word "the" before "defendant."

Jury sworn when completed. When the jury is completed, it is to be sworn. People v. Scoggins, 37 Cal. 676; Taylor v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 45 Cal. 323.

Explanation of meaning of oath. It is not necessary to inform a juror that his oath means that he is to act upon his own judgment. People v. Perry, 144 Cal. 748; 78 Pac. 284.

Presumption as to verdict. It cannot be assumed that any member of a jury rendered his verdict in violation of his oath and the instructions of the court. People v. Loomer, 13 Cal. App. 654; 110 Pac. 466.

Failure of record to show that jury were sworn as ground for reversal. See notes 8 Ann. Cas. 750; 17 Ann. Cas. 178.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The term "oath" includes "affirmation." See subd. 7 of § 17, ante.

ARTICLE II.

CONDUCT OF TRIAL.

§ 607. Order of proceeding on trial.
§ 608. Charge to the jury. Court must furnish, in writing, upon request, the points of law contained therein.
§ 609. Special instructions.
§ 610. View by jury of the premises.
§ 611. Admonition when jury permitted to separate.
§ 612. Jury may take with them certain papers.
§ 613. Deliberation of jury, how conducted.
§ 614. May come into court for further instructions.
§ 615. Proceedings if juror becomes sick.
§ 616. When prevented from giving verdict, the cause may be again tried.
§ 617. While jury are absent, court may adjourn from time to time. Sealed verdict.
§ 618. Verdict, how declared. Form of. Polling the jury.
§ 619. Proceedings when verdict is informal.

§ 607. Order of proceeding on trial. When the jury has been sworn, the trial must proceed in the following order, unless the judge, for special reasons, otherwise directs:

1. The plaintiff, after stating the issue and his case, must produce the evidence on his part;

2. The defendant may then open his defense, and offer his evidence in support thereof;

3. The parties may then respectively offer rebutting evidence only, unless the court, for good reason, in furtherance of justice, permit them to offer evidence upon their original case;

4. When the evidence is concluded, unless the case is submitted to the jury on either side or on both sides without argument, the plaintiff must commence and may conclude the argument;

5. If several defendants, having separate defenses, appear by different counsel, the court must determine their relative order in the evidence and argument;

6. The court may then charge the jury.

Proceedings, etc., on trial.
1. Amendments. Ante, § 473.
2. Either party may bring on trial. Ante, § 594.
3. Nonsuits, etc. Ante, § 581.
4. As to proof necessary to make out case. Post, §§ 1867, 1869.
5. Variance, Ante, §§ 469–471.
6. View by jury. Post, § 610.

Evidence.
1. Order of proof. Post, § 2042.
2. Admissibility is for court. Post, § 2102.
3. Allegations, material, only, need be proved. Post, § 1867.
4. Burden of proof. Post, §§ 1869, 1981.
5. Relevancy of evidence. Post, §§ 1868–1870.
6. Relevancy, collateral facts. Post, §§ 1868, 1870.

Witnesses.
1. Answer, witness must. Post, § 2065.
2. Cross-examination. Post, § 2048.
3. Direct examination. Post, § 2045.
4. Excluding witnesses from court-room. Post, § 2043.
5. Experts. Post, § 1870, subd. 9.
6. Impeaching, and evidence of good character. Post, §§ 2049–2053.
7. Interpreters. Post, § 1884.
8. Leading questions. Post, § 2046.
9. Mode of interrogation. Post, § 2044.
10. Oaths. Post, §§ 2093–2097.
11. Protection of witnesses. Post, § 2066.
12. Refreshing memory. Post, § 2047.
13. Testimony, clerk to take down, if no shorthand reporter. Post, § 1051.
14. Writing shown to witness, other side may see. Post, § 2054.

Charge to jury. Post, §§ 608, 609.

Legislation § 607. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Construction of section. The court may depart from the order of procedure prescribed in this section, but error cannot ordinarily be predicated upon its refusal to do so. Watkins v. Glas, 5 Cal. App. 68; 89 Pac. 840.

Plaintiffs, who are. Contestants of the probate of a will are plaintiffs, and have the affirmative of all the issues raised by the contest. Estate of Dalrymple, 67 Cal. 444; 7 Pac. 906; Estate of Latour, 140 Cal. 414; 73 Pac. 1070.

Order of proof. The mere order in which evidence is introduced is very much in the discretion of the court, and will not be interfered with on appeal, except for abuse of discretion. Bates v. Tower, 103 Cal. 404; 37 Pac. 385; Crosett v. Whelan, 44 Cal. 200; People v. Shainwold, 51 Cal. 468. Where a denial places the burden of proof on the defendant, it is not error to require him first to introduce evidence in support of an affirmative defense thus set up. Clarke v. Fast, 128 Cal. 422; 61 Pac. 72. Evidence in anticipation of an affirmative defense is properly excluded, where it is not responsive to any allegation of the complaint. Turner v. Southern Pacific Co., 142 Cal. 580; 76 Pac. 384. Proof of the execution of an instrument, relied upon by the defense, is not proper on the cross-examination of the plaintiff. Haines v. Snedigar, 110 Cal. 18; 42 Pac. 462. Any error in admitting a copy of a deed is cured by subsequent proof of its loss. Kenniff v. Caulfield, 140 Cal. 34; 73 Pac. 803. The defense of a former adjudication is available only upon proof thereof, made only after the plaintiff has proved his case. Harding v. Harding, 148 Cal. 397; 83 Pac. 434; Watkins v. Glas, 5 Cal. App. 68; 89 Pac. 840.

Admissibility of evidence in rebuttal. It is within the discretion of the court to allow, for good cause shown, the admission of evidence in rebuttal, which should have been introduced in presenting the main case. Patterson v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 147 Cal. 178; 81 Pac. 531; Lisman v. Early, 15 Cal. 199; Yankee Jim's Union Water Co. v. Crary, 25 Cal. 504; 85 Am. Dec. 145; Kohler v. Wells Fargo & Co., 26 Cal. 606. The admissions of a defendant are properly excluded in rebuttal, where the plaintiff has not asked permission to reopen his case for that purpose. Young v. Brady, 94 Cal. 128; 29 Pac. 489. No good reason being shown, it is not error to refuse to permit, in rebuttal, additional evidence as to matters gone into fully in the main case (Patterson v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 147 Cal. 178; 81 Pac. 531); nor is it error to refuse to allow testimony held in reserve until the testimony of the other party is in, and then attempted to be introduced by way of rebuttal (Kohler v. Wells Fargo & Co., 26 Cal. 606); nor is it error to refuse to allow a plaintiff to recall a witness, in rebuttal, for the sole purpose of contradicting a witness for the defendant on a point upon which the plaintiff's witness has already testified. Phelps v. McGloan, 42 Cal. 298. Entering upon the original case by the plaintiff, and again proving the same facts that were proved by him in making his prima facie case, is not authorized. Yankee Jim's Union Water Co. v. Crary, 25 Cal. 504. It is proper to admit, in rebuttal, evidence of deraignment of title, where the defendant relies upon adverse possession, the plaintiff being entitled to rely on prima facie evidence of title in the first instance (Abbey Homestead Ass'n v. Willard, 48 Cal. 614); and also evidence that the plaintiff was a bona fide purchaser in good faith, without notice, and for a valuable consideration, in an action to quiet title, where the defendant had introduced a deed of a date prior to that of the plaintiff (Douglass v. Willard, 129 Cal. 38; 61 Pac. 572); and also additional evidence of the credibility of a witness, which has been attacked by the evidence of the opposite party (Wade v. Thayer, 40 Cal. 578); and evidence to explain testimony which the defendant had introduced to contradict the plaintiff's testimony. Bradford v. Woodworth, 108 Cal. 684; 41 Pac. 797.

Sufficiency of evidence. In an action to recover damages for personal injuries to the plaintiff as the result of an assault, wherein the defendant admits the assault, but pleads self-defense, the plaintiff, in order to establish his case, is not required to prove that the defendant assaulted him without cause. Hardy v. Schirmer, 163 Cal. 272; 124 Pac. 993.

Motion to strike out testimony. A motion to strike out the testimony of a witness, to be available, must be directed with precision to the testimony sought to be stricken out. Lucy v. Davis, 163 Cal. 611; 126 Pac. 490. A party objecting to a question, or moving to strike out testimony, should be required to state the grounds of his objection or motion. Spear v. United Railroads, 16 Cal. App. 637; 117 Pac. 956. Where no objection is made to the admission of evidence at the time it is given, a motion to strike it out, after the case is closed, is properly denied. Perkins v. Blauth, 163 Cal. 782; 127 Pac. 50. After a witness has testified to his opinion of the mental condition of a testator, and also to other matters, a motion to strike out the entire testimony of the witness, on the ground that he was not an intimate acquaintance, does not lie. Estate of Huston, 163 Cal. 166; 124 Pac. 852.

Right to open and close argument. Where the ownership of land, in condemnation proceedings, is not in issue, the defendant has no right to open and close the argument: that right belongs to the plaintiff. Mendocino County v. Peters, 2 Cal. App. 24; 82 Pac. 1122.

Argument of counsel may include what. The argument is under the control of the court, and extraneous matter should not be brought in and commented upon. Knight v. Russ, 77 Cal. 410; 19 Pac. 698. It is not misconduct for the defendant's counsel, in arguing to the jury, to refer to matters covered by findings that are before them. Gjurich v. Fieg, 164 Cal. 429; 129 Pac. 464. It is within the discretion of the court to permit counsel to read to the jury and to comment upon instructions previously settled by the court (Boreham v. Byrne, 83 Cal. 23; 23 Pac. 212); and to read sections of the codes to the jury, in argument (Meyer v. Foster, 147 Cal. 166; 81 Pac. 402; and see People v. Anderson, 44 Cal. 65; People v. Forsythe, 65 Cal. 101; 3 Pac. 402; People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 226; 10 Pac. 502; Sullivan v. Royer, 72 Cal. 248; 1 Am. St. Rep. 51; 13 Pac. 655); and the reading of pleadings, or calling the attention of the jury to facts alleged therein, during the argument, is not improper (Knight v. Russ, 77 Cal. 410; 19 Cal. 698); but the practice of reading law books to the jury is not a commendable one; hence, a refusal to allow counsel to read extracts from the decisions of the supreme court is not error. People v. Godwin, 123 Cal. 374; 55 Pac. 1059.

Written argument. To permit a motion to be argued on briefs is simply to permit a written argument on the motion instead of an oral one. McNeill & Co. v. Doe, 163 Cal. 338; 125 Pac. 345.

Reopening of case after submission. The reopening of the case after submission, for the introduction of additional evidence, is within the discretion of the court (Miller v. Sharp, 49 Cal. 233; Briswalter v. Palomares, 66 Cal. 259; 5 Pac. 226; Consolidated National Bank v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 95 Cal. 1; 29 Am. St. Rep. 85; 30 Pac. 96; San Francisco Breweries v. Schurtz, 104 Cal. 420; 38 Pac. 92; Douglass v. Willard, 129 Cal. 38; 61 Pac. 572); and the appellate court will interfere with the orders of the lower court, in such cases, only for abuse of discretion. Douglass v. Willard, 129 Cal. 38; 61 Pac. 572. It is not an abuse of discretion to allow the reopening of the case, after submission, in order to permit the plaintiff to prove, by the clerk's register of actions, that a prior action for the same cause had been dismissed in proper form (Loewenthal v. Coonan, 135 Cal. 381; 87 Am. St. Rep. 115; 67 Pac. 324); nor to refuse the reopening, where the proposed evidence is merely cumulative, and its admission could not affect the result (Estate of Walker, 143 Cal. 162; 82 Pac. 770); nor to refuse the reopening, to supply proof as to the sufficiency of a tax deed admitted in proof of title, after objection and warning of opposing counsel of the necessity of such proof (Haines v. Young, 132 Cal. 512; 64 Pac. 1079); nor to refuse the reopening, where no issue is raised by the pleadings to which the evidence offered is relevant. San Francisco Breweries v. Schurtz, 104 Cal. 420; 38 Pac. 92. Where an amended complaint was permitted to be filed, based on an affidavit setting up facts learned since the case was tried and submitted, and permission was given to take further testimony, what further relevant testimony may be allowed is within the discretion of the court. Lee v. Murphy, 119 Cal. 364; 51 Pac. 549, 955.

Right of trial court to direct verdict at close of opening statement of plaintiff's counsel. See note 14 Ann. Cas. 699.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. "The length to which trials are now protracted is a matter of great and just complaint. The remedy lies chiefly with the courts. If they would adhere inflexibly to the rule that a question once decided shall not be debated anew, and would stop the examination of a witness when he has been already sufficiently examined, a vast deal of time might be saved. It is a rule in the English courts, and in the courts of some of our states, that a counsel shall stand while he is examining a witness. The same rule would be useful here. As trials are now sometimes conducted, the counsel sits leisurely in his seat, writing down at length all the questions and answers, and the court meeting at ten and adjourning at three, a single witness remains under examination from day to day, and the trial lasts for weeks, when it should be ended in as many days. . . . With resolution on the part of the courts, and a few rules, such as they should adopt, we are persuaded that more than half the time now spent in trials might be saved." Field, Graham, and Loomis.

Matters of law, court stating, in charge. Const., art. VI, § 19; post, §§ 657, subd. 7, §§ 2102, 2061.

Legislation § 608. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 165, which had (1) the word "shall" instead of "may," in first line, (2) the words "shall also" instead of "must," before "inform the jury," (3) the word "shall" instead of "must," before "furnish to either," and (4) the word "shall" before "sign."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 145; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Must be on law. Each party is entitled to instructions on the law of the case, on the theory that the jury will regard all his testimony as true. Sperry v. Spaulding, 45 Cal. 544. Refusal or neglect to instruct on commonplace matters of law is not ground for reversal, when no erroneous instruction on the subject is given, jurors being assumed to have ordinary intelligence and good sense. Davis v. McNear, 101 Cal. 606; 36 Pac. 105; Estate of Keegan, 139 Cal. 123; 72 Pac. 828. Quoting from the decisions of other courts, in other cases, is not error, if the quotations correctly state the law. Cousins v. Partridge, 79 Cal. 224; 21 Pac. 745; Estate of Spencer, 96 Cal. 448; 31 Pac. 453; People v. McNabb, 79 Cal. 419; 21 Pac. 843; Etchepare v. Aguirre, 91 Cal. 288; 25 Am. St. Rep. 180; 27 Pac. 668. Incorrect instructions are properly refused (Silva v. Bair, 141 Cal. 599; 75 Pac. 162); as are also instructions not containing a statement of any rule of law. Higgins v. Williams, 114 Cal. 176; 45 Pac. 1041. All the law applicable to the case is not required to be stated in a single instruction. Anderson v. Seropian, 147 Cal. 201; 81 Pac. 521; Bradley v. Lee, 38 Cal. 362. The weight of evidence, or preponderance of probability, is sufficient to establish the fact: an instruction to the jury, that it should be proved "to your satisfaction, by a preponderance of the evidence," would be better without the phrase "to your satisfaction." Hutson v. Southern California Ry. Co., 150 Cal. 701; 89 Pac. 1093.

Jury must not judge law. An instruction leaving the jury to determine whether or not the answer denies the allegations of the complaint is erroneous: the construction of pleadings is for the court (Taylor v. Middleton, 67 Cal. 656; 8 Pac. 594); and an instruction submitting to the jury the question as to what facts were admitted by the pleadings is properly refused. Tevis v. Hicks, 41 Cal. 123; Taylor v. Middleton, 67 Cal. 656; 8 Pac. 594.

Instructions bind jury. The jury are bound by the instructions, whether correct or not (Loveland v. Gardner, 79 Cal. 317; 4 L. R. A. 395; 21 Pac. 766; Emerson v. Santa Clara County, 40 Cal. 543; Sappenfield v. Main Street etc. R. R. Co., 91 Cal. 48; 27 Pac. 590); and the instructions are the law of the case, so far as the jurors are concerned. Lind v. Closs, 88 Cal. 6; 25 Pac. 972.

Should not be on facts. An instruction on a question of fact is properly refused (Estrella Vineyard Co. v. Butler, 125 Cal. 232; 57 Pac. 980); but an instruction as to "alleged defects," not constituting an instruction on a matter of fact, is not erroneous (Anderson v. Seropian, 147 Cal. 201; 81 Pac. 521); and an instruction on the facts is not erroneous, where there is no conflict in the evidence as to the facts referred to. Watson v. Damon, 54 Cal. 278. An instruction as to the form of a verdict is not an instruction on a matter of fact, where no question was raised either in the pleadings or at the trial as to the existence of such fact. Feliz v. Feliz, 105 Cal. 1; 38 Pac. 521. Judges are prohibited by the constitution from charging juries as to the facts; hence, it is improper for the court, in its instructions, to select the testimony of particular witnesses as entitled to special weight or consideration. Huyck v. Rennie, 151 Cal. 411; 90 Pac. 929. An instruction as to the force or effect of evidence on the question of fraudulent intent, which is made a question of fact, is erroneous (Miller v. Stewart, 24 Cal. 502); but an instruction, merely stating the claim of the plaintiff as to the facts, and not stating the facts as being proved, does not invade the province of the jury (Jarman v. Rea, 137 Cal. 339; 70 Pac. 216; Carraher v. San Francisco Bridge Co., 81 Cal. 98; 22 Pac. 480); but merely applying the law to hypothetical facts, and submitting to the jury the question whether the facts hypothetically stated are true, is not an instruction on a question of fact. Baddeley v. Shea, 114 Cal. 1; 55 Am. St. Rep. 56; 33 L. R. A. 749; 45 Pac. 990. An instruction stating facts hypothetically, which are within the issues, and instructing the jury to find for the plaintiff or for the defendant, according as they may find by a preponderance of evidence, whether such facts are proved or not, does not invade the province of the jury as to matters of fact. Ryan v. Los Angeles Ice etc. Co., 112 Cal. 244; 32 L. R. A. 524; 44 Pac. 471. A statement in an instruction, that the evidence tends to prove a matter in issue, is not erroneous. Morris v. Lachman, 68 Cal. 109; 8 Pac. 799; and see People v. Vasquez, 49 Cal. 560; People v. Perry, 65 Cal. 568; 4 Pac. 572. An instruction taking from the jury the principal issue of fact in the case is erroneous (Levitzky v. Canning, 33 Cal. 299; People v. King, 27 Cal. 507; 87 Am. Dec. 95; Perkins v. Eckert, 55 Cal. 400): it is only where the fact is admitted, or there is no shadow of conflict in the evidence with respect thereto, that the court is justified in taking it from the jury. Dean v. Ross, 105 Cal. 227; 38 Pac. 912; People v. Phillips, 70 Cal. 61; 11 Pac. 493. Reference, in an instruction, to matters on which there is no evidence, is not erroneous, where the instruction does not assume the existence of such fact, and the statement does not tend to prejudice the defendant. Bosqui v. Sutro R. R. Co., 131 Cal. 390; 63 Pac. 682. An instruction as to an account stated between the parties is properly refused, where the plaintiff did not consent to the account rendered by the defendant. Ah Tong v. Earle Fruit Co., 112 Cal. 679; 45 Pac. 7. An instruction, that if the jury are satisfied that defendant's testimony is true, they shall render a verdict in his favor, and if not, they shall find for such damages as they may think proper to allow, leaves it sufficiently plain to the jury that they are the exclusive judges of the facts. Gately v. Campbell, 124 Cal. 520; 57 Pac. 567; Jones v. Chalfant, 3 Cal. Unrep. 585; 31 Pac. 257. An instruction, that the mere slipping of the wheels of a vehicle on a wet street-car track, resulting from an attempt to avoid a collision, would not conclusively, or as matter of law, repel the imputation of negligence, is not erroneous, where there is evidence to sustain the action. Roche v. Redington, 125 Cal. 174; 57 Pac. 890. The burden of proving contributory negligence is cast upon the defendant, and such negligence is a question of fact for the jury. Foley v. Northern California Power Co., 14 Cal. App. 401; 112 Pac. 467. Where death resulted from attempting to remove a broken electric wire, in an action for negligence the determination of the knowledge of danger on the part of the deceased is for the jury, without any direction from the court unfavorable to the plaintiff. Foley v. Northern California Power Co., 14 Cal. App. 401; 112 Pac. 467. In an action for injuries received while alighting from a train, an instruction, based on the injured passenger's knowledge of the premises, and her assumption of risk notwithstanding the defendant's negligence in not lighting the premises, is properly disallowed. Teale v. Southern Pacific Co., 20 Cal. App. 570; 129 Pac. 949. It is correct to instruct the jury, that a servant assumes all of the ordinary risks of the business in which he is employed, but does not assume the risk of defective premises, machinery, or structures furnished by the master, if the defect was either known to the master, or could have been discovered by the master by a reasonably careful inspection. Hayes v. Western Fuel Co., 19 Cal. App. 634; 127 Pac. 518. Without proper evidence, it is a palpable invasion of the province of the jury to ask a witness whether a certain act is within the scope of an agent's authority. Waniorek v. United Railroads, 17 Cal. App. 121; 118 Pac. 947.

Should not comment on rights of parties. An instruction that the plaintiff is entitled to no sympathy from the jury, where they were told that the rights of the parties were to be determined by the strict rules of law, is properly refused. Parker v. Otis, 130 Cal. 322; 92 Am. St. Rep. 56; 62 Pac. 571, 927.

May caution jury. It is within the discretion of the court to give an instruction cautioning against the undue influence of sympathy. Spear v. United Railroads, 16 Cal. App. 637; 117 Pac. 956.

May name witness. Mentioning the names of witnesses in the instructions is not prejudicial, where there were no others than those named, and their evidence was not contradicted. Dyas v. Southern Pacific Co., 140 Cal. 296; 73 Pac. 972.

Must not assume facts when. An instruction assuming as true a fact, in regard to which there is no conflict in the evidence, is not erroneous (Watson v. Damon, 54 Cal. 278); nor is an instruction stating merely the law applicable to the facts proved, and not taking from the jury the question as to whether or not an act was done (Low v. Warden, 77 Cal. 94; 19 Pac. 235); but an instruction assuming a fact, as to which the evidence was conflicting, is erroneous, as invading the province of the jury (Preston v. Keys, 23 Cal. 193; Caldwell v. Center, 30 Cal. 539; 89 Am. Dec. 131; Crawford v. Roberts, 50 Cal. 235; Vulicevich v. Skinner, 77 Cal. 239; 19 Pac. 424; Dean v. Ross, 105 Cal. 227; 38 Pac. 912; Williams v. Casebeer, 126 Cal. 77; 58 Pac. 380; Roche v. Baldwin, 135 Cal. 522; 65 Pac. 459; 67 Pac. 903; Estate of Keegan, 139 Cal. 123; 72 Pac. 828; Manning v. App Consol. Gold Mining Co., 149 Cal. 35; 84 Pac. 657); as is also an instruction assuming a fact to be true, and then submitting to the jury the question whether or not such fact is true (Cahoon v. Marshall, 25 Cal. 197); and an instruction assuming a fact favorable to a party cannot be complained of by him. Hill v. Finigan, 77 Cal. 267; 11 Am. St. Rep. 279; 19 Pac. 494. An instruction assuming a fact which is not productive of injury is not erroneous (Bradley v. Lee, 38 Cal. 362); nor, where there is no conflict in the evidence as to a fact, is an instruction assuming such fact. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257; 46 Am. St. Rep. 237; 39 Pac. 610. An instruction involving an uncontradicted fact, though erroneous, is not prejudicial. Courteney v. Standard Box Co., 16 Cal. App. 600; 117 Pac. 778.

Must be applicable to the facts. Requested instructions, inapplicable to any evidence adduced in the case, are properly refused. Courteney v. Standard Box Co., 16 Cal. App. 600; 117 Pac. 778; Shaw v. Shaw, 160 Cal. 733; 117 Pac. 1048. If there is some evidence in the case, upon which an instruction relative to contributory negligence might be based, it is error to refuse it. Spear v. United Railroads, 16 Cal. App. 637; 117 Pac. 956. Refusal to give correct and pertinent instructions asked is error (Sukeforth v. Lord, 87 Cal. 399; 25 Pac. 497; Mabb v. Stewart, 133 Cal. 556); but a refusal to give an instruction, purporting to be a statement of what the plaintiff alleged in the complaint, and what the defendant denied, is not error, where such facts had been correctly stated to the jury by counsel. Cody v. Market Street Ry. Co., 148 Cal. 90; 82 Pac. 666. Instructions are sufficient, if they lay down the correct rule of law applicable to the facts of the case (Peters v. Southern Pacific Co., 160 Cal. 48; 116 Pac. 400; Kearney v. Bell, 160 Cal. 661; 117 Pac. 925; Lonnergan v. Stansbury, 164 Cal. 488; 129 Pac. 770); but an instruction on a point not in issue should not be given. Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 351; Conlin v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 36 Cal. 404; Marriner v. Dennison, 78 Cal. 202; 20 Pac. 386; Stevens v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 100 Cal. 554; 35 Pac. 165; Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257; 46 Am. St. Rep. 237; 39 Pac. 610; Nofsinger v. Goldman, 122 Cal. 609; 55 Pac. 425; Wahlgren v. Market Street Ry. Co., 132 Cal. 656; 62 Pac. 308; 64 Pac. 993; Cahill v. Baird, 138 Cal. 691; 72 Pac. 342; Silva v. Bair, 141 Cal. 599; 75 Pac. 162. It is error to refuse an instruction that is a correct statement of the law, and applicable to the case as presented by the pleadings and the evidence. Hart v. Buckley, 164 Cal. 160; 128 Pac. 29. Each party is entitled to instructions applicable to his theory of the case and the testimony of his witnesses (Renton v. Monnier, 77 Cal. 449; 19 Pac. 820; Hunt v. Elliott, 77 Cal. 588; 20 Pac. 132; Davis v. Russell, 52 Cal. 611; 28 Am. Rep. 647; Buckley v. Silverberg, 113 Cal. 673; 45 Pac. 804; Eppinger v. Kendrick, 114 Cal. 620; 46 Pac. 613; Waniorek v. United Railroads, 17 Cal. App. 121; 118 Pac. 947); and the judgment will not be reversed because the evidence is insufficient to justify the verdict upon that theory, if, upon other facts, the verdict is correct. Buckley v. Silverberg, 113 Cal. 673; 45 Pac. 804. The refusal of instructions permitting the jury to find for a greater sum than that demanded in the complaint is proper, where an amendment of the complaint was conditionally granted, and the plaintiff refused to comply with the condition. Wise v. Wakefield, 118 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 310.

Should cover issues. Instructions should not be numerous, and those given should be as simple and plain as possible, and cover the issues, so that the jury may fully understand them. Estate of Keithley, 134 Cal. 9; 66 Pac. 5. In an equity case, a refusal to give instructions is not cause for reversal, where the court finds on all the issues submitted to the jury. Hewlett v. Pilcher, 85 Cal. 542; 24 Pac. 781; Riley v. Martinelli, 97 Cal. 575; 33 Am. St. Rep. 209; 21 L. R. A. 33; 32 Pac. 579; and see Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 353.

Should be concrete, and not abstract. An instruction on an abstract principle, as to which there is no evidence, is erroneous, as tending to mislead the jury. People v. Jaurez, 28 Cal. 389; Tompkins v. Mahoney, 32 Cal. 231; Mecham v. McKay, 37 Cal. 154; Bowers v. Cherokee Bob, 45 Cal. 495; Hanks v. Naglee, 54 Cal. 51; 35 Am. Rep. 67; Estate of Holbert, 57 Cal. 257; Comptoir D'Escompte v. Dresbach, 78 Cal. 15; 20 Pac. 28; Estate of Carpenter, 94 Cal. 406; 29 Pac. 1101; Estate of Calkins, 112 Cal. 296; 44 Pac. 577; Nofsinger v. Goldman, 122 Cal. 609; 55 Pac. 425; Tompkins v. Montgomery, 123 Cal. 219; 55 Pac. 997; Gately v. Campbell, 124 Cal. 520; 57 Pac. 567; Thomas v. Gates, 126 Cal. 1; 58 Pac. 315; Lemasters v. Southern Pacific Co., 131 Cal. 105; 63 Pac. 128; Cahill v. Baird, 138 Cal. 691; 72 Pac. 342; Estate of Keegan, 139 Cal. 123; 72 Pac. 828; Jones v. Goldtree, 142 Cal. 383; 77 Pac. 939; Meyer v. Foster, 147 Cal. 166; 81 Pac. 402; Ward Land etc. Co. v. Mapes, 147 Cal. 747; 82 Pac. 426. An instruction as to the policy of the law in reference to any particular question, is properly refused (Ward Land etc. Co. v. Mapes, 147 Cal. 747; 82 Pac. 426); as are also instructions enunciating the doctrine of caveat emptor, inapplicable to the case. Merguire v. O'Donnell, 103 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 1033.

Should not be argumentative. Argumentative instructions are improper (Morris v. Lachman, 68 Cal. 109; 8 Pac. 799; Mabb v. Stewart, 133 Cal. 556; 65 Pac. 1085; and see People v. McNamara, 94 Cal. 509; 29 Pac. 953; People v. Vereneseneckockockhoff, 129 Cal. 497; 58 Pac. 156); but where they are not prejudicial to the appellant's rights, they will not be held erroneous. People v. Stanton, 106 Cal. 138; 39 Pac. 525.

Inconsistent or contradictory instructions. Contradictory and inconsistent instructions are erroneous (McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 246; Bank of Stockton v. Bliven, 53 Cal. 708; Harrison v. Spring Valley Hydraulic Gold Co., 65 Cal. 376; 4 Pac. 381; Haight v. Vallet, 89 Cal. 245; 23 Am. St. Rep. 465; 26 Pac. 897); and cannot be harmonized by the declaration of the court that one instruction means the same thing as the other. Harrison v. Spring Valley Hydraulic Gold Co., 65 Cal. 376; 4 Pac. 381. Errors in giving instructions, and in refusing instructions which correctly state the law, are not cured by contradictory and confusing statements of the court in its oral charge. Vallens v. Tillman, 103 Cal. 187; 37 Pac. 213. Error in one of two contradictory instructions is not cured by the other instruction: it is impossible to determine on which instruction the jury acted. Chidester v. Consolidated People's Ditch Co., 53 Cal. 56; Sappenfield v. Main Street etc. R. R. Co., 91 Cal. 48; 27 Pac. 590. Where the instructions on a material point are contradictory, it is impossible for the jury to decide which should prevail, and equally impossible to know that they were not influenced by the erroneous instruction. Brown v. McAllister, 39 Cal. 573; Aguirre v. Alexander, 58 Cal. 21; Sappenfield v. Main Street etc. R. R. Co., 91 Cal. 48; 27 Pac. 590. The fact that contradictory instructions were given at the request of the appellant is not material. Wall v. Marshutz, 138 Cal. 522; 71 Pac. 692; and see Williams v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 110 Cal. 457; 42 Pac. 974. Inconsistent instructions that cannot mislead the jury, and that are not so contradictory but that the jury can know by which instruction they should be guided, do not constitute prejudicial error. James v. E. G. Lyons Co., 147 Cal. 69; 81 Pac. 275. An instruction, that it is the duty of the railroad company to maintain sufficient light at its stations, is not in conflict with an instruction that it is its duty to keep the station properly lighted. Teale v. Southern Pacific Co., 20 Cal. App. 570; 129 Pac. 949.

Misleading instructions. It is not error to refuse an instruction which cannot aid the jury, and which might mislead them. Estrella Vineyard Co. v. Butler, 125 Cal. 232; 57 Pac. 980. The test is, not whether it is erroneous, but whether it is misleading. Briggs v. Hall, 20 Cal. App. 372; 129 Pac. 288. Irrelevant instructions are not necessarily erroneous, unless they tend to mislead the jury. George v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 126 Cal. 357; 77 Am. St. Rep. 184; 46 L. R. A. 829; 58 Pac. 819. A misleading and erroneous instruction is properly refused (Low v. Warden, 77 Cal. 94; 19 Pac. 235); and an instruction as to warranty, where the evidence shows a much broader and more particular warranty, and the granting of it would confuse and mislead the jury by diverting their attention from the other evidence in the case, is also properly refused. Fox v. Stockton etc. Agricultural Works, 83 Cal. 333; 23 Pac. 295. The use of the word "plaintiff," instead of "decedent," in an instruction, which could not mislead the jury, is not reversible error (O'Callaghan v. Bode, 84 Cal. 489; 24 Pac. 269); neither is the use of the word "testimony," instead of "evidence." Mann v. Higgins, 83 Cal. 66; 23 Pac. 206.

Modification of instructions. The modification of instructions, so as to state the law correctly, is proper. Nichol v. Laumeister, 102 Cal. 658; 36 Pac. 925; Boyce v. California Stage Co., 25 Cal. 460; King v. Davis, 34 Cal. 100. The modification of an instruction, requested by the defendant, cannot be objected to by him, where the instruction itself is not proper (Harrington v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 140 Cal. 514; 98 Am. St. Rep. 85; 63 L. R. A. 238; 74 Pac. 15); and the modification of an instruction, by striking out the phrase, "and from your general knowledge," after the dependent clause, "If you find from the evidence," is not error: the jury take into consideration their knowledge, whether instructed to do so or not. Baker v. Borello, 136 Cal. 160; 68 Pac. 591; Beveridge v. Lewis, 137 Cal. 619; 92 Am. St. Rep. 188; 59 L. R. A. 581; 67 Pac. 1040; 70 Pac. 1083; and see Cederberg v. Robison, 100 Cal. 93; 34 Pac. 625; Butler v. Ashworth, 102 Cal. 663; 36 Pac. 922. It is not material that the instruction given is not in as accurate and precise language as that asked, where it is substantially the same. Kahn v. Triest-Rosenberg Cap Co., 139 Cal. 340; 73 Pac. 164. An instruction which could not be given without modification is properly refused. Garlick v. Bowers, 66 Cal. 122; 4 Pac. 1138.

Need not be repeated. An instruction is properly refused, where, so far as it is correct, it is fully covered by other instructions. Hayes v. Western Fuel Co., 19 Cal. App. 634; 127 Pac. 518; Ward Land etc. Co. v. Mapes, 147 Cal. 747; 82 Pac. 426; People v. Sampo, 17 Cal. App. 135; 118 Pac. 957. Refusal to use the precise language of a requested instruction is not error, where the law is substantially given in the charge of the court. Clark v. Bennett, 123 Cal. 275; 55 Pac. 908; Cook v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 134 Cal. 279; 66 Pac. 306. An error in refusing to give an instruction is cured, where the same ground is covered in an instruction subsequently given. Manning v. Dallas, 73 Cal. 420; 15 Pac. 34. There is no prejudicial error in refusing instructions that have been substantially embodied in the charge given, or that have been rendered immaterial by the special findings of the jury to the contrary, or that call for the erroneous assumption of facts. O'Connell v. United Railroads, 19 Cal. App. 36; 124 Pac. 1022. Where part of the instructions clearly informed the jury that carelessness or unskillfulness must have attended all the alleged acts of the defendant in order to make him liable, there is no necessity of repeating this matter in every part. Mervin v. Cory, 145 Cal. 573; 79 Pac. 174. Failure to give further or more explicit instructions is not error, unless they were requested, where those given substantially cover the particular point involved. Rice v. Whitmore, 74 Cal. 619; 5 Am. St. Rep. 479; 16 Pac. 501; Nichol v. Laumeister, 102 Cal. 658; 36 Pac. 925.

Erroneous instruction refused. An instruction, erroneous in part, is properly refused. Marriner v. Dennison, 78 Cal. 202; 20 Pac. 386; Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476; Preston v. Keys, 23 Cal. 194; Williams v. Casebeer, 126 Cal. 77; 58 Pac. 380.

Must be construed as a whole. Instructions must be construed together. Peters v. Southern Pacific Co., 160 Cal. 48; 116 Pac. 400; Kearney v. Bell, 160 Cal. 661; 117 Pac. 925; Lonnergan v. Stansbury, 164 Cal. 488; 129 Pac. 770. They are to be read and taken as a whole; they are not necessarily erroneous because, taken separately, some of them may fail to enunciate propositions of law in precise terms and with legal accuracy; and they are sufficient if they give the jury a fair and just notion of the law upon the point discussed (Stephenson v. Southern Pacific Co., 102 Cal. 143; 34 Pac. 618; 36 Pac. 407; People v. McDowell, 64 Cal. 467; 3 Pac. 124; People v. Turcott, 65 Cal. 126; 3 Pac. 461; Davis v. Button, 78 Cal. 247; 18 Pac. 133; 20 Pac. 545; People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 317; 20 Pac. 719; Monaghan v. Pacific Rolling Mill Co., 81 Cal. 190; 22 Pac. 590; Murray v. White, 82 Cal. 119; 23 Pac. 35; Doty v. O'Neil, 95 Cal. 244; 30 Pac. 526; Hanscom v. Drullard, 79 Cal. 234; 21 Pac. 736; Nichol v. Laumeister, 102 Cal. 658; 36 Pac. 925; People v. Anderson, 105 Cal. 32; 38 Pac. 513); and if the law is correctly stated as applicable to the case, the jury will be deemed to have given full consideration to each and every proposition of law laid before them (Feliz v. Feliz, 105 Cal. 1; 38 Pac. 521); and a judgment will not be reversed, simply because particular instructions, taken alone, may not embody all the law applicable. Anderson v. Seropian, 147 Cal. 201; 81 Pac. 521; People v. Jackson, 138 Cal. 462; 71 Pac. 566. Instructions which, taken in connection with other instructions given, could not have misled the jury, will not be held erroneous on appeal. Thomas v. Gates, 126 Cal. 1; 58 Pac. 315; Wilson v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 62 Cal. 164. Where the jury, taking the instructions as a whole, must have understood the words "safe and suitable" as meaning "reasonably safe and suitable," an instruction that an employer is bound to furnish "safe and suitable" appliances is not erroneous. Wall v. Marshutz, 138 Cal. 522; 71 Pac. 692. The omission of the word "preponderance," in an instruction, in a single instance, is not erroneous, where the law relating to burden of proof was repeatedly called to the attention of the jury (Humphrey v. Pope, 1 Cal. App. 374; 83 Pac. 223; People v. Moriue, 61 Cal. 372); nor is an instruction as to admissions in the pleadings erroneous. Dyas v. Southern Pacific Co., 140 Cal. 296; 73 Pac. 972. Where a party asks an instruction on an abstract proposition, he must take the risk of its being correct in all its parts; and where there is no testimony as to part of the facts on which the instruction was predicated, its refusal is not error. Thompson v. Paige, 16 Cal. 77. Where all the instructions, taken together, correctly give the law on the subject, a party objecting is not prejudiced by a verbose instruction. Estate of Black, 132 Cal. 392; 64 Pac. 695.

When court may direct verdict. Where there is no conflict in the evidence, the court may properly direct a verdict (Martin v. Ward, 69. Cal. 129; 10 Pac. 276; Chenery v. Palmer, 6 Cal. 122; 65 Am. Dec. 493; Page v. Tucker, 54 Cal. 121); otherwise it can instruct only as to the law. Estate of Everts, 163 Cal. 449; 125 Pac. 1058. The direction of a verdict is justified, not merely where there is no conflict in the evidence, but also where the evidence is such that it is clearly insufficient to support a verdict in favor of the party against whom the direction is given, unless the circumstances of the case indicate that upon another trial the evidence may be materially different. Lacey v. Porter, 103 Cal. 597; 37 Pac. 635. It is proper for the court, after the plaintiff's evidence is closed, to direct a verdict for the defendant, where the evidence would be insufficient to sustain a verdict for the plaintiff, if found. Champion Gold Mining Co. v. Champion Mines, 164 Cal. 205; 128 Pac. 315. The correctness of the direction of a verdict depends on whether there is any evidence which would authorize a different verdict; and if there is any conflict in the evidence, or if different inferences of fact may be drawn from the evidence, it is the function of the jury to determine the issue; but if, upon all the evidence, only one conclusion or finding can be made, it is immaterial whether the jury make that conclusion or finding by direction of the court or upon their own deliberation. Los Angeles Farming etc. Co. v. Thompson, 117 Cal. 594; 49 Pac. 714; and see Levitzky v. Canning, 33 Cal. 299; O'Connor v. Witherby, 111 Cal. 523; 44 Pac. 227; Wilson v. Alcatraz Asphalt Co., 142 Cal. 182; 75 Pac. 787. An instruction, that if the jury think there is some evidence in favor of the plaintiff's side of the case, whether little or great, it is their duty to find in his favor, is not proper in any conceivable case. Bunting v. Saltz, 84 Cal. 168; 24 Pac. 167. An instruction asking for a verdict on one matter, and entirely ignoring other considerations and facts in the case, is properly refused. Anderson v. Seropian, 147 Cal. 204; 81 Pac. 521. An instruction directing the jury to find for the plaintiff, without considering the defense of the statute of limitations set up in the answer, and to support which evidence was introduced, is erroneous (Heilbron v. Heinlen, 72 Cal. 371; 14 Pac. 22); as is also an instruction authorizing the jury to find a verdict for less than the amount as fixed by the admissions in the pleadings. Sukeforth v. Lord, 87 Cal. 399; 26 Pac. 497. An instruction to the jury, that the admitted facts shall be taken by them as true, and that they shall so find for the plaintiff, is not an instruction to find in favor of the plaintiff, except as to the facts so admitted. Blood v. Light, 31 Cal. 115.

Propriety of instruction referring jury to pleadings to determine issues. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 227.

Effect of request by both parties for direction of verdict. See note Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1342.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Instructions upon abstract propositions. If the court refuse to instruct the jury upon a point in relation to which there is no evidence, it is not error. Tompkins v. Mahoney, 32 Cal. 231; Conlin v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 36 Cal. 404; Mecham v. McKay, 37 Cal. 155. An instruction may be sound as an abstract proposition of law, yet have no application to the facts of the case, as disclosed by the evidence. In such an event the court may, and properly should, refuse the instruction. No instruction should ever be given, unless there is some evidence before the jury to which it is applicable upon some rational theory of the case logically deducible from such evidence. People v. Best, 39 Cal. 691; People v. McCauley, 1 Cal. 385; People v. Roberts 6 Cal. 217; People v. Arnold, 15 Cal. 482; People v. Sanchez, 24 Cal. 28; People v. King, 27 Cal. 514; 87 Am. Dec. 95; People v. Burns, 30 Cal. 207; People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 284; Fairchild v. California Stage Co., 13 Cal. 599; Thompson v. Paige, 16 Cal. 77; Fowler v. Smith, 2 Cal. 39; Benham v. Rowe, 2 Cal. 387; 56 Am. Dec. 342; Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 353. Where no question of jurisdiction of the court over the action is raised by the pleadings, it is error to instruct the jury, "that, if they believe a certain fact, they must find for the defendant, as the existence of that fact will establish a want of jurisdiction over the case," because, upon the pleadings, such a verdict would bar another action, if rendered against plaintiff in pursuance of such an instruction. Fairbanks v. Woodhouse, 6 Cal. 433. It is not error to refuse an instruction not warranted by the pleadings (Thompson v. Lee, 8 Cal. 275); nor when there is no evidence on the question of fact embraced in the instruction (People v. Hurley, 8 Cal. 390); nor when there is only such evidence as is plainly insufficient to establish it (Selden v. Cashman, 20 Cal. 56; 81 Am. Dec. 93); nor which assumes a fact to exist respecting which evidence has been introduced (Preston v. Keys, 23 Cal. 193); nor which embraces a question which comes properly before the court, and not before the jury (Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 353); nor when an instruction is erroneous on its face, even though the error would be insufficient to reverse the judgment. Visher v. Webster, 13 Cal. 58.

2. Instructions upon questions of fact. The jury are the judges of the facts, and it is error for the court to assume, in its instructions to the jury, that a certain fact exists, and then submit to them the question whether or not it does exist. Cahoon v. Marshall, 25 Cal. 198; Caldwell v. Center, 30 Cal. 539; 89 Am. Dec. 131. If the court, in an instruction, assumes the existence of a fact, (and the assumption in the condition of the case could not be productive of injury), the judgment, for this reason, will not be reversed. Bradley v. Lee, 38 Cal. 366. The right to "state the testimony" does not authorize an expression of opinion by the court. Seligman v. Kalkman, 8 Cal. 216; Battersby v. Abbott, 9 Cal. 565; Pico v. Stevens, 18 Cal. 376; People v. Dick, 32 Cal. 213; Treadwell v. Wells Fargo & Co., 4 Cal. 260. But if the answer admits the facts stated in the complaint, the court may direct the jury to find for plaintiff. Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123; Blood v. Light, 31 Cal. 115.

3. What should not be left to jury. It is error for the court to submit to a jury the question of the legal effect of written documents in evidence. Carpentier v. Thirston, 24 Cal. 268; Luckhart v. Ogden, 30 Cal. 548. If a contract is to be performed within a reasonable time, the question, "What is a reasonable time?" is one of law, and must be determined by the court. Luckhart v. Ogden, 30 Cal. 548.

4. Conflicting instructions. Where instructions on a material point are contradictory, it is impossible for the jury to decide which should prevail, and it is equally impossible, after the verdict, to know that the jury was not influenced by that instruction which was erroneous, as the one or the other must necessarily be, where the two are repugnant. In every such case the verdict must be set aside. Brown v. McAllister, 39 Cal. 577; Clark v. McElvy, 11 Cal. 161; Yonge v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 1 Cal. 354; People v. Campbell, 30 Cal. 312. It seldom occurs that a single instruction, given for the purpose of presenting the law upon a point arising upon more than one fact, contains all the qualifications and provisos that would be necessary if no other instructions were given; but it is always intended that such instruction shall be read together with the other instructions upon the same point, or those involving a consideration of the same facts. Bradley v. Lee, 38 Cal. 365. Instructions will be construed with reference to the evidence. Brumagim v. Bradshaw, 39 Cal. 24.

5. Instructions substantially given. If the court has already properly instructed the jury upon a given point, it is not error to refuse another instruction upon the same point. Belden v. Henriques, 8 Cal. 87; Davis v. Perley, 30 Cal. 630; People v. King, 27 Cal. 509, 87 Am. Dec. 35; People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280. But the reasons for the refusal should be stated, so that the jury may not be misled. People v. Ramirez, 13 Cal. 172; People v. Hurley, 8 Cal. 390.

6. Instructions substantially correct. If the instructions, taken as a whole, fairly submit the case to the jury, the verdict will not be disturbed because some instructions were refused which could properly have been given, or that some of those given are subject to verbal criticism. Brooks v. Crosby, 22 Cal. 42.

7. Time at which instructions are requested. A rule of court which requires counsel to file and submit to the court any instructions they may offer, before the argument is closed, does not operate where the cause is submitted without argument. Tinney v. Endicott, 5 Cal. 102. If there is a rule of court requiring instructions to be handed to the judge by a certain time in the progress of the trial, it is not error to refuse to give instructions not handed to the judge in time. Waldic v. Doll, 29 Cal. 556.

8. Instructions in particular actions. Account stated. In an action on an account stated, where the only evidence was that of a witness, who testified that defendant, on presentation of the account, admitted it to be correct, and promised to pay it, and the court charged the jury that, if they believed the testimony of the witness, they must find for the plaintiff the amount claimed, and they so found, it was held, that the instruction did not prejudice defendant, as but one verdict could have been rendered under the evidence. Terry v. Sickles, 13 Cal. 427.

By or against administrators. In an action by an administrator against defendant, for conversion of the property of the estate, under § 116 of the statute to regulate the settlement of estates, the proof, as to the right or title or possession of plaintiff, and the taking or interference by defendant, being conflicting, it is error to instruct the jury that a mere demand on the defendant, and refusal by him to surrender the property, is sufficient to charge him with a conversion. Beckman v. McKay, 14 Cal. 250. In an action against an administrator, the court must, if requested, charge the jury as to the statute time within which the action could be brought when the claim is rejected. Benedict v. Hoggin, 2 Cal. 385.

Contract. In an action on a contract of sale of cattle, to be delivered within "three weeks, at the furthest," the consideration-money being paid, complaint, with the common counts, averred the breach of the agreement by failure to deliver the cattle. It was held, that it was not error in the court below instructing the jury, that if defendant did not have the cattle ready for delivery at the time mentioned in the contract, they should find for plaintiff; and in assessing damages, they might find the purchase-money, with ten per cent interest, or the highest market price of the cattle to the time of trial. Maher v. Riley, 17 Cal. 415. Where the vendee of goods is to pay a part of the purchase-money to the creditors of his vendor, this creates no trust in goods sold in favor of such creditors; for this reason, in an action to recover such goods, the following instruction to the jury is improper: "If the jury believe from the testimony that the agreement between Stevens and Markling, the vendors of the plaintiff, was that the plaintiff was to pay certain of the debts of his vendors out of said goods, then that such sale, as against the other creditors of the vendors, is fraudulent." Wellington v. Sedgwick, 12 Cal. 469. Where defendants were sued as factors, and no claims for commissions, etc., were set out as a counterclaim, it was held error for the court to instruct the jury that it was for them exclusively to say what amount the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and that the defendants were liable for the value of the goods at the time of demand. Lubert v. Chauviteau, 3 Cal. 463; 58 Am. Dec. 415. In an action on guaranty, it is error, in terms, to charge the jury if they find for the plaintiff, to assess as damages the amount of the penalty fixed in the guaranty, yet if the plaintiff's damages, if any, must, in any event, exceed the penalty, the direction must be regarded as limiting the verdict, and the defendant is not injured by the instruction. Jones v. Post, 6 Cal. 102.

Ejectment. In ejectment for land claimed as a homestead, where the husband alone had executed a deed to defendant, there was evidence tending to show that the premises were never occupied by plaintiffs with the intention of making them the homestead, and also evidence tending to prove an abandonment of their occupancy, and a residence on other property as that of the family. The court below submitted a series of questions to the jury for a special verdict, the first of which was: "Did the plaintiffs ever dedicate and set apart the real estate described in the complaint as a homestead, by living upon it with the intention to so dedicate it?" and told the jury if they answered this question in the negative, the answer would constitute their entire verdict; but if they found in the affirmative, they should then proceed to answer the other questions. On appeal, it was held that such direction was proper, as a negative answer to this question was conclusive against a recovery, and that such directions are convenient in practice, and no abuse of discretion. Broadus v. Nelson, 16 Cal. 79. Where plaintiff asked the court to instruct the jury, "that lapse of time does not constitute an abandonment, but that it consists in a voluntary surrender and giving up of the thing by the owner, because he no longer desires to possess it, or thereafter to assert any right or dominion over it"; and the instruction was given with the qualification that lapse of time constitutes the material element in the question of abandonment. It was held that, though it would be more exact to say that lapse of time constitutes a material element to be considered in deciding the question of abandonment, but that the instruction given and the qualification are, taken in connection, the same in effect. Lawrence v. Fulton, 19 Cal. 683. The court having admitted in evidence, as sufficiently proven, the mesne conveyances through which plaintiff traced title, the defendants being mere trespassers, charged the jury "that the written evidence of title, together with the admissions of the parties, authorized them to find for the plaintiff, since the execution of the papers had been passed upon by the court." It was held, that it was no objection to this instruction, that it did not leave the execution and delivery of the conveyances to the jury; that the sufficiency of their execution was a matter addressed solely to the court, and that, no question being raised during the trial as to their delivery, and no evidence being offered to rebut the presumption of delivery arising from their possession by plaintiff, the instruction amounted only to an announcement of the law as to the effect of the conveyances and of the admissions of the defendants. Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361.

It is error for the court to instruct the jury, that plaintiff cannot recover, unless from the evidence the jury can specifically fix and establish the eastern boundary line of the grant under which plaintiff claimed, when it appears from the evidence that the land in controversy is within that boundary line. Seaward v. Malotte, 15 Cal. 307. Where the defendants deny the title of plaintiff, and set up ownership in themselves, it is not error to instruct the jury that the only question for them to determine is as to who has the better right to the premises. Such instruction does not imply that plaintiffs can recover, even if they do not establish, prima facie, a title. Busenius v. Coffee, 14 Cal. 91. In ejectment, where the title is of record and wholly documentary, the clerk may declare the effect of the papers given in evidence. McGarvey v. Little, 15 Cal. 27. In an action for a portion of a tract of land, both parties relying on possession, and the defendant proving a prior possession by actual inclosure of the entire tract, held, it was error to instruct the jury that the defendant's possession was not valid, unless in conformity with the pre-emption laws of the United States, or the possessory laws of this state. Bradshaw v. Treat, 6 Cal. 172. When a private survey is admitted as a diagram, but not as evidence, it is the duty of the court to clearly explain to the jury the purpose and effect of its admission. Rose v. Davis, 11 Cal. 133. An instruction that they must take the grant and map together, and if they believe the land in controversy within the grant, as explained by the map, they will find for the plaintiff. Held to be correct. Ferris v. Coover, 10 Cal. 589.

Fraud. In an action where one of the issues raised is a question of fraudulent intent in the sale or disposition of property, the fraudulent intent is a question of fact alone, to be left solely to the determination of the jury, and in such cases it is error for the court to instruct the jury as to the effect or force of the evidence upon that question; or to instruct a jury that if they have a doubt of the guilt of the party charged with the fraud they must find in his favor. Issues of fact in civil cases are determined by a preponderance of testimony, and this rule applies as well to cases of fraud as to any other. Ford v. Chambers, 19 Cal. 143. Upon the issue of fraud, in an application of an insolvent to be discharged from his debts, where it was alleged that the applicant had made and recorded a sham deed of his property before his application, and had omitted the deed from his schedule. Held, that it was error to instruct the jury, "that, to find the charge of fraud sustained, they must believe the deed made with the intent to defeat, hinder, or delay creditors, to have been actually delivered to the grantees; that proof of record was no proof of delivery," etc., the fraud being as complete without the delivery as with it. Fisk v. His Creditors, 12 Cal. 281. If there is no dispute as to the facts, and the law declares a transaction fraudulent, it is not a question for the jury. The court in such case may direct the jury how to find, or set aside the verdict if they find to the contrary. Chenery v. Palmer, 6 Cal. 119; 65 Am. Dec. 493; McDaniel v. Baca, 2 Cal. 326; 56 Am. Dec. 339.

Malpractice. In an action against surgeons "for malpractice, by which amputation became necessary," the court charged the jury "that if they believed from the evidence that the defendants were guilty of negligence, carelessness, or inattention in their treatment of plaintiff's wounds, by which he was caused great bodily pain and suffering, the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict." The instruction was held erroneous, because the action was not founded upon "bodily pain or suffering." Moor v. Teed, 3 Cal. 190.

Mining claims. In an action for a mining claim, where the defense is an abandonment of the claim by the plaintiff, the judgment roll in action brought by the plaintiff against third parties to recover possession of the same ground, and in which plaintiff recovered judgment, is admissible in evidence to rebut the presumption of abandonment; but the court should guard the jury by proper instructions from giving the judgment any weight as evidence, except upon the question of abandonment. Richardson v. McNulty, 24 Cal. 339. In an action for a mining claim the defendants asked the court to instruct the jury, "that if the plaintiff had abandoned the claim, and did not intend to return and work it before the commencement of the suit," and the court gave the instruction, "subject to the seventeenth section of the statute of limitations," it was held, that the qualification to the instruction was error. Davis v. Butler, 6 Cal. 510. Where the court instructed the jury, that "where an abandonment is sought to be established by the act of the party, the intention not to return, his abandonment is as complete, if it exist for a minute or a second, as though it continued for years; but if he left with the intention of returning, he might do so at any time within five years, provided there was no rule, usage, or custom of miners of such a notorious character as to raise a presumption of an intention to abandon." Held, that the question of abandonment was fairly left to the jury. Waring v. Crow, 11 Cal. 366; see also Richardson v. McNulty, 24 Cal. 339. In suit for damages for injuries upon mining claims, and for perpetual injunction, etc., held, that it was error for the court below to charge the jury that if they believed no injury or damage was done by defendants to plaintiffs, they would find for defendants; that such charge was calculated to mislead, inasmuch as the law presumes damages from a trespass, and under the charge the jury might have decided the case upon this want of proof of plaintiff's damages, instead of absence of proof of their title. Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37; 76 Am. Dec. 567.

Mortgage. Where the complaint did not charge the mortgagee in possession with negligence or improper conduct in leasing the premises, but only demanded an account for the rents he actually received, it is proper in the court to refuse to instruct the jury that he might have leased the property differently, and to charge him with what he might have received, if so leased. Benham v. Rowe, 2 Cal. 387; 56 Am. Dec. 342.

Partnership. It is not error to instruct a jury, that, if sufficient time elapses between the dealings of the plaintiffs with the old firm, and their subsequent transactions with the new firm, to put a reasonable man on inquiry, they might be treated as new dealers. Treadwell v. Wells, 4 Cal. 260.

Slander of title. An instruction, "that where a person injuriously slanders the title of another, malice is presumed," is erroneous. It is also error to instruct that fraud cannot be presumed, but must be established by circumstances, not of a light character, but of a most conclusive nature. McDaniel v. Baca, 2 Cal. 326; 56 Am. Dec. 339.

Trespass on the case. In an action for injuries to a garden, caused by the breaking of a reservoir, the court instructed the jury, that to entitle plaintiff to recover, it must appear that the breaking of the reservoir resulted from the gross negligence of defendants; and then proceeded to explain that defendants must have taken the same care of their reservoir, and of the water in it, as they would have done, being prudent men, had the garden of plaintiff been their property; and that otherwise, they had been guilty of gross negligence, and were liable in damages. Held, that, although the instructions, without the explanation, was wrong, still, with the explanation, it was right, and could not have misled the jury. Todd v. Cochell, 17 Cal. 97.

Use and occupation. In an action for use and occupation, the court was requested to instruct the jury, "that it was necessary, to enable the plaintiff to recover, that he should show that the defendant used and occupied the premises by the permission of the plaintiff, and if the jury believed the defendant used and occupied the same against the will of the plaintiff, that they must find a verdict for the defendant." The court refused to so instruct. Held, that, in this, the court erred. Sampson v. Shaeffer, 3 Cal. 196.

Water. In an action for diverting water from plaintiff's ditch, plaintiff and defendants both having ditches supplied from the same stream, the plaintiff's rights being prior and paramount, the defendants requested the court to instruct the jury, that if defendants had brought water from foreign sources and emptied it into the stream, with the intention of taking it out again, they had the right to divert the quantity thus emptied in, less such an amount as might be lost by evaporation and other like causes. The instruction was given with the explanation that they could not so reclaim the water as to diminish the quantity to which plaintiff was entitled as prior locator. Held, that the instruction, as explained, was proper. Burnett v. Whitesides, 15 Cal. 35. In an action for diverting water from the plaintiff's ditch, and where both parties claimed, in part, the waters of the same stream, the court instructed the jury "that defendant is not liable for any deficiency of water in plaintiff's ditch, unless he was diverting from Rabbitt's Creek more water than he was entitled to at the precise time that such deficiency existed." Held, a correct instruction. Brown v. Smith, 10 Cal. 508.

9. Generally. In an action where the court instructed the jury that the facts showed no valid sale of personal property for want of the change of possession, which the statute of frauds requires, on appeal the court sustained the instructions. Ford v. Chambers, 19 Cal. 143. It is not error for the court to refuse to instruct the jury, "that where two innocent parties must suffer, that party who had been the cause of another's loss must lose." Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 44; 85 Am. Dec. 157. The jury should make up their verdict from the facts, according to the law as given to them by the court; and it is improper for a court to charge the jury, "to take into consideration all of the facts, and do equal justice between the parties," inasmuch as an instruction so general in its terms may mislead them. Kelly v. Cunningham, 1 Cal. 365. Where the court instructs a jury upon what state of facts they may find verdict for a party, the instructions should include all the facts in controversy material to the right of plaintiff or defense of defendant. Gallagher v. Williamson, 23 Cal. 331; 83 Am. Dec. 114; Pearson v. Snodgrass, 5 Cal. 479. If the court errs in the admission of testimony during the trial, but afterwards instructs the jury to disregard such testimony, the error does not entitle the party objecting to the testimony to a new trial. Yankee Jim's Union Water Co. v. Crary, 25 Cal. 507; 85 Am. Dec. 145; Emerson v. Santa Clara County, 40 Cal. 545. Instructions asked and refused ought not be read in the hearing of the jury. Waldie v. Doll, 29 Cal. 555. It is not error for the judge, in stating the testimony to the jury, to read a memorandum of testimony taken by another person. People v. Boggs, 20 Cal. 432.

§ 609. Special instructions. Where either party asks special instructions to be given to the jury, the court must either give such instruction, as requested, or refuse to do so, or give the instruction with a modification, in such manner that it may distinctly appear what instructions were given in whole or in part.

Exceptions. Post, § 646.

Legislation § 609. Enacted March 11, 1872.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Counsel may propose instructions to the court, but the court is not compelled to give or refuse them as presented. If the proposed instructions are defective in form of expression, or erroneous in law, the court may modify them in either particular, and give them to the jury in their modified form, or he may refuse them altogether. Boyce v. California Stage Co., 25 Cal. 470; Lawrence v. Fulton, 19 Cal. 683; Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476; King v. Davis, 34 Cal. 101. The cases cited supra modify Conrad v. Lindley, 2 Cal. 173; Jamson v. Quivey, 5 Cal. 491; Russel v. Amador, 3 Cal. 403. If an instruction asked, given entire, would have been erroneous, the court is not bound to separate the concluding clause and give that by itself, but may refuse the instruction. Smith v. Richmond, 19 Cal. 476.

§ 610. View by jury of the premises. When, in the opinion of the court, it is proper for the jury to have a view of the property which is the subject of litigation, or of the place in which any material fact occurred, it may order them to be conducted, in a body, under the charge of an officer, to the place, which shall be shown to them by some person appointed by the court for that purpose. While the jury are thus absent, no person, other than the person so appointed, shall speak to them on any subject connected with the trial.

Legislation § 610. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Purpose and result of examination. The purpose of this section is, not to convert the jurors into silent witnesses, who act on their own inspection of the premises viewed, but only to enable them more clearly to understand and apply the evidence (Wright v. Carpenter, 49 Cal. 607); and the result of their examination cannot be taken into consideration by them as independent evidence in the case. Wright v. Carpenter, 49 Cal. 607; 50 Cal. 556.

Discretion of court. The law vests in trial courts the discretion of allowing or disallowing a "view of the premises" or other physical objects relevant to the case, which it is impracticable to bring into court. People v. Sampo, 17 Cal. App. 135; 118 Pac. 957.

Power of court. The power vested in trial courts by this section should be exercised, if at all, with great caution and circumspection, lest more harm than good result, to the parties by thus receiving evidence out of the courtroom. People v. Sampo, 17 Cal. App. 135; 118 Pac. 957. In an action for damages for the death of a person, killed while in charge of machinery, the court may not only order an inspection of such machinery by the jury, but it may also allow the plaintiff's expert to examine the machinery, and give testimony relative thereto. Clark v. Tulare Lake Dredging Co., 14 Cal. App. 414; 112 Pac. 564.

Jury may view what property. The jury are not authorized to view any other property than that in litigation. Wright v. Carpenter, 50 Cal. 556.

Judge need not attend view. The failure of the judge to attend a view of the premises is not prejudicial, where no harm resulted. San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175; 81 Pac. 972.

Inspection by court or jury of property or place in dispute. See note 92 Am. Dec. 342.

Impressions made on minds of jurors by view as evidence in case. See note 10 Ann. Cas. 663.

Right of jury on view to make evidence for themselves by experiment. See note 18 Ann. Cas. 571.

View by jury as resting in discretion of court. See note 18 Ann. Cas. 730.

Right of court trying case without jury to view premises. See note 19 Ann. Cas. 578.

§ 611. Admonition when jury permitted to separate. If the jury are permitted to separate, either during the trial or after the case is submitted to them, they shall be admonished by the court that it is their duty not to converse with, or suffer themselves to be addressed by any other person, on any subject of the trial, and that it is their duty not to form or express an opinion thereon until the case is finally submitted to them.

Legislation § 611. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 612. Jury may take with them certain papers. Upon retiring for deliberation the jury may take with them all papers which have been received as evidence in the cause, except depositions, or copies of such papers as ought not, in the opinion of the court, to be taken from the person having them in possession; and they may also take with them notes of the testimony or other proceedings on the trial, taken by themselves or any of them, but none taken by any other person.

Legislation § 612. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 167, which had the words "except depositions" inclosed in parentheses and following "all papers," instead of the present arrangement.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 145; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

What papers may be taken by the jury. This section deals solely with "papers" that have been introduced in evidence. Higgins v. Los Angeles Gas etc. Co., 159 Cal. 651; 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 717; 115 Pac. 313. By implication, papers not received in evidence should not be allowed to be taken by the jury on their retirement. Powley v. Swensen, 146 Cal. 471; 80 Pac. 722. Promissory notes, offered in evidence after being identified and proved by testimony contained in a deposition, are not part of the deposition, and not within the prohibition of this section. Cockrill v. Hall, 76 Cal. 192; 18 Pac. 318. The sworn statement of a plaintiff, in an action on an insurance policy, as to his losses, and the certificate of a justice of the peace thereto, are documentary evidence, and not within the prohibition of this section. Clark v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 36 Cal. 168. The practice of allowing pleadings to be taken to the jury-room is not a safe one; but where no prejudice or injury is caused, it is not ground for reversal. Powley v. Swensen, 146 Cal. 471; 80 Pac. 722.

Discretion of court. This section is not to be construed as a limitation of the discretionary power of the court to allow other exhibits than papers to be taken by the jury, but as a modification and extension of the common-law rule touching exhibits containing writings (Higgins v. Los Angeles Gas etc. Co., 159 Cal. 651; 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 717; 115 Pac. 313); and it is not error to allow the jury to take with them to the jury-room the claim upon which the suit is based, which constitutes a portion of the complaint, and which was received in evidence (McLean v. Crow, 88 Cal. 644; 26 Pac. 596); and the court may permit the jury to take with them, and use in their deliberations, any exhibit, where the circumstances call for it, observing the proper precaution of instructing them in the nature of the use that they shall make of it. Higgins v. Los Angeles Gas etc. Co., 159 Cal. 651; 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 717; 115 Pac. 313.

Jury may compare documents. The jury may compare documents to determine their genuineness, although the testimony of experts is offered; and the jury may wholly disregard such testimony, and exercise their own judgment. Castor v. Bernstein, 2 Cal. App. 703; 84 Pac. 244.

Effect on verdict on papers improperly in jury-room. See note 6 Ann. Cas. 931.

Right of jury to take to jury-room affidavit admitted as testimony of absent witness. See note Ann. Cas. 1913C, 498.

Right of jury to take with them on retirement paper containing calculation or estimate by party as to amount due him. See note Ann. Cas. 1913C, 937.

Right of jury on retirement to take family Bible or other religious book introduced as evidence. See note 41 L. R. A. 456.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. In an action against an insurance company, it is not error for the court to permit the jury to take to their rooms the "sworn statement of plaintiff as to his losses." Clark v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 36 Cal. 176; Sexton v. Montgomery County etc. Ins. Co., 9 Barb. 200; Newmarke v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 30 Mo. 160; 77 Am. Dec. 608; Parsons on Mercantile Law, p. 536.

§ 613. Deliberation of jury, how conducted. When the case is finally submitted to the jury, they may decide in court or retire for deliberation; if they retire, they must be kept together, in some convenient place, under charge of an officer, until at least three fourths of them agree upon a verdict or are discharged by the court. Unless by order of the court, the officer having them under his charge must not suffer any communication to be made to them, or make any himself, except to ask them if they or three fourths of them are agreed upon a verdict, and he must not, before their verdict is rendered, communicate to any person the state of their deliberations, or the verdict agreed upon.

Three fourths, agreement of. See Const., art. I, § 7.

Legislation § 613. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 166, which read: "After hearing the charge, the jury may either decide in court, or retire for deliberation. If they retire, they shall be kept together in a room provided for them, or some other convenient place, under the charge of one or more officers, until they agree upon their verdict, or are discharged by the court. The officer shall, to the utmost of his ability, keep the jury together, separate from other persons; he shall not suffer any communication to be made to them, or make any himself, unless by order of the court, except to ask them if they have agreed upon their verdict; and he shall not, before the verdict is rendered, communicate to any person the state of their deliberations, or the verdict agreed upon." When § 613 was enacted in 1872, it read as at present, except that (1) it had the word "they" instead of "at least three fourths of them," in the first sentence, (2) in the second sentence (a) it did not contain the words "or three fourths of them," and (b) had the word "their" instead of "a," before "verdict."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 10.

Oath of officer in charge of jury. It is not necessary for the court to administer a special oath to the officer taking charge of the jury upon its retirement for deliberation. Boreham v. Byrne, 83 Cal. 23; 23 Pac. 212.

When jury must be kept together and the consequences of an unauthorized separation. See note 43 Am. Dec. 75.

Separation of jury. See note 103 Am. St. Rep. 155.

Presence of officer in jury-room during deliberations of jury. See note 36 Am. Rep. 441; 8 Ann. Cas. 652.

Prejudice of officer as disqualifying him from acting as custodian of jury. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 882.

Discharge of jury without verdict. See note 1 Am. Dec. 176.

Delivery of food to jurymen after retiring to consider verdict. See note 16 Am. Rep. 454.

Communication to jury by custodian or other court officer as ground for new trial. See note 13 Ann. Cas. 522.

Private communication by trial judge with jury during deliberations as ground for new trial. See note 16 Ann. Cas. 1141.

Effect of judge communicating with jury not in open court. See note 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 609.

Number and agreement of jurors necessary to verdict. See note 43 L. R. A. 34.

§ 614. May come into court for further instructions. After the jury have retired for deliberation, if there be a disagreement between them as to any part of the testimony, or if they desire to be informed of any point of law arising in the cause, they may require the officer to conduct them into court. Upon their being brought into court, the information required must be given in the presence of, or after notice to, the parties or counsel.

Holidays, Sundays, non-judicial days, etc. Instructions may be given to juries deliberating on. Ante, § 134, subd. 1.

Legislation § 614. Enacted March 11, 1872, in language of Practice Act, § 168, except that the latter had the word "shall" instead of "must."

Refusal to instruct, effect of. Where the jury return into court, and ask for instructions on a particular point, a refusal is not error, where they do not desire all the instructions read, and the court directs them to follow the instructions already given. Cockrill v. Hall, 76 Cal. 192; 18 Pac. 318.

Instructions in absence of parties or counsel. To allow the jury to come into court after they have once retired, and to give them instructions, in the absence of the parties or their counsel, is error. Redman v. Gulnac, 5 Cal. 148.

Court should not try to influence jury. Where the jury return to the courtroom and report that they cannot agree, it is prejudicial error for the court, after learning that they stand eight to three, to make it appear to them that the three, or one of the three, should yield to the eight. Mahoney v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 471; 42 Pac. 968; 43 Pac. 518.

Necessity that further instructions requested by jury be given in open court. See note 14 Ann. Cas. 514.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Redman v. Gulnac, 5 Cal. 148.

§ 615. Proceedings if juror becomes sick. If, after the impaneling of the jury, and before verdict, a juror becomes sick, so as to be unable to perform his duty, the court may order him to be discharged. In that case the trial may proceed with the other jurors with the consent of the parties, or another juror may be sworn and the trial begin anew; or the jury may be discharged and a new jury then or afterwards impaneled.

Legislation § 615. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 164, which had the words "a new jury" instead of "another juror."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 146; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Withdrawal of a juror. See notes 78 Am. St. Rep. 781; 48 L. R. A. 432.

§ 616. When prevented from giving verdict, the cause may be again tried. In all cases where the jury are discharged, or prevented from giving a verdict, by reason of accident or other cause, during the progress of the trial, or after the cause is submitted to them, the action may be again tried immediately, or at a future time, as the court may direct.

Legislation § 616. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 169, which had (1) the word "a" instead of "the," before "jury," and (2) the word "shall" instead of "may," before "direct."

§ 617. While jury are absent, court may adjourn from time to time. Sealed verdict. While the jury are absent the court may adjourn from time to time, in respect to other business; but it is nevertheless open for every purpose connected with the cause submitted to the jury, until a verdict is rendered or the jury discharged. The court may direct the jury to bring in a sealed verdict, at the opening of the court, in case of an agreement during a recess or adjournment for the day.

Legislation § 617. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 170, which had (1) the words "shall nevertheless be deemed open" instead of the words "is nevertheless open," and (2) a final sentence, reading, "A final adjournment of the court for the term shall discharge the jury." When enacted in 1872, the section was changed to read as at present, except for the final sentence, in which the words "shall discharge" were changed to "discharges."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 10, the omission of the final sentence, supra, being the only change.

Formerly, adjournment for term discharged jury. The adjournment of court for the term discharged the jury, and hence, where the trial had been adjourned to a certain day, and before that day the court adjourned the term sine die, and began a new term on the day the trial was adjourned to, it had no power to take up the trial at such time. Johnson v. Pacific Cement Co., 50 Cal. 648.

Delivery of sealed verdict made how. The delivery of a sealed verdict to the coroner, with the request that he deliver it to the clerk, is not objectionable. Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483.

Amendment by jury of sealed verdict. See note 5 Ann. Cas. 394.

Right of clerk or attorney to receive verdict in absence of trial judge. See note 16 Ann. Cas. 90.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. When a jury are instructed to bring in a sealed verdict, and, after agreeing upon the verdict, they seal it up and give it to the officer in charge of them, the clerk being absent, and request him to give it to the clerk, which is done, and after the meeting of the court the following morning the verdict is opened in the presence of the jury and read by the clerk, without exception, it is not an error sufficient to warrant a new trial. The possession by such officer left the verdict as much in the possession of the court itself as if it had been directly delivered to the clerk. Nor will it make any difference, when the names of the jurors were not called, and they were not asked whether they had agreed upon their verdict where the parties were present, and took an exception at the time; and where it is not pretended that the verdict entered differs from one sealed up, or that the result is in any respect affected by the omission. The opportunities of tampering with jury after separation are so numerous, and in important cases the temptation is so great, and the ability of detection so slight, as to make it a matter of grave doubt whether sound policy does not require an adherance to the verdict as sealed, even as against a subsequent dissent of one or more of the jurors. Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483.

§ 618. Verdict, how declared. Form of. Polling the jury. When the jury, or three fourths of them, have agreed upon a verdict, they must be conducted into court, their names called by the clerk, and the verdict rendered by their foreman; the verdict must be in writing, signed by the foreman, and must be read by the clerk to the jury, and the inquiry made whether it is their verdict. Either party may require the jury to be polled, which is done by the court or clerk asking each juror if it is his verdict; if upon such inquiry or polling, more than one fourth of the jurors disagree thereto, the jury must be sent out again, but if no such disagreement be expressed, the verdict is complete and the jury discharged from the case.

Legislation § 618. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, §§ 171, 173, which read: "§ 171. When the jury have agreed upon their verdict, they shall be conducted into court by the officer having them in charge. Their names shall then be called, and they shall be asked by the court, or the clerk, whether they have agreed upon their verdict; and if the foreman answer in the affirmative, they shall, on being required, declare the same." "§ 173. When the verdict is given, and is not informal or insufficient, the clerk shall immediately record it, in full, in the minutes, and shall read it to the jury, and inquire of them whether it be their verdict. If any juror disagree, the jury shall be again sent out; but if no disagreement be expressed, the verdict shall be complete, and the jury shall be discharged from the case." When enacted in 1872, § 618 read: "When the jury have agreed upon their verdict, they must be conducted into court, their names called by the clerk, and the verdict rendered by their foreman. The verdict must be in writing, signed by the foreman, and must be read by the clerk to the jury, and the inquiry made whether it is their verdict. If any juror disagrees, they must be sent out again; but if no disagreement be expressed, and neither party requires the jury to be polled, the verdict is complete and the jury discharged from the case. Either party may require the jury to be polled, which is done by the court or clerk asking each juror if it is his verdict. If any one answer in the negative, the jury must again be sent out." 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 10.

Signature and consent to verdict. The verdict is signed by the foreman only, yet it must be concurred in by all the other jurors. Reynolds v. Harris, 8 Cal. 617. The assent of the jury must be expressed by the foreman, and his consent is conclusive upon all, unless disagreement is expressed at the time. Blum v. Pate, 20 Cal. 69. Findings of the jury on special issues are ineffective, and cannot control the general verdict, unless signed by the jury as a whole or by their foreman; and the failure of the party, against whom the special issues are found, to object to the finding being received, is not a waiver of the defect. Greenberg v. Hoff, 80 Cal. 81; 22 Pac. 69. Where questions, upon the contest of the probate of a will, are propounded to a jury and answered by them, such questions and answers, where they constitute the ultimate facts to be found, and cover the issues growing out of the contest, form a special verdict, which should be signed by the foreman. Estate of Keithley, 134 Cal. 9; 66 Pac. 5. Answers to special interrogatories must be signed either by the jury as a whole, or by their foreman, to make them effective for any purpose. Greenberg v. Hoff, 80 Cal. 81; 22 Pac. 69.

Polling after verdict recorded. Under the old practice, the polling of the jury, after the verdict was recorded, was not a matter of right. Blum v. Pate, 20 Cal. 69.

Bill of exceptions need not contain verdict. The verdict of the jury is a matter of record; hence, it is unnecessary to insert it in the bill of exceptions. Reynolds v. Harris, 8 Cal. 617.

Right of party to poll the jury. See note 30 Am. Rep. 497.

Validity of verdict rendered after jury have been polled and some jurors have dissented and jury have been sent back for further deliberations. See note 6 Ann. Cas. 457.

Foreman as spokesman for jury. See note Ann. Cas. 1913B, 385.

Receiving verdict on Sunday. See note 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 844.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Under § 171 of the Practice Act of 1851, there was no absolute right to poll the jury in a civil case. Blum v. Pate, 20 Cal. 69.

§ 619. Proceedings when verdict is informal. When the verdict is announced, if it is informal or insufficient, in not covering the issue submitted, it may be corrected by the jury under the advice of the court, or the jury may be again sent out.

Legislation § 619. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 172, which read: "If the verdict be informal, or insufficient, in not covering the whole issue or issues submitted, the verdict may be corrected by the jury, under the advice of the court, or the jury may be again sent out."

Court may instruct jury to amend verdict. The court may instruct the jury to amend their verdict as to its form, not affecting the substance, and in such manner as to be unexceptionable in law. Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 269. A verdict for half of the property sued for, not responding to the issues, is a nullity: the court should direct a finding as to the other half. Muller v. Jewell, 66 Cal. 216; 5 Pac. 84.

Uncertainty in verdict. Where the verdict fixes a measurement different from that referred to in the pleadings, and which is uncertain, the court is not at liberty to disregard such measurement. Dougherty v. Haggin, 56 Cal. 522.

Where court may remand jury or set verdict aside. Where the verdict is not in conformity with the issues submitted, the court may remand the jury, under its advice. Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 183. Where the verdict does not cover all the issues submitted, the court should remand the jury to render a verdict in proper form; but it is not error to set such verdict aside. Garlick v. Bower, 62 Cal. 65.

Omission of words from verdict as affecting validity thereof. See note 16 Ann. Cas. 475.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the verdict is informal, the court ought to explain the defects to the jury, and direct them to put it in proper form. People v. Dick, 34 Cal. 666. The court may instruct the jury to amend their verdict as to matters of form, not affecting the substance, and in such manner as to be unexceptionable in law. Truehody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 284. Or the court may amend the verdict, when it is defective in something merely formal, and which has no connection with the merits of the cause, if the amendment in no respect changes the rights of the parties. Perkins v. Wilson, 3 Cal. 139. But if the court, instead of having the verdict corrected by the jury, attempt to correct it by the judgment, and go beyond the verdict, it is error. Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 192. A general objection to the form of a verdict, without any specification of the particulars, will not be considered. Mahoney v. Van Winkle, 21 Cal. 552. If a verdict returned by a jury is not sufficiently definite and certain to serve as a basis for a judgment, and the party against whom it is rendered consents that a certain construction thereof should be taken as the verdict, this proceeding is quite as irregular, uncertain, and ineffectual as the verdict itself. Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 509.

ARTICLE III.

VERDICT.

§ 624. General and special verdicts defined.
§ 625. When a general or special verdict may be rendered.
§ 626. Verdict in actions for recovery of money or on establishing counterclaim.
§ 627. Verdict in actions for the recovery of specific personal property.
§ 628. Entry of verdict.

§ 624. General and special verdicts defined. The verdict of a jury is either general or special. A general verdict is that by which they pronounce generally upon all or any of the issues, either in favor of the plaintiff or defendant; a special verdict is that by which the jury find the facts only, leaving the judgment to the court. The special verdict must present the conclusions of fact as established by the evidence, and not the evidence to prove them; and those conclusions of fact must be so presented as that nothing shall remain to the court but to draw from them conclusions of law.

General or special verdict, when may be rendered. Post, § 625.

Misconduct of jury. Post, § 657, subd. 2.

Legislation § 624. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 174 (New York Code, § 250), which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in both instances.

The general verdict. A general verdict is synthetic; a compound of law and fact. Murphy v. Bennett, 68 Cal. 528; 9 Pac. 738. It must control, if the special verdict is not absolutely irreconcilable therewith. Petersen v. California Cotton Mills Co., 20 Cal. App. 751; 130 Pac. 169. It must be certain: an uncertain verdict will not support the judgment on appeal. Diggs v. Porteus, 5 Cal. Unrep. 753; 33 Pac. 447. It implies a finding in favor of the prevailing party, of every fact essential to the support of his action or defense. Plyer v. Pacific etc. Cement Co., 152 Cal. 125; 92 Pac. 56. A general verdict determines all issues, where there is evidence to support such verdict. Petersen v. California Cotton Mills Co., 20 Cal. App. 751; 130 Pac. 169.

The special verdict. A special verdict is analytic; it finds its facts, and submits the law to the court. Murphy v. Bennett, 68 Cal. 528; 9 Pac. 738. It is the office of the trial jury, by their verdict, to find the facts in issue, whether general or special: with the legal effect of such facts they have no concern. Fitzpatrick v. Himmelmann, 48 Cal. 588. Questions of fact propounded to and answered by the jury constitute the ultimate facts to be found, covering the issues growing out of the contest; and the embodiment of the questions and answers, with the foreman's certificate, constitute a special verdict. Estate of Keithley, 134 Cal. 9; 66 Pac. 5. Each question submitted to a jury as a basis for a special verdict should relate to only one fact: the grouping together of several facts is objectionable. Phœnix Water Co. v. Fletcher, 23 Cal. 481. The jury must decide all questions of fact arising from the evidence, at least where there is a substantial conflict. Estate of Everts, 163 Cal. 449; 125 Pac. 1058. When a special verdict is desired, the practice in this state is, to prepare and submit to the jury the special issues in the form of questions, and this practice is recognized by the legislature by the words of § 1314, post, "the issues submitted to them by the court." Estate of Sanderson, 74 Cal. 199; 15 Pac. 753.

Special verdict sufficient when. A special verdict must find the facts expressly and specially, not generally or impliedly; and it must present the facts so distinctly as to refer the court clearly to the questions of law arising upon them (Breeze v. Doyle, 19 Cal. 101); and it must pass on all the issues, by presenting the conclusions of fact bearing on them all. Estate of Sanderson, 74 Cal. 199; 15 Pac. 753. A special finding in the language of the complaint is sufficient. Napa Valley Packing Co. v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 16 Cal. App. 461; 118 Pac. 469. Where all the issues in the case are not submitted to the jury, the verdict is an incomplete and imperfect special verdict. Montgomery v. Sayre, 91 Cal. 206; 27 Pac. 648. A special finding, not disposing of all the issues in the case, and not accompanied by a general verdict, is of no legal effect: no judgment, except by consent of the parties, can be entered on it. Montgomery v. Sayre, 3 Cal. Unrep. 365; 25 Pac. 552. Where two defendants answer, and a third makes default, the verdict is properly confined to those who answer, and should not include the one as to whom there is no issue. Golden Gate Mill etc. Co. v. Joshua Hendy Machine Works, 82 Cal. 184; 23 Pac. 45. Conclusions of law cannot be considered in determining the sufficiency of a special verdict. Petersen v. California Cotton Mills Co., 20 Cal. App. 751; 130 Pac. 169.

Submission of special issue. The court may properly refuse to submit a special issue already included in another issue submitted. Diehl v. Swett-Davenport Lumber Co., 14 Cal. App. 495; 112 Pac. 561; Irrgang v. Ott, 9 Cal. App. 440; 99 Pac. 528.

Court may order new trial when. Where the court, upon hearing evidence after the jury has passed upon some of the vital issues, makes findings upon all of the issues, contrary to the verdict, such action is, in effect, a setting aside and vacating of the verdict, and the court should order a new trial by jury, having no power to determine the cause without a jury. Montgomery v. Sayre, 91 Cal. 206; 27 Pac. 648.

Terms defined. The terms "verdict" and "decision" are appositional: what is predicated of one is predicated also of the other. The verdict is the decision of the jury, reported to the court, on matters lawfully submitted to them, and is either general or special; general, when it finds the facts and the law, and special, when it finds the facts only, leaving the law applicable to them to be decided by the court. Simmons v. Hamilton, 56 Cal. 493.

Verdict ascertained by averaging aggregate separate markings of all the jurors. See note 34 Am. Rep. 815.

Chance verdict. See note 2 Am. Dec. 38; 16 Ann. Cas. 910.

What special verdict must contain. See note 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. The verdict must be confined to the issues. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 256; 56 Am. Dec. 332; Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 285. If the court, instead of having the verdict corrected by the jury, attempt to correct it by the judgment, and go beyond the verdict, it is error. Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 192. The verdict of a jury is a record, and copies thereof may be sufficiently authenticated by the certificate of the clerk. Reynolds v. Harris, 8 Cal. 618. A joint verdict against the defendants answering, and a defendant in default, is conclusive against all the defendants, when a separate verdict has not been demanded. Anderson v. Parker, 6 Cal. 197. A stipulation that a verdict may be entered in favor of the defendant, saving to the plaintiff the rights which he would have had in case a jury had rendered a verdict for the defendant, is to be regarded in the same light as a verdict, and is followed by the same legal results. Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 258. The court requested counsel to prepare for the jury blank forms of the verdict, and the plaintiff's counsel prepared, and the defendant's counsel assented to, two forms, one of which was, "We, the jury, find for the plaintiff, and that the value of the property was $——"; and the other, "We, the jury, find for the defendant." And it was agreed in open court that the verdict should be in accordance with one of those forms. The stipulation, and the assent to those forms for the verdict, make it manifest that the respective parties desired and expected a general verdict for the whole property in controversy, and negative the idea that either party then claimed that his right to any parcel of the property was of a different character, or rested upon any different basis from that asserted to all the property. After an adverse verdict, rendered under those circumstances, it is too late for the plaintiff to insist on a verdict in another form, or to assert a right to a portion of the property upon principles not applicable alike to all the property. Sexey v. Adkison, 40 Cal. 418. The court may impose, as a condition of permitting a verdict to stand in other respects, the remission of damages in cases where there was no evidence on the subject of damages, or where the evidence was entirely insufficient, or where the court differs from the jury as to the effect of the evidence. But where the verdict for the damages was based entirely upon an admission by the record, it must stand. The admission, if good for anything, is good for the entire amount specified. Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28.

2. General verdict. A general verdict, rendered and received without objection, either by the court or the parties, is good, notwithstanding the failure of the jury to find upon certain special questions submitted to them by the court. Moss v. Priest, 1 Rob. 632; 19 Abb. Pr. 314. A general verdict concludes all parties who do not answer separately or demand separate verdicts. Winans v. Christy, 4 Cal. 70; 60 Am. Dec. 597; Ellis v. Jeans, 7 Cal. 409. The plaintiff in ejectment may sue one or more defendants, and they may answer separately, or demand separate verdicts; unless they do so, they will be bound by a general verdict. Winans v. Christy, 4 Cal. 70; 60 Am. Dec. 597. In ejectment, the defendants being in possession, the verdict may be joint against several defendants, without specifying their respective lots in a whole tract, where they file a joint answer, which contains no averment as to the particular portion of land occupied by each, no proof being offered on the point, no damages being claimed. McGarvey v. Little, 15 Cal. 31. A joint verdict against the defendants answering and a defaulting defendant, is binding against all the defendants, when a separate verdict has not been demanded. Anderson v. Parker, 6 Cal. 197; Ellis v. Jeans, 7 Cal. 409. In an action to recover real property, the jury rendered the following verdict: "We, the jury in this cause, find a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, against defendants, for the possession of the premises described in the complaint herein, and the sum of $165 damages." This was held, a general verdict, covering all the issues, and that it does not limit the finding to any particular fact or single issue. Hutton v. Reed, 25 Cal. 491; see Leese v. Clark, 28 Cal. 26. Where the jury rendered "a verdict in favor of plaintiffs, with one dollar damages," it was held, that the verdict decided the question of title in favor of plaintiffs, and that upon it they were entitled to a decree perpetually enjoining defendants from working upon the ground claimed in the complaint; that this equitable relief was a matter of right, the denial of which by the district court was error. McLaughlin v. Kelly, 22 Cal. 211.

3. Special verdict. A special verdict should find "facts," and not the "evidence of facts." The verdict should leave nothing for the court to determine, save questions of law. Langley v. Warner, 3 N. Y. 327; Sisson v. Barrett, 2 N. Y. 406; Hill v. Covell, 1 N. Y. 522; Williams v. Willis, 7 Abb. Pr. 90. It should state all the facts. Eisemann v. Swan, 6 Bosw. 669. Not admitted by the pleadings. Barto v. Himrod, 8 N. Y. 483; 59 Am. Dec. 506; Williams v. Jackson, 5 Johns. 489. The facts must be found expressly and specially, and not generally orimpliedly. Breeze v. Doyle, 19 Cal. 101. Where special issues are submitted, they should include all questions of fact raised by the pleadings, and necessary to determine the case, and should be separately and distinctly stated. Phœnix Water Co. v. Fletcher, 23 Cal. 482. In an action for a quartz-ledge, when the defendants deny plaintiffs' title and ouster, and set up title in themselves to a part only of the ledge, a special verdict awarding defendants that portion of the ledge they claim, without a general verdict, if accepted by plaintiffs, is a finding in favor of defendants, and entitles them to costs. Gonzales v. Leon, 31 Cal. 98. A special verdict settles the facts, and the court, by its judgment, pronounces the conclusions of law upon those facts. If the court errs in this respect, the error may be reviewed without a motion for a new trial; but the right to correct the verdict does not depend upon the judgment, and the steps necessary for that purpose must be taken within the statutory time. People v. Hill, 16 Cal. 117. The party in whose favor a judgment is rendered on a special verdict must move for a new trial, if he is not satisfied with the verdict, as the verdict would otherwise be conclusive as to the facts in the appellate court. Garwood v. Simpson, 8 Cal. 108; Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 380. In ejectment for a tract of land, plaintiff claiming under a deed from one McDowell, the case turned upon the question whether the plaintiff, at the time of his purchase from McDowell, had notice of a prior verbal sale of the land from McDowell to defendant. The jury, to whom this question had been specially submitted, returned a verdict: "If possession was notice, he had." This finding was insufficient, because equivocal, neither finding directly the fact of possession, nor the time of it, nor the kind of possession. Woodson v. McCune, 17 Cal. 298. Where the point on which the case turned was whether Kappelman & Co., who employed plaintiff to do work, acted as contractors in individual capacity, or as agents of defendants, and the jury found a special verdict, that "the work and labor done by plaintiff in the construction of the dam was done at the instance and request of Kappelman & Co., who were the agents of the corporation defendant," it was held that this verdict did not support a judgment for plaintiff, because it did not show, of itself, a legal conclusion of liability, not finding whether Kappelman & Co. acted as agents or not. Garfield v. Knight's Ferry etc. Water Co., 17 Cal. 519.

4. Mixed verdicts. If special matter found follows or is followed by general matter, the former controls. Fraschieris v. Henriques, 6 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 251; see § 625, post; McDermott v. Higby, 23 Cal. 489; Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 387.

5. Separate verdicts. Where several defendants, in an action for the recovery of real property, unite in an answer amounting to a general denial, a joint verdict is proper, though the answer concludes with a prayer for separate verdicts. To entitle defendants to separate verdicts, they must set forth with specific description the parcels which they severally occupy or claim, and direct the attention of plaintiff to the course of defense upon which they will separately insist. Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28; Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 145; 85 Am. Dec. 103.

6. Effect of verdict. In equity cases the verdict is advisory only (Still v. Saunders, 8 Cal. 281), and the court may disregard it. Goode v. Smith, 13 Cal. 84; Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 268. A defective allegation in a pleading may be cured by default or verdict, but not so the entire absence of any allegations whatsoever. Hentsch v. Porter, 10 Cal. 555; Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 268; People v. Rains, 23 Cal. 128. Where a pleading states a condition precedent, and does not aver performance, the defect must be urged on demurrer; it comes too late after verdict. Hlappe v. Stout, 2 Cal. 461. An omission to allege delivery, in an action on a bond, cannot be taken advantage of after verdict. Garcia v. Satrustegui, 4 Cal. 244; Wilkins v. Stidger, 22 Cal. 235; 83 Am. Dec. 64. A verified complaint, containing only the general averment that "defendants, though often requested, have refused," etc., when a special demand was necessary, is sufficient in this respect, unless demurred to for want of certainty. If not demurred to, the defective averment is cured by verdict, and the objection cannot be raised in the appellate court. Mills v. Barney, 22 Cal. 240; Jones v. Block, 30 Cal. 227. The finding of a jury, upon a question of fact, how far final and conclusive. Perry v. Cochran, 1 Cal. 180; Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 380. A general verdict does not operate as an estoppel, except as to such matters as were necessarily considered and determined by the jury. It is never conclusive upon immaterial or collateral issues. McDonald v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 15 Cal. 145. The effect of a general verdict will be limited to such issues as necessarily controlled the action of the jury. Kidd v. Laird, 15 Cal. 161; 76 Am. Dec. 472.

7. Affidavits of jurors to impeach a verdict. The affidavit of jurors will not be allowed to contradict the verdict. Castro v. Gill, 5 Cal. 40; Amsby v. Dickhouse, 4 Cal. 102; Wilson v. Berryman, 5 Cal. 44; 63 Am. Dec. 78; People v. Baker, 1 Cal. 403. Except where the verdict was the result of "a resort to the determination of chance." See subd. 2, § 657, post; Boyce v. California Stage Co., 25 Cal. 475. But the testimony of the sheriff is competent to disclose what transpires in the jury-room. Wilson v. Berryman, 5 Cal. 44; 63 Am. Dec. 78. Affidavits of counsel and others on information respecting the misbehavior of the jury while considering their verdict, are not admissible to impeach the verdict. People v. Hartung, 8 Abb. Pr. 132; People v. Wilson, 8 Abb. Pr. 137. The presumptions are in favor of the verdict below, unless error is clearly manifest. Allen v. Phelps, 4 Cal. 259.

§ 625. When a general or special verdict may be rendered. In an action for the recovery of money only, or specific real property, the jury, in their discretion, may render a general or special verdict. In all other cases the court may direct the jury to find a special verdict in writing, upon all, or any of the issues, and in all cases may instruct them, if they render a general verdict, to find upon particular questions of fact, to be stated in writing, and may direct a written finding thereon. The special verdict or finding must be filed with the clerk and entered upon the minutes. Where a special finding of facts is inconsistent with the general verdict, the former controls the latter, and the court must give judgment accordingly.

Legislation § 625. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 175 (New York Code, §§ 261, 262), as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 62, Kerr ed. p. 88. When enacted in 1872, (1) the word "shall" was changed to "must," before "be filed," (2) the words "shall be" were changed to "is," before "inconsistent," (3) the words "shall control" were changed to "controls," and (4) the word "shall" was changed to "must," before "give judgment."

2. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 66, (1) adding, (a) in first sentence, after "the jury," the words "unless instructed by the court to render a special verdict, may," and (b) placing "may" after "discretion"; (2) changing the second sentence to read, "In all cases the court must, upon the request in writing of any of the parties, direct the jury to find a special verdict in writing upon all or any of the issues and in all cases must instruct them upon the request in writing of any of the parties, if they render a general verdict, to find upon particular questions of fact, to be stated in writing, and must direct a written finding thereon."

3. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 193, changing the section to read as enacted in 1872, except that in second sentence commas were added before and after the words "upon all."

Special and general verdict must be consistent. A special verdict and a general verdict must be consistent with each other: the special verdict controls the general verdict; and where the jury have, by their general verdict, drawn a conclusion not warranted by law, the court should order judgment according to the special verdict. Simmons v. Hamilton, 56 Cal. 493. If a general verdict in favor of a party is not inconsistent with a special verdict in his favor, upon an issue decisive of the case, judgment should be rendered on the general verdict. McDermott v. Higby, 23 Cal. 489. A special verdict upon a single point may often determine the whole case: a special verdict, in such case, would control any general verdict to the contrary; but where the special findings do not have such controlling effect, a special verdict cannot be properly deemed inconsistent with the general verdict. McDermott v. Higby, 23 Cal. 489. Where a special finding of facts is inconsistent with the general verdict, the former controls the latter, and the court must give judgment accordingly. Napa Valley Packing Co. v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 16 Cal. App. 461; 118 Pac. 469. The general verdict must control, unless the special findings are absolutely irreconcilable with it: the court should not strain the language of a finding to make out a case of conflict. Antonian v. Southern Pacific Co., 9 Cal. App. 718; 100 Pac. 877. Where the findings are open to a double construction, that construction should be adopted which upholds the general verdict. Spear v. United Railroads, 16 Cal. App. 637; 117 Pac. 956. There need not be a finding upon each issue in a special verdict, to render it inconsistent with a general verdict. Napa Valley Packing Co. v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 16 Cal. App. 461; 118 Pac. 469. The defendant is entitled to judgment, where a special finding controlling the case is in his favor, notwithstanding a general verdict for the plaintiff. Di Vecchio v. Luchsinger, 12 Cal. App. 219; 107 Pac. 315. Special findings, which expressly negative all negligence on the part of any person at the time of an accident, and exonerate the defendant from any want of care in selecting its employees, are in conflict with a general verdict for the plaintiff. Vaughn v. California Central Ry. Co., 83 Cal. 18; 23 Pac. 215. There is no conflict between a general verdict giving the items constituting the damage, and a special verdict giving the amount of those items; but if certain small items of damages are unsupported by the evidence, the judgment should be modified accordingly. Irrgang v. Ott, 9 Cal. App. 440; 99 Pac. 528. A general verdict for the plaintiff, in an action for damages for fraud in inducing the execution of a lease, by representing that an occupant of the premises was a tenant from month to month instead of having a lease for a year, is inconsistent with a special finding that the tenant was not in possession under a lease for one year at a monthly rental. Di Vecchio v. Luchsinger, 12 Cal. App. 219; 107 Pac. 315. The party in whose favor the general verdict is rendered is entitled to judgment thereon, as a matter of course, without motion; if, therefore, the opposing party wishes to urge his right to judgment, he must move for judgment on the special findings, on the ground that they are inconsistent with the general verdict. Napa Valley Packing Co. v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 16 Cal. App. 461; 118 Pac. 469.

Conclusiveness of general verdict. A general verdict or judgment operates as an estoppel as to such matters as are necessarily considered and determined, but it is never conclusive upon immaterial or collateral issues. Chapman v. Hughes, 134 Cal. 641; 58 Pac. 298. When distinct issues are made and a general verdict is rendered, such verdict must stand, although the special findings upon one of the issues may not support the general verdict, if the special findings upon another distinct issue will support it. O'Connell v. United Railroads, 19 Cal. App. 36; 124 Pac. 1022; California Wine Ass'n v. Commercial Union Fire Ins. Co., 159 Cal. 49; 112 Pac. 858.

Objections to verdict made when. An objection to the form for a special verdict must be made at the time of the submission of the question to the jury; otherwise, it will be presumed that there was assent to the questions as presented; and the motion for a judgment on special findings must be made before judgment is entered on the general verdict. Napa Valley Packing Co. v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 16 Cal. App. 461; 118 Pac. 469. A stipulation that the jury might render a general verdict in favor of either party is legitimate, and estops the losing party from repudiating the general verdict, which is conclusive of the whole case. Johnson v. Mina Rica Gold Mining Co., 128 Cal. 521; 61 Pac. 76.

Special issues and findings. As this section stood under the amendment of 1905, the jury were required, if so instructed by the court, at the request of either party, to return a special verdict upon any issue made by the pleadings. California Wine Ass'n v. Commercial Union Fire Ins. Co., 159 Cal. 49; 112 Pac. 858. The provision for special findings in jury trials is to be liberally construed and applied. Plyer v. Pacific etc. Cement Co., 152 Cal. 125; 92 Pac. 56. Where special issues are submitted to the jury, they should include all questions of fact raised by the pleadings, necessary to determine the case, and they should be separately and distinctly stated. Phœnix Water Co. v. Fletcher, 23 Cal. 481. The issues of fact submitted should be such that the verdict thereon would be determinative of an order of judgment to be entered by the court, and not merely determinative of subordinate facts which may be considered by the court in connection with other facts in making its order or judgment. Estate of Sanderson, 74 Cal. 199; 15 Pac. 753. Without the aid of special issues, it would be next to impossible to find a jury capable of passing understandingly upon the various questions of fact involved; and the statute contemplates that, in all such cases, special issues shall be framed under the direction of the court, according to the long-established rules of chancery practice. Brewster v. Bours, 8 Cal. 501. The court may properly direct that special issues shall be framed and settled, and stated in writing, before proceeding to trial. Smith v. Rowe, 4 Cal. 6. If special issues are improperly submitted to the jury, a party is not prejudiced thereby, where the jury finds a general verdict. Law v. Northern Assurance Co., 165 Cal. 394; 132 Pac. 590. The primary purpose of special findings is to determine whether the general verdict is or is not against law. Fujise v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 12 Cal. App. 207; 107 Pac. 317; Plyer v. Pacific etc. Cement Co., 152 Cal. 125; 92 Pac. 56; 7 Cal. Unrep. 279; 87 Pac. 395; Larsen v. Leonardt, 8 Cal. App. 226; 96 Pac. 395. In an action for personal injuries, the defendant is entitled to have findings upon all the special issues submitted to the jury: the failure to find upon some of them requires that the judgment upon the general verdict for the plaintiff be reversed. Larsen v. Leonardt, 8 Cal. App. 226; 96 Pac. 395.

Request for special verdict, discretion of court in granting. Under the amendment of this section in 1905, special findings were made compulsory in all cases tried by jury, when properly requested (Plyer v. Pacific etc. Cement Co., 152 Cal. 125; 92 Pac. 56; 87 Pac. 395; Williams v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 6 Cal. App. 715; 93 Pac. 122; California Wine Ass'n v. Commercial Union Fire Ins. Co., 159 Cal. 49; 112 Pac. 858); but, since the amendment of 1909, it is discretionary with the court to submit special issues to the jury in certain cases. O'Connell v. United Railroads, 19 Cal. App. 36; 124 Pac. 1022. Notwithstanding a compulsory provision that the court shall, upon the request of a party, direct the jury to find in writing upon all or any of the issues, it still has the power to determine whether or not a question propounded is proper for submission. Pigeon v. Fuller, 156 Cal. 691; 105 Pac. 976. Whether special issues are discretionary or compulsory, it is the duty of the court, in the submission of issues, to require such answers as will support the general verdict; or if not made, to reject that verdict. O'Connell v. United Railroads, 19 Cal. App. 36; 124 Pac. 1022. The request that special issues be submitted to the jury is addressed to the discretion of the court; and the refusal to grant the request is not the subject of an exception. Smith v. Occidental etc. S. S. Co., 99 Cal. 462; 34 Pac. 84; Schultz v. McLean, 109 Cal. 437; 42 Pac. 557; George v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 126 Cal. 357; 77 Am. St. Rep. 184; 46 L. R. A. 829; 58 Pac. 819. Where the same issue or question of fact is involved in another special issue or question of fact, the court may refuse to submit a special issue which is but a repetition, in form or substance, of the one given. Irrgang v. Ott, 9 Cal. App. 440; 99 Pac. 528. In an action for the recovery of money only, the court has discretion to submit or to refuse to submit particular questions of fact to the jury; and error cannot be maintained without a clear showing of abuse of discretion. Olmstead v. Dauphiny, 104 Cal. 635; 38 Pac. 505. The statute does not require that the contest of the account of an executor shall be submitted to a jury on the demand of a party in interest. Estate of Sanderson, 74 Cal. 199; 15 Pac. 753. The court may, by request of counsel, direct the jury to find specially upon the corporate existence of a party, in addition to the general verdict. Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Warner, 72 Cal. 379; 14 Pac. 37. When counsel frame a proper request, it becomes the duty of the court to give, in its own language, the short and simple direction prescribed by the statute. Plyer v. Pacific etc. Cement Co., 152 Cal. 125; 92 Pac. 56. The court has a discretion to change the phraseology of a special issue submitted to the jury. Miller v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 6 Cal. App. 395; 92 Pac. 332. What the judge has to determine is, whether the party presenting the interrogatories has a right to demand their submission to the jury in the form in which they are presented. Plyer v. Pacific etc. Cement Co., 152 Cal. 125; 92 Pac. 56.

Submission without request. Since the amendment of this section in 1909, the court, in certain actions, has statutory authority, without the request of either party, to submit special issues to the jury, in addition to a general verdict. Wiencke v. Bibby, 15 Cal. App. 50; 113 Pac. 876.

Sufficiency of request. The propriety of a request for special findings depends upon two conditions: 1. Is the question so framed as to admit of a plain and direct answer? 2. Would an answer, favorable to the party preferring the request, be inconsistent with a general verdict for his adversary? and if either of these queries can be answered in the negative, the court is justified in refusing to submit the issue. Fujise v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 12 Cal. App. 207; 107 Pac. 317; Pigeon v. Fuller, 156 Cal. 691; 105 Pac. 976.

Waiver of request. The reception and entry of a verdict, without objection on the part of the defendant, is a waiver of his request for special findings. Brown v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 2 Cal. Unrep. 730; 12 Pac. 512.

Requirements as to interrogatories. There is no requirement that the interrogatories shall be submitted to opposing counsel; or that they shall be so framed that the jury may answer by a simple yes or no. Plyer v. Pacific etc. Cement Co., 152 Cal. 125; 92 Pac. 56.

Findings of court are special verdict. The court discharges the functions of a jury in passing upon an issue of fact, besides performing its peculiar and appropriate duty of deciding the law where the jury is waived; and so far as it acts as a jury, it is subject to the same rules and is entitled to the same privileges, with the exception of the mode of rendering its decision, for its verdict must in all cases be special. Breeze v. Doyle, 19 Cal. 101.

Judgment on verdict. The court cannot give a judgment contrary to a general verdict, except in the single instance where the special verdict is inconsistent with the general verdict; and a finding by the jury in a lesser sum than the amount claimed under an insurance policy is not such proof of fraud as will make a general verdict inconsistent with a special verdict. Obersteller v. Commercial Assur. Co., 96 Cal. 645; 31 Pac. 587; Portland Cracker Co. v. Murphy, 130 Cal. 649; 63 Pac. 70. Where the jury find on special issues, and also find a general verdict for the plaintiff, and the court thereupon declares that, on the findings, the defendant must have judgment, and some of the jury then dissent from the special verdict, and, on being sent out again, return with the general verdict, but are unable to agree on a special verdict, it is error to accept the general verdict. Fitzpatrick v. Himmelmann, 48 Cal. 588. Where general and special issues are submitted, and the jury find on the special issues alone, and do not render a general verdict, it is error for the court to render final judgment. Kiel v. Reay, 50 Cal. 61. Enough must be found by a special verdict or finding, when that is relied upon as the basis of a judgment, to show a legal conclusion of liability. Garfield v. Knight's Ferry etc. Water Co., 17 Cal. 510.

Presumptions as to verdict. Presumptions of law may be indulged in by the court; but it cannot indulge in inferences of fact as to matters bearing upon the issues presented to the jury; and if an ultimate fact be found by the jury, the court must declare that a certain particular judgment follows as matter of law. Estate of Benton, 131 Cal. 472; 63 Pac. 775. The presumption is, that all the issues presented by the pleadings were submitted to the jury under proper instructions, and were passed upon in arriving at their verdict. Horwege v. Sage, 137 Cal. 539; 70 Pac. 621. A general verdict upon issues and evidence properly submitted is presumed to decide every fact or deduction therefrom essential to support it, while a special verdict is limited and controlled by its specific terms. Spear v. United Railroads, 16 Cal. App. 637; 117 Pac. 956.

Terms compared and defined. Within the meaning of this section, "special verdicts" and "special findings" are identical in everything except the name; and it is wholly immaterial if the request of a party happens to be wrongly entitled; the term "special verdict" does not mean what it originally meant in the common-law practice, namely, a finding upon every material issue in the case; this section authorizes the demand for special verdicts on any one or more of the issues or particular questions of fact. Plyer v. Pacific etc. Cement Co., 152 Cal. 125; 92 Pac. 56.

Appeal. The sufficiency of the verdict to support the judgment cannot be considered on appeal from an order denying a new trial, but only on appeal from the judgment. Morse v. Wilson, 138 Cal. 558; 71 Pac. 801; and see Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; Riverside Water Co. v. Gage, 108 Cal. 240; 41 Pac. 299. A verdict for "nominal damages," in favor of the plaintiff, will not be set aside, nor judgment thereon reversed, on the ground that that term is not definite or certain. Davidson v. Devine, 70 Cal. 519; 11 Pac. 664. A general verdict is controlled by facts specially found; hence, objections to instructions in favor of the losing party need not be specially noticed on appeal. Los Angeles Cemetery Ass'n v. Los Angeles, 103 Cal. 461; 37 Pac. 375.

Common-law power and duty of court to submit proper special interrogatories to jury. See note 15 Ann. Cas. 469.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. It is for the court to determine as to what particular facts the jury shall find specially, and neither party has the right to dictate the terms of any particular question to be submitted to the jury. American Company v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 364. Where special issues have been submitted to a jury, and they announce that they cannot agree upon the special issues, but can agree upon a general verdict, and by consent of counsel on both sides the special issues are withdrawn, and a general verdict is received, it is not error. Mitchell v. Hockett, 25 Cal. 538, 545; 85 Am. Dec. 151; see subd. 4 of note to § 624, ante.

§ 626. Verdict in actions for recovery of money or on establishing counterclaim. When a verdict is found for the plaintiff in an action for the recovery of money, or for the defendant, when a counterclaim for the recovery of money is established, exceeding the amount of the plaintiff's claim as established, the jury must also find the amount of the recovery.

Legislation § 626. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 176 (New York Code, § 263), which had the word "shall" instead of "must."

Certainty of verdict. A verdict for a certain amount, less another amount with interest, is insufficient, the interest being indefinite and uncertain, and not susceptible of being ascertained from the pleadings. Watson v. Damon, 54 Cal. 278; Dougherty v. Haggin, 56 Cal. 522. Where the record and the verdict, taken together, show the exact sum which the jury meant to find, the judgment is not void. Hutchinson v. Superior Court, 61 Cal. 119. Where there is no controversy as to the amount claimed by the plaintiff, and the only issue was as to whether the plaintiff contracted with the defendant, a finding by the jury for the plaintiff is sufficient. Redmond v. Weismann, 77 Cal. 423; 20 Pac. 544. A general verdict on a promissory note, where there was no issue as to execution, terms, or amount, the only defense being want of consideration, is responsive to the issue raised, and sufficiently certain. Hutchinson v. Superior Court, 61 Cal. 119. Where the complaint averred that the plaintiff was entitled to five hundred inches of water under a four-inch pressure, and the jury found that he was entitled to forty inches, miner's measurement, the verdict is uncertain, as miners' measurements vary in different localities. Dougherty v. Haggin, 56 Cal. 522. An uncertain verdict cannot be made certain by findings of fact and conclusions of law by the court; and where the action was properly one at law, and the defense was equitable, such findings and conclusions must be regarded as surplusage. Diggs v. Porteus, 5 Cal. Unrep. 753; 33 Pac. 447.

Verdict for defendant on counterclaim. A finding for the defendant for costs, where he set up a counterclaim for damages, is sufficient, as, if the jury found nothing in favor of the plaintiff, the verdict must necessarily be for the defendant, and he would be entitled to costs; the jury could not specify the amount of any recovery, for there could be no recovery by either party. Electric Improvement Co. v. San José etc. Ry. Co., 3 Cal. Unrep. 618; 31 Pac. 455.

Verdict covering matters not in issue. The jury having nothing to do with matters not in issue, so much of a verdict as refers to such matters is surplusage. Pierce v. Schaden, 62 Cal. 283.

Verdict in action for damages. Where the plaintiff claims two elements of damage, a general verdict for him, in a single sum, cannot be upheld, if substantial error was committed as to one of such elements. Peek v. Steinberg, 163 Cal. 127; 124 Pac. 834. In an action for damages for false arrest and imprisonment, the jury may consider the great humiliation and anguish of the plaintiff, a woman, as elements in fixing damages. Sebring v. Harris, 20 Cal. App. 56; 128 Pac. 7.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Guy v. Franklin, 5 Cal. 417; Duff v. Hobbs, 19 Cal. 646.

§ 627. Verdict in actions for the recovery of specific personal property. In an action for the recovery of specific personal property, if the property has not been delivered to the plaintiff, or the defendant, by his answer, claim a return thereof, the jury, if their verdict be in favor of the plaintiff, or, if being in favor of defendant, they also find that he is entitled to a return thereof, must find the value of the property, and, if so instructed, the value of specific portions thereof, and may at the same time assess the damages, if any are claimed in the complaint or answer, which the prevailing party has sustained by reason of the taking or detention of such property.

Jury must find, etc. See post, § 667.

Legislation § 627. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 177 (New York Code, § 261), which had the word "shall" instead of "must."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 311, (1) omitting the word "the" after "in favor of," and (2) adding "and, if so instructed, the value of specific portions thereof."

Return of property. The plaintiff has the privilege of claiming delivery at any time before the filing of the answer, but it is not compulsory on him to do so. Wellman v. English, 38 Cal. 583. Judgment cannot be entered on a verdict on a finding in favor of the defendant for half of certain personal property, for the recovery of which the plaintiff has sued: the jury should be directed by the court, on its own motion, to retire and find as to the other half (Muller v. Jewell, 66 Cal. 216; 5 Pac. 84); but the plaintiff is precluded from any further litigation with the defendant, where only a portion of the property sued for is granted him, and the verdict is silent as to the remainder: it must be held that the plaintiff was denied any further relief than that granted. Ryan v. Fitzgerald, 87 Cal. 345; 25 Pac. 546. Where the recovery of the property is the primary object of the suit, as where damages will not compensate the plaintiff, he should frame his bill in equity, specifying the reasons therefor, and a decree can then be so framed as to compel a specific delivery. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568.

Value of property, and damages. A special verdict as to value is a statutory requisite. Pico v. Pico, 56 Cal. 453. The value of any specific portion of property is to be found by the jury, only if so instructed; and error can arise in a case, only where such instruction is pertinent and proper, and the instruction was asked and refused. Whetmore v. Rupe, 65 Cal. 237; 3 Pac. 851; Brenot v. Robinson, 108 Cal. 143; 41 Pac. 37; Kellogg v. Burr, 126 Cal. 38; 58 Pac. 306. Where delivery of the property is made to the plaintiff before the judgment, a judgment in his favor for its possession is sufficient. Claudius v. Aguirre, 89 Cal. 501; 26 Pac. 1077. Where the defendant was entitled to the property at the commencement of the action, but such right ceased and vested in the plaintiff before the trial, the judgment should leave the property in the plaintiff's possession, and award costs to the defendant. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312; Flinn v. Ferry, 127 Cal. 648; 60 Pac. 434. Damages for the detention of the property may be recovered by the plaintiff, but not money expended by him in its pursuit, as in actions for conversion. Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192. Where the court instructed the jury to render a verdict for the plaintiff for the property, and to find the value of the property and the damages, and the jury found and returned a verdict for the plaintiff for the value of the property and for damages, but did not find for the plaintiff for the property, the verdict, and the judgment thereon, are erroneous, as the plaintiff could not elect to deliver the property. Norcross v. Nunan, 61 Cal. 640.

Alternative judgment for return and value. The plaintiff may require the jury to find the value of the property, and he may insist, as a right, upon the alternative judgment. Clary v. Rolland, 24 Cal. 147; Mills v. Gleason, 21 Cal. 274. Where the jury find for the defendant, and fix the value of the property, a judgment for the return of the property, or for the value thereof in case delivery cannot be had, is justified. Etchepare v. Aguirre, 91 Cal. 288; 25 Am. St. Rep. 180; 27 Pac. 668. Where the jury find the right of possession to be in the plaintiff, the right to its delivery if it can be had, and if not, then to its value as found by the jury in the alternative, is a conclusion of law which the judgment must contain, but not the verdict. Ryan v. Fitzgerald, 87 Cal. 345; 25 Pac. 546. It is not necessary for the court to find the character or value of the property which can be returned, where such fact appears at the trial, nor is the court bound to enter judgment in the alternative. Burke v. Koch, 75 Cal. 356; 17 Pac. 28; Brown v. Johnson, 45 Cal. 76; Whetmore v. Rupe, 65 Cal. 237; 3 Pac. 851. The value of the property may be found by the jury, if their verdict is in favor of the plaintiff, only if the property has not been delivered to the plaintiff, and, conversely, if the property has been delivered to the plaintiff, they are not required to find the value; and in the absence of such finding, there is no verdict upon which to base an alternative judgment. Claudius v. Aguirre, 89 Cal. 501; 26 Pac. 1077; Caruthers v. Hensley, 90 Cal. 559; 27 Pac. 411; Seligman v. Armando, 94 Cal. 314; 29 Pac. 710; Erreca v. Meyer, 142 Cal. 308; 75 Pac. 826. Where the property has been delivered to the plaintiff, a defendant who recovers a judgment is entitled to a judgment for a return of all the property; and if it cannot be returned, then to a judgment for the value of the whole. Whetmore v. Rupe, 65 Cal. 237; 3 Pac. 851. The defendant must, in his answer, assert his formal claim for the return as a prerequisite to a judgment for the return of the property or its value. Pico v. Pico, 56 Cal. 453; Banning v. Marleau, 101 Cal. 238; 35 Pac. 772. There is no difference, in principle, between a judgment for the value of the property sued for without the alternative for its delivery, and a judgment for the delivery of the property without the alternative for its value: if the former is free from error, the latter must be equally so. Claudius v. Aguirre, 89 Cal. 501; 26 Pac. 1077; Burke v. Koch, 75 Cal. 356; 17 Pac. 228.

Judgment on nonsuit. This section does not apply to cases of nonsuit. Ginaca v. Atwood, 8 Cal. 446; Clary v. Rolland, 24 Cal. 147. To enable the defendant to obtain the value of property on a judgment of dismissal against the plaintiff for failure to appear, the answer must contain some allegation or prayer relative to the change of possession from the defendant to the plaintiff: the judgment of return is in the nature of a cross-judgment, and must be based upon proper averments. Gould v. Scannell, 13 Cal. 430; Pico v. Pico, 56 Cal. 453; Banning v. Marleau, 101 Cal. 238; 35 Pac. 772. Upon a dismissal by the plaintiff, the questions which should have been determined are left open to determination in an action on the replevin bond. Mills v. Gleason, 21 Cal. 274.

Construction of verdict by court. Where the form of the verdict is not satisfactory to a party, he should ask, at the time, to have it made formal and certain; otherwise it is the duty of the court so to construe it as to give it the effect intended by the jury, if it is susceptible of a construction which may have a lawful and relevant effect. Johnson v. Visher, 96 Cal. 310; 31 Pac. 106.

Appeal. A party will not be heard to object to a verdict for the first time on appeal from the judgment, if it is susceptible of a construction which may have a lawful and relevant effect. Johnson v. Visher, 96 Cal. 310; 31 Pac. 106.

Measure of damages recoverable in replevin. See note 22 Am. Rep. 285.

Right of defendant in replevin to compensation for depreciation in value of property returned. See note 2 Ann. Cas. 961.

Punitive damages in replevin or claim and delivery. See note 4 Ann. Cas. 71.

Effect on verdict in replevin of failure to find unlawful taking or detention. See note 20 Ann. Cas. 130.

Necessity that verdict in replevin give separate valuation of several articles involved. See note Ann. Cas. 1912D, 849.

Requisites of special verdict in action of replevin. See note 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 18.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568; Waldman v. Broder, 10 Cal. 379; Coghill v. Boring, 15 Cal. 218; Mills v. Gleason, 21 Cal. 274.

§ 628. Entry of verdict. Upon receiving a verdict, an entry must be made by the clerk in the minutes of the court, specifying the time of trial, the names of the jurors and witnesses, and setting out the verdict at length; and where special verdict is found, either the judgment rendered thereon, or if the case be reserved for argument or further consideration, the order thus reserving it.

Legislation § 628. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 178.

Construction of section. The matters mentioned in this section form a connection between the pleadings and the judgment, being a digression in the progress of the trial from the general course of procedure, and are properly evidenced by a permanent memorandum thereof for the guidance of the court, but their value ends on entry of judgment, and they cannot be used to impeach the record. Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511; 34 Pac. 109.

Entry of verdict presumed correct. The verdict is part of the judgment roll; and where the clerk properly certifies the transcript on appeal as being an authentic copy of the judgment roll, and the verdict appears therein, it will be presumed that it was properly recorded and entered by the clerk in the minutes of the court. Goldman v. Rogers, 85 Cal. 574; 24 Pac. 782.

Alteration or correction of verdict. The court acts upon the verdict as it is, and not as it should be (People v. Hill, 16 Cal. 113); and it cannot enter a verdict contrary to the will of the jury. Montgomery v. Sayre, 91 Cal. 206; 27 Pac. 648. The right to correct an unsatisfactory verdict does not depend upon the judgment, but all questions of this character should be settled before the final action of the court. People v. Hill, 16 Cal. 113.

Verdict and judgment must follow issues. To render a judgment payable in gold coin is error, even if the verdict specifies gold coin, where the agreement does not call for gold coin, and it is not demanded in the complaint; the verdict cannot go beyond the issues, and the surplus matter may be disregarded in entering judgment. Marquard v. Wheeler, 52 Cal. 445.

Judgment rendered when. The judgment is not always rendered immediately after the rendition of the verdict, nor even after the filing of the finding of facts by the judge or referee. Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 416. Where there is no question as to the proper judgment to be entered on the verdict, the judgment should be entered at once, without waiting for a motion for a new trial, or any proceedings to set aside the verdict (Hutchinson v. Bours, 13 Cal. 50); but the rendition of judgment on a special verdict is often reserved for argument or further consideration, and it frequently happens that judgment cannot be rendered for several months after the rendition of the verdict or the filing of the findings of facts. Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 416.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The verdict should be recorded as rendered. Moody v. McDonald, 4 Cal. 297. Under the code, it must be rendered in writing. Ante, § 618. If an informal verdict is recorded with consent of the prevailing party, and judgment in form is afterwards entered thereon, the informality will be disregarded. Treadwell v. Wells, 4 Cal. 263. Before a verdict is recorded, it ought to be declared by the foreman, or, if sealed, read by the clerk, so that the parties may be distinctly informed of its purport. It is irregular to record the verdict before it is thus announced, but the irregularity must be objected to at the time, or it will not be noticed on appeal. Assent to a recorded verdict, expressed by the foreman, is conclusive upon all the jury, unless a disagreement is expressed at the time. Blum v. Pate, 20 Cal. 69; but see §§ 618, 619, ante.

CHAPTER V.

TRIAL BY COURT.

§ 631. When and how trial by jury may be waived.
§ 632. Upon trial by court, decision to be in writing and filed within thirty days.
§ 633. Facts found and conclusions of law must be separately stated. Judgment on.
§ 634. Waiving findings of fact.
§ 635. Findings, how prepared. [Repealed.]
§ 636. Proceedings after determination of issue of law.

§ 631. When and how trial by jury may be waived. Trial by jury may be waived by the several parties to an issue of fact in actions arising on contract, or for the recovery of specific real or personal property, with or without damages, and with the assent of the court in other actions, in manner following:

1. By failing to appear at the trial.

2. By written consent filed with the clerk.

3. By oral consent, in open court, entered in the minutes.

4. By failing to announce that a jury is required, at the time the cause is first set upon the trial calendar if it be set upon notice or stipulation, or within five days after notice of setting if it be set without notice or stipulation.

5. By failing, at the beginning of each day's session, to deposit with the clerk the jury fees and, if there be any, the mileage for such day.

Waiver of jury trial. See Const., art. I, § 7.
Waiver of jury, in justice's court. See post, § 883.

Legislation § 631. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 179.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 311, (1) in the first paragraph, (a) adding "or for the recovery of specific real or personal property, with or without damages," and (b) omitting the word "the" before "manner"; (2) omitting the final paragraph, which read: "The court may prescribe by rule what shall be deemed a waiver in other cases."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 146; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 649, (1) in subd. 2, striking out the phrase "in person or by attorney," after "written consent"; (2) adding subds. 4 and 5.

Construction of section. A jury may be waived only in one of the modes prescribed by this section. People v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 164 Cal. 174; 128 Pac. 324.

Constitutional provision. The provision of the constitution securing the right to a trial by jury refers generally to those cases in which such right existed at common law at the time of the adoption of the constitution. Woods v. Varnum, 85 Cal. 639; 24 Pac. 843; and see Grim v. Norris, 19 Cal. 140; 79 Am. Dec. 206.

Waiver by failure to appear. The failure of either party to appear at the trial operates as a consent, on his part, that the issue shall be tried by the court without a jury; but failure to appear does not authorize the trial to be had by a jury of less than twelve persons. Gillespie v. Benson, 18 Cal. 409. The absence of the defendant is a waiver of the right to a trial by jury; and the mere filing of an answer does not constitute an appearance (Zane v. Crowe, 4 Cal. 112); and there is also a waiver, where the defendant fails to appear, although the judge, on receipt of a telegram from the defendant the day before the trial, had ordered a jury (McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312); but the failure of the defendant to appear at the trial, when the case was improperly on the equity calendar, and he had no notice thereof, is not a waiver. Sweeney v. Stanford, 60 Cal. 362.

Stipulation as waiver. A stipulation should not be regarded as a contract made upon a valuable consideration, which should not be set aside except for fraud or mistake; and relief should be had therefrom, where neither party would be injured, nor the orderly conduct of the business of the court disarranged. Ferrea v. Chabot, 121 Cal. 333; 53 Pac. 689, 1092. A stipulation of attorneys to set a case for trial on a day certain, before a department then known to be engaged in the trial of causes without a jury, is not a waiver of the right to a trial by jury: such right cannot be waived by implication. Platt v. Havens, 119 Cal. 244; 51 Pac. 342.

Oral consent as waiver. An oral agreement, made in open court, to waive a trial by jury upon a counter-agreement to transfer the cause to another department, so as to secure delay, cannot be avoided because not entered in the minutes. Hawes v. Clark, 84 Cal. 272; 24 Pac. 116.

Trial by court, without objection, as waiver. There is a waiver of trial by jury, where counsel for the defendant appears, and the cause is tried by the court without objection (Boston Tunnel Co. v. McKenzie, 67 Cal. 485; 8 Pac. 22); and also where the parties go to trial without demanding a jury (Pfister v. Dascey, 65 Cal. 403; 4 Pac. 393; Ferrea v. Chabot, 121 Cal. 233; 53 Pac. 689); and also where the case comes on regularly for trial before the court without a jury, and the trial actually begins (Polak v. Gurnee, 66 Cal. 266; 5 Pac. 229); and also where the verdict of the jury is treated by counsel and the court as of no effect and both parties proceed to try the case, introduce further evidence, and submit the case for decision and judgment. Montgomery v. Sayre, 3 Cal. Unrep. 365; 25 Pac. 552.

Presumption of waiver. The presumption is, that the defendant waived the right to trial by jury, where the record on appeal is silent on the subject. Montgomery v. Sayre, 91 Cal. 206; 27 Pac. 648; Leadbetter v. Lake, 118 Cal. 515; 50 Pac. 686. The right to a jury trial should not be held waived by implication. People v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 164 Cal. 174; 128 Pac. 324.

Demand for jury. It is not necessary for a party entitled to a trial by jury to make any demand therefor; and where the defendant files a written demand for a jury, this must be held to be a continued refusal to waive the right. Swasey v. Adair, 88 Cal. 179; 25 Pac. 1119. Where a demand for a jury must be considered as a continuous refusal to waive the right, it is not necessary to repeat the demand. Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co., 19 Cal. App. 1; 124 Pac. 734. Failure of the defendant to demand, on law-day, a trial by jury, as required by the rules of the court, is not a waiver of the right (Biggs v. Lloyd, 70 Cal. 447; 11 Pac. 831); nor is there a waiver, where the defendant, by reason of the postponement of the trial, at his request, from morning until the afternoon, prior to its commencement, and he is entitled to a jury trial if he demands it before the trial actually commences, unless he has waived it in one of the ways prescribed by law. Farwell v. Murray, 104 Cal. 464; 38 Pac. 199. A telegraphic demand for a jury trial, sent to the judge the day before the trial, is not sufficient, even where the judge, upon the receipt of the telegram, orders a jury, if the party fails to appear in person or by counsel at the trial. McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312. Where the defendant demands a trial by jury, and the plaintiff objects, it is within the discretion of the court to require the defendant, as a condition for making the order, to deposit one day's per diem and the mileage of the jury. Hudson v. Hudson, 129 Cal. 141; 61 Pac. 773; and see Naphtaly v. Rovegno, 130 Cal. 639; 63 Pac. 66.

Rules of court. The legislature alone has the power of declaring what shall constitute a waiver of trial by jury: a rule of court cannot declare what shall be considered such a waiver (People v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 164 Cal. 174; 128 Pac. 324; Biggs v. Lloyd, 70 Cal. 447; 11 Pac. 831); and the failure of the defendant to demand a trial by jury, at the time the case is set for trial, as called for by the rules of the court, is not a waiver of the right. Biggs v. Lloyd, 70 Cal. 447; 11 Pac. 831. Where a proper demand for a jury is made and entered in the minutes of the court when the case is originally set for trial, and, after a continuance, both a demand and deposit, in conformity with a rule of court, are made when the case is reset, it is error to deny a jury trial on the ground that it has been waived. Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co., 19 Cal. App. 1; 124 Pac. 734. A rule of the court, requiring the deposit of jury fees within five days after making demand for a jury, is reasonable; and if not complied with, the right to a trial by jury is waived (Adams v. Crawford, 116 Cal. 495; 48 Pac. 488); and a rule requiring the deposit of twenty-four dollars upon demand for a jury is reasonable. Bank of Lassen County v. Sherer, 108 Cal. 513; 41 Pac. 415. A party is not entitled to a jury trial unless he deposits the jury fees, as required by a rule of court. Naphtaly v. Rovegno, 130 Cal. 639; 63 Pac. 66, 621. A rule of the court, regulating the right of a party to demand a jury trial, will be upheld, so far as it requires a deposit of jury fees as a condition to the insistence upon such right, but no further. People v. Metropolitan Surety Co., 164 Cal. 174; 128 Pac. 324. The rule requiring the jury fees to be paid in advance is a reasonable precaution to prevent jurors from being defrauded by unscrupulous parties, and to prevent the demand for a jury from being used as a pretext to obtain continuances. Conneau v. Geis, 73 Cal. 176; 2 Am. St. Rep. 785; 14 Pac. 580. A rule of the court, requiring a demand for a jury, where one is desired, and a deposit, is to be fairly and liberally construed in favor of the demandant. Wendling Lumber Co. v. Glenwood Lumber Co., 19 Cal. App. 1; 124 Pac. 734.

Jury denied in suits in equity. A demand for a trial by jury, where the jurisdiction is in equity, which can afford complete relief, is properly denied (Mesenburg v. Dunn, 125 Cal. 222; 57 Pac. 887): the parties to a suit in equity are not entitled to a trial by jury. Walker v. Sedgwick, 5 Cal. 193; Still v. Saunders, 8 Cal. 281.

Waiver of jury as affecting right to jury on second trial. See note 4 Ann. Cas. 1004.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. The right to a trial by jury may be waived in the mode prescribed by law. Russell v. Elliott, 2 Cal. 245; Exline v. Smith, 5 Cal. 112; Smith v. Pollock, 2 Cal. 92. A party cannot, without objection, try his case before the court without a jury, and then complain that it was not tried by jury. Smith v. Brannan, 13 Cal. 107; Greason v. Keteltas, 17 N. Y. 498. In a civil case, a party may waive a beneficial constitutional provision. Van Hook v. Whitlock, 26 Wend. 43, 37 Am. Dec. 246; 7 Paige, 373; 2 Edw. Ch. 304. And having once waived the provision, he cannot subsequently avail himself of it as a protection. Tombs v. Rochester etc. R. R. Co., 18 Barb. 583; Lee v. Tillotson, 24 Wend. 337; 35 Am. Dec. 624; Baker v. Braman, 6 Hill, 47; 40 Am. Dec. 387; Embury v. Conner, 3 N. Y. 511; 53 Am. Dec 325. In criminal cases, parties have not the power to modify, by their consent, the substantial constitution of the legal tribunal nor the fundamental mode of its proceedings. Cancemi v. People, 16 N. Y. 501; People v. Cancemi, 7 Abb. Pr. 271. A prisoner cannot be legally tried or convicted on the verdict of eleven jurors, although he consented to be so tried. Cancemi v. People, supra.

2. Failure to appear. The failure to appear at the trial is a waiver of the right to a trial by jury. Waltham v. Carson, 10 Cal. 178; Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432; Gillespie v. Benson, 18 Cal. 409. Filing an answer is not an appearance, within the meaning of the first subdivision of this section. Zane v. Crowe, 4 Cal. 112. A failure to appear does not authorize a trial by a jury of less than twelve. Gillespie v. Benson, 18 Cal. 409. Under a rule of court requiring a party demanding a trial by jury to file a written notice with the clerk six days before the commencement of the term, it was held, that a jury was waived by the parties by a failure to file the notice that a jury will be required, but that a court has a right to direct an issue of fact to be tried by a jury, notwithstanding the parties have waived the same. Doll v. Anderson, 27 Cal. 250.

§ 632. Upon trial by court, decision to be in writing and filed within thirty days. Upon the trial of a question of fact by the court, its decision must be given in writing and filed with the clerk within thirty days after the cause is submitted for decision.

Legislation § 632. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on the first sentence of Practice Act, § 180, which read: "Upon the trial of an issue of fact by the court, its decision shall be given in writing, and filed with the clerk, within ten days after the trial took place." When enacted in 1872, the section read as at present, except that (1) it had the word "twenty" instead of "thirty," and (2) at the end of the section, the clause "and unless the decision is filed within that time the action must again be tried."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 312.

Construction of section. This section refers to the trial of civil actions, and not to special proceedings. Lyons v. Marcher, 119 Cal. 382; 51 Pac. 559. The adoption of a verdict in a suit in equity is equivalent to a finding by the court; and the case cannot be considered as tried until the decision is made and filed. Warring v. Freear, 64 Cal. 54; 28 Pac. 115; and see Hastings v. Hastings, 31 Cal. 95. Findings by the court that several matters are not true, and a general finding that the several allegations of the complaint, not in conflict with the foregoing findings, are true, are insufficient, and not in accordance with this section: the court is required to find facts. Goodnow v. Griswold, 68 Cal. 599; 9 Pac. 837.

Findings must be signed and filed. The signature of the judge and the filing with the clerk are sufficient to make the finding a matter of record. Reynolds v. Harris, 8 Cal. 617. A transcript on appeal, setting forth the findings and conclusions, but not showing that they were signed by the judge or filed with the clerk, nor that there was any judgment entered thereon, does not show that any judgment was ever rendered by the court, and is cause for dismissal of the appeal. Estate of De Leon, 4 Cal. Unrep. 388; 35 Pac. 309. The mere entry of a minute-order of the court, as is customary on announcing its decision, is not ordinarily the decision from which an appeal is to be taken, and certainly cannot be considered such, where the court, after making the entry, filed formal findings of fact and conclusions of law and thereupon entered judgment. Sullivan v. Washburn etc. Mfg. Co., 139 Cal. 257; 72 Pac. 992. The decision must be filed before judgment may be entered. Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal. App. 405; 132 Pac. 454, 462.

Time prescribed is directory. The provision of this section requiring the court to file its decision in writing within thirty days after submission of the cause, is directory merely: the court trying a case without a jury may file its findings of fact and conclusions of law after the time designated. Vermule v. Shaw, 4 Cal. 214; Broad v. Murray, 44 Cal. 228; McLennan v. Bank of California, 87 Cal. 569; 25 Pac. 760. The rights of the parties are not to be prejudiced by the delay of the court in respect to any of these acts or proceedings; and the court is authorized to direct the making or filing of its findings of fact and conclusions of law, as well as the entry of a judgment thereon, nunc pro tunc, as of such date as will preserve such rights. Fox v. Hale etc. Mining Co., 108 Cal. 478; 41 Pac. 328. The filing of findings, more than six months after judgment was ordered for the defendant, is not ground for a new trial, nor can it be considered on appeal by the plaintiff from the order denying a new trial. Kepfler v. Kepfler, 134 Cal. 205; 66 Pac. 208.

Findings unnecessary when. Findings of fact are not necessary where the case is submitted upon an agreed statement of facts. Earle v. Bryant, 12 Cal. App. 553; 107 Pac. 1018.

The opinion. The opinion of the court, expressed from the bench, in deciding a case, is no part of its decision. American Well etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 19 Cal. App. 497; 126 Pac. 497. The opinion of the trial court, appearing either in the briefs or in the record, merely indicates the points involved, and the views of the court thereon, and cannot be considered to affect or change the facts as found, and it forms no part of the record on appeal (Churchill v. Flournoy, 127 Cal. 355; 59 Pac. 791; Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 24; 73 Am. Dec. 565; Hidden v. Jordan, 28 Cal. 301; McClory v. McClory, 38 Cal. 575; Wixon v. Devine, 67 Cal. 341; 7 Pac. 776); and the general language found in the opinion rendered in the decision must be construed with reference to the particular facts then before the court (Chapman v. State, 104 Cal. 690; 43 Am. St. Rep. 158; 38 Pac. 457; Grant v. Murphy, 116 Cal. 427; 58 Am. St. Rep. 188; 48 Pac. 481); and a written opinion, offered for the purpose of showing the nature of the action, and the issues submitted to the court, without even the form of having been under oath, is not competent evidence for that purpose. Keech v. Beatty, 127 Cal. 177; 59 Pac. 837.

Issues. It is the duty of the court to pass upon all the issues involved in the action. Montecito Valley Water Co. v. Santa Barbara, 144 Cal. 578; 77 Pac. 1113; Kusel v. Kusel, 147 Cal. 55; 81 Pac. 297. It is indicated by this section, that, where there is no fact in issue, there is no fact to be proved; but that wherever a fact is to be established by evidence, the rule is different, as where the asserted fact is the ground upon which the party relies for a divorce. Nelson v. Nelson, 18 Cal. App. 602; 123 Pac. 1099.

Terms defined. The clerk's entry in the minutes is not the decision of the cause. Delger v. Jacobs, 19 Cal. App. 197; 125 Pac. 258. The "decision" of the court is found in its findings, and not in the giving of the judgment. Elizalde v. Murphy, 11 Cal. App. 32; 103 Pac. 904. The signing and filing of findings of fact and conclusions of law constitute the rendition of judgment by the court. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; Hoover v. Lester, 16 Cal. App. 151; 116 Pac. 382.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 633, post.

§ 633. Facts found and conclusions of law must be separately stated. Judgment on. In giving the decision, the facts found and the conclusions of law must be separately stated. Judgment upon the decision must be entered accordingly.

Legislation § 633. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on the second sentence of Practice Act, § 180, which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in both instances.

Object of section. The object of this section is twofold: 1. To preclude the trial court from mingling together questions of fact and law, so that the facts presented in the findings may contain all the attributes of a special verdict, to the end that the proper application of the legal principles to the case may be investigated independently of the facts; and 2. That the conclusions of law may serve as directory to the clerk in entering judgment upon the facts as found. Spencer v. Duncan, 107 Cal. 423; 40 Pac. 549. The object of this section is to abolish the doctrine of implied findings, and to separate questions of fact from questions of law; and a party to an action may now present, on appeal, the points, that the judgment is not a legal conclusion from the facts found, and that the evidence does not sustain the findings, or some of them. Dowd v. Clarke, 51 Cal. 262. One main object of this section seems to have been to prevent the court from summarily ordering judgment without stating any facts or legal conclusions upon which it is based, and also to facilitate the review of the judgment on appeal: its main object was surely not to afford a cover under which a losing party might successfully set a trap to capture a just judgment. Millard v. Supreme Council, 81 Cal. 340; 22 Pac. 864. The intention of this section is, that the decision of the court shall be the basis of the judgment, in the same manner as the verdict of the jury: the section is not merely directory, and the court has no right to impair or destroy its efficacy. Russel v. Armador, 2 Cal. 305.

Separate statement. This section is directory, so far as it applies to the conclusions of law being separately stated (Spencer v. Duncan, 107 Cal. 423; 40 Pac. 549): correct findings, or conclusions of law and fact, may be considered, wherever set out. Butler v. Agnew, 9 Cal. App. 327; 99 Pac. 395. A judgment is not rendered ineffective by reason of being contained in the same document with the findings. Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868. The findings of fact and conclusions of law constitute the decision, but this does not preclude the inclusion of the conclusions of law in the judgment alone, where the judgment and the findings of fact are drawn and filed at the same time. Gainsley v. Gainsley, 5 Cal. Unrep. 310; 44 Pac. 456; and see Miller v. Hicken, 92 Cal. 229; 28 Pac. 339. A finding placed after the conclusions of law, and given as a fact resulting from the other findings of fact, does not cease to be a finding of fact by reason of its position (Knowlton v. Mackenzie, 110 Cal. 183; 42 Pac. 580); and the mere fact that a finding is placed under the wrong heading is a very feeble reason for the reversal of a judgment.

Millard v. Supreme Council, 81 Cal. 340; 22 Pac. 864; Burton v. Burton, 79 Cal. 490; 21 Pac. 847.

Separate findings, where causes of action are joint. Where several causes of action are joined, the court may make a single set of findings based on allegations common to each cause of action, and separate findings for each matter applicable only to any one cause of action. Anderson v. Blean, 19 Cal. App. 581; 126 Pac. 859.

Findings, what are. The finding of facts and conclusions of law are different from the opinion: the finding consists of a concise, distinct, pointed, and separate statement of each essential fact established by the evidence, in its proper order, without any of the testimony by which the facts are proved, followed by a similar statement of the conclusions of law drawn from facts thus found. Hidden v. Jordan, 28 Cal. 301. The special verdict of a jury is adopted by the court in making an order that judgment be entered in accordance with the verdict of the jury rendered therein, and all the special issues submitted to the jury, and their answers or findings thereon, were incorporated in the judgment, together with the general verdict; and when adopted by the court, it takes the place of and is equivalent to findings by the court. Morrison v. Stone, 103 Cal. 94; 37 Pac. 142. A document filed by the judge, in which he states the case, the testimony, and the reasons for his decision, and not the ultimate facts established by the evidence, is an opinion, and not a finding. McClory v. McClory, 38 Cal. 575.

Findings under Practice Act. Under the amendment of 1866 to § 180 of the Practice Act, if the losing party appealed without moving for a new trial, or without excepting to the findings as defective, the written findings were of no avail for any purpose to the prevailing party, nor were they of any benefit to the losing party unless they contained facts repugnant to or inconsistent with the judgment; and previous to the act of 1861 the findings were required to support the judgment, but, under that act, and § 180 of the Practice Act, where there was no exception on the ground that the finding was defective or wanting, it was only requisite that the finding should not be repugnant to or inconsistent with the judgment. Sears v. Dixon, 33 Cal. 326.

Necessity for findings. Prior to the codes, findings were not essential to the entry or validity of a judgment. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; see also Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680; 39 Pac. 56. They are required only in civil actions and in special proceedings, where made necessary by statute; written findings were not required under the common-law practice. Disbarment of Danford, 157 Cal. 425; 108 Pac. 322. Findings are necessary to support a final judgment upon the merits. Saul v. Moscone, 16 Cal. App. 506; 118 Pac. 452. In an action to recover the value of legal services, the complaint must allege the non-payment of the claim, which must also be proved, if that fact is put in issue by the answer; and, where findings are not waived, it must be substantially found, to support a judgment for the plaintiff, that the money has not been paid. Harlan v. Lambert, 19 Cal. App. 349; 125 Pac. 1079. A finding as to a fact implied by law is not necessary. Pinheiro v. Bettencourt, 17 Cal. App. 111; 118 Pac. 941. Where a finding is conclusive against the right of the plaintiff to recover, findings upon other issues are unnecessary (Gregory v. Gregory, 102 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 364; Dyer v. Brogan, 70 Cal. 136; 11 Pac. 589); nor are findings required in a case of nonsuit. Toulouse v. Pare, 103 Cal. 251; 37 Pac. 146; and see Gilson Quartz Mining Co. v. Gilson, 47 Cal. 597; Reynolds v. Brumagim, 54 Cal. 254.

Findings are like special verdict. Findings of fact are like a special verdict. Simmons v. Hamilton, 56 Cal. 493; Kennedy & Shaw Lumber Co. v. S. S. Construction Co., 123 Cal. 584; 56 Pac. 457. The court, when trying an issue of fact, is entitled to the same privileges and is subject to the same rules as a jury, with the exception of the mode of rendering its decision: its verdict must in all cases be special. Breeze v. Doyle, 19 Cal. 101.

Form. The code does not prescribe the form of findings. Millard v. Supreme Council, 81 Cal. 340; 22 Pac. 864. Findings on material issues raised by the pleadings and evidence need not be in any particular form. Harlan v. Lambert, 19 Cal. App. 349; 125 Pac. 1079.

Trial court must find facts. The trial court is required to find the facts, not evidence of facts; the appellate court is not competent to deduce conclusions of facts from evidence; to do which would be to assume original jurisdiction, committed by the constitution to the trial court, and denied to the appellate court. McDonald v. Burton, 68 Cal. 445; 9 Pac. 714. The labor and duty of finding the facts is imposed upon the lower court by statute: that court cannot turn it over to the supreme court, or to any other tribunal or person. Goodnow v. Griswold, 68 Cal. 599; 9 Pac. 837.

Opinion or oral declaration of judge as affecting finding. The opinion of a judge is merely an informal statement of his views of the cause, which are subject to change or modification; the legal expression of his views is to be found only in the findings of fact and conclusions of law.

Montecito Valley Water Co. v. Santa Barbara, 144 Cal. 578; 77 Pac. 1113; Wadleigh v. Phelps, 149 Cal. 627; 87 Pac. 93. The finding of the court is not impaired by any oral declaration of the judge at the time he announces his decision, nor is he concluded by any such declaration by subsequently making a finding contrary thereto. Fisk v. Casey, 119 Cal. 643; 51 Pac. 1077.

Finding of probative and ultimate facts. Findings should be statements of the ultimate facts in controversy, and not of probative facts or mere conclusions of law (Murphy v. Bennett, 68 Cal. 528; 9 Pac. 738); though findings of probative facts, where the ultimate facts necessarily result from them, are sufficient (Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Whitaker, 109 Cal. 268; 41 Pac. 1083; Mott v. Ewing, 90 Cal. 231; 27 Pac. 194; Murdock v. Clarke, 90 Cal. 427; 27 Pac. 275); and where the probative facts are found, the court can declare that the ultimate facts necessarily result from them (Alhambra etc. Water Co. v. Richardson, 72 Cal. 598; 14 Pac. 379); and also where the ultimate facts flow as a necessary conclusion therefrom (Bull v. Bray, 89 Cal. 286; 13 L. R. A. 576; 26 Pac. 873; Estate of Benton, 131 Cal. 472; 63 Pac. 775); but an ultimate finding of fact, drawn as a conclusion from the probative facts found, cannot stand if the specific facts upon which it is based do not support it. McKay v. Gesford, 163 Cal. 243; Ann. Cas. 1913E, 1253; 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 303; 124 Pac. 1016. Particular facts found, relied upon as a substitute for a finding upon the ultimate fact alleged and put in issue, must be inconsistent with the fact they tend to negative, and every particular fact necessary to constitute this negation must be stated in the finding. Kusel v. Kusel, 147 Cal. 52; 81 Pac. 297. A finding that "sales were not rescinded" being held the finding of an ultimate fact depending upon probative facts, and a finding that "no lien existed" being also held the finding of an ultimate fact, it cannot be seen why a finding "that the plaintiff has no prescriptive right" is not also the finding of an ultimate fact; for it depends upon certain probative facts, which, in their turn, depend upon evidence. Weidenmueller v. Stearns Ranchos Co., 128 Cal. 623; 61 Pac. 374. Findings are not necessary, where the ultimate facts put in issue by the pleadings have been agreed upon, but the finding of an ultimate fact is properly made where an agreed statement of facts sets forth merely evidentiary matter, from which the ultimate fact might be found either way. Crisman v. Lanterman, 149 Cal. 647; 117 Am. St. Rep. 167; 87 Pac. 89. Findings of probative facts will not invalidate the finding of an ultimate fact, unless the latter is based on the former and is entirely overcome thereby, and unless, also, these findings of probative facts dispose of all the facts involved in the pleadings and the facts found constitute all the facts in the case. Forsythe v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 149 Cal. 569; 87 Pac. 24. Findings of probative facts will not, in general, control, limit, or modify the finding of the ultimate fact, and although the finding of probative facts from which the ultimate fact conclusively follows is sufficient, yet when the ultimate fact is found, no finding of probative facts which may tend to establish that the ultimate fact was found against the evidence can overcome the principal findings; in such case the only remedy is to move for a new trial. Sharp v. Bowie, 142 Cal. 462; 76 Pac. 62; Smith v. Acker, 52 Cal. 217; Gill v. Driver, 90 Cal. 72; 27 Pac. 64; Perry v. Quackenbush, 105 Cal. 299; 38 Pac. 740. A finding of the ultimate fact prevails in support of the judgment, notwithstanding the finding of a probative or evidentiary fact that tends to show that the ultimate fact was found against the evidence. Forsythe v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 149 Cal. 569; 87 Pac. 24. A finding of ownership includes the probative facts. Hynes v. All Persons, 19 Cal. App. 185; 125 Pac. 253. The presumption on appeal is not only in favor of the ultimate fact found, but also that any conflict in the evidence as to probative facts was resolved in such a manner as to sustain the general finding. Ballard v. Nye, 138 Cal. 586; 72 Pac. 156.

Material issues. A party is entitled to a distinct finding upon every material issue, whether made by denials of averments in the complaint, or by the denials, presumed by law, of averments in the answer. Harlan v. Ely, 55 Cal. 340. Every material issue must be met by the findings. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 124 Cal. 422; 57 Pac. 225. A failure to find upon any material issue raised by the pleadings is ground for reversal (Kimball v. Stormer, 65 Cal. 116; 3 Pac. 408); but not where the findings omitted would have been adverse to the appellant. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481; Murphy v. Bennett, 68 Cal. 528; 9 Pac. 738; Demartin v. Demartin, 85 Cal. 71; 24 Pac. 594. If all the material issues are not found upon, a reversal will not be ordered, unless the findings on the issues not found upon would have entitled the appellant to a judgment in his favor. Bloehman v. Spreckels, 135 Cal. 662; 57 L. R. A. 213; 67 Pac. 1061; and see Gould v. Adams, 108 Cal. 365; 41 Pac. 408. Where there are, in substance, findings on the material issues, it is not necessary that they shall be in the exact language of the pleadings, or in any particular form. Millard v. Supreme Council, 81 Cal. 340; 22 Pac. 864.

It is not always necessary to make a specific finding as to each of several material issues, where the findings, taken as a whole, or construed together, clearly show that they include the court's conclusion upon all the material issues. Rossi v. Beaulieu Vineyard, 20 Cal. App. 770; 130 Pac. 201. The court errs in failing to find upon the material allegations of a cross-complaint, where there is evidence to support them. Cargnani v. Cargnani, 16 Cal. App. 96; 116 Pac. 306.

Evidence on issue necessary. It is incumbent upon the party complaining to show that evidence was offered to prove his affirmative defense, and that such evidence would have justified a finding in his favor (De Tolna v. De Tolna, 135 Cal. 575; 67 Pac. 1045; and see Woodham v. Cline, 130 Cal. 497; 62 Pac. 822); and an appellant cannot complain that the court failed to find upon an issue tendered by him, unless he brings up the evidence, and shows that he introduced evidence upon that issue which would have justified a ruling in his favor. Estate of Carpenter, 127 Cal. 582; 60 Pac. 162. Where no direct evidence is introduced upon any issue, the finding should be against the party having the burden of proof. Demartin v. Demartin, 85 Cal. 71; 24 Pac. 594; People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263. The failure to find upon the facts in issue, constituting a defense to the action, does not justify a reversal, unless there was evidence given from which such facts could be found. Callahan v. James, 141 Cal. 291; 74 Pac. 853; Himmelman v. Henry, 84 Cal. 104; 23 Pac. 1098; Gregory v. Gregory, 102 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 364; Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828. The omission of the court to make findings upon issues presented by a cross-complaint is not a ground for reversal, in the absence of any bill of exceptions or other showing that evidence was given upon the issues so presented. Stewart v. Hollingsworth, 129 Cal. 177; 61 Pac. 936. Where the record does not show that evidence was offered in support of a counterclaim, the failure of the court to make a finding thereon does not justify a reversal. Cutting Fruit Packing Co. v. Canty, 141 Cal. 692; 75 Pac. 564; and see Winslow v. Gohransen, 88 Cal. 450; 26 Pac. 504; Hihn Co. v. Fleckner, 106 Cal. 95; 39 Pac. 214. Where an affirmative defense is pleaded, and the defendant offered no evidence, he cannot complain, on appeal, that the court made no finding thereon. Frantz v. Harper, 6 Cal. Unrep. 560; 62 Pac. 603. The presumption that no evidence was offered on an issue upon which there is no finding, applies not only to the issues that are made to the allegations of the complaint by the answer, but also to the issues made by the averment of new matter in the answer which are deemed controverted; and a failure to make a finding upon any of these issues is not, in the absence of a bill of exceptions, error. Bliss v. Sneath, 119 Cal. 526; 51 Pac. 848; Estate of Carpenter, 127 Cal. 582; 60 Pac. 162.

Findings as supported by evidence. To require a finding upon any affirmative matter urged to a counterclaim, it must constitute a defense thereto, and be supported by some evidence. L. Scatena & Co. v. Van Loben Sels, 19 Cal. App. 423; 126 Pac. 187. In ejectment for a strip of a city lot, where each party has exactly what he has deemed himself entitled to for over forty years, and on which, during all of that time, he has paid taxes, a finding that the plaintiff never possessed such strip is sustained by the evidence. Marsicano v. Luning, 19 Cal. App. 334; 125 Pac. 1083. Findings which are in part probative facts and in part ultimate facts, and conclusions which are in part more findings of ultimate facts than conclusions of law, may all be looked to to determine whether they are supported by sufficient evidence, are sufficiently responsive to the issues made by the pleadings, and support the judgment. Mason v. Lievre, 145 Cal. 514; 78 Pac. 1040. Where the cause is properly decided upon an issue raised by a special defense, and the decision does not rest upon the allegations of the complaint, it is of no consequence whether the findings as to such allegations are or are not contrary to the evidence. Rauer v. Fay, 128 Cal. 523; 61 Pac. 90.

Facts admitted by the pleadings. Findings need not be made of facts admitted by the pleadings, or sufficiently covered by the findings actually made. Giselman v. Starr, 106 Cal. 651; 40 Pac. 8. Facts averred in the pleading of one party, and not denied by the other, need not be found by the court. Estate of Doyle, 73 Cal. 564; 15 Pac. 125; Ortega v. Cordero, 88 Cal. 221; 26 Pac. 80; Powell v. Bank of Lemoore, 125 Cal. 468; 58 Pac. 83. Facts admitted by the pleadings need not be found by the court; but a finding by the court against a material admission is ground for a reversal of the judgment (Faulkner v. Rondoni, 104 Cal. 140; 37 Pac. 883); nor are findings required upon facts not disputed; and none are necessary, where an agreed statement covers all the facts in the case (Pomeroy v. Gregory, 66 Cal. 572; 6 Pac. 492, 493; Taylor v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 67 Cal. 615; 8 Pac. 436); and as to such admitted facts, the pleadings, in effect, become part of the findings; and the findings determine the material issues of fact raised by the pleadings. Kennedy & Shaw Lumber Co. v. S. S. Construction Co., 123 Cal. 584; 56 Pac. 457. The facts need not necessarily follow the pleadings which they support:

if the truth or falsity of each material allegation not admitted can be demonstrated from the findings, the requirements of the code are met. Mott v. Ewing, 90 Cal. 231; 27 Pac. 194. A finding contrary to an admission in the pleadings will be disregarded in determining the question whether a proper conclusion of law was drawn from the facts found and admitted; and a finding by the court against an averment not denied does not create an issue which the party has a right to have tried. Machado v. Kinney, 135 Cal. 354; 67 Pac. 331.

Findings outside of issues. A finding of fact can only be made upon issues joined by the pleadings, where the decision of the court following the findings is a judgment. Waller v. Weston, 125 Cal. 201; 57 Pac. 892. Findings outside of the issues, and not carried into the judgment, are immaterial (Collins v. Gray, 154 Cal. 131; 97 Pac. 142); and findings not determinative of the issues are insufficient. Kimball v. Stormer, 65 Cal. 116; 3 Pac. 408. Findings outside of the issues cannot sustain a judgment. Green v. Chandler, 54 Cal. 626; Sachse v. Auburn, 95 Cal. 650; 30 Pac. 800; Gamache v. South School District, 133 Cal. 145; 65 Pac. 301. There is no error in not finding upon a particular matter not in issue. Kern River Co. v. Los Angeles County, 164 Cal. 751; 130 Pac. 714; Younger v. Moore, 155 Cal. 767; 103 Pac. 221; Pinheiro v. Bettencourt, 17 Cal. App. 119; 118 Pac. 941; Mentry v. Broadway Bank etc. Co., 20 Cal. App. 388; 129 Pac. 470. A finding and judgment based upon a supposed breach of contract, not attempted to be alleged in the complaint, are erroneous and invalid, and cannot be sustained. Lyden v. Spohn-Patrick Co., 155 Cal. 177; 100 Pac. 236.

Failure to find upon certain issues. On appeal upon the judgment roll alone, it will not be presumed that any evidence was given upon an issue as to which there is no finding. Eva v. Symons, 145 Cal. 202; 78 Pac. 648. The failure of the court to find the facts declared essential to a recovery, by the decision of the appellate court on a former appeal of the case, as well as its own construction of its findings, by rendering a judgment for the defendants, must be regarded as its own conclusion that the evidence was insufficient to justify such findings as, under the former opinion of the appellate court, would authorize a decision in favor of the plaintiff. Breeze v. Brooks, 97 Cal. 72; 22 L. R. A. 256; 31 Pac. 742. The failure to find upon an issue, a finding upon which would merely invalidate a judgment fully supported by the findings, is not a ground for reversal, unless it is shown that evidence was submitted in relation to such issue. Himmelman v. Henry, 84 Cal. 104; 23 Pac. 1098; Klokke v. Escailler, 124 Cal. 297; 56 Pac. 1113; Downing v. Donegan, 1 Cal. App. 710; 82 Pac. 1111. The failure to make an express finding on a particular issue is not prejudicial, where the effect of a finding already made renders such issue immaterial. Diefendorff v. Hopkins, 95 Cal. 343; 30 Pac. 549; and see McCourtney v. Fortune, 57 Cal. 617; Dyer v. Brogan, 70 Cal. 136; 11 Pac. 589; Malone v. Del Norte County, 77 Cal. 217; 19 Pac. 422; Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; Gregory v. Gregory, 102 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 364. Where the finding of the court sufficiently determines that the amount of a debt for which judgment was entered had become due prior to the commencement of the action, the defendant cannot complain of the want of a specific finding fixing the exact date when the debt became due and payable. Wagner v. El Centro Seed etc. Co., 17 Cal. App. 387; 119 Pac. 952. The statement of new matter in an answer, constituting an alleged counterclaim, is deemed denied by the plaintiff, and the burden is on the defendant to establish it; and, upon appeal from the judgment, where the evidence cannot be reviewed, it must be presumed that a failure to find as to the new matter was not prejudicial to the appellant, and that a finding thereon, if made, would have been adverse to him. Reed v. Johnson, 127 Cal. 538; 59 Pac. 986. Special findings on issues raised by a cross-complaint and answer are not necessary, where a general verdict was proper and covers all the issues presented by the pleadings. Hunt v. Elliott, 77 Cal. 588; 20 Pac. 132. The failure to find upon an issue raised by the answer is not error, where the defense was not claimed in the court below. Bliss v. Sneath, 119 Cal. 526; 51 Pac. 848. The parties to an action have no right to a finding upon every specific issue in a case, merely because they may plead it as res adjudicata in some possible future controversy, where it may become material. Diefendorff v. Hopkins, 95 Cal. 343; 30 Pac. 549.

Additional findings. The entry of final judgment terminates the jurisdiction of the court over the cause and the parties, except as otherwise expressly provided by law; and an additional finding, made after the entry of judgment, though material, cannot be deemed a valid finding, and the court has no power to make it upon notice, any more than without notice. Los Angeles County v. Lankershim, 100 Cal. 525; 35 Pac. 153, 556; Ayres v. Burr, 132 Cal. 125; 64 Pac. 120. The court cannot insert an omitted finding in its findings as originally prepared, and upon which judgment was entered; but the judgment should not be reversed on that ground, where the additional finding is but a conclusion of law from the facts found. Richter v. Henningsan, 110 Cal. 530; 42 Pac. 1077. Findings, otherwise sufficient, and covering all the issues, are not rendered defective by an additional finding, and such finding will be regarded merely as surplusage. Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868.

Negative findings. To find that certain matters are not true is not to fix or to determine a fact, and is totally insufficient. Goodnow v. Griswold, 68 Cal. 599; 9 Pac. 837.

General and special findings. A general finding, that certain averments of the complaint are true, is controlled by a special finding inconsistent therewith. McCormick v. National Surety Co., 134 Cal. 510; 66 Pac. 741. Where an express finding upon all the material issues supports the judgment, an insufficient general finding may be disregarded. Pinheiro v. Bettencourt, 17 Cal. App. 111; 118 Pac. 941.

Findings in language of pleadings. The only purpose of the findings is to answer the questions raised by the pleadings; and facts, stated in the findings as they are stated in the pleadings, are sufficient. Dam v. Zink, 112 Cal. 91; 44 Pac. 331.

Findings inconsistent with averment. An affirmative finding of facts, inconsistent with an averment, and from which it necessarily follows that the averment is not true, is a sufficient finding that the averment is not true. Churchill v. Baumann, 95 Cal. 541; 30 Pac. 770.

Pleadings incorporated in findings by reference. The appellate court is not called upon to examine the record to determine what matters at issue, made by the pleadings, come within the findings. Perkins v. West Coast Lumber Co., 120 Cal. 27; 52 Pac. 118. The trial court should assume the labor of comparing the allegations of the answer with the facts found by it: the appellate court will not determine the truth or falsity of any of the allegations by reference to the testimony, or to the facts actually found. Harlan v. Ely, 55 Cal. 340. A finding may refer to a pleading for a specification of facts found and not found; but such reference must be sufficiently distinct to make it intelligible, and the facts must be sufficiently stated in the pleadings (McEwen v. Johnson, 7 Cal. 258); so as to leave no doubt as to what particular facts are intended. Breeze v. Doyle, 19 Cal. 101. A finding that the allegations of fact in a complaint are true, is not a finding that any conclusions of law therein are true. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Los Angeles, 164 Cal. 156; 128 Pac. 19. A finding that all the material averments of the complaint are true is sufficient (Johnson v. Squires, 53 Cal. 37; Krug v. Lux Brewing Co., 129 Cal. 322; 61 Pac. 1125); as is also a finding that all and singular the allegations of the complaint are true, and the allegations of the answer are false, and specifically negativing a charge which was the basis of a separate defense, is sufficient (Cohn v. Kelly, 132 Cal. 468; 64 Pac. 709); and also a finding that certain instruments set forth in the complaint were executed by the parties at the time alleged (Breeze v. Doyle, 19 Cal. 101); and a finding that certain named paragraphs in the complaint are true (Homeseekers Loan Ass'n v. Gleeson, 133 Cal. 312; 65 Pac. 617; and see Johnson v. Klein, 70 Cal. 186; 11 Pac. 606; Williams v. Hall, 79 Cal. 606; 21 Pac. 965); and a finding that all the allegations contained in certain subdivisions of the complaint are true, where the complaint is divided into subdivisions and the answer is not (Kennedy & Shaw Lumber Co. v. S. S. Construction Co., 123 Cal. 584; 56 Pac. 457); and a finding "that all the facts in the complaint are true, except as to those hereinafter otherwise specified, and as to those allegations, the court finds as follows," and the court then finds specifically as to such omitted matters, is sufficient (Alameda County v. Crocker, 125 Cal. 101; 57 Pac. 766); as is also a general finding, that each and all of the allegations of the plaintiff's complaint are true, and are sustained by the evidence, and that none of the denials contained in the defendant's answer herein are true, or are sustained by the evidence (Gale v. Bradbury, 116 Cal. 39; 47 Pac. 778; and see McEwen v. Johnson, 7 Cal. 258; Johnson v. Klein, 70 Cal. 186; 11 Pac. 606; Gwinn v. Hamilton, 75 Cal. 265; 17 Pac. 212; Williams v. Hall, 79 Cal. 606; 21 Pac. 965; San Diego County v. Seifert, 97 Cal. 594; 32 Pac. 644; Krug v. Lux Brewing Co., 129 Cal. 322; 61 Pac. 1125; Sutter County v. McGriff, 130 Cal. 124; 62 Pac. 412; Cohn v. Kelly, 132 Cal. 468; 64 Pac. 709); but a finding that all the allegations of the plaintiff's complaint are true, and that all the allegations of the defendant's answer, so far as they are inconsistent with the allegations of said complaint, are not true, is not sufficient (Krug v. Lux Brewing Co., 129 Cal. 322; 61 Pac. 1125; Bank of Woodland v. Treadwell, 55 Cal. 379; and see Continental Building etc. Ass'n v. Wilson, 144 Cal. 776; 78 Pac. 254); nor is a finding that all the issues of fact raised by the pleadings are hereby found and decided in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant (Johnson v. Squires, 53 Cal. 37); nor a finding that "the foregoing are all the facts of the case, and all and singular the allegations of the second amended answer are untrue, except only in so far as they accord with the foregoing facts" (Harlan v. Ely, 55 Cal. 340); nor a finding that all other averments in the pleadings herein and in issue, not comprised in and passed upon in these findings, are not true. Perkins v. West Coast Lumber Co., 120 Cal. 27; 52 Pac. 118.

Findings in actions at law. Findings of fact may be embodied in the decree of foreclosure. Locke v. Klunker, 123 Cal. 231; 55 Pac. 993. Recitals in a decree of foreclosure constitute sufficient findings, if findings are required. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Clarke, 110 Cal. 27; 42 Pac. 425. Findings are required in an action of unlawful detainer. Lee Chuck v. Quan Wo Chong & Co., 91 Cal. 593; 28 Pac. 45.

Findings in suits in equity. In suits in equity, no findings of fact are necessary to support the judgment (Lyons v. Lyons, 18 Cal. 447); and the general verdict of a jury is determinative of the issues made by the pleadings. Learned v. Castle, 67 Cal. 41; 7 Pac. 34; and see Warring v. Freear, 64 Cal. 54; 28 Pac. 115; Stockman v. Riverside Land etc. Co., 64 Cal. 57; 28 Pac. 116; Bell v. Marsh, 80 Cal. 411; 22 Pac. 170. The presumption in favor of the correctness of a finding does not apply to a proceeding in equity, tried upon the complaint, answer, and exhibits. Dewey v. Bowman, 8 Cal. 145. The adoption of a verdict is equivalent to a finding by the court, to the extent to which the verdict covers the issues made by the pleadings, and it is then the duty of the court to find upon all the issues not covered by the verdict, unless such findings are waived. Warring v. Freear, 64 Cal. 54; 28 Pac. 115.

Findings in special proceedings. This section relates to the trial of civil actions, and not to special proceedings. Lyons v. Marcher, 119 Cal. 382; 51 Pac. 559. The court is not required to make findings of fact in proceedings in aid of execution (Lyons v. Marcher, 119 Cal. 382; 51 Pac. 559); nor written findings of fact and conclusions of law in a proceeding for the disbarment of an attorney. Disbarment of Danford, 157 Cal. 425; 108 Pac. 322. It has never been definitely determined that findings are necessary in all matters of probate heard before the court alone; such as a contest over the account of an executor (Estate of Sanderson, 74 Cal. 199; 15 Pac. 753), or a contest over an order for the sale of real property (Estate of Arguello, 85 Cal. 151; 24 Pac. 641), or a contest over the setting apart of a homestead (Estate of Adams, 128 Cal. 380; 57 Pac. 569; 60 Pac. 965), as such contests do not conduce to the development of such issues as arise upon the pleadings in a civil action; and in such proceedings it is not incumbent upon the court to make and file express findings (Estate of Levinson, 108 Cal. 450; 41 Pac. 483; 42 Pac. 479); but issues joined in probate proceedings are tried and determined by the court as in civil cases; and upon trial by the court without a jury, the parties are entitled to findings, unless they are waived (Estate of Burton, 63 Cal. 36; Estate of Crosby, 55 Cal. 574; and see Miller v. Lux, 100 Cal. 609; 35 Pac. 345, 639); and when the account of an executor is assailed in any particular for matters not appearing upon its face, the court may properly make express findings upon such issues, and when it does so, such findings become a part of the judgment roll. Miller v. Lux, 100 Cal. 609; 35 Pac. 315, 639.

Amendment of findings. The court may change or modify its findings before judgment, without ordering a new trial. Spaulding v. Howard, 121 Cal. 194; 53 Pac. 563; and see Smith v. Taylor, 82 Cal. 533; 23 Pac. 217. Findings of fact cannot be changed by the court in any material respect, after final judgment, and while it is allowed to stand (Los Angeles County v. Lankershim, 100 Cal. 525; 35 Pac. 153, 556); and, after the findings have been filed, and judgment entered thereon, the only method by which the findings can be completely changed or modified is by granting a new trial; and until they are set aside, they stand in their integrity as originally made. Hawxhurst v. Rathgeb, 119 Cal. 531; 63 Am. St. Rep. 142; 51 Pac. 846.

Stipulation, effect on findings. Where an action is submitted upon stipulated facts showing that the plaintiff is entitled to judgment, the making of additional findings by the court is unnecessary; and if the stipulated facts warrant a judgment, it should stand. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles etc. Milling Co., 152 Cal. 645; 93 Pac. 869, 1135. A written stipulation, that certain allegations of a pleading are true, amounts to an agreed statement of facts, and no findings thereon are required. Alderson v. Cutting, 163 Cal. 503; Ann. Cas. 1914A, 1; 126 Pac. 157. A stipulation, that a party introduced evidence on an issue does not take the place of evidence to show whether the finding was justified thereby: such stipulation, to a certain extent, deprives the appellate court of the power to determine the appeal upon the real facts of the case. Estate of Carpenter, 127 Cal. 582; 60 Pac. 162. Where findings were waived, all the issues made by the pleadings are presumed to have been found in favor of the successful party. Antonelle v. Board of New City Hall Comm'rs, 92 Cal. 228; 28 Pac. 270; Pacific Investment Co. v. Ross, 131 Cal. 8; 63 Pac. 67.

Construction of findings. Findings must be so construed as to support the judgment, if possible. Wagner v. El Centro Seed etc. Co., 17 Cal. App. 387; 119 Pac. 952; Rossi v. Beaulieu Vineyard, 20 Cal. App. 770; 130 Pac. 201. Findings of fact are like the special verdict of a jury: they must be taken in connection with the pleadings to support the judgment; and when the language of a finding is equivocal, that construction which accords with the pleadings and supports the judgment should be adopted (Kennedy & Shaw Lumber Co. v. S. S. Construction Co., 123 Cal. 584; 56 Pac. 457); and findings of fact should receive such a construction as will uphold rather than defeat the judgment; and when, from the facts found by the court, other facts may be inferred which will support the judgment, such inference will be deemed to have been made by the trial court. Breeze v. Brooks, 97 Cal. 72; 22 L. R. A. 256; 31 Pac. 742; Warren v. Hopkins, 110 Cal. 506; 42 Pac. 986; Gould v. Eaton, 111 Cal. 639; 52 Am. St. Rep. 201; 44 Pac. 319; Perkins v. West Coast Lumber Co., 129 Cal. 427; 62 Pac. 57; Krasky v. Wollpert, 134 Cal. 338; 66 Pac. 309; De Haven v. Berendes, 135 Cal. 178; 67 Pac. 786; People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard, 139 Cal. 285; 73 Pac. 858; Paine v. San Bernardino Valley Traction Co., 143 Cal. 654; 77 Pac. 659. Findings are to be read and considered together, and liberally construed in support of the judgment, and, if possible, are to be reconciled, so as to prevent any conflict upon material points (People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard, 139 Cal. 285; 73 Pac. 858; and see Ames v. San Diego, 101 Cal. 390; 35 Pac. 1005; Murray v. Tulare Irrigation Co., 120 Cal. 311; 49 Pac. 563; Mitchell v. Hutchinson, 142 Cal. 404; 76 Pac. 55); and the language should not be strained by the court to make out a case of conflict; but the findings should be reconciled, if it can be reasonably done (Alhambra etc. Water Co. v. Richardson, 72 Cal. 598; 14 Pac. 379; Heaton-Hobson Associated Law Offices v. Arper, 145 Cal. 282; 78 Pac. 721; Schultz v. McLean, 93 Cal. 329; 28 Pac. 1053); and they cannot be altogether detached from each other and considered piecemeal; and if a particular finding is doubtful or obscure, reference may be had to the context for the purpose of ascertaining the true meaning. Mott v. Ewing, 90 Cal. 231; 27 Pac. 194. The findings come after the case is tried, considered, and determined, and after the character of the judgment, whether right or wrong, is fixed; they are merely incidental to the judgment; and to test their sufficiency by a standard which exacts the extreme of accurate statement and minute detail is to put the instrument in the place of the principal. Millard v. Supreme Council, 81 Cal. 340; 22 Pac. 864. The trial court may draw any inference of fact from the evidence before it or from the facts found by it; and the appellate court will not draw a different inference to defeat the judgment. Paine v. San Bernardino Valley etc. Co., 143 Cal. 654; 77 Pac. 659; Breeze v. Brooks, 97 Cal. 72; 22 L. R. A. 256; 31 Pac. 742; Gould v. Eaton, 111 Cal. 639; 52 Am. St. Rep. 201; 44 Pac. 319; People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard, 139 Cal. 285; 73 Pac. 858. A finding of fact is not affected by a conclusion of law inconsistent therewith. Niles v. Edwards, 90 Cal. 10; 27 Pac. 159.

Effect of defective findings, or of want of findings. A defect in the findings is fatal to the judgment. Cargnani v. Cargnani, 16 Cal. App. 96; 116 Pac. 306. Defective findings, or the absence of any findings, do not render a judgment a nullity, but merely constitute grounds for reversal on appeal; and the judgment cannot be collaterally attacked because of them. Breeze v. Doyle, 19 Cal. 101.

Proposed findings, submission of. Proposed findings upon propositions of law, submitted to the court after it has orally announced its decision, but before the filing of its findings, are properly refused consideration. Wheatland Mill Co. v. Pirrie, 89 Cal. 459; 26 Pac. 964. The refusal of findings presented to the court with the request that it find the same as facts in the case, is not erroneous: a party desiring a finding upon a particular point should specify the point, without dictating the terms of the finding. Edgar v. Stevenson, 70 Cal. 286; 11 Pac. 704. An exception to a refusal of the request of a party that the court find upon certain issues, is a practice not recognized by the code, and such ruling cannot be reviewed upon appeal, merely as an error of law; but it is the duty of the court to find upon all the material issues, regardless of the request of the parties. Haight v. Tryon, 112 Cal. 4; 44 Pac. 318.

Findings. See note ante, § 607.

Distinction between findings and conclusions. The line of demarcation between questions of fact and conclusions of law is not easily drawn in all cases; if, from the facts in evidence, the result can be reached by that process of natural reasoning adopted in the investigation of the truth, it becomes an ultimate fact, to be found as such; but if resort must be had to the artificial processes of the law to reach a final determination, the result is a conclusion of law. Levins v. Rovegno, 71 Cal. 273; 12 Pac. 161; Weidenmueller v. Stearns Ranchos Co., 128 Cal. 623; 61 Pac. 374. The finding of a sale and delivery is of an ultimate fact, and not of a mere conclusion of law. Napa Valley Packing Co. v. San Francisco Relief etc. Funds, 16 Cal. App. 461; 118 Pac. 469. The conclusions reached frequently partake of the nature of both law and fact; and where there is any doubt, it should be resolved in favor of the judgment. Butler v. Agnew, 9 Cal. App. 327; 99 Pac. 395.

Conclusions of law, what are. The conclusions of law are what, in the opinion of the judge, constitute the law of the case, arising from and applicable to the facts proved or admitted. Sears v. Dixon, 33 Cal. 326. A finding that a cause of action is barred by the statute is properly finding of a fact, and need not be placed among the conclusions of law (Spaulding v. Howard, 121 Cal. 194; 53 Pac. 563); but a finding that there was not a conversion is a finding of a conclusion of law, and not of an ultimate fact, where the facts found show a conversion. Niles v. Edwards, 90 Cal. 10; 27 Pac. 159. An order for judgment in accordance with the findings of fact, is a sufficient conclusion of law, where it is apparent that if more specific conclusions of law had been stated, they would have been in favor of the party for whom judgment was ordered. Rea v. Haffenden, 116 Cal. 596; 48 Pac. 716; Anderson v. Blean, 19 Cal. App. 581; 126 Pac. 859.

Propositions of law, when submitted. Where a cause has been tried, and submitted for decision to the court upon the law and the facts, and the court has orally announced its decision, but has not filed its findings, it cannot be compelled to pass upon propositions of law submitted to it as proposed findings (Wheatland Mill Co. v. Pirrie, 89 Cal. 459; 26 Pac. 964); nor is there any authority for the practice, at the close of a trial by the court, of presenting propositions of law, which the court is requested to declare as legal principles applicable to the facts of the case, and to render its decision in accordance therewith. Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680; 39 Pac. 56; Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150; 81 Am. Dec. 108; Estate of Page, 57 Cal. 238; Wilson v. Wilson, 64 Cal. 92; 27 Pac. 861.

Effect of erroneous conclusions of law. An erroneous conclusion of law is not ground for reversal, if the judgment is correct (Spencer v. Duncan, 107 Cal. 423; 40 Pac. 549; Helm v. Dumars, 3 Cal. 454; Bleven v. Freer, 10 Cal. 172; Haffley v. Maier, 13 Cal. 13; Kidd v. Teeple, 22 Cal. 255; Davis v. Baugh, 59 Cal. 568; Miller v. Hicken, 92 Cal. 229; 28 Pac. 339); but findings of fact are like a special verdict, and an erroneous conclusion renders erroneous any judgment entered thereon, like a general verdict inconsistent with the special verdict. Simmons v. Hamilton, 56 Cal. 493.

Amendment of conclusions of law. Conclusions of law upon the facts found may be changed by the court at any time before the entry of judgment; and such change may be made by the successor of the judge who tried the cause (Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; Condee v. Barton, 62 Cal. 1); but this cannot be done after the entry of judgment. First Nat. Bank v. Dusy, 110 Cal. 69; 42 Pac. 476.

The decision, what constitutes. The decision is the findings of fact, and the conclusions of law drawn therefrom, signed by the court and filed with the clerk as the basis of the judgment entered (Porter v. Hopkins, 63 Cal. 53; Sawyer v. Sargent, 65 Cal. 259; 3 Pac. 872; Donohoe v. Mariposa Land etc. Co., 66 Cal. 317; 5 Pac. 495; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Moore, 68 Cal. 156; 8 Pac. 824; Clifford v. Allman, 84 Cal. 528; 24 Pac. 292; Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 99 Cal. 345; 33 Pac. 928; Gainsley v. Gainsley, 3 Cal. Unrep. 310; 44 Pac. 456; and see Miller v. Hicken, 92 Cal. 229; 28 Pac. 339); and until given and filed, there is no decision upon which judgment can be entered, and consequently no authority for entering any judgment (Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; Broder v. Conklin, 98 Cal. 360; 33 Pac. 211; Delger v. Jacobs, 19 Cal. App. 197; 125 Pac. 258); and the facts found, and the conclusions of law drawn therefrom, are the decision to which exception can be made on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain it. Coveny v. Hale, 49 Cal. 552. The findings, under this section, constitute the decision; hence, a notice of a motion directed against the findings, and not against the decision, is sufficient. Haight v. Tryon, 5 Cal. Unrep. 761; 34 Pac. 712. A case is not tried until all the issues are disposed of, and there is no decision until the court has passed upon the facts, and drawn its conclusions of law therefrom. Reclamation District v. Thisby, 131 Cal. 572; 63 Pac. 918. A written opinion is no part of the decision: the findings and judgment may properly make different provisions from those indicated in such opinion. Wadleigh v. Phelps, 149 Cal. 627; 87 Pac. 93. A minute-entry, made prior to the decision, directing that findings and decree be drawn in favor of the defendant, does not constitute a decision, and is immaterial. Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita etc. Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301. The making and the filing of the findings, and the entry of the judgment, are only parts of the decision, and together they constitute the final determination of the rights of the parties. Fox v. Hale etc. Mining Co., 108 Cal. 478; 41 Pac. 328.

Judgment must accord with conclusions. The statement of the conclusions of law precedes the rendition of a final judgment, and the judgment must accord with the conclusions; but the conclusions need not be twice stated. Gainsley v. Gainsley, 5 Cal. Unrep. 310; 44 Pac. 456; and see Miller v. Hicken, 92 Cal. 229; 28 Pac. 339.

Rendition and entry of judgment. The findings of fact and conclusions of law are the only papers in connection with a judgment that the trial judge is required to sign and file; the signing and filing of these documents constitute the rendering of judgment, and there is no other judicial act required to be performed by the court to make the judgment effectual. Hoover v. Lester, 16 Cal. App. 151; 116 Pac. 382. Ordinarily, a party in whose favor a case has been decided is entitled to have final judgment entered. Deyoe v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 476; 98 Am. St. Rep. 73; 74 Pac. 28. The entry of the judgment after its rendition is but the ministerial act of the clerk; the rendition of the judgment is a judicial act (San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 99 Cal. 345; 33 Pac. 928; Estate of Cook, 77 Cal. 220; 11 Am. St. Rep. 267; 1 L. R. A. 567; 17 Pac. 923; 19 Pac. 431; Broder v. Conklin, 98 Cal. 360; 33 Pac. 211); and failure to enter an order or judgment does not avoid or delay the effect of the adjudication, except where some statute expressly or by implication so provides. Otto v. Long, 144 Cal. 144; 77 Pac. 885; Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887; Estate of Cook, 77 Cal. 220; 11 Am. St. Rep. 267; 1 L. R. A. 567; 17 Pac. 923; 19 Pac. 431. A judgment entered by the clerk, in pursuance of findings and an order for judgment transmitted to him, which were signed by the trial judge outside of the county in which the action was pending, is regular. Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 158 Cal. 66; 109 Pac. 884. The fact that the judge signed the judgment, while it does not make his action any more or any less binding, has some significance upon the question of his intention. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 124 Cal. 422; 57 Pac. 225.

Correction of clerical errors in judgment. Clerical misprisions in a judgment can be corrected at any time by an order of the court (Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22); as, where the clerk inserted an additional initial in the defendant's name (Fay v. Stubenrauch, 141 Cal. 573; 75 Pac. 174); and where he made an error in one of the initials of a person's name (Mitchell v. Patterson, 120 Cal. 286; 52 Pac. 589); and where he erroneously added interest to the amount of the judgment (San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 99 Cal. 345; 33 Pac. 928; and where he entered judgment in favor of all of the defendants, instead of against two only (Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita etc. Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301); and such amendments may be made after the expiration of six months from the entry of judgment (Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 99 Cal. 345; 33 Pac. 928); and the record, when so corrected, as well as the order making the correction, is conclusive upon any other court or in any other proceeding in which the record is offered in evidence. Galvin v. Palmer, 134 Cal. 426; 66 Pac. 572.

Correction of judicial errors. Judicial errors can be remedied only through motion for a new trial or by appeal. Canadian etc. Trust Co. v. Clarita etc. Investment Co., 140 Cal. 672; 74 Pac. 301; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 99 Cal. 345; 33 Pac. 928; Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22.

Expiration of term of judge, effect on subsequent proceedings. The entry of judgment upon a decision, being but a ministerial act, can be performed by the clerk after the judge's term of office has expired, and the judgment need not be signed by the judge; hence, a judgment produced from the original records of the court where rendered needs no signature or exemplification. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 99 Cal. 345; 33 Pac. 928. The judicial power of the judge ceases upon the expiration of his term of office, and it is not competent for him thereafter to do any act necessary to complete the trial of any cause then remaining unfinished. Broder v. Conklin, 98 Cal. 360; 33 Pac. 211; and see Mace v. O'Reilley, 70 Cal. 231; 11 Pac. 721; Connolly v. Ashworth, 98 Cal. 205; 33 Pac. 60. The trial of a cause by the court is not concluded until the decision is filed with the clerk; and when the term of office of the judge expires before the decision is filed, the fact that it was signed by him, and filed by order of his successor in office, is not sufficient to sustain a judgment entered thereon. Connolly v. Ashworth, 98 Cal. 205; 33 Pac. 60; and see Hastings v. Hastings, 31 Cal. 95; Polhemus v. Carpenter, 42 Cal. 375; Comstock Quicksilver Mining Co. v. Superior Court, 57 Cal. 625; Van Court v. Winterson, 61 Cal. 615; Warring v. Freear, 64 Cal. 54; 28 Pac. 115; Mace v. O'Reilley, 70 Cal. 231; 11 Pac. 721. The trial of an action is not completed until a decision has been given in writing and filed with the clerk; and if not filed until after the expiration of the term of office of the judge, it cannot form the basis of a judgment. Broder v. Conklin, 98 Cal. 360; 33 Pac. 211; and see Connolly v. Ashworth, 98 Cal. 205; 33 Pac. 60.

New trial. The "decision" which may be vacated on a motion for a new trial is that which is given upon the original trial of the question of fact, and upon which the judgment is to be entered; and the provision that the judgment is to be entered upon the decision implies that it is subsequent to and dependent upon the decision. Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186. The court must find upon all the material issues, regardless of any request of the parties, and a failure in this respect is ground for a new trial as a decision against law (Haight v. Tryon, 112 Cal. 4; 44 Pac. 318; and see Knight v Roche, 56 Cal. 15; Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 155; 24 Pac. 738); but see contra, Churchill v. Flournoy, 127 Cal. 355; 59 Pac. 791. Where the court fails to find upon a material issue, it is a "decision against law," and a new trial should be granted, so that the court may make a proper finding upon the issue of fact retried. Elizalde v. Murphy, 11 Cal. App. 32; 103 Pac. 904. An objection to a finding outside of the issues is available only upon an appeal from the judgment, and is not ground for the granting of a motion for a new trial. Power v. Fairbanks, 146 Cal. 611; 80 Pac. 1075. Where all the issues of fact raised by the pleadings are found by the court, and the findings are correct, an erroneous judgment drawn from those facts cannot be corrected by means of a new trial. Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828. Where every material issue has been decided in favor of the losing party, a new trial will not be awarded: his only remedy is by appeal from the judgment. Sharp v. Bowie, 142 Cal. 462; 76 Pac. 62; and see Martin v. Matfield, 49 Cal. 42; Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 936; Rauer v. Fay, 128 Cal. 523; 61 Pac. 90; Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161; 74 Pac. 700. A judgment based upon contradictory findings is a decision against law, for which a new trial may be granted. Langan v. Langan, 89 Cal. 186; 26 Pac. 764. The failure to find upon a material issue is a ground for a new trial of such issue. Power v. Fairbanks, 146 Cal. 611; 80 Pac. 1075. The examination on motion for a new trial is limited to a consideration of the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the findings of fact, and whether any errors of law occurred at the trial. Churchill v. Flournoy, 127 Cal. 355; 59 Pac. 791.

Appeal. On an appeal from an order denying a new trial, neither objections that certain findings were outside of the issues, nor the sufficiency of the findings to support the judgment, or of a cross-complaint to state a cause of action, can be considered (Bell v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 144 Cal. 560; 77 Pac. 1124); nor the insufficiency of the findings to support the conclusions of law, or of the complaint to state a cause of action, nor the unconstitutionality of a statute (Petaluma Paving Co. v. Singley, 136 Cal. 616; 69 Pac. 426; and see Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 936; Pierce v. Willis, 103 Cal. 91; 36 Pac. 1080; Churchill v. Flournoy, 127 Cal. 355; 59 Pac. 791); nor the questions whether the judgment is supported by the complaint or the findings, or whether the findings are contradictory to and inconsistent with the pleading. Moore v. Douglas, 132 Cal. 399; 64 Pac. 705; and see Rauer v. Fay, 128 Cal. 523; 61 Pac. 90; Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161; 74 Pac. 700. A decree not warranted either by the allegations of the complaint or by the findings of the court will be ordered modified on appeal. Carmichael v. McGillivray, 57 Cal. 8. The failure to find upon a material issue is not ground for the reversal of a judgment otherwise correct, unless it appears by the statement or bill of exceptions that evidence was given upon such issue. Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828. A failure to find upon an issue, a finding upon which would merely invalidate a judgment fully supported by the findings, is not a ground for reversal, unless it is shown that evidence was submitted in relation to the issue. Winslow v. Gohransen, 88 Cal. 450; 26 Pac. 504; Dedmon v. Moffitt, 89 Cal. 211; 26 Pac. 800; Brady v. Burke, 90 Cal. 1; 27 Pac. 52; Rogers v. Duff, 97 Cal. 66; 31 Pac. 836; Gregory v. Gregory, 102 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 364; F. A. Hihn Co. v. Fleckner, 106 Cal. 95; 39 Pac. 214; Marchant v. Hayes, 117 Cal. 669; 49 Pac. 840; Bliss v. Sneath, 119 Cal. 526; 51 Pac. 848; Roebling's Sons Co. v. Gray, 139 Cal. 607; 73 Pac. 422. A decision is against law, where there is a failure to find upon a material issue, and it may be reviewed upon appeal from an order granting or refusing a new trial. Adams v. Helbing, 107 Cal. 298; 40 Pac. 422; Clark v. Hewitt, 136 Cal. 77; 68 Pac. 303; Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828. Where a finding is not determinative of an issue, it is insufficient; but an "attempted" finding, filed as a finding, must be treated as such for the purpose of review, and as showing that findings were not waived. Kimball v. Stormer, 65 Cal. 116; 3 Pac. 408. The contention that a finding is not within the issues cannot be made on appeal, if, at the trial, no objection was made to the evidence in support thereof. McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154; 64 Pac. 278. Where the defendant went to trial upon the theory that there was a material issue, and did not object to the evidence upon such issue, and the court made findings, with no objection from either party, neither party will be allowed on appeal to say that there was no such issue. Carroll v. Briggs, 138 Cal. 452; 71 Pac. 501. An order of the court, not prayed for in the complaint, is not erroneous as a matter of law, nor is there any presumption against its validity: if erroneous as a matter of fact, the appellant should cause such error to appear. Bank of Ukiah v. Reed, 131 Cal. 597; 63 Pac. 921. Facts found by the court, not sustaining the judgment, can be shown on an appeal without any bill of exceptions; and if the decision upon any controverted question of fact results from a failure to apply properly the law applicable thereto, or from a consideration of evidence not entitled to consideration, this error can be reviewed only on a bill of exceptions. Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680; 39 Pac. 56.

Presumption in favor of findings. Where there are no express findings in the record on appeal, the presumption of law is, that the court found all the matters of fact in issue necessary to support its judgment; and if the evidence is insufficient to justify the court in finding any material or necessary fact, such implied finding may be excepted to in the same manner and with the same effect as if it were an express finding. Blanc v. Paymaster Mining Co., 95 Cal. 524; 29 Am. St. Rep. 149; 30 Pac. 765. In the absence of evidence in the record on appeal, the presumption is, that there was sufficient evidence to support the findings, and that it went in without objection, and was admissible under the pleadings. Beardsley v. Clem, 137 Cal. 328; 70 Pac. 175.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The two preceding sections were based upon the theory:

1. That speedy decisions are desirable;
2. That the system of "implied" findings ought not to be tolerated.

First. It is provided that all causes tried by the court must be decided within twenty days after their final submission. Whilst it is important that all cases should be correctly decided in the first instance, it is equally important that they should be speedily decided. The expense attending litigation in this state is so great, that, as a general rule, a person had better, in the first instance, lose his estate, than, at the end of three years' litigation, find his claim to it established, but the title, by the delay, transferred to the attorneys and other officers of the court. There is scarcely a case that a judge with ordinary industry cannot as well decide within ten days as within ten years. If it involves points of great difficulty, it goes to the supreme court; and the sooner it reaches there, the better for both parties. It may be said, that where the judge holds court in counties distant from each other, he may not be able to forward his decision within the time allowed. The answer to this is, that he ought to decide the case before he leaves. Another advantage to inure from requiring the decision to be filed within a given time is, that all notices of filing decisions may be dispensed with. The attorney may, at the end of twenty days, by inquiry, ascertain whether or not a decision has been made. And in the sections relative to motions for new trial, etc., this period of twenty days has been taken into consideration, and no movement is required by either party within that time.

Second. The objections to the system of implied findings are so numerous, that there was, as far as the commissioners were able to take the sense of the profession upon the subject, a universal desire to do away with it. Findings should stand upon the same footing as special verdicts. In fact, it may be said that if any presumptions are to be indulged in, they should be in favor of the latter, for juries are composed of laymen, whilst judges are presumed to be learned in the law. Yet, under the old system of implied findings, we had the absurdity of requiring the findings made by the jury, by men unlearned in the law, to support any judgment that may be rendered thereon, whilst the finding made by the learned judge would support the judgment, if the judgment could be supported upon any conceivable state of facts consistent with them. Upon this topic, says Justice Sanderson, speaking for the court, in Tewksbury v. Magraff, 33 Cal. 247: "It may well be doubted whether the act of the 20th of May, 1861 (so far as it relates to findings, and reproduced in the amendments of 1866 to § 180 of the Practice Act), is not productive of more mischief than good. It certainly proceeds upon an illogical theory, for it inverts the natural and logical order of the proceedings. Instead of making it the duty of the successful party to see that the findings contain facts sufficient to sustain the judgment, it makes it the duty of the unsuccessful party to see that it contains facts sufficient to reverse it. Instead of making the finding a consistent and visible foundation for the judgment to stand upon, the statute converts it into air, or a mine for its explosion. This change certainly detracts from the logic of the judgment roll, the various parts of which, like the members of a Macedonian phalanx, should rest upon and support each other, and entails a practice which, in a majority of cases, defeats the end which findings were intended to subserve." It is believed that the supreme court, as now constituted, are unanimous in their condemnation of the system of implied findings. The members of that court occupy a position that enables them to see the evils arising from it, and their opinion had controlling weight upon the subject. This section applies to equitable as well as legal actions. Lyons v. Lyons, 18 Cal. 447; see Walker v. Sedgwick, 5 Cal. 192; Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 375; see note to § 635, post.

§ 634. Waiving findings of fact. Findings of fact may be waived by several parties to an issue of fact:

1. By failing to appear at the trial;
2. By consent in writing filed with the clerk;
3. By oral consent in open court, entered in the minutes.

In all cases where the court directs a party to prepare findings, a copy of said proposed findings shall be served upon all the parties to the action at least five days before findings shall be signed by the court, and the court shall not sign any findings therein prior to the expiration of such five days.

Legislation § 634. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 58, (1) in introductory paragraph, striking out "the" before "several parties" (as to which, quære); (2) in subd. 2, striking out a comma after "writing"; (3) adding the final paragraph.

Necessity for findings. This section does not absolutely and unconditionally require that the findings of fact shall be filed, but only that they must be filed unless waived in some one or more of three modes mentioned. Mulcahy v. Glazier, 51 Cal. 626. The parties are entitled to findings, upon the trial of issues joined in proceedings to try objections on the confirmation of a referee's report, unless they are waived. Estate of Burton, 63 Cal. 36. In case of default, findings are not necessary, and form no part of the judgment roll. Estate of Cook, 77 Cal. 220; 11 Am. St. Rep. 267; 1 L. R. A. 567; 17 Pac. 923; 19 Pac. 431.

Effect of want of findings. The judgment cannot be permitted to stand, in the absence of findings of fact, where such findings were not waived. Dowd v. Clarke, 51 Cal. 262; Savings and Loan Society v. Thorne, 67 Cal. 53; 7 Pac. 36. Where findings are not filed or waived, entry of judgment without them constitutes error. Bennett v. Pardini, 63 Cal. 154; Estate of Burton, 63 Cal. 36. Where no findings of fact were made, and they were not waived, the court may order its judgment set aside, and restore the cause to the calendar. Van Court v. Winterson, 61 Cal. 615. Where findings of fact were not waived, and no findings sufficient to support the judgment were signed or filed, there must be a reversal, notwithstanding a stipulation of the existence of reversible error in the record. Pierson v. Pierson, 15 Cal. App. 567; 115 Pac. 461.

Construction of section. In cases tried by the court, written findings may be waived, as prescribed in this section. Lee Sack Sam v. Gray, 104 Cal. 243; 38 Pac. 85.

Waiver must be by all. The phrase, "several parties to an issue of fact," includes all parties, and applies to infants as well as to adults. Western Lumber Co. v. Phillips, 94 Cal. 54; 29 Pac. 328.

Waiver by failure to appear at trial. Failure to attend the trial is a statutory waiver of the findings; and the fact that a judgment erroneously refers to findings, when none exist, is of no consequence. Fincher v. Malcolmson, 96 Cal. 38; 30 Pac. 835. Appearing only for the special purpose of moving for a continuance, and then withdrawing from the case, and not appearing at the trial, is a waiver of the findings (Eltzroth v. Ryan, 91 Cal. 584; 27 Pac. 932); and suffering a default to be entered, and failing to appear at the trial, is also a waiver of the findings. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Clarke, 110 Cal. 27; 42 Pac. 425.

By consent in writing. By signing a stipulation in writing, waiving findings, a party is estopped from objecting to the want thereof, although the stipulation was not filed until after entry of judgment. Dougherty v. Friermuth, 68 Cal. 240; 9 Pac. 98.

By oral consent in open court. Where there was a waiver of written findings by oral consent of the parties, given in open court, but the clerk, through inadvertence, failed to enter the fact upon the minutes, the court may correct its minutes so as to show the real facts. Sullivan v. Hume, 4 Cal. Unrep. 161; 33 Pac. 1121.

Notice not waiver. Findings are not waived by giving notice of motion for new trial. Savings and Loan Society v. Thorne, 67 Cal. 53; 7 Pac. 36.

Presumption as to waiver. Express findings by the court are necessary, unless waived; but the absence of such findings from the record is not a fatal defect, unless it affirmatively appears that they were not waived. Richardson v. Eureka, 110 Cal. 441; 42 Pac. 965. On appeal, where no findings of fact were filed, it must be shown by the bill of exceptions that they were not waived. Mulcahy v. Glazier, 51 Cal. 626; Reynolds v. Brumagin, 54 Cal. 254; Campbell v. Coburn, 77 Cal. 36; 18 Pac. 860; Estate of Arguello, 85 Cal. 151; 24 Pac. 641; Tomlinson v. Ayres, 117 Cal. 568; 49 Pac. 717; Leadbetter v. Lake, 118 Cal. 515; 50 Pac. 686; Horwege v. Sage, 137 Cal. 539; 70 Pac. 621. Where no findings appear, it will be presumed, in favor of the judgment, that written findings were waived. Lee Sack Sam v. Gray, 104 Cal. 243; 38 Pac. 85. There is no presumption that findings were waived, where the only reasonable inference that can be drawn from the record is directly to the contrary (Saul v. Moscone, 16 Cal. App. 506; 118 Pac. 452); and if findings should have been made, and were not, it will be presumed that they were waived (Horwege v. Sage, 137 Cal. 539; 70 Pac. 621); but this presumption has no force, where a writing, clearly intended to be a finding upon a material issue, was filed by the court (Kimball v. Stormer, 65 Cal. 116; 3 Pac. 408); nor has the presumption any application to the report of a referee: no provision is made for a waiver in such cases, and in the very nature of the case should not be. Lee Sack Sam v. Gray, 104 Cal. 243; 38 Pac. 85.

Presumption arising from waiver. All the issues made by the pleadings are presumed to have been found in favor of the successful party, where findings have been waived. Antonelle v. Board of New City Hall Comm'rs, 92 Cal. 228; 28 Pac. 270. Where both parties expressly waive findings, every intendment is in favor of the judgment, and it must be assumed that the court found all of the facts necessary to sustain the judgment. Bruce v. Bruce, 16 Cal. App. 353; 116 Pac. 994.

Refusal to make requested findings as constituting contrary finding. See note 7 Ann. Cas. 380.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 631, ante.

§ 635. [Related to the preparation of findings. Repealed.]

Legislation § 635. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 312.
3. Repealed by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 91.
4. By Stats. 1901, p. 146, a new § 635 was added (code commission section), which provided that "upon trial of a question of fact, court must pass upon questions of law, upon request"; held unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 636. Proceedings after determination of issue of law. On a judgment for the plaintiff upon an issue of law, he may proceed in the manner prescribed by the first two subdivisions of section five hundred and eighty-five, upon the failure of the defendant to answer. If judgment be for the defendant upon an issue of law, and the taking of an account, or the proof of any fact, be necessary to enable the court to complete the judgment, a reference may be ordered, as in that section provided.

Issue of law. Ante, § 589.
When a bar. Post, § 1908.
Reference. Post, §§ 638 et seq.
Leave to answer, after defendant's demurrer overruled. Ante, § 472.
Default, judgment by. Ante, § 585.
Judgment, generally. Post, § 664.

Legislation § 636. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 181, which read: "On a judgment upon an issue of law, if the taking of an account be necessary to enable the court to complete the judgment, a reference may be ordered."

Default for not answering. A defendant who fails to answer within the time allowed by the court on the overruling of his demurrer, and whose default is entered, is not entitled to participate in the further proceedings in the case. People v. Culverwell, 44 Cal. 620. A default entered against a plaintiff for failure to answer the cross-complaint of the defendant, setting forth the same matter of counterclaim pleaded in his answer, cannot deprive the plaintiff of his right to prove the cause of action set forth in his complaint. Langford v. Langford, 136 Cal. 507; 69 Pac. 235. The entry of judgment against one defendant, who failed to answer after his demurrer was overruled, without at the same time entering judgment against a co-defendant who had not been served, is in accordance with the statute. Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218.

Judgment on pleadings proper when. Judgment on the pleadings is proper, where the denials of the answer are merely of matters of law, and where proof of the averments in the answer would be immaterial. Heydenfeldt v. Jacobs, 107 Cal. 373; 40 Pac. 492. Where judgment is granted on the pleadings, all of the averments of the answer are admitted to be true. McGowan v. Ford, 107 Cal. 177; 40 Pac. 231.

Judgment on demurrer. Where one of several defendants appears and demurs, and the demurrer is sustained, it is error to render judgment in favor of the defendants who do not appear. Farwell v. Jackson, 28 Cal. 105.

Leave to amend. Where a demurrer to a complaint was sustained without leave to amend, a judgment for the defendant cannot be reversed on appeal, on the ground that leave was not granted, where no leave was asked. Barker v. Freeman, 85 Cal. 533; 24 Pac. 926.

Time for appeal. Where judgment is duly entered on sufficient pleadings and findings, it is too late, after the lapse of the time for appeal, to inquire whether it is warranted by the law and the facts of the case. People v. Bank of Mendocino County, 133 Cal. 107; 65 Pac. 124.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Substituted for § 181 of the Practice Act.

CHAPTER VI.

REFERENCES AND TRIALS BY REFEREES.

§ 638. Reference ordered upon agreement of parties, in what cases.
§ 639. Reference ordered on motion, in what cases.
§ 640. Referees in eminent-domain proceedings involving city, etc.
§ 641. A party may object. Grounds of objection.
§ 642. Objections, how disposed of.
§ 643. Referees to report within twenty days.
§ 644. Effect of referee's finding.
§ 645. How excepted to, etc.

§ 638. Reference ordered upon agreement of parties, in what cases. A reference may be ordered upon the agreement of the parties filed with the clerk, or entered in the minutes:

1. To try any or all of the issues in an action or proceeding, whether of fact or of law, and to report a finding and judgment thereon;

2. To ascertain a fact necessary to enable the court to determine an action or proceeding.

Reference in general.
1. Court commissioners. Ante, § 259, subd. 2.
2. Fees for. Post, § 1028
3. Compulsory. See post, § 639.
Referees.
1. Number, etc. Post, § 640.
2. Objections to. Post, §§ 641, 642.
3. Report of. Post, §§ 643–645.
4. Trial by. Post, § 1053.

Legislation § 638. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 182, as amended by

Stats. 1865–66, p. 845, which had the words, in subd. 2, "to proceed and determine the case," instead of "to determine an action or proceeding."

Appointment discretionary. The court may state the account between the parties and determine all the questions in the case; but the better and safer practice is to refer it to some competent person to state the account, although the court can pursue such course as it may deem advisable. Hidden v. Jordan, 28 Cal. 301; Emery v. Mason, 75 Cal. 222; 16 Pac. 894.

Prerequisites to reference. A reference in which there is no order of court, or agreement filed with the clerk or entered in the minutes, is a voluntary withdrawal of the case from the jurisdiction of the court, by which the court loses all control over the case, and it has no authority afterwards to enter judgment upon the findings of the referee, except by consent of the parties. Heslep v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. 1.

Consent necessary when. An issue of fact, in an action at law, must be tried by a jury, unless a jury is waived; it cannot be referred, except upon the written consent of both parties. Seaman v. Mariani, 1 Cal. 336. A reference which would amount to the finding of a jury, and have the direct effect of depriving the party of the right to trial by jury, cannot be ordered without the consent of the party in writing, or entered in the minutes. Smith v. Pollock, 2 Cal. 92. Where, by stipulation of the parties, a reference is made, and the referee reports a judgment, which is entered, the court cannot, after granting a new trial, again refer the case to the same or any other referee, without a new consent of the parties: upon the report and the entry of the judgment, the stipulation has no further force. Daverkosen v. Kelley, 43 Cal. 477. A reference cannot be ordered for the purpose of trying all the issues in partition proceedings, where there is a party whose name is unknown, and whose consent, consequently, cannot be procured. Hastings v. Cunningham, 35 Cal. 549. The consent of the parties is not necessary to a reference in suits in equity. Smith v. Rowe, 4 Cal. 6.

Reference to try issues. An order which does not require the referee to report the facts, but to try the issues and report his findings thereon, is general, and not special. Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280.

Reference of accounting. An accounting may be ordered through a reference. Fox v. Hall, 164 Cal. 287; 128 Pac. 749.

Duty of referee. Where the court has decided the principles upon which an account should be stated and settled, it is the duty of the referee simply to take the account in pursuance of those principles. Smith v. Walker, 38 Cal. 385; 99 Am. Dec. 415. The duty of the referee is to act upon the questions submitted to him, and to make such report as is required of him by the order under which he acts. Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280.

Power of referee. The referee exercises all the powers of a judge, and, upon the abandonment of the cause by the plaintiff before its submission, or upon motion of the defendant when the plaintiff fails to prove a sufficient cause, he may grant a nonsuit and report his judgment to that effect. Plant v. Fleming, 20 Cal. 92. An order of the court appointing a person, designated a "court commissioner," as a referee, is, in effect, a reference to the person named, under this section, and his authority is derived from the order appointing him, and not from the statute defining the duties and powers of court commissioner, and the power of this referee to report is unaffected by his prior resignation from the office of court commissioner. Jackson v. Puget Sound Lumber Co., 123 Cal. 97; 55 Pac. 788.

Notice of reference. It is not error for the court to adopt the report of a referee appointed to take an accounting of a partnership business and assets, where the parties had actual knowledge of the appointment, and might, by the exercise of a little diligence, have ascertained the time and place at which testimony was to be taken by the referee, even if actual notice were not given. Doudell v. Shoo, 20 Cal. App. 424; 129 Pac. 478.

Distinguished from arbitration. The reference is not a discontinuance of the suit, as is the submission of a case in arbitration. Gunter v. Sanchez, 1 Cal. 45; Draghicevich v. Vulicevich, 76 Cal. 378; 18 Pac. 406.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. The statute concerning referees is in aid of the common-law remedy by arbitration, and does not alter its principles. Tyson v. Wells, 2 Cal. 122. A court may, without consent of parties, order a reference in equity cases. Smith v. Rowe, 4 Cal. 7. See Still v. Saunders, 8 Cal. 286, and Benham v. Rowe, 2 Cal. 261. The provisions of the Practice Act relating to the partition of real property contain no special provision for the appointment of a referee to try the issues and find the title of the respective parties. The appointment of a referee in an action for partition is therefore regulated by the general provisions of the Practice Act. Hastings v. Cunningham, 35 Cal. 551.

2. Consent. The consent to an order of reference must be in writing, or must be entered on the minutes. Smith v. Pollock, 2 Cal. 92. An order of reference, except as provided in the next section, cannot be made without the consent of the adverse party. Benham v. Rowe, 2 Cal. 261. Where an entry on the minutes recites that "the parties came by their attorneys, and defendant, by his attorney, moved the court that the cause be referred"; held, that such reference was made in one of the modes prescribed by law, "by oral consent, in open court, entered on the minutes." Bates v. Visher, 2 Cal. 355. The whole issue in divorce cases cannot, even by consent of parties, be referred; and where a reference is had, the referee cannot pass upon the testimony. If he make any statement or finding of facts, the court is obliged to disregard it, and base its decree only upon the legal testimony taken. Baker v.

Baker, 10 Cal. 527. The court cannot, without the consent of the parties, order a reference for the trial of any other issue of fact than that involved in the examination of an account in an equity case. Williams v. Benton, 24 Cal. 425.

3. Order. An order of court is necessary to constitute a reference. Heslep v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. 2. The order cannot go beyond the pleadings of the parties. Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 353. A reference or arbitration, in which there is no order of court or agreement filed with the clerk or entered on the minutes, operates as a voluntary withdrawal of the case from the jurisdiction of the court, by which it loses all control over the case, and has no authority to enter judgment upon the finding, except by consent of parties. Heslep v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. 2; see notes to §§ 639, 643, post.

§ 639. Reference ordered on motion, in what cases. When the parties do not consent, the court may, upon the application of either, or of its own motion, direct a reference in the following cases:

1. When the trial of an issue of fact requires the examination of a long account on either side; in which case the referees may be directed to hear and decide the whole issue, or report upon any specific question of fact involved therein;

2. When the taking of an account is necessary for the information of the court before judgment, or for carrying a judgment or order into effect;

3. When a question of fact, other than upon the pleadings, arises upon motion or otherwise, in any stage of the action;

4. When it is necessary for the information of the court in a special proceeding.

Reference.

1. Proceedings supplementary to execution. Post, § 714.

2. Mandamus. See post, § 1095.

Legislation § 639. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 183, which had the word "or" at end of subd. 3.

Reference for examination of an account. The compulsory power of the court over the question of reference is confined to issues involving the examination of a long account: this section does not include issues of that character, where the parties have a right to a trial by jury. Williams v. Benton, 24 Cal. 424. A motion for the appointment of a referee is properly denied, where there is no issue requiring the examination of a long account, and where the note sued on implies a settlement between the parties up to that time. Clarkson v. Hoyt, 4 Cal. Unrep. 547; 36 Pac. 382. The court is not authorized to refer all the issues involved in an action, against the consent of the parties, merely because one of them involves the examination of a long account: this is manifest by contrasting the terms of this section with those of the preceding section. Williams v. Benton, 24 Cal. 424. A reference will not be made of an issue arising upon the pleadings, except where the trial thereof requires the examination of a long account on either side. Hastings v. Cunningham, 35 Cal. 549. The court has no authority to direct a referee to report a judgment, where either of the parties object; the whole case may be sent to the referee, if there is but one issue, and that issue involves the examination of a long account, but not where there are other issues, not involving such an examination (Williams v. Benton, 24 Cal. 424); and an order of reference, made without the consent and against the objection of the defendant, in an ordinary suit at law for the recovery of a debt, is cause for a reversal of judgment; and a statute authorizing a reference in such case would be unconstitutional. Grim v. Norris, 19 Cal. 140; 79 Am. Dec. 206; Joshua Hendy Machine Works v. Pacific Cable Construction Co., 99 Cal. 421; 33 Pac. 1084. An order of reference in a divorce action, to determine the division of the community property, is not a ground for delaying the motion for a new trial upon a judgment previously rendered: such reference is for the purpose of securing information necessary for the carrying into effect of a judgment already ordered, and not for the taking of an account, or for reporting upon any subject necessary to enable the court to render judgment upon the issues in the cause. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633; 22 Pac. 26, 131. A reference may be made in any suit in equity, when either party alleges facts showing the examination of a long account to be necessary. Jones v. Gardner, 57 Cal. 641. The court, having power to take and state an account, has also the power to refer it to some other person to state it. Trumpler v. Cotton, 109 Cal. 250; 41 Pac. 1033. A reference to state an account between the parties is a reference of the whole case for trial, and is not authorized, except upon agreement of the parties. Joshua Hendy Machine Works v. Pacific Cable Construction Co., 99 Cal. 421; 33 Pac. 1084.

New trial. The evidence is not a necessary part of the report of a referee, under an order of court to report judgment; judgment is entered on the report as a matter of course, and the only mode in which a party can take advantage of it is by moving to set it aside, as on motion for a new trial. Sloan v. Smith, 3 Cal. 406. Where collateral matters, not raised by the pleadings, are sent to a referee for the information of the court, a motion for a new trial is not necessary to bring the action of the referee before the court for review: the report of a referee is not binding upon the court until adopted by it. Harris v. San Francisco Sugar etc. Co., 41 Cal. 393.

Power of court to refer actions to referees. See note 79 Am. Dec. 208.

Right to order compulsory reference in equitable action independently of statute. See note Ann. Cas. 1912D, 1136.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A court cannot refer an ordinary suit at law to a referee for trial against the objection of either party; and this, whether the suit requires the examination of a long account or not. The statute, as to referring cases, applies solely to equity causes. The right of trial by jury in all common-law actions is secured by the constitution of this state Grim v. Norris, 19 Cal. 140; 79 Am. Dec. 206. In an action to dissolve a partnership and obtain a settlement of the partnership accounts, the court may order a reference for the trial of all the issues of fact relating to the condition of the partnership accounts; but it has no power, if objection is made, to order a reference of the trial of any other issue or issues in the case, nor to direct the referee to report a judgment. Where the trial of an issue of fact is involved, requiring the examination of a long account on either side, the court may order a reference, with directions to the referee to report upon the account, or any issue of fact involved in the account. Williams v. Benton, 24 Cal. 425; Hidden v. Jordan, 28 Cal. 301. The court may refer for trial the question of damages sustained by reason of an injunction issued without a cause. Russell v. Elliott, 2 Cal. 245. In an action for balance of an account, the defense was payment by a promissory note. Replication, that the plaintiff was induced to receive the note by means of fraudulent representations. It was held, that the case could not be referred without the written consent of both parties. Seamen v. Mariani, 1 Cal. 336. See notes to §§ 639, 643, of this code.

§ 640. Referees in eminent-domain proceedings involving city, etc. A reference may be ordered to the person or persons, not exceeding three, agreed upon by the parties. If the parties do not agree, the court or judge must appoint one or more referees, not exceeding three, who reside in the county in which the action or proceeding is triable, and against whom there is no legal objection, or the reference may be made to a court commissioner of the county where the cause is pending; provided, that in any action brought under Title VII of Part III of this code, if the plaintiff is the state, a county, city and county, or any incorporated city or town, or a municipal water district, the referees are not required to be residents of the county in which the action or proceeding is triable. Nothing herein contained shall be construed as repealing any law of this state giving jurisdiction to the state railroad commission to ascertain the just compensation which must be paid in eminent-domain proceedings.

Reference ordered. Ante, §§ 638, 639.
Three referees, two may act. Post, § 1053.
Court commissioner. Ante, § 259, subd. 2.

Legislation § 640. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; substantially a re-enactment of Practice Act, § 184, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 845.

2. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 246, (1) in first sentence, substituting "the person" for "any person"; (2) at end of section, adding the proviso and the final sentence.

Appointment and qualification of referees. The fact that a clerk of the defendant was appointed a referee is not any considerable evidence of fraud, in view of the nature of the duties of the referee, which are very limited and plain, while his acts are subject to the revision of the court. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187. The court may appoint a new referee, even where he has reported and acted, if his report is not approved; but a party cannot, every time the court finds it necessary to appoint a new referee, stay all proceedings by appeal from such order. Fallon v. Brittan, 84 Cal. 511; 24 Pac. 381. This section does not require that the referee shall be sworn: the imposition of an oath by the court would be of no effect, other than to put it in the power of the referee to commit moral perjury, without being amenable to the law. Sloan v. Smith, 3 Cal. 406.

§ 641. A party may object. Grounds of objection. A party may object to the appointment of any person as referee, on one or more of the following grounds:

1. A want of any of the qualifications prescribed by statute to render a person competent as a juror;

2. Consanguinity or affinity, within the third degree, to either party, or to an officer of a corporation which is a party, or to any judge of the court in which the appointment shall be made;

3. Standing in the relation of guardian and ward, master and servant, employer and clerk, or principal and agent, to either party; or being a member of the family of either party; or a partner in business with either party; or security on any bond or obligation for either party;

4. Having served as a juror or been a witness on any trial between the same parties for the same cause of action;

5. Interest on the part of such person in the event of the action, or in the main question involved in the action;

6. Having formed or expressed an unqualified opinion or belief as to the merits of the action;

7. The existence of a state of mind in such person evincing enmity against or bias to either party.

Legislation § 641. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 185.

2. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 60, adding at end of subd. 2, "or to any judge of the court in which the appointment shall be made."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 146; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 714, (1) in first paragraph, changing "A" from "Either"; (2) in subd. 2, adding "or to an officer of a corporation which is a party"; and (3) in subd. 3, striking out the word "being" before "security."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187; see note to § 602 of this code.

§ 642. Objections, how disposed of. The objections taken to the appointment of any person as referee must be heard and disposed of by the court. Affidavits may be read and witnesses examined as to such objections.

Objections. See ante, § 641.

Legislation § 642. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 186, which had (1) the word "shall" instead of "must," and (2) instead of "witnesses examined," the words "any person examined as a witness."

§ 643. Referees to report within twenty days. The referees or commissioner must report their findings in writing to the court within twenty days after the testimony is closed, and the facts found and conclusions of law must be separately stated therein.

Referees.

1. Court commissioners as. Ante, § 259, subd. 2.

2. Where three, all must meet, but two can act. Post, § 1053.

3. Enforcing orders of. Ante, § 128, subd. 2.

4. Findings of, effect of. Post, § 645.

Legislation § 643. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 187, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 845, which read: "The referees or commissioner shall report their findings in writing to the court within ten days (or within such further time as may be allowed by the court) after the testimony shall have been closed, and the facts found and conclusions of law shall be separately stated therein. The finding of the referee or commissioner upon the whole issue shall stand as the finding of the court, and upon filing of the finding with the clerk of the court judgment may be entered thereon in the same manner as if the action had been tried by the court. The finding of the referees or commissioner may be excepted to and reviewed in like manner as if made by the court. When the reference is to report the facts the finding reported shall have the effect of a special verdict."

Construction of section. The word "report," in this section, is evidently used for finding or decision. Faulkner v. Hendy, 103 Cal. 15; 36 Pac. 1021.

Powers of referee. The referee cannot bring in and file an additional or amended report (Headley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 322); nor has he power to allow the parties to amend the pleadings; and the issue being made up and submitted, he must pass upon that issue, and he cannot change it. De la Riva v. Berreyesa, 2 Cal. 195. While it is the duty of the court or referee to find the specific facts in issue, yet it is only necessary to find the balance of an account. Pratalongo v. Larco, 47 Cal. 378.

Discretion of referee. The exercise of the discretion of the referee in opening the case, after it has been closed, for the purpose of receiving additional testimony, will not be reviewed on appeal, except in case of gross abuse. Marziou v. Pioche, 10 Cal. 545.

Report of referee. The referee should not only report in writing, but should also find the facts upon which the judgment is thereafter to be pronounced; by no other means can the court be informed so as to act intelligently in the premises. Lee Sack Sam v. Gray, 104 Cal. 243; 38 Pac. 85. Where the specific facts are put in issue by the pleadings, it is the duty of the court or referee to find distinctly as to these facts; the striking out of a finding of fact by the referee, and substituting therefor a finding by the court, is a practice not to be commended. Pratalongo v. Larco, 47 Cal. 378. The report of a referee, like the finding of a court, should state the facts found and the conclusions of law thereupon; otherwise the parties would, in many cases, be remediless and their rights concluded by the arbitrary decisions of the referee. Lambert v. Smith, 3 Cal. 408. A court or judge, sitting as a referee, is governed by the same rules as other referees, and must make findings. Lee Sack Sam v. Gray, 104 Cal. 243; 38 Pac. 85.

Waiver of findings. There is no presumption that findings are waived in cases tried by a referee: there is no provision for a waiver in such cases. Lee Sack Sam v. Gray, 104 Cal. 243; 38 Pac. 85.

Judge as referee. Where the court or judge sits as a referee, his position is as distinct in law from the court acting as such within its own proper sphere as if a different referee had been selected; the code fixes but one rule for the guidance of all referees, and they are alike and without exception subject to its provisions. Lee Sack Sam v. Gray, 104 Cal. 243; 38 Pac. 85.

Effect of failure of referee to file report within time fixed by statute or order of reference. See note Ann. Cas. 1913D, 603.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Time. Time is directory. Keller v. Sutrick, 22 Cal. 471. 2. Findings. See notes to §§ 633, 635, and 644 of this code. The report of a referee, like the finding of a judge, should state the facts found and the conclusions of law. Lambert v. Smith, 3 Cal. 409. If the order of a reference requires the referee to try the issues, and report his finding thereon, the referee may make a general finding upon the facts put in issue, stating the facts according to their legal effect. Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280.

3. Duties of referee. Under a reference to try the issues and report a judgment, the referee may exercise all the powers of a judge in relation to the trial of the cause referred to him. Plant v. Fleming, 20 Cal. 92. But the referees have no power to allow the parties to alter the pleadings after a case has been submitted to them. De la Riva v. Berreyesa, 2 Cal. 195. It is within the discretion of the referees to open the case, after it has been once closed, for the purpose of receiving additional testimony. Marziou v. Pioche, 10 Cal. 545. The trial before a referee should be conducted in the same manner as before a court, and the evidence should be embodied in a bill of exceptions, and certified by the referee. Goodrich v. Mayor and Common Council, 5 Cal. 430. Irrelevant testimony should be excluded by the referee. De la Riva v. Berreyesa, 2 Cal. 195. Where the referee admits the testimony against the objection of the defendant, such testimony cannot, after the case has been submitted, be disregarded without first giving to the adverse party the opportunity of otherwise supplying the excluded testimony. Monson v. Cooke, 5 Cal. 436. A reference with directions to take proofs concerning the confession of a judgment by the defendant, and the judgment roll in the case, and whether the same was filed in the clerk's office, and to report the testimony, with a finding of facts, and a judgment, does not submit to the referee the question as to what amount, if any, is still unpaid in the judgment. Solomon v. Maguire, 29 Cal. 227. The referee is to act upon the questions committed to him, and to report whatever he is required to report by the order under which he acts. Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280. The referee need not be sworn. Sloan v. Smith, 3 Cal. 407. He cannot file an amended report. Headley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 324.

4. Effect of report. The facts found are conclusive, in the absence of the testimony brought before the court. Goodrich v. Mayor and Common Council, 5 Cal. 430; Knowles v. Joost, 13 Cal. 620; Muller v. Boggs, 25 Cal. 179; Peck v. Vandenberg, 30 Cal. 11. The report has the same legal effect as the award of an arbitrator. Headley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 322; Grayson v. Guild, 4 Cal. 125; Gunter v. Sanchez, 1 Cal. 45; Walton v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 362.

§ 644. Effect of referee's finding. The finding of the referee or commissioner upon the whole issue must stand as the finding of the court, and upon filing of the finding with the clerk of the court, judgment may be entered thereon in the same manner as if the action had been tried by the court.

Legislation § 644. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 187, q.v. ante, Legislation § 643.

Provisions directory. The provisions of this section are directory merely, and a failure to file within the time prescribed does not invalidate the report, or the judgment rendered thereon. Keller v. Sutrick, 22 Cal. 471.

Nature and effect of report of referee. The findings and decision of the referee take the place of the findings and decision of the court; and such papers, and no others, constitute the judgment roll, just as they would if the case had been tried by the court (Faulkner v. Hendy, 103 Cal. 15; 36 Pac. 1021); and, on appeal, the decision of the referee is regarded as conclusive as the verdict of a jury (Gunter v. Sanchez, 1 Cal. 45); and the report of the referee has the same legal effect as the award of an arbitrator. Hadley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 322; Tyson v. Wells, 2 Cal. 122. The finding of a referee upon a collateral matter does not take the place of a special verdict: when he reports on the whole case, the report stands as the decision of the court; when he reports only the facts, the report is a special verdict; in other cases not mentioned, the report has neither the effect of a decision of the court nor of a special verdict. Harris v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 41 Cal. 393. Where the whole issue is tried by a referee, judgment follows immediately as the conclusion of law upon the facts found, and the decision stands as the decision of the court, and may be excepted to and reviewed as if the action had been tried by the court. Peabody v. Phelps, 9 Cal. 213.

Findings by referee unnecessary when. It is not the duty of a referee, ordered to try all the issues, both of law and fact, and report a judgment thereon, to report findings. Connor v. Morris, 23 Cal. 447.

General verdict by referee. A referee, ordered to try the issues, may return a general verdict in the same manner as a jury. Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280.

Entry of judgment. Where the parties to an action stipulate for a reference authorizing the referee to determine all the issues of law and fact, and that, upon the filing of the report, judgment shall be entered by the court in accordance therewith, and the court thereupon orders the reference, the clerk is authorized to enter judgment, without further order of the court. Bowie v. Borland, 68 Cal. 233; 9 Pac. 79. The entry, by the clerk, of judgment on finding of a referee is a matter of course, and the parties can have no knowledge of the decision until it is announced in the form of a judgment or a direction for its entry. Peabody v. Phelps, 9 Cal. 213. The court cannot entertain any objection to the report of a referee: it must enter judgment in accordance therewith, if sufficient. Headley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 322. Damages upon the dissolution of an injunction being properly ascertained by reference, mandamus lies to compel the judge to enter judgment upon the report of the referee. Russell v. Elliott, 2 Cal. 245.

New trial. The right to move for a new trial, where a reference has been had of the cause, has no basis until the decision and judgment have been rendered, which is the date of their filing. Harris v. Careaga, 2 Cal. Unrep. 242; 2 Pac. 41. After rendition of judgment, the court may grant a new trial, and set aside the report, on any ground justifying the setting aside of the award of an arbitrator, and on no other. Headley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 322.

Necessity that all referees join in award. See note 15 Ann. Cas. 507.

Power of referee to overrule previous order or ruling of judge. See note Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1250.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Mandamus lies to compel the court to enter judgment on the report of a referee. Russell v. Elliott, 2 Cal. 246. If a report of a referee contain sufficient on which to base a judgment, it is the duty of the court below to enter judgment in accordance with the report, so far as it concerns the matter referred, and it has no right to entertain any objection whatever. Headley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 322.

§ 645. How excepted to, etc. The findings of the referee or commissioner may be excepted to and reviewed in like manner as if made by the court. When the reference is to report the facts, the finding reported has the effect of a special verdict.

New trials. Post, §§ 656 et seq.
Court commissioner's report, time and mode of excepting to. Ante, § 259, subd. 2.

Legislation § 645. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 187, q.v. ante, Legislation § 643.

Objection to report, where filed. Objection to the report of a referee should be filed before the trial court, so as to enable it to correct the error, if any exist. Porter v. Earling, 2 Cal. 72. Upon facts found, whether by a referee or by the special verdict of a jury, the direct action of the court must be invoked before judgment can be entered; though the trial has ended, judgment does not follow immediately as a matter of course; and the time within which the notice of motion to set aside the report or the verdict must be given should be the same in both cases, and date from the filing of the report or the rendition of the verdict. Peabody v. Phelps, 9 Cal. 213.

Exceptions and objections to findings of referee. Exceptions must be taken to the rulings of the referee during the trial, and certified by him; and where there are no exceptions embodied in the report, showing that the referee erred in fact, and no rule of law pointed out by which he arrived at his conclusion, the court has no right to disturb it, and must hold it final and conclusive between the parties. Tyson v. Wells, 2 Cal. 122. Written objections to the report of a referee should be filed on the entry of judgment thereon, or by a motion for a new trial, setting forth the grounds of alleged errors. Porter v. Barling, 2 Cal. 72.

Effect of referee's report. Where the reference is special, to report facts, the report has the effect of a special verdict, and the direct action of the court must be invoked before the judgment can be entered, and the time within which the notice of motion must be made to set aside the report acts from the filing of the report; where the reference is general, the report stands as the decision of the court, and judgment may be entered thereon, and exception taken and reviewed, as if the action had been tried by the court, and judgment follows immediately as a conclusion of law upon the facts found, and the time of notice of motion dates from the entry of the judgment. Peabody v. Phelps, 9 Cal. 213. The findings of facts by a referee, and the report thereof to the court, are equivalent to a special verdict, or to the findings of fact made by the court upon the trial of a cause without the intervention of a jury. Bernard v. Sloan, 2 Cal. App. 737; 84 Pac. 232.

Setting aside report of referee. The court, before entry of judgment, may set aside conclusions of law and direct a proper judgment, where the referee reports the facts on all the issues, but draws an erroneous conclusion of law, and reports a judgment in accordance therewith. Calderwood v. Pyser, 31 Cal. 333. The court can interfere and set aside the report of a referee on grounds sufficient to set aside the verdict of a jury; and, in a suit in chancery, the court may, where exceptions are filed, set aside the report of a referee, and take up the testimony reported by him, find the facts, and render a decree in the cause; and, on appeal, where there is a mass of contradictory evidence reported, it will be presumed that the court weighed the evidence properly in setting aside the findings of the referee. McHenry v. Moore, 5 Cal. 90. Where there is no showing of error of law or of fact upon the face of the report of a referee in a suit in equity, or of any exceptions taken before the referee to point out any errors, or of any objection to his decision, the court cannot set aside the report or grant a new trial. Grayson v. Guild, 4 Cal. 122; Tyson v. Wells, 2 Cal. 122.

Evidence. The trial before a referee should be conducted as though it were before the court, and the evidence must be embodied in a bill of exceptions and certified by the referee; and where the order of reference fails to direct a return of the evidence to the court, the party objecting to the report must see to it that such testimony as he relies on is properly certified. Goodrich v. Mayor etc. of Marysville, 5 Cal. 430; Phelps v. Peabody, 7 Cal. 50. The review of the decision of a referee upon a question of fact is subject to the same rules as is the action of a jury in a special verdict, or of a court upon its finding of facts; the weight of evidence and the resolution of any conflict therein, the credibility of the witnesses and the character of their testimony, are matters in which he is required to exercise his judgment, and wherein his judgment will be accepted by the court as correct, unless clearly shown to be erroneous. Bernard v. Sloan, 2 Cal. App. 737; 84 Pac. 232.

New trial. The court has the same power in cases tried by referees as in those tried by itself or by a jury: each case is upon the same footing, and the grounds upon which a new trial may be granted are the same in all cases, irrespective of the manner in which the case was originally tried. Cappe v. Brizzolara, 19 Cal. 607.

Review on appeal. The report of a referee, which failed to find on a material issue, is a decision against law, and may be reviewed on appeal from an order granting or refusing a new trial. Clark v. Hewitt, 136 Cal. 77; 68 Pac. 303.

Necessity for taking objection or exception to error on hearing before referee. See note 20 Ann. Cas. 193.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Exceptions. If the report of a referee is not made at once, upon the close of the testimony, it is deemed excepted to. Headley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 324. In an equity case, it is competent for the judge who tried the cause, after exceptions have been filed to the report of a referee upon the facts, and the report set aside for cause shown, to take up the testimony reported by the referee, find the facts, and render a decree in the cause. McHenry v. Moore, 5 Cal. 90. Trials before a referee are conducted in the same manner as before courts, and exceptions must be taken to the rulings of the referee, in the progress of the trial, in the same manner as they must be taken before a court; and such exceptions must be embodied in the report of the referee, or made part thereof by his proper certificate. Phelps v. Peabody, 7 Cal. 50; Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 353.
